FISHBACK, MARGARET (MRS ALBERTO G. ANTOLINI). Time for a quick one. 172p il $2 Harcourt 811 40-27802

Short witty poems about such diversified matters as life, liberty, love, and Manhattan. Indexes.

Booklist 37:150 D 15 '40

"Margaret Fishback has changed the lyrics without changing the tune; she is Victorian without the petticoats, with lipstick instead of rice powder. That's why she clicks. Miss Fishback's muse is urban, trim and advertising-conscious. She rejoices in the 'blessed Gotham privacy' of midsummer, when 'it is the ashman, not the lark, who heralds dawn.' She prefers Rockefeller Center to solitude, the Morgan crocuses to rural azaleas, monoxide gas to space and air. . . Holidays and husbands, traffic jams and cocktail parties, the subway and the sub-deb, such are the topics to which Miss Fishback turns for inspiration. She gives them all a gay polish." Lisle Bell
+ Books p10 D 22 '40 320w

Reviewed by John Holmes
Boston Transcript p9 N 4 '40 60w

"For chuckling and chortling, these versified quips are a sure stimulus. They will start many a laugh, and not infrequently a thought—but always a whimsical one."
+ Christian Century 57:1419 N 13 '40 30w
Nation 151:485 N 16 '40 80w
New Yorker 16:103 N 16 '40 30w
Springf'd Republican p6 D 23 '40 80w

FISHER, MRS ANNE (BENSON). Cathedral in the sun. 408p map $2.75 Carlyle 40-27265

This story of the California missions covers the years from 1818 to 1882, during which time the missions were changing rapidly. It is the story of three generations of Indians and their connection with a Spanish mission near Monterey.

Booklist 36:306 Ap 1 '40

"The trouble with "Cathedral in the Sun' . . . is that it lacks organization, is loosely constructed, diffuse—attempts to take in more than the author can handle. The result is a succession of episodes, some of them colorful enough, far too many dragged in by the heels to lend a kind of authenticity to the tale; Robert Louis Stevenson listening to Juan's grandson sing is typical of this sort of thing. In the end the reader will get the impression that the author was afraid her simple story of Indians and padres was not enough, wherefore the straining to peg the book to history by means of verifiable names and incidents. . . The rare occasions on which her story really comes to life are those involving the homely matters connected with mission Indian existence." J. H. Jackson
— + Books p12 Mr 24 '40 650w
Cath World 151:381 Je '40 170w

Reviewed by H. C. White
Commonweal 32:44 My 3 '40 410w

"The book is one to be read slowly and appreciated as much for its contribution to history as to imaginative literature." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p7 My 19 '40 800w

"There is much sentiment in the conception of the story, but the author's researches supply a colorful historical background."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '40 500w

FISHER, CAROLINE E., and ROBERTSON, MRS HAZEL GLAISTER. Children and the theater; with appendix by Edith W. Ramstad [foreword by Elisabeth Lee Buckingham]. 191p il $3 Stanford univ. press [14s Oxford]

792 Drama in education. Amateur theatricals. Children's plays 40-6838

A book about child actors playing to child audiences. The work is based on eight years' work with the Palo Alto community children's theater, and expresses the importance of the children's theater in educational fields. One chapter is devoted to existing theaters in the United States. There are also chapters on the selection, casting, production and budgeting of a play. Glossary, bibliography, index.

Booklist 36:340 My 1 '40

School Arts 40:12a O '40 110w

FISHER, MRS DOROTHEA FRANCES (CANFIELD), and CLEGHORN, SARAH NORCLIFFE. Nothing ever happens, and how it does; drawings by Esther Boston Bristol. 180p $2; guide for discussion leaders 50c Beacon press

40-31720

"A collection of significant tales charged with human interest that illuminate the channels of thought and action below the surface of everyday living in the home, school, and community. For group discussions among older boys and girls each one of the dramatically told stories contains challenging material on questions of the art of living with people in the spirit of understanding and courage." Christian Science Monitor

"Stories frankly designed for use in character education, but notably undogmatic in their ethical teaching. They would lend themselves to honest and free discussion. Not one is a 'lecture-table demonstration' set up to prove a predetermined answer."

+ Christian Century 57:1314 O 23 '40 60w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney

Christian Science Monitor p13 S 26 '40 80w

"Good, especially for group use." Katherine Ulrich

+ Sat R of Lit 23:8 N 16 '40 40w

FISHER, HERBERT ALBERT LAURENS. Pages from the past. 237p $3.50 (10s) Oxford

904 [40-12283]

Collection of essays and reviews selected from the works of this English writer, who died in April, 1940. In America After Fifteen Years he discusses the American interest in foreign affairs as observed on two visits here, in 1909 and 1924. Two essays are on the advantages of living in the city, because of the prospects of escape to the country. In another paper he speculates on what would have happened if Napoleon had not surrendered to the British at Waterloo, but had taken ship for Boston.

"The present book is the last which came from [this author's] pen." Hans Kohn

+ Am Hist R 46:449 Ja '41 250w

"This delightful book may easily become the most popular of Mr. Fisher's writings. It is wholesome medicine for the times in which we live because it takes our minds away from them." F. S. Marvin

+ Nature 145:683 My 4 '40 1000w

FISHER, JOHN STIRLING. A builder of of the West; the life of General William Jackson Palmer; with a chapter on General Palmer's work in Mexico, by Chase Mellen. 332p il $3.50 Caxton printers

B or 92 Palmer, William Jackson 39-33661

The subject of this biography was an engineer, Civil War cavalry leader, Western pioneer, railroad builder, and founder of the city of Colorado Springs. Bibliography. Index.

"The style is simple and clear. Mr. Fisher might have improved his work a good deal if he had been willing to collect more material. Some phases of the life and work of Palmer remain unnecessarily obscure, and there are a number of needless factual errors. In spite of these defects, however, the book is in general a readable narrative which presents the outstanding characteristics and work of General Palmer." R. E. Riegel

+ — Am Hist R 45:992 Jl '40 170w

"The value of such books to the general reader lies in the extent to which they interpret the period and the place in which their subjects lived and worked out their careers. In this case, most of the author's interpretation is limited to the portions of the West in which Gen. Palmer was most active, notably Colorado, which he knew well and where he was widely known for his benefactions."

+ Books p9 F 4 '40 240w

"The biography is a thorough and well-documented one. Of as much interest as the career of the General himself, is the detailed account of the political intrigue and lobbying which frequently presented more difficulties than the virgin terrain over which he was laying rails." Eleanor Godfrey

+ Canadian Forum 19:299 D '39 100w

FISHER, MORRIS. Mastering the rifle. 206p il $2.50 Putnam

799.31 Rifle practice 40-27144

Fundamentals of good rifle shooting, explained step-by-step for the beginner. The author has won three world's championships. Illustrated with photographs and drawings. Index.

Booklist 36:260 Mr 1 '40

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '40

FISHER, STEPHEN GOULD (STEPHEN GOULD, GRANT LANE, pseuds). Homicide Johnny. (Mystery house publication) 256p $2 Arcadia

40-29645

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p28 D 1 '40 80w

"It isn't much of a story, but there may be some persons who will like it just because it has three murders and several other acts of violence." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p38 D 8 '40 150w

"Central detective character and local girl-librarian are attractive but plot creaks considerably and much of writing is pretty juvenile. Ordinary."

— + Sat R of Lit 23:21 D 14 '40 50w

FISHER, THOMAS RUSSELL. Industrial disputes and federal legislation; with special reference to the railroad, coal, steel and automobile industries in the U.S. since 1900. 370p $4.75 Columbia univ. press [19s King]

331.892 Labor laws and legislation—U.S. Industry and state—U.S. Strikes and lockouts. Automobile industry and trade. Coal trade. Railroads and state—U.S. Steel industry and trade 40-14433

Survey of the federal legislation affecting the coal, steel, railroad and automobile industries in the United States from 1900 to 1939. The author, associate professor of social legislation at Syracuse university, gives brief accounts of the practical consequences of this legislation, and of the conditions which made it necessary. Bibliography. Index.

"Essentially descriptive, it could have been less extensive in its scope and more profound in its analysis."

Commonweal 33:309 Ja 10 '41 60w

FISHER, T. R.—Continued

Management R 29:456 D '40 20w

"This book can be used to good advantage by the social studies teacher who finds he must discuss and evaluate such pertinent legal and economic subjects as the National Labor Relations Act, the Canadian Industrial Disputes Act, arbitration and mediation, collective bargaining, the Transportation Act of 1926, the Railway Labor Act as it has worked, the Fair Labor Standards Act, and a host of related topics. . . The author has an unfortunate misconception of the part played by the lawyer who he feels focuses his attention upon a problem from the angle of contractual relationship. Some of the finest articles upon the matter treated in this book have appeared in leading law reviews and seemed to have been ignored or neglected by the author." Harold Gluck

+ — Social Educ 5:71 Ja '41 700w

FISKE, CHRISTABEL FORSYTH. Epic suggestion in the imagery of the Waverley novels. 141p $2.50 Yale univ. press

823 Scott, Sir Walter, bart—Waverley novels
40-11409

"This study of Scott's figurative imagery in the Waverley Novels is designed to show any concentration, in his metaphors, similes, and comparative references, of the epic quality which was a characteristic of his mind. Professor Fiske gives the background for the investigation by emphasizing this epic strain in Scott himself as apparent in his letters, journals, and novels. With the background established, she proceeds to show how significantly it manifests itself in his figurative imagery. She discusses sources and applications, traditional stylistic traits, epic tone and color as involved in this imagery; and she places parallel to a column of figures drawn from the Homeric poems another drawn from the Waverley Novels as possessing genuinely Homeric quality." Publisher's note

---

"Though its subject is a feature of the style of the most famous and popular of all groups of English novels, it makes no concessions to popularity but is a rigidly scholarly inquiry."

Books p17 S 15 '40 460w

"The author's antithesis between epic and romance seems very dubious, and many of the parallels are either far-fetched or no more than might be expected in an author with Scott's excellent memory."

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 10 '40 70w

FISKE, FRANCES. So you're publicity chairman; drawings by Laurence Reynolds. (Whittlesey house publication) 189p $2 McGraw

367 Publicity. Women's clubs. Advertising
(W) 40-27438

From the point of view of the newspaper woman the author offers advice and suggestions to clubwomen who are seeking publicity for their organizations. The chapters, written in informal style with frequent "little stories" to illustrate the point, are entitled Better never than late! I think you spell it with an "E"; Print it just the way I wrote it; I sent you an article. Why wasn't it in? Oh, was it in? I didn't see it; We'd like to have a picture; We're going to give a play, etc. Index.

Booklist 36:360 My 15 '40

Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 230w

J Home Econ 32:477 S '40 30w

"Miss Fiske, who is society editor of a newspaper in Westchester County, gives her readers succinct directions not only for ordinary publicity but for handling special features and events as well. And she has dressed her little book in lively personal portraiture and anecdote which make it brisk and human—and often very amusing—reading. Laurence Reynolds's drawings are definitely amusing. This is an excellent book of its kind."

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 14 '40 310w

Reviewed by F. M. Seder

Survey 76:230 Jl '40 220w

FISKE, JOHN. Letters; ed. by his daughter, Ethel F. Fisk. 706p il maps $7.50 Macmillan

B or 92 41-1890

These letters by the American philosopher and historian, cover nearly the whole span of his life, beginning with a letter written at the age of eight and ending with one written a few weeks before his death at the age of fifty-nine. For the most part addressed to his mother or his wife, the letters are informal and revealing.

"Best of all is the portrait which Fiske paints of himself. He emerges from these boisterous letters a fascinating figure, large and energetic, breathless with life and enthusiasm, buoyant and generous, an intellectual dynamo, an animated encyclopedia, versatile, talented and indefatigable—a great companionable person out of Pickwick, happy in food and drink and tobacco and friends and books and music, happy in his family, in beauty in every form, in work and in play. His letters are a commentary on American life and an autobiography. Editorially this collection leaves much to be desired. . . Even an index is lacking—a serious fault in a book of this nature. Yet for that which is vouchsafed us—several hundred new letters—we must be grateful." H. S. Commager

+ — Books p5 D 22 '40 950w

"These letters come naked into the world, un-introduced, un-indexed, almost un-annotated. John Fiske's daughter has selected them, presumably wisely, and grouped them into 22 little chapters, with one more as a postscript. I regret her lack of concern for the casual reader, and hope it will be remedied, for there should be plenty of 'casual readers' of this book; it is as absorbing a life-chronicle as one is likely to find." R. H. Phelps

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ja 18 '41 700w

"Feasting and good talk, music, comfortable surroundings; his Abby, so frequently 'the belle of the party,' his six children whom he seemed to find vastly entertaining . . . all these explain something of the satisfaction that bubbles up in the letters. These and the fact that all his life he could throw himself headlong into his favorite pursuit, the white-hot quest for information. Not an original thinker, he was insatiable in his desire to amass knowledge. If the volume of his letters had been furnished with some biographical notes it would have been still more valuable." W. K. R.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 F 1 '41 700w

"It would have been a greater service to Fiske to have edited these seven hundred pages of letters than to have given them to the public as they have been given. The book cries out for a proper introduction, for an index and for notes explaining the multitudinous names that crop up in the letters. . . Still, badly as this book has been edited there is much in it that is delightful to read." Herbert Gorman

+ — N Y Times p1 D 22 '40 1650w

"A vigorous, intimate record of the Harvard don, who was also a hearty, vain, restless, incredibly learned man, full of large enthusiasms and alert to all the main currents of his time. Very readable, but a thorough job of annotation would have helped the story."

+ — New Yorker 16:86 D 21 '40 90w

"It is true that this thick volume is uneven. By far the best part of it is the four hundred pages that begin with 1863 and end with 1882. . . Preceding these four hundred pages stands a short section in which Fiske describes his early reading, his studies at Harvard, and his one love affair. Except that he was rather appallingly precocious, it is captivating. . . The last part of the book is disappointing, even dreary, and touched with tragedy." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:6 Ja 4 '41 1300w

"The book gives a vivid closeup of a 19th century celebrity who had no difficulty (other than the early religious objections) in finding an outlet for intellectual talents in the last quarter of the century, which some imagine to have been a period of blight in American cultural life. The book affords a picture of a striking personality and a vigorous age in thought and education. The letters lack textual editing—which is perhaps the best way of presenting them next to full annotation." E. N. Jenckes

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 28 '40 1250w

FIT for a king: the Merle Armitage book of food; ed. by Ramiel McGehee; drawings by Elise [with 4 pl. by Edward Weston]. 258p $5 Longmans

641.5 Cookery 40-506

In this cookbook for the gourmet are gathered recipes from all over the world and some of our best regional dishes, also the favorite recipes of twenty or more celebrities. The volume is also interesting as an example of modern bookmaking. Index.

"It's a book useful for those who like sophisticated foods at any cost—food which may be extravagant of both time and money—but superb food. It's not the kind of book that necessarily interests a housewife faced with three meals a day, ravenous appetites and a limited budget." Eloise Davison

+ Books p18 Ap 7 '40 150w

J Home Econ 32:114 F '40 60w

"Its typography is lucid and well adapted to its purpose, and the use of bold drawings by Elise (Mrs. Armitage) printed in color, give the book a gayly festive look." E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p18 D 17 '39 600w

FITCH, MORRISON. Me-too! il. by Kate Howard. [40p] $1 Greystone 40-7810

A little pig with the big name of Rufus John Augustus and the nickname Me-Too is the hero of this picture-story book for young children.

"This little chap doesn't carry much weight but he'll make a little child laugh." M. L. Becker

Books p6 Je 2 '40 140w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 6 '40 220w

"The pictures by Kate Howard add a great deal to the good humor of the story. It is not a book for first purchase, or of permanent importance, but it has a gay air. The print is good-sized; but the story is really best suited to children of pre-school age." Josephine Smith

+ — Library J 65:454 My 15 '40 130w

"This is an inconsequential but undeniably diverting little book. The first few incidents bear little relation to Me-Too's final triumph, but children will not be likely to quibble over that, especially since they are presented in an easy, conversational manner, and their fun is pointed up with Kate Howard's sprightly pictures." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p10 Jl 7 '40 200w

"Lightly humorous in both narrative and illustrations."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '40 40w

FITZPATRICK, EDWARD AUGUSTUS. Conscription and America; a study of conscription in a democracy. 153p $1.80 Richard pub. co, 3212 W. Michigan st, Milwaukee, Wis.

355.22 Military service, Compulsory. U.S.—Army—Recruiting enlistment, etc. 40-9723

"The author, well known as an educator, was Draft Administrator of Wisconsin 1917-1919. He has made a special study of conscription and in this book discusses the subject in both its historical and present day aspects." Wis Lib Bul

"It is a work that ought to be read with care by every American not afraid to face facts and interested in what would happen here." Glen Perry

+ Commonweal 32:155 Je 7 '40 420w

Wis Lib Bul 36:109 Je '40

FITZSIMMONS, CORTLAND. One man's poison. 293p $2 Stokes 40-7352

Detective story.

Booklist 36:413 Jl 1 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p14 Ap 7 '40 120w

"It has plenty of action, plenty of run-of-the-mill characters and an ingenious murder method. Yet it lacks something. Maybe the touch of John Mulholland." Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 30 '40 40w

"The story moves with all the speed of a polo game and is almost as thrilling." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 31 '40 170w

"Novel method used in first murder is repeated at climax with startling results. Matches well described and tale moves swiftly. Standard brand."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Mr 30 '40 40w

FIVE young American poets [1940 anthology]. 221p il $2.50 New directions

811.08 American poetry—Collections (40-29688)

Selections from the works of five young American poets: Mary Barnard, Randall Jarrell, John Berryman, W. R. Moses, George Marion O'Donnell. Each section has a portrait of the author, short biographical sketch, and an essay giving the writer's ideas on poetry, besides the poems.

"The collection was worth making for its own sake and also as an index to the temper of the younger generation. The invitation to contribute might have been extended to other and in some instances more distinguished young poets, but it is to be hoped that another year will bring another showing." Babette Deutsche

+ Books p13 Ja 12 '41 700w

"All these poets are known to those who watch the magazines in which the more intellectual poetry appears; they are not discoveries. They all speak with a curious stiff, intellectualized, often political voice; they are sadly the children of their times." John Holmes

Boston Transcript p9 D 16 '40 250w

"Let me say to start that I consider this one of the important books in the poetry publishing of 1940. Mr. James Laughlin, head of New Directions, does poetry a service with such intelligent pioneering. . . The volume is at its best in John Berryman and at its worst in Randall Jarrell. Berryman has a natural ear for catching the movement of poetry in the foliage, and an ability to put it clearly in the condensed and crystal statement. His idiom is human, his imagery controlled and beautifully timed. His verse is polished to the point of good taste, and his compassion for man is neither synthetic nor simulated. . . Randall Jarrell is the re-write man, the intellectual hotcha, the will-to-be-a-poet with no talent. But his intolerable cleverness bores one." O. W.

+ — Living Age 359:496 Ja '41 800w

"The range of subject is wide and the contributors are serious and write formally, with a remarkable lack of obvious derivation."

+ New Yorker 16:80 Ja 18 '41 120w

FLACCUS, KIMBALL. The white stranger. 115p $2.50 Scribner 811 40-7738

"A verse play, 'Quetzalcoatl,' dealing with the Mexican Indians in 1200 A.D., and a group of lyrics make up this second volume by a young American poet." New Yorker

"Mr. Flaccus is to be commended for his skilled shaping of a legend so richly potential, with its setting of magnificent barbaric color, and a tragic human conflict charged with first-rate dramatic material. But there is something remote and cold in the texture of his lines that prevent a complete recreation of the raw beauty and power implicit in the tale." Ruth Lechlitner
+ — Books p16 Je 30 '40 900w

"When Mr. Flaccus published his Avalanche of April he received high praise from such good critics as T. S. Eliot and William Róse Benét. In The White Stranger he proves again his quiet power, and that real talent has no need to attract attention to itself by frantic novelties." T. M.
+ Cath World 152:120 O '40 300w

"Unfortunately Mr. Flaccus's talent, in its present development, is inadequate to the execution of his noble initial conception. The persons of the play remain lay figures, without character or life. There is no dramatic progression and tension, but a series of block-descriptions of events. . . In the twenty-odd 'Other Poems,' Mr. Flaccus reveals his genuine gift. He has a flair for the epigrammatic. The poem on Yeats is compact. 'Swimming Under Water' is a beautiful, strong lyric." Axton Clark
+ — N Y Times p8 Je 2 '40 470w

"Pleasant reading for those who like their poetry to be smooth as silk."
New Yorker 16:88 Mr 23 '40 50w

"The integrity of expression which marked Kimball Flaccus's first volume, Avalanche of April [Book Review Digest, 1934] is likewise characteristic of The White Stranger. Whether his themes are subjective or objective, they are motivated by passion and modeled with an eye and ear to an ideal form. Just this side of thirty, Flaccus is not the prolific writer that most of his contemporaries are, and reveals more critical judgment in what he chooses to print or to lay aside. The result is that the young Philadelphian has never issued a bad or a careless poem." Alfred Kreymborg
+ Poetry 56:101 My '40 750w

"Mr. Flaccus will be called academic by some critics, for his quiet adaptation of traditional meters to such a theme as his mythic play of birth and death, peace and war, 'The White Stranger.' However Mr. Flaccus has established a competent technical and ideological basis from which to advance to more ambitious themes. His weaknesses, both of which he may be expected to overcome, are a certain heaviness of pace and a tendency to overlook clichés." Selden Rodman
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:15 Je 8 '40 100w

FLACK, MARJORIE (MRS KARL LARSSON), and LARSSON, KARL. Pedro; with il. by Karl Larsson. 96p $2 Macmillan
(W) 40-7103

Pedro is a small Mexican whose courage is boundless. He saves the life of his little American friend, Bill, at a rodeo, and as a reward is promised an education by Bill's father.

Booklist 36:368 My 15 '40

"Most of the many little pictures are as if drawn in red chalk, and there are some large ones in full color. Following with their aid these simple events, an American child of seven or so unconsciously takes in many details of Mexican manners and customs, together with a surrounding sense of lively domestic affection." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Ap 14 '40 340w

"The color and architecture of Mexico and the characteristic crafts and amusements are effectively shown in the many gay pictures." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:165 My '40 70w

Reviewed by Josephine Smith
Library J 65:454 My 15 '40 140w

"The tale leaves behind it a pleasant sense of warm family affection and kindly relationships. For children 8 to 10." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Je 2 '40 360w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '40 50w
Wis Lib Bul 36:143 O '40

FLANDERS, MRS HELEN (HARTNESS), and others, eds. The new Green mountain songster; traditional folk songs of Vermont, collected, transcribed, and edited. 278p $3.50 Yale univ. press [16s Oxford]
784.4 Folk songs, American 40-1093

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p20 F 11 '40 380w

"It is an excellent collection and its interest widens out of Vermont into the West, the South, indeed the whole country. . . The critical notes of the late Phillips Barry are the best I have read in a long time. They are a zestful education in balladry." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 F 17 '40 400w

"The New Green Mountain Songster is an outstanding book. Our adverse criticism is confined to minor points. We note the lack of numbering of stanzas and lines, which makes reference to it harder. . . The tinted paper, excellent typography, clearly engraved music, and pleasing format of the book uphold the best tradition of the Yale University Press. We consider it the best scholarly book on folk song produced in the last decade." F. H. Eckstorm
+ New Eng Q 13:125 Mr '40 1850w

"The 'New Green Mountain Songster' is an anthology rather than a scientific collection, and contains a riotous mixture of popular song. There is plenty of true folk-song in it, but along with a number of Child ballads and ballads of recent American origin there are also examples of mere doggerel from the local versifier with snatches of nondescript tunes. . . Its sheer miscellaneousness is a great part of the book's undoubted charm and interest."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p328 Jl 6 '40 240w

FLANNER, JANET. An American in Paris; profile of an interlude between two wars. 415p $2.50 Simon & Schuster
920 (W) 40-7616

Articles written in Paris by an American correspondent, and published first in The New Yorker and Vanity Fair. They deal with murders, fashionable designers of clothes, and personalities. The character studies are of many types, among them Queen Mary of England, Ambassador Bullitt, Isadora Duncan, Edith Wharton, Lily Pons, and Adolf Hitler.

Booklist 36:362 My 15 '40

"Miss Flanner has a way with words. They say exactly what she wants them to with a never-failing accent of individuality. . . 'An American in Paris' should not be read at one sitting. Brilliance is much harder to take than mediocrity." Rose Feld
+ Books p5 Ap 28 '40 800w

Reviewed by W. J. Grace
Commonweal 32:67 My 10 '40 350w

"This is an exhilarating book. Reading it is like reading an unusually full copy of the 'New Yorker.' One could not ask more than that." G. F.
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 9 '40 140w

"Although the book does not justify its titles —still less the extravagant claims made in the publisher's blurb—it is a brilliant piece of journalism. Miss Flanner's portraits are very amusing and often delightfully malicious. That of Mr. Bullitt is, in my opinion, one of the best. The article on Hitler, originally published in 1936, shows that Miss Flanner at that time saw farther than many of her contemporaries." Robert Dell

+ — Nation 150:659 My 25 '40 750w

"Miss Flanner has pinned down and preserved in all their natural colors such brilliant butterflies as Isadora Duncan, Elsa Schiaparelli, Gabrielle Chanel, Paul Poiret, Elsa Maxwell and Lily Pons. Though hers is mostly a world of 'international personalities' and 'top drawer' people—Queen Mary and Ambassador Bullitt are especial favorites, especially well handled—it has its glittering, gamey underside, which she makes as bright as a ballet troupe of apaches. Anyone who has ever tried to write about crime—either for the pulps or for the slick-paper, slick-thought magazines—is likely to concede several sets in the horror game to Genêt for any one of her eight pieces in this department. And the same goes, so far as I am concerned, for every subject she touches." Carlton Brown
+ New Repub 102:617 My 6 '40 600w

"'Brilliant' is the word which comes to one's thought again and again, as sound description for Janet Flanner's work. But this is no mere surface brilliance which flashes its clear light into actualities of art and music and literature and politics and fashion and ambition and the dark places of human emotion and conduct. Hers is writing which really does burn with a 'hard, gemlike flame' of sure and sparkling illumination; and behind the cool, bright light there is a profound competence, thorough, selective, unagitated. Her writing is mordant but not venomous. She is humorous and polished and wise. This American in Paris has a French mind." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p17 Ap 21 '40 1100w
New Yorker 16:96 Ap 20 '40 100w

"Though an entertaining, provocative, and superbly well written collection of character studies, the title of Miss Flanner's book, 'An American In Paris,' is something of a misnomer." Harold Stearns
+ Sat R of Lit 22:10 My 4 '40 600w

"Published in London ten days after the fall of Paris, two days after the French acceptance of defeat, so fine and frivolous a collection of Parisian articles now makes sad but somehow appropriate reading. The book is sub-titled 'Profile of an Interlude between Two Wars,' and in September of last year the author added a prefatory note, 'All Gaul is Divided,' which sounds a sorrowful note of apology for the superannuated triviality of what follows. That piece is the least satisfactory in the book, and would have been more suitable as an epilogue. Regrets are vain, and for these doomed vignettes no excuse is either necessary or feasible. The blight of politics was destroying that colourful Parisian patch while it made more hay than history. Miss Flanner's book, like Hassan's rose, is faded now and bitter and nothing but le monde." John Marks
Spec 164:868 Je 28 '40 600w

"Her chapters are all examples of light and sprightly journalism, seldom profound, but clever, readable and informing up to a certain point."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '40 950w
Time 35:96 Ap 22 '40 500w

"It is no fault of Miss Janet Flanner's that her brilliant character sketches are out of focus just now, but 'An American in Paris' must be judged on its own merits, which are high, and not in relation to current events."
Times [London] Lit Sup p316 Je 29 '40 600w

FLAVIN, MARTIN. Mr Littlejohn. 306p map $2.50 Harper
40-32292

A middle-aged American business man bored by his family, his business and his way of life in general, leaves all behind him and starts out across the continent. He meets with many kinds of people, has a series of adventures and when he is eventually tracked down, escapes once more.

"This is a delightful book, of much wit and a good deal of wisdom, and Mr. Littlejohn is a character we come to love and will not easily forget."
+ Atlantic N '40 200w
Booklist 37:116 N 15 '40

"Martin Flavin, the author, is also a fugitive from business. During twenty years of manufacturing, he wrote several plays. This is his first novel. He had fun with it and so will his readers who like their enjoyment with a spice of satire. He laughs gleefully at the serious antics of big business, labor, Communism, Hollywood, the Department of Justice, all of us who are living in the future or the past when there isn't anything except today. A sparkling, well seasoned, provocative book, one to savor and re-read after our affection for Mr. Littlejohn has brought us up breathless at the last page of his enviable adventure." Page Cooper
+ Books p4 O 13 '40 1000w

"Martin Flavin's 'Mr. Littlejohn' is one of those books which creep into your affections, which surprise and delight you, and I should like to persuade many people to read it. It is unique and it is delicious." Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p11 O 3 '40 700w

Reviewed by N. J. Dain
Boston Transcript p1 O 5 '40 240w
Cath World 152:634 F '41 140w

"The novel is more effective in its sideswipes than in its main intention. Mr. Flavin makes some entertaining comments on Harvard Business School graduates and Communists, on prostitutes and movie producers, on radio advertising and labor lawyers. But the man who went down the rabbit hole, Mr. Littlejohn, never acquires character as Alice did, and so it is the dormice of the dog wagons, the queens in the dress shops and dew drop inns that supply most of the interest." Robert Van Gelder
+ — N Y Times p22 O 6 '40 450w

"A diverting peregrination if you don't mind some sermonizing here and there."
New Yorker 16:78 O 5 '40 80w

"I cannot credit the publishers with any extraordinary perspicacity in 'finding' this book because anyone who reads a dozen pages of it is certain to 'find' it. . . It is about as engaging and perceptive and humorous and amusingly philosophic as any novel I have read since 'Candide' and 'Tristam Shandy' and neither of those was written in the 1940's. In short, we have fitting company here for the charming gentlemen mentioned and for Mr. Pickwick and Don Quixote and even for M. Rousseau and de Koster's 'Ulenspiegel' in their lighter moments." Phil Stong
+ Sat R of Lit 22:10 O 5 '40 400w
Time 36:85 O 7 '40 30w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 30:xii winter '41 50w

FLEMING, DANIEL JOHNSON. Christian symbols in a world community. 150p il $2 Missionary educ. movement
246 Christian art and symbolism 40-12641

Study of the growth and use of Christian symbolism in the younger churches of Asia and Africa, showing the remarkable degree to which the native genius of these people has been expressed. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

"At a time when religion is literally under fire in a devastating strife of nation against nation, each with its own ideology and sign . . . it is both refreshing and encouraging to find among the wartime publications an impressive volume called 'Christian Symbols in a World Community.' Its author is Dr. Daniel Johnson Fleming, a professor in Union

FLEMING, D. J.—Continued
Theological Seminary and obviously an authority on the new Christian symbolism as it is growing naturally and indigenously in mission fields which he has himself visited." E. B. Marlatt
+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 29 '40 600w
Christian Century 57:878 Jl 10 '40 220w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 17 '40 380w

Reviewed by James van Zant
Churchman 154:20 S 1 '40 110w

Reviewed by M. H. Shepherd, Jr.
J Religion 21:101 Ja '41 260w

FLEMING, PETER. The flying visit; drawings by David Low. 128p $1.50 Scribner [5s Cape, J]

827 European war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. 40-30397

Fantastic story of Hitler's attempt to sail over England in a huge airplane, and what happened when a time bomb exploded, destroying the plane and everyone in it except Hitler.

Booklist 37:90 N 1 '40

"Of course the trick is to debunk a legend and this is, I think, done with extraordinary success. In fact it is rather difficult to take Hitler very seriously after reading this highly diverting trifle, and that was, undoubtedly, the idea. It leaves the reader, as no doubt Mr. Chaplin's forthcoming film also will, no less determined to oppose what his small, moustached figure with its 'glazed but exalted look' has come to stand for. Meanwhile it is a relief to be able to laugh." Iris Barry
+ Books p2 Ag 18 '40 950w

Reviewed by M. E. Prim
Boston Transcript p7 Ag 31 '40 500w

"If the author is not a humorist, his illustrator, David Low, certainly is. Herr Hitler and members of the British Cabinet share the ludicrous fate of all men of politics who fall into the hands of this inimitable cartoonist, and the effect is to add sparkle to an amusing little experiment." H. J. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 S 25 '40 330w

"This gentle ribbing of Herr Hitler . . . is witty and decent and human. But present events also make it to any non-Britisher a trifle macabre."
+ — Commonweal 32:474 S 27 '40 110w

"It has its hilarious moments, to which its denouement doesn't quite measure up. But its light spirit and its reception in England would seem to confirm the stories of high morale." Margaret Marshall
+ — Nation 151:175 Ag 31 '40 70w
New Repub 103:457 S 30 '40 50w
New Statesman & Nation 20:145 Ag 10 '40 240w

"An amusing little piece. . . As for Low's drawings—well, here are Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Churchill and a variously embarrassed Herr Hitler. We like best the embarrassment at the ball."
+ N Y Times p17 Ag 25 '40 460w

"At this stage it can neither be sensible nor convincing to represent Hitler as a nonentity: and those who longest and most consistently have fought against everything he stands for would be the last people to agree that he is the mediocre, ineffectual little creature Mr. Fleming makes him out to be. We must not be too solemn about a squib like The Flying Visit, to be sure. . . There is plenty of amusement in the book. Low's illustrations confirm his position as Hitler's Public Enemy Number One; and Mr. Fleming carries off some of his situations admirably." C. Day-Lewis
— + Spec 165:66 Jl 19 '40 440w

"A delightful bit of literary spoofing well calculated to bring a smile or a laugh to a war-weary English-speaking constituency."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 16 '40 350w

"Mr. Fleming is sanely irreverent and full of surprises, and he and Low do one another proud."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p349 Jl 20 '40 750w

FLENLEY, RALPH, ed. Essays in Canadian history presented to George Mackinnon Wrong for his eightieth birthday. 372p $2.50 Macmillan (Toronto) [Canadian publication]

971.004 Canada—History—Addresses, essays, lectures. Wrong, George Mackinnon 40-10106

Collection of essays on the history of Canada or allied subjects presented by some of his former students to Professor G. M. Wrong to commemorate his eightieth birthday. Contents: Professor G. M. Wrong and history in Canada, by Chester Martin; The British background, by Keith Feiling; The French revolution and French Canada, by R. Flenley; Canada and Ireland: a contrast in constitutional development, by D. J. McDougall; Two North American federations: a comparison, by Edgar McInnis; The terms of the British North America act, by W. P. M. Kennedy; Edward Blake and Canadian liberal nationalism, by F. H. Underhill; Conservatism and national unity, by D. G. Creighton; The position of the lieutenant-governor in British Columbia in the years following confederation, by W. N. Sage; Permanent factors in Canadian external relations, by G. P. de T. Glazebrook; Geographical determinants in Canadian history, by A. R. M. Lower; The survival of Canada, by J. B. Brebner; Strathspey in the Canadian fur-trade, by W. S. Wallace; The policy of creating land reserves in Canada, by R. G. Riddell; The cultural development of new France before 1760, by R. M. Saunders; The formative period of the Canadian Protestant churches, by G. W. Brown.

"The essays will probably make their greatest appeal to those who are already tolerably familiar with the main outlines of Canadian history. They throw welcome light into some of the dark corners of the conventional story. But to those who have followed with any care the recent literature on the subject some of the essays may seem to lack freshness. There will at least be little to surprise or challenge. It should be remembered, however, that the reason why some of the points of view seem commonplace is that the essayists in earlier and more substantial works have themselves made them so." W. M. Whitelaw
Am Hist R 46:446 Ja '41 650w

Reviewed by F. R. Scott
Canadian Forum 20:22 Ap '40 850w

"It was a happy inspiration which prompted the giving of this tribute to Professor Wrong on the occasion of his admission to the ranks of illustrious octogenarians. He has lived long, a happy life with honour at its close, and this book reveals that he has 'lived to posterity.' The imprint which he placed upon the study and writing of Canadian history will be felt for years to come, even unto the third or fourth generation. No form of felicitation could be more appropriate, therefore, than a book which bears on every page the influence of him whom it is designed to honour." W. B. Munro
+ Canadian Hist R 21:68 Mr '40 2300w

FLETCHER, ALFRED BRINSON WOODS (PETER FLETCHER, pseud). Mastering your nerves [Eng title: Mastering nerves]. 241p $1.50 Dutton [3s 6d Rich]

131.32 Mental hygiene. Nervous system—Hygiene 39-17735

In the first part of this book the author analyses some of the psychological factors in what he terms "functional nervous disorders." In his second part, entitled "Building Up," he gives suggestions as to how they may be conquered.

"This book does not pretend to offer new approaches or theories, nor does it review advances in psychomedical science. It is a clear and practical discussion of principles familiar to psychologists, and intended for readers for whom such principles are neither clear nor familiar. The author's basic ideas are quite commonplace but sound, avoiding cumbersome and dubious assumptions, especially those of psychoanalysis. The author enlivens his pages with case histories and occasionally with shrewd insights." C. O. Weber

+ — Am J Psychol 53:485 Jl '40 120w

"English in origin and rather unattractively printed but very much worth while in its sympathetic understanding and practical commonsense."

+ Wis Lib Bul 35:161 O '39

FLETCHER, MRS INGLIS. Raleigh's Eden. 662p $2.75 Bobbs

(W) 40-30100

Raleigh's Eden was the rich fertile land along the coast of North Carolina. This historical novel develops the story of plantation life in that section from 1765, until about the end of the Revolution. Altho more than a hundred characters appear in the book, Adam Rutledge and Mary Warden, representing two of the upper class families, are the leading characters.

Booklist 37:68 O 15 '40

"Mrs. Fletcher has created her historic background with admirable veracity and vividness, and has caught its many strange and brilliant colors into the tapestry of a story whose human interest remains vital in every changing scene." John Patton

+ Books p10 O 13 '40 700w

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 23 '40 490w

"Long and overcrowded, the book contains more thunder than lightning. The 'downtrodden' are described with more sympathy than understanding; and the aristocrats are merely embarrassing."

New Repub 103:458 S 30 '40 40w

"In spite of its color and occasional violence, 'Raleigh's Eden' remains closer to history than to fiction. Mrs. Fletcher has laid her color on with a lavish hand—for it belongs here rightly enough. Historic personages flash across her pages—John Paul Jones and Lord Cornwallis, Hewes and Iredell and Tarleton. Pirates still descend on her Carolina coast, and kilted Highlanders swing along her Carolina roads to the strains of the pipes. Nevertheless, the effect in the end is more thoughtful than dramatic; not so much moving and exciting, as serious and dignified." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 S 22 '40 750w

"The skill with which Mrs. Fletcher handles her minor characters who are so often mere sticks in romantic novels, is one of the book's chief excellences. They help tie golden tidewater to its old flat earth. It is a grand book for good reading." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 22:7 O 5 '40 550w

FLETCHER, PETER, pseud. See Fletcher, A. B. W.

FLEURON, SVEND. The grey hare; a romance of the Danish fields [tr. from the Danish]. 177p il $1.50 Farrar [5s Black, A. & C.]

39-32380

Describes one year in the life of a family of hares, especially Josse, the eldest son, in whose struggles for existence the whole story of the tribe is typified. For grades six to nine.

"Some of the incidents are dramatic and may be harrowing to a young child. The format is unattractive and unchildlike. Many adults will enjoy, but the appeal to children will be limited."

Booklist 36:216 F 1 '40

Reviewed by H. B. Kane

Boston Transcript p9 Ja 6 '40 200w

Wis Lib Bul 36:48 Mr '40

FLEXNER, ABRAHAM. I remember. 414p il $3.75 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Medicine—Study and teaching. Education—U. S. (W) 40-27726

Autobiography of the man who made the famous survey of American medical schools in 1908 and 1909, under the auspices of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, which caused a revolution in medical education in this country. In 1913 Doctor Flexner joined the General Education Board founded by John D. Rockefeller, from which he retired in 1928. His most recent achievement was the organization of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton. Index.

Atlantic D '40 210w

Booklist 37:88 N 1 '40

"The book is composed of chapters, but its author does not seem able to keep within them, as it is written with a spontaneity that carries him away, adding zest, charm and variety to the account of a very active, useful life as a statesman of education." G. C. Robinson, M.D.

+ Books p4 O 13 '40 1200w

"Mr. Flexner's is a sober and thoughtful story, in part recapitulating the theories of education so brilliantly expounded in 1930 in his book, 'Universities.' " Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p11 S 27 '40 300w

Reviewed by E. L. Keyes

Commonweal 32:513 O 11 '40 800w

"A book of major importance for American readers in the understanding it gives of American institutions and opportunities, and in its presentation of the essential attributes of high character and distinguished performance." J. S. Cleavinger

+ Library J 65:590 Jl '40 220w

"Dr. Flexner's surveys, educational activities and philanthropic enterprises proved him a man of exceptional abilities, and his own telling of those adventures is marked by restraint, modesty and understatement of his achievements." L. B. Bloch

+ Living Age 359:288 N '40 60w

Reviewed by Eric Estorick

New Repub 104:154 F 3 '41 800w

"Dr. Flexner's own account of what he did is not vainglorious. His tributes are generous, his appraisal of his own merits modest. The story is wholly objective. The reader must go between the lines to find the personality that the author does not choose to reveal. He will find it warm, humanitarian, optimistic, loving that 'excellence' which is the key to a surpassingly useful career." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p4 O 6 '40 1400w

New Yorker 16:78 O 5 '40 50w

"Delightful and well-written book. . . We meet a charming character, appreciative, keen, urgent, kindly, sociable, and enjoyable. I do not belittle his positive achievements. I am, for one, glad that the Aladdin era was ushered in by Drs. Buttrick and Flexner. They loved their fellow-men, and they had a wonderful time." H. N. McCracken

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:41 O 12 '40 1150w

"The author of this able autobiography has been one of the chief instruments in the reorganization of the medical schools of this country. As such he rates a hearing. But the book is not only a record of this success, and of the founding of the Institute for Advanced Study of which he is now the head. It is also the 'success story' that can be written perhaps only in America, where talent and ambition are still recognized and given opportunity."

FLEXNER, ABRAHAM—Continued

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 O '40 460w

Social Studies 32:91 F '41 80w

"Everyone who lays claim to a serious interest in the country's schools ought to read this book, and weigh its conclusions. Yet the volume is not at all pedagogical in its treatment, and it is engaging just as the narrative of a busy and varied life." D. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 O 18 '40 650w

"In this simply written, modest book, Abraham Flexner remembers and vividly records much of the kind of personal and educational history that is indispensable for an understanding of the intellectual and social life of our time." W. C. Ryan

+ Survey G 30:92 F '41 160w

FLEXNER, HELEN WHITALL (THOMAS) (MRS SIMON FLEXNER). A Quaker childhood. 335p il $3 Yale univ. press

B or 92 40-27439

An intimate family picture, extending in time from about 1871 to 1888, in which are shown the various members of the Baltimore Quaker family of which M. Carey Thomas was the oldest daughter, and the author was the youngest.

Atlantic S '40 130w

Discussion by Mrs S. A. Hurlbutt
Atlantic D '40 90w

Booklist 36:363 My 15 '40

Reviewed by H. F. Whicher
Books p8 My 12 '40 1050w

"Mrs. Flexner is sympathetic but never sentimental. She paints, in her unassuming book, a rarely balanced and honest and a charming period piece." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 4 '40 1000w

Christian Century 57:482 Ap 10 '40 90w

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy
Commonweal 32:132 My 31 '40 290w

"In essence the book recalls Gosse's classic 'Father and Son,' to which it is certainly not inferior in emotional interest, though the situations are somewhat different. The gentle reminiscences, simply and directly rather than nostalgically presented, are overshadowed by the compelling story of mother and daughter."

+ Nation 150:763 Je 22 '40 80w

"A vivid and informative autobiography which reads more like a novel."

+− New Repub 102:585 Ap 29 '40 40w

"Every member of this large family, even if the portrait is lightly sketched, is a real individual, never merely a type, in Mrs. Flexner's memoirs. . . The smiles with which this book is dotted have their own subtlety. Mrs Flexner writes with sensitiveness and charm, frequently with beauty, always with limpid clarity, and often with a humor whose ingratiating sedateness gives it a force beyond obvious irony." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 21 '40 1450w

"Very mild, but pleasantly written."

+ New Yorker 16:95 Ap 20 '40 30w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
Sat R of Lit 22:11 Je 22 '40 380w

"In this book Mrs Flexner recalls her youthful impressions of her relatives and her memories of her own experiences. At times the reader may wonder whether, after so many years, the author has always captured moods or remembered words exactly. But if there is some trace of artful reconstruction in Mrs Flexner's chapters, her basic interpretation has vitality and general appeal. She discusses her interest in feminism and the suffrage movement."

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 21 '40 950w

Reviewed by Beulah Amidon
Survey 76:372 D '40 120w

Time 35:92 Ap 29 '40 410w

"Serenely beautiful, wise, and tender book." S. C. Chew
Yale R n s 29:820 summer '40 1250w

FLINT, MARGARET (MRS LESTER WARNER JACOBS). Back o' the mountain. 269p $2.50 Dodd

40-31627

Story of a Maine family during the first decades of the twentieth century. The chief characters are two women, Caroline Dennis, who after a lonely neglected childhood grew up to be a selfish, demanding woman, and her daughter-in-law, Kate, who didn't get all she wanted from life, but felt that being Sam Dennis' wife made up for a lot.

Booklist 37:90 N 1 '40

"The story has warmth and understanding, and there is a salty realism in its characters and its background. Margaret Flint is best known as the author of the $10,000 prize novel, 'The Old Ashburn Place.' Her latest book should win new friends." H. M. Shaw

+ Books p14 O 6 '40 500w

"The novel presents an intimate picture of farm and family life; it is slow-moving, with many homely details, but its people are flesh and blood, and there are touches of beauty in its descriptions of the countryside as well as of the love which united Kate and Sam." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p23 N 3 '40 500w

"The wholesomeness of this book does not depend on false idealization, for Kate and Ellna are real types and the dependability and foresight of the two Dennis men are not exaggerated. Cally, to be sure, is a villainess of deadly nature."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '40 550w

FLOHERTY, JOHN JOSEPH. Men without fear. 224p il $2 Lippincott

604 Occupations, Dangerous. Adventure and adventurers. Heroes. Courage (W) 40-34581

Dramatic stories about the lives of men who work in ten of the world's most hazardous occupations. It deals with the dangers faced by test pilots, lightship crews, men handling explosives, linesmen, sandhogs, divers, miners, oil-well drillers, news reel cameramen, and harbor patrolmen. For older boys.

Booklist 37:240 F 1 '41

"It would be a pretty hard-boiled ten-year-old who could read this, or even just look through the pictures, without breathing faster than usual. . . Told with fire and spirit but without elocution, with plenty of personal anecdotes and real names, the book would be good without the pictures—but with these beautifully reproduced action photographs it is for its own purpose little less than superb." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 22 '40 200w

"With the skill of a reporter, Mr. Floherty makes the reader see these men at work, feel the risks and appreciate the skill of a test pilot, a diver, the 'sand hogs' who dig tunnels under rivers and mountains, of crews on lightships who stand guard at dangerous points along our coasts, and others in this book of real adventure and genuine thrills—good reading for boys who like true stories." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 27 '40 100w

"Will be enjoyed by boys twelve to fifteen." Marian Herr

+ Library J 65:1093 D 15 '40 70w

"Well-written romance of the unsung." Raymond Holden

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 N 16 '40 40w

FLYNN, JOHN THOMAS. Country squire in the White House. 131p $1 Doubleday

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano. U.S.—Politics and government (W) 40-12568

A critical survey of Franklin D. Roosevelt's political history and beliefs from his appointment as Assistant Secretary of the Navy under Wilson to the spring of 1940.

"To quote Mr. Flynn's preface (which he calls 'A Warning'), this little book is not a campaign document; it is not a biography of Franklin D. Roosevelt nor a 'comprehensive analysis of the New Deal; it is an attempt to explain the New Deal in terms of the man who sponsored it.' The 'warning' is welcome. For both Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal emerge from the work almost in caricature." W. M. Houghton

Books p5 Jl 7 '40 1150w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 20 '40 80w

Reviewed by J. C. Cort

Commonweal 36:60 N 1 '40 600w

"This little book by John T. Flynn is as severe an indictment of Franklin D. Roosevelt as has ever been written. The portrait is done not so much with acid as with a blowtorch. And Mr. Flynn must have known, when he applied the sizzling flame of his honest indignation to the President's hide, that he was going to be the target for every dead cat and tin can in the New Deal back yard. He is to be saluted for sticking his neck out. He is also to be saluted for saying some things that have needed a non-partisan saying for quite some time." Hamilton Basso

+ New Repub 103:146 Jl 29 '40 1850w

"Mr. Flynn does not work up a too obvious hate; and from that very lack he is all the more devastating. He concedes scarcely one favorable quality or accomplishment. He is without mercy, justice or fairness; yet he is neither spiteful nor venomous. His book, in a way, is a remarkable performance of reputation wrecking."

N Y Times p15 Jl 14 '40 1050w

New Yorker 16:67 Jl 13 '40 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '40 410w

FODOR, MARCEL WILLIAM. The revolution is on; introd. by Dorothy Thompson. 239p $2.75 Houghton

940.5311 European war, 1939—Causes. Europe—Politics. Revolutions (W) 40-27803

"[This book] is partly a description of the German Blitzkrieg, military, political, diplomatic, and moral, which culminated in the conquest of the Low Countries and the fall of France last May and June. It is also a background interpretation of the revolutionary ferment that is now at work in Europe and that finds its outward expressions in the three revolutionary dictatorships of Germany, Italy, and the Soviet Union." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 37:150 D 15 '40

"Mr. Fodor has written this book quickly and with passion. It is often more tract than history book, and his chapters on the Soviet Union and on South America and Western Hemisphere defense are less reporting than rewrite jobs. But his own story of the chapter in our history which began with the bombs being dropped on Brussels at dawn on May 10 is worth a book and worth the reading." Joseph Barnes

+ — Books p12 N 24 '40 550w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p9 N 26 '40 410w

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 29 '40 600w

"In Mr. Fodor's view, since 'three major states have at least put socialism into practice,' socialism is supposed to be the revolutionary objective. Conceding the 'totalitarian' dislike of plutocracy, anti-capitalism does not necessarily imply socialism, which in its ultimate sublimation means at all events the primacy of human life and of human dignity over material interests. . . I venture to disagree. Hitler, Mussolini, and Stalin are merely personifying the Hegelian idea of an all-powerful state. . . This erroneous approach, however, does not destroy the value of Mr. Fodor's book. Most interesting are his descriptions of totalitarian nationalism and his advice to American youth to watch the revolution but to keep out of it. The cockles of our hearts are warmed by his wishful thought that masses revolting for freedom with the aid of tanks and planes might defeat the oppressors." Rustem Vambery

— + Nation 151:570 D 7 '40 1250w

"Mr. Fodor has produced a valuable and stimulating book, both as a record of the German military victory in the west and as a series of informed and sometimes brilliant reflections on the spirit of restless, aggressive revolution that is now abroad and that has imparted to our modern age such a violent, hectic, precarious and unstable character." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p9 D 1 '40 1400w

New Yorker 16:90 N 30 '40 100w

Reviewed by W. H. Chambers

Sat R of Lit 23:10 N 30 '40 750w

Social Studies 32:47 Ja '41 30w

"M. W. Fodor's new book is a mixture of observation, interpretation and prophecy, and represents a praiseworthy type of cultured and thoughtful writing that is usually suggestive but not always conclusive or profound." E. N. Jenckes

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 N 23 '40 700w

FOERSTER, FRIEDRICH WILHELM. Europe and the German question. 474p $3.50 Sheed

943 Germany—History. Germany—Foreign relations. Europe—Politics (W) 40-33239

An analysis of German history, written by a German and a Prussian, who long before the first World war was exiled from his native land because of his unorthodox views. In his introductory chapter the author says: "This book is above all intended to acquaint Germans living outside the Third Reich with Germany's authentic tradition and with its European mission. But is also looks forward to a not too remote day when the Germans of the Third Reich . . . may learn from it the chain of sin and doom in German history since Bismarck." Index.

Atlantic Ja '41 240w

Booklist 37:134 D 1 '40

Reviewed by Walter Millis

Books p 8 O 6 '40 1750w

Cath World 152:363 D '40 390w

"Well worth reading." C. M. Meister

+ Living Age 359:495 Ja '41 360w

"A book to be studied, not hastily read."

+ New Yorker 16:104 O 12 '40 40w

FOERTSCH, HERMANN. The art of modern warfare; with an introd. by George Fielding Eliot. 265p il $2.75 Veritas

355 Military art and science. War 40-11865

"This book was written shortly before the outbreak of the present war, and its translation was not completed until after the hostilities had begun. Both the publisher and Major Eliot imply that it voices official German military doctrine, with which Colonel Foertsch was of course extremely familiar by reason of his military position. . . The whole book is permeated with the belief that future conflicts would largely pattern themselves after the western-front campaigns of 1914-18." Nation

Foreign Affairs 19:253 O '40 30w

"The book is especially designed for the uninitiated in military matters. It is remarkably undogmatic, its theme is logically developed, and preliminary definitions are clearly and plainly set out." H. S. Ford

Nation 151:34 Jl 13 '40 800w

FOERTSCH, HERMANN—Continued

"The publishers make the claim that Colonel Foertsch is 'a twentieth-century Clausewitz.' This is silly, as Foertsch has none of the philosophic depths of Clausewitz. But the book is valuable in showing how the new conceptions of modern warfare have permeated the German military mind. Grim reading. Recommended for West Pointers, present and prospective."

New Repub 103:286 Ag 26 '40 50w

"The book . . . is a particularly valuable contribution at this time when every fragment of information bearing on the amazing German military successes of recent months is being studied. Much of this discussion seems sound; on the other hand, much of it is conservative, and some of Colonel Foertsch's statements have already been negated by events." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 25 '40 330w

"Coördination of national effort in war is the keynote of this very readable book. . . Americans, civilians and soldiers alike, will gain much by a careful perusal of 'The Art of Modern Warfare.' " R. E. Dupuy

+ Sat R of Lit 22:19 S 21 '40 360w

Time 36:72 Jl 15 '40 70w

FOOTE, HENRY WILDER. Three centuries of American hymnody. 418p $4 Harvard univ. press

245.2 Hymns. Church music 40-34386

"This volume traces the story of hymns and hymn writers from early Colonial days to the present hour." Books

"It is delightfully written, with sound appreciation of literary and spiritual values, and just inclusion of all schools of hymnody from Dwight Moody to the Unitarians." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p29 N 17 '40 130w

"[A] volume not only very useful but indispensable to the student of the field of American hymnody." W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 18:69 Ja '41 360w

"Mr. Foote, though at times unduly severe in chastising some previous writer on hymnody, is usually judicious as well as discerning in his comment, and he shows a deep appreciation of hymns and their purposes. Americans who desire to learn about an important part of their background will find Mr. Foote a well-instructed and interested guide."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '40 1150w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. Murderer's vanity. 306p $2 Harper

40-32293

Detective story.

Booklist 37:138 D 1 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p25 O 6 '40 200w

"The sleuth has to work backward, and he does it with such persistence and doughty originality as to make this a readable tale." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p16 O 6 '40 160w

"Literary life of metropolis imaginatively portrayed, plot with ten tails chases them all merrily, and everything is satisfactorily washed up. Ho hum."

Sat R of Lit 22:28 O 19 '40 50w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. Sailor of fortune; the life and adventures of Commodore Barney. 323p il maps $3.50 Harper

B or 92 Barney, Joshua 40-31784

Commander Joshua Barney, a native of Maryland, born in 1759, commanded American ships in the Revolution and the War of 1812, and led a company of sailors and marines against the British when they moved against Washington in 1814. The work is based in part on data discovered in the annals of the city of Baltimore. Index.

Booklist 37:135 D 1 '40

"A frankly romantic, though historically valuable, biography. . . Mr. Footner writes excitingly and authoritatively about naval warfare, but many of his readers will find his hero's other works equally interesting. . . Bringing Joshua Barney back to life was well worth while, and, on the whole, Mr. Footner has done an excellent job of it. He has, however, brought to biography some of the vices as well as many of the virtues of a writer of popular fiction. At several points he presents dialogues which are obviously pure invention." R. H. Rovere

+ — Books p16 S 22 '40 650w

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 18 '41 150w

"One of the delightful by-products of such a history as this, one taken direct from contemporary material rarely seen by the general historian because it is off the main route, down a by-path of research, is the fresh approach to familiar men and events and unhackneyed remarks about them. In this book of Barney's life and adventures, you get at first hand what he said and thought about things and how he felt about his great contemporaries." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 5 '41 900w

"Excellent biography."

+ New Yorker 16:81 S 21 '40 40w

"Hulbert Footner has approached the task in all humility as a non-professional biographer, assembling an immense amount of information from obscure sources. This much is according to union rules and perhaps was done under professional advice; but having gone so far, Mr. Footner's training in the school of literature that must keep moving or be lost asserts itself, and he ramps out of the usual bounds. He gingers up his narrative with anecdotes; he uses direct quotations that cannot possibly have been set down at the time; he omits facts unless they have narrative importance or develop his man's character; he abjures footnotes. The result is at once one of the liveliest and most accurate biographies of the year." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 22:16 O 5 '40 420w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. Sinfully rich. 348p $2 Harper

40-3848

Detective story.

"Simpleton that we are, we thoroughly enjoyed this painless and often amusing time-killer." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 F 11 '40 150w

"A fast moving and highly complicated story, it is at the same time a somewhat disgusting picture of New York pseudo-society." Marian Wiggin

+ — Boston Transcript p2 F 17 '40 30w

"The author pictures cafe society at its very worst and introduces us to a number of persons whom we should hate to meet outside a book. The mystery is baffling enough, but the story thins out a little toward the end." Isaac Anderson

— + N Y Times p23 F 18 '40 100w

"Good opening gambit shot to pieces by subsequent rank melodrama and some pretty careless writing. Commonplace."

— Sat R of Lit 21:18 F 17 '40 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p149 Mr 23 '40 100w

FORBES, BERTIE CHARLES. Little bits about big men. 223p $2.50 Forbes

920 U.S.—Biography. Anecdotes 40-34393

Very brief anecdotes about well-known people, many of them business leaders. Index.

Books p14 O 27 '40 120w

"Among the early works of Dorothy Sayers is a collection of short stories built around a bright travelling salesman, one Montagu Egg, who meets every emergency with an apt saying from his salesman's handbook. This book would have delighted the heart of Mr. Egg. The bits are very little, and by Big Men Mr. Forbes means big business executives. . . The collection is rather disappointing and the big executives, in spite of their highly deserving lives (according to Mr. Forbes), show little wit, a striking naivety, and an endearing propensity to give weighty utterance to the obvious and the trite. That, however, may be the fault of the author."

Canadian Forum 20:358 F '41 110w

School & Society 52:440 N 2 '40 10w

FORBES, ROSITA (TORR) (MRS A. T. MCGRATH). These men I knew. 305p $3 Dutton [8s 6d Hutchinson]

923.1 Kings and rulers. Statesmen. Dictators 40-12765

Twenty-one brief chapters, giving the author's impressions on men and women she has met or interviewed within the last few years. Contents: Adolf Hitler; Glimpses of Goering and Goebbels; Stalin; Marshal Voroshilov; Admiral Horthy, Regent of Hungary; King Boris of Bulgaria; King George of Greece; The late King Alexander of Yugo-Slavia; Sir Basil Zaharoff; Two presidents of Turkey—Ataturk and Ismet Ineunu; The soldier who made himself Shah (of Persia); King Feisal's thirteen years; King Leopold of Belgium; Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands; President Roosevelt; The man of mass production—Henry Ford; Benito Mussolini, King Zog, and some others; Haile Selassie; Tribute to Field-Marshal Mannerheim; South Africa's General Smuts; Mahatma Gandhi and the unity of India.

"While some of her material is repetition of things that have been said and written before, a good deal of it is peculiarly her own." Rose Feld

Books p10 Jl 14 '40 750w

"The reader can admire her candor, her enthusiasm, and her light and gossipy touch. The integrity of her memory and the exactitude of her recording are impossible to judge. At any rate the character sketches make good reading if you do not take them all at one gulp." O. O.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 600w

"These are slight but colorful sketches. In the light of swiftly moving events of today, the views expressed by these world personalities are of interest. The book is for the general reader." A. T. Davidson

+ Library J 65:541 Je 15 '40 160w

"A tip-top volume, full of vivid description and well-defined close-ups of persons not easily approachable." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 21 '40 1050w

"The character sketches, though few are wanting in shrewdness, are for the most part of the lightest kind, admiring, gossipy, inexact —to be candid, somewhat hollow when they are not worse."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Ap 6 '40 450w

Wis Lib Bul 36:137 O '40

FORBES, ROSITA (TORR) (MRS A. T. MCGRATH). A unicorn in the Bahamas. 244p il maps $3 Dutton [10s 6d Jenkins]

917.296 Bahamas (W) 40-7060

Descriptions of the Bahama islands today, depicted against their historical background. Some of the islands are described separately: New Providence, Harbour island, Eleuthera, Exuma, Long Island and Cat Island, Andros, San Salvador, and Bimini.

"The lady has a mind of her own. It is worth the price of admission to sit in on the vigorous and excellent lambasting which she bestows on various political crooks, and mountebanks, and also on established institutions like British arrogance, peace treaties, and the League of Nations. Some of her history is a little shaky in spots, but not to hurt."

+ Atlantic My '40 170w

Books p14 Ap 28 '40 190w

"The author is sometimes rather strongly conscious of the white man's burden but most of the time she writes entertainingly." E. B. Schriftgiesser

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '40 350w

"Amusing anecdotes, good illustrations, interesting for adult or young adult readers in search of historical fact, but not very engrossing reading. The story seems detached, presented from the viewpoint of an outsider." Lena Ruppert

+ Library J 65:256 Mr 15 '40 110w

"As a traveler whose quest has been for adventure and exploration these many years, Rosita Forbes must find the West Indies a bit tame—and she shows that by a certain grandiloquence of far-flung allusion which interferes with the clarity of her text. But she has written with real zest about a small island group, and her book is to be recommended to Caribbean voyagers."

+ — N Y Times p23 Mr 31 '40 420w

New Yorker 16:92 Ap 6 '40 30w

Sat R of Lit 22:21 Ag 24 '40 380w

"The book offers a pleasant contribution to popular knowledge of the Bahamas, and the lush, and occasionally flamboyant, prose is well suited to its subject. It should win many friends for these lovely islands and for itself."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 My 1 '40 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p734 D 16 '39 700w

Wis Lib Bul 36:136 O '40

FORD, MRS ELISABETH. No hour of history. 330p $2.50 Washburn

40-31874

A family chronicle which carries the story of Richard Ash's descendants down the years of history from 1630 to the post-World war period. The novel's heroine is Victoria Ash, who was born in Iowa just before the Civil war, and died there in 1927. But in between these dates of birth and death she had known many cities and places, had corresponded with statesmen and entertained poets, known both happiness and grief.

Booklist 37:137 D 1 '40

"At the risk of turning away clients, it should be owned that though nobody under twenty-five believes there is such a thing as a reader around fifty, this is the reader who will get the most from 'No Hour of History.' The first part takes place at a time his parents told him about. About a third of the way through the story picks up his own past, and from then on he is likely to meet, around any corner, some one he heard about, or read about, or perhaps even met; some one he is a trifle disconcerted to realize has turned historical in the mean time. The charm of the story, for it has one, may lie in this; that all these people and the times in which they lived are contemporary as you read about them. They are no more quaint than they were at the time." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 O 13 '40 600w

Reviewed by Phil Stong

Current Hist & Forum 52:2 N 26 '40 400w

" 'No Hour of History' is less appealing as a novel than as a lively genre picture of a century of change. It tells one of college 'Promenades' in the days when dancing was forbidden; of house-cleaning in the Nineties, made horrible by carpets; of the coming of the first telephones and the first phonographs and the first Dorine compacts. . . Small wonder that even Victoria is inundated by this deluge of nostalgic facts." E. H. Walton

FORD, ELISABETH—Continued
+ — N Y Times p6 O 6 '40 800w
New Yorker 16:102 O 12 '40 50w

"In spite of the fact that the American scene has been more successfully delineated in other recent books, 'No Hour of History' is a pleasant and entertaining chronicle."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e D 29 '40 360w

FORD, LESLIE, pseud. See Brown, Z.

FOREMAN, CLARK, and RAUSHENBUSH, JOAN (MRS HILMAR STEPHEN RAUSHENBUSH). Total defense. unp pa $1.25 Doubleday

355 U.S.—Defenses. U.S.—Economic policy. Industrial mobilization

"Two imaginary memoranda, one addressed to Hitler by the Reichsbüro for Political Economy, the other to the President, Congress, and the rest of us by the authors, outlining what Germany probably intends to do about this continent and how we ought to prevent it." New Yorker

" 'Total Defense' should be read and re-read with careful attention. Even though the authors' proposals sound radical, the presentation convinces that—like it or not—we must accept something like them or face the probability of economic and political conquest." P. J. Searles
+ Boston Transcript p1 O 5 '40 220w
Canadian Forum 20:250 N '40 700w

"The form of presentation seems to the reviewer to be open to serious weaknesses. . . Despite these structural and rhetorical inadequacies, however, the book has some useful data in its pages. These are found chiefly in the second part of the work, since the first portion is admittedly theoretical and imaginative." J. D. Squires
+ — Christian Century 57:1376 N 6 '40 700w

"The authors' program . . . has the merit of combining sweeping constructive ideas with a wealth of concrete practical observations and suggestions. Its original way of presentation is perhaps less of an asset than its authors may have thought. The imitation of the Nazi tone, though carried through with considerable skill, frequently defeats its own objectives by exaggeration. The main criticism one would be inclined to raise against the plan is that it deals too much with future possibilities and too little with immediate exigencies." Herbert Rosinski
+ — Nation 151:426 N 2 '40 750w

Reviewed by George Soule
New Repub 103:760 D 2 '40 1250w

"An amazingly keen and detailed job."
+ New Yorker 16:78 S 28 '40 50w

FORESTER, CECIL SCOTT. To the Indies. 298p map $2.50 Little

Columbus, Christopher—Fiction
(W) 40-10294

A tale of Columbus' third voyage to the New World from which he returned, broken and disgraced and in chains. The central character is a middle-aged Spanish lawyer, Don Narciso Rich, sent by Ferdinand to investigate the Admiral's actions as viceroy.

Booklist 36:429 Jl 15 '40
Bookmark 2:12 Ja '41

"One can get the outlines of 'To the Indies' out of history books. Familiarity with the scene will, in fact, add to the pleasure of the book and to an appreciation of the excellent work Forester has created. For he has clothed the skeleton of facts with the fine raiment of fifteenth century adventure and discovery. His writing is clean as a saber stroke, his characters, from Columbus down to the lowliest Indian, alive with individual color and instinct." Rose Feld
+ Books p1 Jl 28 '40 1000w

"The undertones which give depth to Forester's rousing action story do not intrude. You may read the story swiftly, and recall only the terrible fight with the crocodile on the delta, the burning of the Indians, the bloody battle before the island fort, and swift destruction in the hurricane. Forester is no Conrad, obsessed with the human soul. He tells a rousing story. That, in these days, is a sound satisfaction." Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p13 Jl 24 '40 800w

"A wonderful story, the action-tale type of which Forester is one of the chief masters in our time. His style races, his characters breathe real life, his story engrosses. 'To the Indies' is the kind of book everyone will look for and, once having found it, the sort that no one will put down." E. J. Bartnett
+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 27 '40 550w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 57:973 Ag 7 '40 700w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '40

"The novel has interest of a casual, comfortable sort; it lacks the compelling artistry of characterization in Forester's previous works." D. S. Rankin
+ — Commonweal 32:354 Ag 16 '40 310w

Reviewed by H. A. Carpenter
Library J 65:591 Jl '40 80w
Nation 151:139 Ag 17 '40 60w

"Outside of its plain readability, the charm of the book is in its realization of a world as it was, its drives for God and gold, its rigid hierarchies and new elastic enterprise, its widening body of lay knowledge referred back laboriously to the ancients, its morals to the Inquisition." Otis Ferguson
+ New Repub 103:148 Jl 29 '40 430w

"It is an admirable tale, realistic and romantic by turns, adventurous and ingenious, and, I should think, the most beguiling book of the summer." P. M. Jack
+ N Y Times p1 Jl 28 '40 1050w

"The portrait of Columbus is not over-convincing, but that of Don Narciso is well studied, if too pat. The whole book may perhaps be put down as a minor effort. Mr. Forester has bigger things in him than 'To the Indies.' " Clifton Fadiman
+ — New Yorker 16:65 Jl 27 '40 380w
Pratt p24 autumn '40

"The pace of the narrative is uneven; the interest does not mount. Perhaps the author's sense of timing has for once deserted him. But I think the explanation is that Don Narciso is unequal to the central role. We do not really care very much what happens to him. . . But with Don Narciso failing us, and the Admiral only faintly sketched, 'To the Indies' is little more than action for action's sake." B. R. Redman
— + Sat R of Lit 22:5 Jl 27 '40 900w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '40 470w

"C. S. Forester so skillfully constructs the silences of unbruised continents, the dreadfulness of events, that he inevitably challenges the memory of Archibald MacLeish's Conquistador. His story has the pity of that poem, some of its beauty and power."
+ Time 36:60 Jl 29 '40 650w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 30:xii autumn '40 40w

FORMAN, HARRISON. Horizon hunter; the adventures of a modern Marco Polo; il. with phot. taken by the author. 314p maps $3 McBride

915 China—Description and travel. Tibet—Description and travel. Voyages and travels
(W) 40-9819

Records the author's experiences in China, Tibet, Mongolia, Russia, Hollywood, and war-torn Poland. He went to China in 1931 to sell airplanes, but was interrupted by the Japanese invasion. In Tibet he was held up by bandits. In the province of Kansu, inhabited by nearly 15,000,000 Mohammedans, he met the Panchen Lama. In Hollywood he assisted Frank Capra in the filming of Lost Horizon. At the end of the book he gives a glimpse of the "blitzkrieg" in Poland. Index.

"The action-studded book of an extremely active man."
Books p20 My 12 '40 310w

"Much of Mr. Forman's narrative dwells on the wholesale human slaughter he had seen in these last ten years. Too much, in fact, to offer readers any diversion from the tone of today's headlines from other belligerent areas." H. T.
Christian Science Monitor p20 My 3 '40 550w

"The Asiatic sections of the book are the best. But the whole chronicle is zestful and interesting, and so are the author's photographs."
+ N Y Times p5 My 12 '40 470w
New Yorker 16:91 My 4 '40 30w
Sat R of Lit 22:22 Jl 13 '40 360w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 2 '40 1000w

FORSTER-KNIGHT, M. Mr Tittlewit's holiday; il. by [the author]. 155p $1.50 Lippincott [5s Pitman]
40-13978

Mr Tittlewit was a city mouse no longer in his first youth, so when a cat moved into his neighborhood he left his comfortable little apartment and moved to the country where his friend the ground mole lived. This tale of their adventures is told for children of five to seven.

"Children whose parents consider them too young for 'The Wind in the Willows' will find in this book, which is happily and freely illustrated, a pleasant tale to set them in the same general direction on another level. . . [The characters] wear clothes, live in furnished houses of appropriate size, and talk, and if their speech has not the overtones of Kenneth Grahame's, it has good English, good humor, and general good will that makes the little people act as lovably as they look in real life to little children. For these are little people; the story wastes no effort on natural history. It is too busy keeping Mr. Tittlewit and a number of little listeners happily entertained." M. L. Becker
+ Books p5 Je 9 '40 280w

"Children who have outgrown, if one ever does quite, the charms of Peter Rabbit and Mrs. Tiggy-Winkle, and who are not quite ready for the unrelenting facts of natural science will find here a delightful tale of the smallest folk of wood and pasture. It is that rare thing, a fantasy perfectly sustained and scaled to the miniature world which the young love. There is real charm here, derived from an imaginative and humorous use of detail, and the merry verses which Mr. Tittlewit culled from 'The Grasshopper's Songbook' add a special lilt of gayety." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p9 Ag 11 '40 360w

FOSS, KENELM. Here lies Richard Brinsley Sheridan. 390p il $3.50 Dutton [16s Secker, Martin]
B or 92 Sheridan, Richard Brinsley Butler
[40-5869]

Biography of the eighteenth-century playwright, whose activities took him into many other fields as well. Index.

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Books p4 Jl 7 '40 1450w

Reviewed by E. B. Gulick
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '40 1000w

"This is a highly readable, facilely written portrait with an exasperating habit of going backwards and forwards in time. This complication of chronology is the despair of anyone who comes to this book for information, but to the more casual reader who wishes to enjoy a flowing witty narrative, it is to be commended." George Freedley
+ — Library J 65:590 Jl '40 220w

"It would be cruel to judge this childlike amateur very gravely. He is so pleased with the honourable toil of making a book; he writes with such an air of 'my historian's conscience,' of 'my over-fastidiousness on the subject of melodrama,' of putting records 'through the hair-sieve of our critical common sense.' And it must be said that he has really worked hard, and has vitality enough for half a dozen biographers of riper taste and discretion." K. John
— + New Statesman & Nation 18:153 Jl 22 '39 900w

"Kenelm Foss has reconstructed an era, and he has silhouetted against the background he has constructed, in sharp yet filled-in outline, one of the most romantic figures of recent centuries. An absorbing tale." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p5 Jl 7 '40 1550w

"It is a book that, in spite of its occasionally cumbersome writing, its failure to give authorities for controversial points, and its absence of stylistic felicity, is well worth reading. A witty writer would never quote a man's witticisms without setting the stage for them and Sheridan's brilliance seems, to be sure, a little dim in Mr. Foss's careful specification of examples. The comic spirit is not so easily catalogued." John Anderson
+ Sat R of Lit 22:10 Ag 31 '40 450w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 27 '39 500w

"In the main Mr. Foss's reading of Sheridan is just; but the beginner will do well to remember that the authorities on whom Mr. Foss has based his work show instructed opinion to be divided, or in doubt, on certain matters."
Times [London] Lit Sup p392 Jl 1 '39 400w

FOSTER, BENNETT. Powdersmoke fence. 277p $2 Doubleday 40-30399

Western story.

"You can't go wrong with this open-air tale of double trouble out in Las Olas County." Will Cuppy
+ Books p16 S 8 '40 90w

"Bennett Foster is rapidly forging ahead as a writer of superior Westerns. This is one of the best he has yet published, a fast, salty, gripping tale exceptionally well written and with a whole gallery of characters skillfully differentiated." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p15 Ag 18 '40 210w

FOUGERA, MRS KATHERINE (GIBSON). With Custer's cavalry; from the memoirs of Katherine Gibson; il. with photographs. 285p $3 Caxton printers
973.82 Custer, George Armstrong. Little Big Horn, Battle of the, 1876 40-32212

This picture of American army life on the frontier and account of the Custer massacre, is based on letters of the author's father who was an officer stationed at Fort Lincoln, and on the reminiscences of the author's mother. The book is written in the first person as if by Mrs Gibson.

"The Custer battle has been analyzed to the last detail—as nearly as any battle can be, when every white man in it was killed. But these freshly told stories of the Army wives those men left behind—of the gala wedding, of the Christmas celebration with sagebrush

FOUGERA, KATHERINE—Continued
and cedar boughs hung from the ceiling, since there were no trees in the neighborhood, of General Custer's prairie 'fete champetre,' of the sewing bees, of the wedding dress torn up to line the Benteen baby's coffin, of the bison stampede and of the living fear of the 'wily savage'—these stories paint in the background of the oft-told battle story." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p11 S 4 '40 700w

Canadian Forum 20:253 N '40 280w

"This book, though only a second-hand narrative, has color and warmth and a measure of importance." F. F. Van de Water

+ N Y Times p18 D 15 '40 490w

FOWLER, RALPH HOWARD, and GUGGENHEIM, EDWARD ARMAND. Statistical thermodynamics; a version of Statistical mechanics for students of physics and chemistry. 694p $9.50 Macmillan [40s Cambridge]

541.39 Mechanics, Statistical. Thermodynamics 40-13528

"Prof. R. H. Fowler, with the able assistance of Dr. E. A. Guggenheim, has produced a book which will serve in many respects as a third edition of his 'Statistical Mechanics', but which does not supersede the former work entirely. The present book is written with rather a different aim in view. The first edition of 'Statistical Mechanics' gives the impression that the author's interest was centred primarily on a new and elegant mathematical technique, the 'method of steepest descents', which could be applied with profit to a very large number of physical problems. The second edition represents a transition stage, with more emphasis on the physical problems and less on the principles of statistical mechanics. In the present work the shift of emphasis is complete. It is a book, admittedly written from a mathematical point of view, about the properties of matter in bulk." Nature

---

"In a brief review it is difficult to give even an approximate idea of the wealth of information contained in this book which one is tempted to call a standard reference work of the theories of the macroscopic properties of matter. Unfortunately, however, the authors let themselves be carried away by a love for the mathematical formula so that the book is by no means an easy reading one and is hardly suitable for anyone whose mathematical training is somewhat incomplete or rusty. Even after reading this volume, the reviewer has still to be convinced that the Darwin-Fowler method has any advantages, except some mathematical elegance, over the much more instructive Boltzmann procedure and it seems to him that statistical mechanics could be adequately presented with a greater economy of mathematical symbols. Nonetheless any physical chemist with a flair for mathematics cannot do better than to devote a generous portion of his time to a thorough study of at least some portions of this book, to learn better the basic principles of physical chemistry." G. B. Kistiakowsky

+ — Am Chem Soc J 62:2888 O '40 480w

"Statistical Thermodynamics is a highly recommendable book. Compared with Fowler's second edition it is easier to read and contains a considerable amount of new material. It will not be of great interest to the industrial chemist, but of great help and use for teacher and student." F. C. Nachod

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:203 Mr '40 350w

"The reviewer is painfully aware of the inadequacy of a review in covering even the essentials of a book of this character. It is all too rarely that the scientific literature is graced by a work of such wide scope, and yet one in which the material has been so well digested. It is not presumptuous to recommend this book above all others to the serious reader, for it has no competitors in its own field." E. L. Hill

+ J Phys Chem 44:831 Je '40 480w

"Readers of Prof. Fowler's earlier books will not need to be assured of the thoroughness with which the work of revision has been done, or of the masterly and complete mathematical treatment of the physical problems which are discussed. Students approaching the subject without much mathematical knowledge will, we think, find it easier than in the previous books to discover the formulæ that they want and to understand the steps by which the formulæ are obtained. The book is written with the needs of practical workers in physics and chemistry in mind, and it is a remarkable achievement to produce a treatise so eminently useful without sacrificing mathematical rigour or completeness in any way." N. F. Mott

+ Nature 145:239 F 17 '40 1050w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:13 Ja '40

FOX, DIXON RYAN. Yankees and Yorkers. 237p map $4 N.Y. univ. bk. store

974 New York (state)—History. New York (state)—Boundaries. New England—History 40-13441

This volume contains lectures delivered at New York University under the Anson G. Phelps lectureship on early American history. The subject of the lectures is the centuries-long conflict between the English settlers of New England and the Dutch and other settlers of New York, over boundaries and settlement rights. Index.

"This story of the relations of New England and New York is a fascinating one, and it has been told with grace and lucidity and liveliness. The scholarship is scrupulous but unobtrusive; the vigor of the narrative never flags. Appreciation must be given, too, for the typographical beauty of this book, a beauty characteristic of the too-rare productions of the New York University Press." H. S. Commager

+ Books p25 O 27 '40 1150w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 Ag 6 '40 800w
New Repub 103:362 S 9 '40 70w
Social Studies 31:334 N '40 20w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes
Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 20 '40 1200w

FOX, FRANCES MARGARET. They sailed and sailed; il. by Woodi Ishmael. 224p $2 Dutton

920 Explorers. Seamen (W) 40-14898

Supplementary reading material for grades five to seven. Short accounts are given of twenty-one explorers, covering in time from Marco Polo's voyage in 1271, to the wreck of the Trenton in the South seas in 1889. Partial contents: Marco Polo's surprise party; A book that was written in prison; About the naming of America; The story of Ferdinand Magellan; About Henry Hudson and the "Half Moon"; About the Swiss Family Robinson; Captain Cook; Connecticut Yankee who sailed with Captain Cook; Cyrus W. Field and the Atlantic cable; The United States navy and little Alice; The wooden eagle home from the seas.

Booklist 37:94 N 1 '40

"For the human side of the great navigators, for enjoyable reading, and for lessons in courage and determination—'They Sailed and Sailed.' " E. M. Wedrow

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 24 '40 200w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:853 O 15 '40 10w

"The style of writing is good. The illustrations are excellent, themselves supplying valuable details. Librarians and teachers will be glad to enlarge the subject of world discovery, always in demand by the schools, with this modern and especially readable material for children in the middle grades." Irene Smith

+ N Y Times p32 N 10 '40 180w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:38 D 7 '40 10w

FRAILEY, LESTER E. How to write better business letters. 198p il $2 Am. tech. soc.

651.75 Commercial correspondence 39-24461

"A textbook for business men emphasizing the elements of effective letter-writing. It offers many samples of letters to satisfy various business needs, suggests substitutes for weak and stereotyped phraseology, and contains quiz questions to help you check the high spots of each chapter." (Management R) Index.

Management R 29:272 Jl '40 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:56 O '39

FRANCE. MINISTERE DES AFFAIRES ETRANGERES. The French yellow book; diplomatic documents (1938-1939). 419p $2.50 Reynal [5s; pa 3s 6d Hutchinson]

940.5322 European war, 1939—Documents, etc, sources. European war, 1939—Diplomatic history 40-7960

Collection of French diplomatic documents on the events which preceded the outbreak of the war. They are "papers relative to the events and negotiations which preceded the opening of hostilities between Germany on the one hand, and Poland, Great Britain and France on the other." (Subtitle)

Reviewed by H. W. Stoke
Am Pol Sci R 34:1047 O '40 190w

Bookmark p6 N '40

"The broad outlines of the drama are familiar. But that makes it no less instructive to follow its illuminating details step by step in these papers. At the end the reader may not know everything. But he has a vivid grasp of the nature of the process. He has sat in on history in the making." Walter Millis

+ Books p5 Ap 14 '40 1350w

"Though the British scored a scoop by releasing their War Blue Book here in the fall, the French Yellow Book outranks its predecessor in almost everything but timeliness. . . The Yellow Book's material on the Soviet-German negotiations is as satisfying as any now available. Neither the Blue Book nor Sir Nevile Henderson's 'Failure of a Mission' gives evidence that the British knew more than the slightest rumors about this before August. M. Coulondre, on the other hand, reports early in May one of the most startling diplomatic conversations outside of fiction, a meeting of 'X,' 'one of the Fuehrer's associates,' with a member of the embassy staff." R. H. Phelps

+ Boston Transcript p11 Ap 12 '40 850w

Christian Century 57:514 Ap 17 '40 120w

Reviewed by C. G. Paulding
Commonweal 32:83 My 17 '40 360w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
Forum 103:327 Je '40 400w

"As in all such cases the documents have been selected, and the omissions are no doubt as important as what is included. One suspects that the proportion of omissions is particularly large among Bonnet's own dispatches. . . This 'Yellow Book,' however, is more complete, more honest, and more informative than the British 'Blue Book,' which includes no diplomatic documents earlier than May 28, 1939, and gives Chamberlain's speech at Birmingham on March 17, 1939, but not his speech in the House of Commons two days earlier." Robert Dell

+ — Nation 150:484 Ap 13 '40 1050w

"The officials who compiled these documents were not exactly eager to reveal the whole story. Essential links—the papers relating to the pre-Munich intrigues and the Soviet negotiations—are missing. As a source for historians, the French Yellow Book is valuable only in stressing and confirming a few of the events that led to hostilities." Norbert Guterman

New Repub 102:614 My 6 '40 1000w

"The gaps in the French record are maddening: they all but destroy its value for future historians. . . Yet the French documents cover more ground than the British, and provide a wealth of unpublished source material." Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.

+ — N Y Times p23 Ap 7 '40 1700w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '40 550w

"A valuable complement to the British Blue-book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p54 F 3 '40 800w

Reviewed by Leo Gershoy
Yale R n s 29:825 summer '40 650w

FRANCK, HARRY ALVERSON, and LANKS, HERBERT C. The Pan American highway; from the Rio Grande to the Canal Zone. 249p il map $5 Appleton-Century

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel. Central America—Description and travel. Inter-American highway (W) 40-11630

Description of the motor highway that runs from the United States border south to Panama. In addition both text and many pictures deal with the life and customs of Mexicans and Central Americans. Index.

Reviewed by Agnes Rothery
Books p13 Jl 21 '40 370w

Reviewed by Zephine Humphrey
Boston Transcript p1 Jl 6 '40 480w

"Mr. Franck and Mr. Lanks followed the route all the way to the Canal Zone, but beyond the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and through Central America they have relatively little to say about the highway, for not much of it exists. They do, however, give a vivid account of the scenery and the people and so convey the fascinating flavor of the country that the prospective traveler's appetite will be whetted. Besides containing much good descriptive text, the volume is a magnificent picture-book of Mexico and the six Central American republics."

+ Christian Century 57:976 Ag 7 '40 280w

Eng N 125:80 Jl 18 '40 70w

Reviewed by G. E. Brown
Library J 65:451 My 15 '40 200w

"The photographs show a primitive life, for the most part, but the interest of reality is in them all. Few books on Latin America have offered such invitation and real guidance to the intelligent tourist."

+ N Y Times p2 Jl 7 '40 700w

New Yorker 16:72 Je 22 '40 30w

"Mr. Franck does not stray far from the things that would interest the average tourist. . . But what makes this book something more than the useful tourist guide, is the author's keen eye for the warm flow of life, its pageantry, color, and novelty. . . Mostly his book is one of surface impressions, with flashes of good humor, of historical perspective, and all is told with sympathy and tolerance. . . Fully half of this review should have been devoted to the extraordinarily fine photographs by Mr. Lanks. They are in themselves a real adventure in time and space, truth and beauty." Carleton Beals

+ Sat R of Lit 22:17 O 5 '40 550w

"The pictures in this splendid volume catch both beauty and human interest. Comment will only spoil your hitch-hike with these travelers. Dream over these pages, bit by bit, and you will begin to plan for a vacation in reality. In both ways you will have learned something of the intimate things we need to know." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 29:442 Ag '40 230w

FRANCKENSTEIN, GEORG ALBERT, freiherr von und zu. Diplomat of destiny [Eng title: Facts and features of my life]. 342p il $3 Alliance bk. [15s Cassell]

B or 92 Diplomatic memoirs. Austria—Foreign relations 40-31584

The author is a former Austrian ambassador to the court of St James. His memoirs cover

FRANCKENSTEIN, G. A.—Continued
three periods in the history of Austria—the empire, the republic, and the German province. As the son of a diplomat and a member of the old Austrian nobility, he has served in the diplomatic service in Washington, St Petersburg, Rome, Tokyo, and Brussels, as well as London. Index.

Reviewed by B. E. Nelson
Boston Transcript p3 S 28 '40 400w

"It is, unfortunately, little more than the conventional society album: what the author says of his predecessor, Count Mensdorff (1904-14)—'the net of his social contacts might have been cast more widely'—applies no less to his case. But it is redeemed by the rare simplicity of the man himself, who, as he modestly says somewhere, has 'apparently the gift of inspiring trust.' That is no mean quality." W. H. C.
— + Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 2 '40 230w

New Repub 103:638 N 4 '40 60w

"From the aesthetic point of view his book is rather thin and empty but it has charm." K. John
— + New Statesman & Nation 19:20 Ja 6 '40 120w

"Throughout this interesting, though sometimes superficial, diplomatic narrative run descriptions of magnificent court receptions and masked balls, recapturing a social world now shattered by two wars, and frequent comments on Sir George's two avocations—people and music." J. F. Green
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:7 S 21 '40 460w

Reviewed by Wilson Harris
Spec 163:792 D 1 '39 600w

"The writer of this very readable autobiography is one of those exceptionally fortunate and gifted diplomatists who, although trained in the early twentieth-century school, aristocratic, elegant and exclusive, was able to adapt himself completely to the vast changes after 1918. . . It should be mentioned that his book, although mainly concerned with his diplomatic career, has a number of more personal pages, and others beside students of history will be delighted to read the letters here given which the writer received from his dear friend, the poet Hugo von Hofmannsthal."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p680 N 25 '39 850w

FRANCOISE, pseud. See Seignobosc, F.

FRANK, NATHANIEL HERMAN. Introduction to electricity and optics. 398p $3.50 McGraw

537 Electricity. Optics 40-12236

"This book has been written primarily as a textbook for the use of those second-year students at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology who intend to pursue further studies in electrical engineering, physics, or both. . . The goal to which this book aspires is a compact logical exposition of the fundamental laws of the electric and the magnetic field and the elementary applications of these laws to circuits, to a study of the electrical and magnetic properties of matter, and to the field of optics. The treatment is quantitative throughout and an attempt has been made to imbue the reader with a sound understanding of the fundamental laws (the Maxwell equations) and with the ability to apply them to many and varied phenomena without resorting to special formulas and methods." (Pref) Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 25:34 Jl '40

Reviewed by D. H. Loughbridge
+ R of Scientific Instruments 2:338 O '40 850w

FRANK, WALDO DAVID. Chart for rough water; our role in a new world. 182p $1.75 Doubleday

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. World politics 40-7521

"Because the world has departed from the 'Great Tradition' of western civilization, the initiative awareness of God in man, society is now suffering its present horrors and humiliations. This is the thesis of Waldo Frank's latest excursion into politics and metaphysics." Boston Transcript

Booklist 36:376 Je 1 '40

Reviewed by Daniel Aaron
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '40 270w

"It is a brave and stimulating book." C. G. Paulding
+ Commonweal 32:312 Ag 2 '40 650w

Foreign Affairs 18:752 Jl '40 30w

"This book contains an unusual interpretation of history, but I personally was not convinced that his chart was clear enough to guide the reader through the treacherous waters of our present difficulties." R. D. Minnich
Library J 65:299 Ap 1 '40 240w

Reviewed by L. B. Bloch
Living Age 358:487 Jl '40 1500w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 150:600 My 11 '40 1300w

Reviewed by Malcom Cowley
New Repub 102:797 Je 10 '40 1850w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky
N Y Times p4 Je 23 '40 1100w

New Yorker 16:99 Ap 13 '40 30w

"I wish that there were in Mr. Frank's book more of the reasoning and outlook that his friend and co-worker Randolph Bourne once put into his great essays on the intellectuals and the (First World) war. Yet all these objections have to do with immediate policy. And Mr. Frank's book should be criticized on the level on which it was written—the evaluation of Western history and culture which alone can give meaning to immediate policies." Max Lerner
Sat R of Lit 22:3 My 25 '40 2950w

Reviewed by D. H. Popper
Survey G 29:561 N '40 220w

FRANKAU, GILBERT. Self-portrait. 415p $2.50 Dutton [10s 6d Hutchinson]

Frankau, Gilbert—Fiction 40-6700

In the guise of fiction the English author writes the story of his own life, from his earliest recollections, to the present.

"There is every indication that [Mr Frankau] enjoyed the composition and is rather pleased with the effect. Much of it is amusing, some of it is sharp and observant, but now and then it is a trifle too self-evident." Lisle Bell
Books p12 Mr 10 '40 270w

Reviewed by J. A. Sohon
Library J 65:351 Ap 15 '40 190w

"A passionate interest in himself may make a man unpopular in life, but it is the making of an autobiography; and it is only Mr. Frankau's superb egocentricity which makes his inbred and snobbish story of wealth, women and self so entertaining. He imitates Kipling not only in his books but in his life; but a curious streak of self-consciousness makes both into a pastiche of the Pukka Sahib infinitely more enjoyable than the real thing for which he craves."
+ — New Statesman & Nation 19:254 F 24 '40 120w

"The most unpleasantly revealing section of the book, that dealing with Frankau's tour of America, is redeemed by its extreme self-candor. . . An immensely entertaining feature of 'Self-Portrait' is comprised in the hundreds of allusions to and anecdotes about well-known people whom Frankau has either known intimately or has knocked up against in his business journeys around the world. Ellery Sedgwick, Sinclair Lewis, Lord Birkenhead, Otto Kahn, Lord Rothermere, Somerset Maugham, John Buchan, G. B. Stern—a handful snatched at random but which gives some idea of the catholicity of the writer's choice." J. S. S.

+ — N Y Times p21 Mr 17 '40 900w

Springf'd Republican p10 My 23 '40 550w

"Mr. Frankau has made of [this] a novel of episode rather than of character for, partly as the result of the deliberate emphasis on poses, the reader is left sharing his own doubt whether he is a 'hard-boiled business man' or a sentimentalist. One or other has a finger in all the pies that are going, and seldom fails to get away with something light and palatable, which is a treat for the reader too."

Times [London] Lit Sup p3 Ja 6 '40 600w

FRANKAU, PAMELA. Appointment with death [Eng title: A democrat dies]. 334p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Heinemann]

40-3031

Combination of mystery story and political satire, the scene of which is modern England. There is a movement afoot to instigate a world revolution, using as an instrument the secret society known as Phoenix. A young deputy secretary to the ministry of the interior and his attractive wife are prominent thruout the action.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p12 Ja 14 '40 250w

"This is no mystery story, but it will probably prove interesting to those souls who like their dreams on a world-wide basis." Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 50w

"This is a novel of the modern ruling class which takes a favourable view of a Prime Minister, of a politician with a cross-bench mind, of a stiff Tory Cabinet Minister who, nevertheless, has imagination. Politically, the spectacles are rosy; the novel, lightly and economically narrated, is expertly exciting." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 29 '39 150w

"This is a mystery story—and a corking good mystery at that, bound up with a youthful, sane outlook upon contemporary political madness. . . Apart from anything else a book involving England's Parliament and parliamentary procedure by a writer who knows both as intimately as her own doorstep has more than a little interest at the moment." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 14 '40 700w

"Miss Frankau is a charming and lively writer, and even the intermittent onslaughts of Phoenix cannot destroy one's pleasure in her style. Indeed, one might go further and say that even those affectations which, instead of life, inform all her characters except Jane, cannot make her book unreadable. In spite of everything, she succeeds in turning the curious death of Sir Howard Norbolt into an agreeable and exciting problem. . . This is not one of Miss Frankau's successes; but it does not prevent one from looking forward to her next book." G. D.

— + Sat R of Lit 21:19 F 3 '40 320w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '40 110w

"Wellsians and other students of the political novel may find Miss Frankau's notions of Utopia too vague for their tastes, while amateur detectives will probably remark on finishing it, that there never was anything to detect. In spite of this tendency to fall between stools, the story is vividly and attractively written."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p529 S 9 '39 310w

FRANKEN, ROSE D. (LEWIN) (MRS WILLIAM BROWN MELONEY). Claudia and David. 307p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 40-33361

Further adventures of the Naughtons, Claudia and David, whose first year of marriage was told in Claudia (Book Review Digest, 1939). Their oldest child is aged five; the second child only a baby, but the glamor of their happiness is still with them, as is made manifest in these stories of their marriage.

Booklist 37:241 F 1 '41

" 'Claudia and David' is an amusing book, but not a fluffy one. The Naughtons are extremely real people; and you know and like them thoroughly. Their thoughts, their creeds, and their pleasantly honest moral codes are soaked into the stories and Miss Franken is skillful in showing them with so light a touch that you absorb with no trouble at all." Anne Brooks

+ Books p10 D 8 '40 440w

"Rose Franken's easy and smooth style makes the Naughton conversations jolly reading. Their smallest and biggest experiences range from the amusing to the poignant. Miss Franken has a well-controlled touch in picturing gay and silly incidents and also the near-tragic happenings. Mostly the book is on the light side, but under the froth as well as in the serious scenes she makes the reader realize the essential unity of these two happily married people." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p4 D 8 '40 480w

"[Claudia's] view of life can only be compared with that of Daisy Ashford: hers is the same remarkable blend of astonishment at the commonplace and casual acceptance of the fantastic. Even when she decides that she is 'stagnating,' Claudia manages to have a pretty good time. And Miss Franken's readers will, too." F. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 D 21 '40 170w

FRANKEN, ROSE D. (LEWIN) (MRS WILLIAM BROWN MELONEY), and MELONEY, WILLIAM BROWN (FRANKEN MELONEY, pseud). When doctors disagree. 282p $2 Farrar

40-11555

Story of a woman doctor faced with two problems, how to overcome masculine prejudice, and what to do about the instinctive urge toward wifehood and motherhood within her.

"Just when we begin to think that we have taken an overdose of fiction about doctors and nurses and hospitals and operations along comes Franken Meloney's 'When Doctors Disagree,' which is so much better than most of them that it can be enthusiastically prescribed. We don't know how its slant on medical ethics would be regarded by the profession, but for the purposes of exciting drama it works out beautifully." Lisle Bell

+ Books p12 Je 23 '40 360w

"One of the best of the new crop of hospital novels."

+ N Y Times p15 Je 23 '40 180w

" 'When Doctors Disagree' appeared serially in a woman's magazine under the title 'Women in White.' It is primarily a woman's novel and it will interest the large number who are still excited by the drama of hospitals and operations." M. S. U.

Sat R of Lit 22:20 Jl 20 '40 350w

FRANKFURTER, FELIX. Law and politics; occasional papers, 1913-1938; ed. by Archibald MacLeish and E. F. Prichard, jr; with a foreword by Mr MacLeish. 352p $3 Harcourt

340 Law—Addresses, essays, lectures

(W) 39-27861

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

Reviewed by A. T. Mason

Am Pol Sci R 34:351 Ap '40 1500w

FRANKFURTER, FELIX—Continued

"There is about great thought, beautifully and clearly expressed, an emotional thrill, just as definite as that which comes from listening to fine music or viewing a glorious sunset. I have felt that in reading this book and to such an extent that spontaneity prompts me to say that we owe gratitude to Messrs. MacLeish and Prichard for collecting and preserving these brilliant and helpful writings of one whose soul is peculiarly sensitive to human aspirations and social inadequacies, whose insight is deep and profound, whose mind is capable of correlating the common and essential factors in seemingly unrelated and intricate situations and whose imagination sends out its feelers in many directions to assist in the creative task of interpretation." J. H. Wolfe

+ Columbia Law R 40:755 Ap '40 2400w

Reviewed by M. R. Konvitz
Ethics 51:111 O '40 550w

Reviewed by M. D. Howe
Yale R n s 29:639 spring '40 600w

FRANKLIN, JAY, pseud. See Carter, J. F.

FRARY, IHNA THAYER. They built the Capitol. 324p il $4 Garrett

975.3 Washington, D.C. Capitol (W) 40-8437

History of the building of the national capitol at Washington, from the purchase of the site in 1791, to the present day, with reviews of the contributions of the different designers, architects, and sculptors who have taken part in the work. Chronology, bibliography, index.

"Notwithstanding [certain] criticisms, Mr. Frary's work as a whole is admirable and quite the most complete, scholarly, and satisfying among the many histories of the national capitol that have so far appeared." E. S. Kite

+ — Am Hist R 46:421 Ja '41 400w
Booklist 36:396 Je 15 '40

"Mr. Frary has covered his subject exhaustively, scarcely forgetting a piece of statuary, and certainly not the latest engineering contribution—air conditioning. He has unearthed many little-known facts about the building, including the circumstances surrounding its use as a bakery during the Civil War." M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 29 '40 240w

"In spite of a mass of detail and some tendency to grandiloquence in writing. 'They built the Capitol' is a surprisingly interesting book. Through its pages move in lively succession some exceedingly interesting individuals, quite worthy to be heroes of romance."

+ — N Y Times p10 Jl 28 '40 460w

"'They Built the Capitol' is an achievement of authentic antiquarianism and agreeable flavor."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '40 1200w

FRASURE, CARL MAYNARD. British policy on war debts and reparations. 188p $2 Dorrance

336.42 Debts, Public—Great Britain. European war, 1914-1918—Reparations 40-32700

"Relying upon diplomatic dispatches, official pronouncements, parliamentary debates, and representative newspapers and periodicals, Professor Frasure gives an excellent running account of the formation and the metamorphoses of the British policy, vis à vis both the United States and the Continent from 1917 to 1940. Interplay of policy and public opinion is given pari passu and impartially." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by Henry Reiff
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1245 D '40 300w
Social Studies 31:380 D '40 20w

FRAZIER, EDWARD FRANKLIN. Negro youth at the crossways; their personality development in the middle states; prepared for the Am. youth commission. 301p $2.25 Am. council on educ.

325.26 Negroes—Moral and social conditions. Youth 40-32764

"This volume describes the personal experiences of Negro boys and girls living in Washington, D.C., and Louisville, Kentucky; these communities were selected as examples of middle-area conditions. The author found many of these youth facing dilemmas that are a part of the transition from a southern rural to a middle states urban way of living, dilemmas that are related to the shift in family patterns from slavery to self-sufficiency, dilemmas that grow out of the area's culturally middle position between North and South, and dilemmas that are related to Negro youth's new economic freedom." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:132 D 1 '40
Social Studies 31:380 D '40 20w

"As all other publications by Frazier, the present one is characterized by its competence, readability and scholarship. . . [It] is worth its weight in gold." J. S. Roucek

+ Social Studies 39:91 F '41 490w

FREDERICK, JUSTUS GEORGE. Long Island seafood cook book; recipes edited by Jean Joyce. 324p $3 Business bourse

641.692 Cookery (fish) 39-22553

"Over 400 recipes, with a few pages about the use of sea food. By the president of the Gourmet Society of New York and his daughter, editorial assistant of the New York Herald-Tribune Home Institute." J Home Econ

"Excellent variety is included here, both of fish and sauces to be used with them. The summary of seafood cookery secrets will be a welcome guide to any one 'not in the know.' Of particular value are the tips on how to develop the best flavors with shellfish." Eloise Davison

+ Books p18 Ap 7 '40 430w
J Home Econ 31:645 N '39 30w

FREEDMAN, DAVID. The intellectual lover, and other stories [introd. by Konrad Bercovici]. 172p $2 Harper

40-35319

Contents: The intellectual lover; We are four; Elephantasm; Divina; I am he; Chiribo.

"As the author of radio skits, musical comedy blackouts and quips for comedians David Freedman became a veritable one-man factory, prolific and highly paid. By the time he reached his middle thirties, when death cut short his career, he had grown tired of producing ephemeral and topical material for Broadway and the networks and was experimenting in the short-story form. 'The Intellectual Lover' and five others collected here testify to a talent which—as Konrad Bercovici says in his introduction—was genuine and potentially rich."

+ Books p12 D 8 '40 240w

"It is the unexpected that happens in these stories—which is another way of saying they are original. Their telling is good, too. Such technique shows an admirable economy of word and effort. We wish that some of our other fiction writers might have David Freedman's arduous discipline of screen and radio writing." H. Mc.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 N 30 '40 330w

FREEMAN, ELLIS. Conquering the man in the street; a psychological analysis of propaganda in war, fascism, and politics. 356p $3.50; text ed $2.60 Vanguard

301.15 Propaganda. Propaganda, German. Fascism. Social psychology 40-6118

A professional psychologist studies the politician's use of propaganda. Most of the emphasis is on the European scene and the devices used by the dictators to convert the man in the street to Fascism, but Fascism, American style, is also discussed, in passing, and the concluding chapter sums up the forces in the United States pulling for democracy on the one hand and for Fascism on the other. Index.

Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 9 '40 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

New Yorker 16:91 Mr 9 '40 30w

"Mr. Freeman is decidedly less incoherent than most of those who dislike fascism, but nevertheless he is indignant, and his indignation mars an otherwise excellent book, one which contributes much to our understanding of fascism." Harold Lavine

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:30 Ap 6 '40 500w

Reviewed by H. D. Lasswell

Survey G 29:521 O '40 170w

FREEMAN, ELLIS. Principles of general psychology. 530p il $2.75 Holt

150 Psychology 39-5107

"A textbook on psychology in which the eclectically chosen subject matter offers the student an opportunity to recognize the wide variety of doctrines which constitutes the current theory. . . The book offers a broad interpretation of the principles of behavior, with ample relation to the sciences, arts and activities that enter into daily living." (Survey) Index.

Reviewed by P. R. Farnsworth

Am J Psychol 53:171 Ja '40 180w

Reviewed by I. S. Wile, M.D.

Survey 75:356 N '39 100w

FREEMAN, IRA MAXIMILIAN. Invitation to experiment; with phot. and drawings by Mae and Ira Freeman. 239p $2.50 Dutton

530.72 Physics—Experiments (W) 40-31357

"A guide for the layman who has long forgotten or neglected his formal physics text, enabling him to check knowledge or extend it by experimenting with no more complicated apparatus than rulers, tumblers, rubber bands, mirrors and dry cell batteries." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

Booklist 37:85 N 1 '40

"The experiments are easy, but the writing of such a book was not. Years of experience in research were needed, and much ingenuity in revising standard laboratory experiments to a kitchen basis. Dr. Freeman is himself a master of photography and his wife a skillful technical artist. The unique photographs and drawings are half the value of the book." Gerald Wendt

+ Books p21 O 20 '40 350w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:53 O '40

"Anyone reading 'Invitation to Experiment,' whether he chooses to perform the elementary but classic exercises or not, is sure to find stimulating knowledge which should send him on further excursions into this fascinating field."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 23 '40 290w

FREEMAN, RICHARD AUSTIN. Mr Polton explains. 290p $2 Dodd [8s 3d Hodder]

40-6201

Detective story.

Booklist 36:384 Je 1 '40

"Mr Freeman has, in our opinion, successfully pulled off a dangerous stunt in 'Mr. Polton Explains.' " Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 Mr 24 '40 170w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '40 80w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 29 '40 260w

"In the first part of this book Nat Polton tells the story of how he developed his extraordinary skill in inventing and making mechanical contrivances and how he came to be associated with Dr. Thorndyke. Not only is this a fascinating story in itself, but it forms a prologue to what follows in the second part. . . Hats off to Mr. Polton as well as to Dr. Thorndyke." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 31 '40 260w

"Autobiographical beginning slightly tedious but mystery that follows is capital and up to highest Freeman standards. Excellent."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Mr 30 '40 40w

"The puzzle is a straightforward one if one skips the technical jargon, but Polton's autobiography is so interestingly written that one wonders whether Mr. Austin Freeman has not in him to write a piece of 'straight' narrative fiction comparable with that of his best contemporaries."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p173 Ap 6 '40 220w

FREEMAN, MRS RUTH (ST JOHN), and FREEMAN, HARROP ARTHUR. Sparks and Little Sparks; pictures by Robert N. Blair. 32p 75c Whitman, A.

40-13972

Story for boys and girls interested in electricity. Sparks is the nickname of the electrician who is wiring a new house, and Little Sparks is the small boy who watches the electrician at work, and then proceeds to wire his playhouse. Pictures accompany the text, so that the work in progress may be followed by other boys and girls.

"Whether the style and the story material are in harmony is to be questioned. But whether or no, it is full of interesting facts which many adults as well as the children from five to seven will find most 'enlightening.' "

+ — Boston Transcript p2 S 14 '40 100w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '40 80w

FREMANTLE, MRS ELIZABETH (WYNNE). Wynne diaries; ed. by Anne Fremantle; v 3, 1798-1820. 428p il maps $6 (21s) Oxford

B or 92 (36-3966)

The first two volumes of the Wynne diaries, covering together the years from 1789-1798, appeared several years ago (Book Review Digest, 1936, 1937). This third and final volume, which contains not only Elizabeth Wynne's diary but also excerpts from her sisters' diaries and many letters from her sailor-husband, covers the years from 1798 to 1820.

Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 12 '40 350w

"In one sense this collection of letters and diaries is more interesting than either of its interesting predecessors; for its longer range includes some very important events. . . In another, and itself significant, sense, however, this volume is less entertaining reading than the earlier diaries. For while Captain Fremantle is off on his naval duties his wife is chiefly occupied with the bearing and rearing of her children and the unexciting details of country domesticity. The picture of the times is thus the better rounded out."

+ N Y Times p12 D 15 '40 500w

"Editorial insight and dexterity have created out of this mélange of documents an interesting cross-section of Georgian life which the specialist will find valuable, but the lay reader will regret the disappearance of Elizabeth's innocent charm." C. D. Abbott

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:13 Ja 4 '41 360w

FREMANTLE, ELIZABETH—Continued
"As Fremantle rose in the world, Betsey became more of a personage, and her social connections more august. But the quality of her diary is quite unchanged: it is as calm, as unpretentious, as the diary of the little girl in Germany twenty years earlier. Hers was no outstanding personality, her life was in no way exceptional: but she has bequeathed a very real and convincing picture of the times she lived in." Christopher Hobhouse
+ Spec 165:148 Ag 9 '40 650w

"Mrs. Fremantle and her publishers are to be thanked for bringing the book out at this moment, when much in it is of intense present interest. Over and over again the reader will find, in rumours, in sorrows, in fears, in rejoicing, in triumph, words that might have been written this year. In the circumstances, it would be ungrateful to dwell on the many passages where he is forced to feel that he would like either a note or a glimpse at the manuscript. Mrs. Fremantle has obviously taken trouble and exercised discernment in choosing and annotating the extracts; and these Wynnes of hers, with Thomas Fremantle sturdy in the centre, are our friends for ever."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p318 Je 29 '40 1250w

FRENCH, ALLEN. The lost baron; a story of England in the year 1200; with il. by Andrew Wyeth. 252p $2.25 Houghton

(W) 40-7289

A castle in medieval Cornwall is the scene of this story of the page, Martin, who solved the mystery of the disappearance of the lord of the castle, and was instrumental in bringing back that same lord to his inheritance.

Booklist 36:385 Je 1 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 My 5 '40 350w

"The importance attached to good luck charms and the influence of superstition on men's lives in the year 1200 are impressed upon the reader. But what makes the book a wise choice for 'teen age boys is that history is absorbed entertainingly and unconsciously." E. M. Wedrow (aged 16)
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 4 '40 240w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 29 '40 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '40

"Mr. French successfully conveys a sense of life under the feudal system, the position of the common people, the archers, the fishermen, dependent upon the good will of the lord of the castle. He draws a convincing picture of the crude manners of even the well-born within the castle walls, he indicates the prevailing superstitions of the time. Reading about young Martin's career as page and squire to the grim usurper, boys will meet sound history behind his compelling story." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:270 Jl '40 130w

"It is a good picture of medieval life in castle and cottage, free of glamor. The hard lot of the peasant in the hands of a cruel or careless master is well shown, and history book facts about baronial economics become vivid reality. Boys and girls of twelve to fifteen should enjoy the cliff climbing exploits, the secret passages, and the swift climax of the end." Eleanor Kidder
+ Library J 65:502 Je 1 '40 140w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:851 O 15 '40 20w

"The mystery is a fairly obvious one, but boys of 12 to 15 will find stirring adventure and suspense in this tale, and they are not likely to forget the vivid picture, an especially broad one, of medieval life as it was lived in cottage as well as castle." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 My 12 '40 300w

Wis Lib Bul 36:140 O '40

FRENCH, JOSEPH MILTON. Milton in chancery; new chapters in the lives of the poet and his father. (Modern lang. assn. of Am. Monograph ser) 428p map $4 Modern lang. assn. [18s Oxford]

B or 92 Milton, John, 1608-1674. Milton, John, 1563?-1637 40-2414

"Professor French's book deals solely with the legal battles with which Milton and his father were concerned. The book comprises details of the lives of the two men which have for the most part not hitherto been available to readers interested in Milton. The substance of all the suits dealt with is financial and purely civil in nature." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Reviewed by D. N. Raymond
Am Hist R 46:203 O '40 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Witherspoon
Sat R of Lit 21:7 Ja 20 '40 300w

"It cannot be said that these documents add much of significance to our knowledge of the poet's life; on the other hand Mr. French's annotation is painstaking and thorough. He follows his clues, historical and genealogical, with pertinacity, and anyone who is interested in the family history of seventeenth-century Oxfordshire will be well repaid by a perusal of his notes on the Cope lawsuit."
Times [London] Lit Sup p475 S 14 '40 180w

FRENCH, PAUL COMLY, ed. Common sense neutrality; mobilizing for peace [symposium]. 255p $2 Hastings house

327.73 U.S.—Neutrality. U.S.—Foreign relations 40-27075

A symposium of the views of twenty-five Americans in various fields. Among the contributors are: Harry Elmer Barnes, Charles A. Beard, Rabbi Bookstaber, William E. Borah, Boake Carter, Herbert Hoover, Rufus M. Jones, Robert M. LaFollette, John L. Lewis, Ernest T. Weir, and Sumner Welles.

Booklist 36:230 F 15 '40

Reviewed by P. J. Searles
Boston Transcript p2 F 3 '40 60w

Cath World 151:508 Jl '40 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p1 Ja '40

Reviewed by I. F. Stone
Nation 150:341 Mr 9 '40 70w

New Repub 102:254 F 19 '40 40w

New Yorker 15:72 Ja 20 '40 30w

FRENCH, PAUL COMLY. We won't murder. 189p $1.50 Hastings house

355.22 Military service, Compulsory. Conscientious objectors, War and religion

40-13506

"This book states the case of the wartime 'conscientious objector,' outlines the history of religious scruple against war, and expresses the personal pacifist's hope for the immediate future. The author is a member of the Society of Friends." (N Y Times) Bibliography.

"On the historical side rather superficial, this book makes its principal appeal by raising a profoundly suggestive question and proposing a sincere answer."
+ — Cath World 152:125 O '40 210w

"For all the author's earnestness of personal conviction he has been able to present his subject, for the most part, as exposition rather than argument; and that this is a marked advantage need scarcely be said. He does not try to convert his readers to the conscientious objector's point of view, but merely to convince them that the sincere conscientious objector is motivated by zeal and courage rather than by cowardice, and deserves fair treatment in any democracy."
+ N Y Times p12 Ag 4 '40 300w

FREUDENTHAL, ELSBETH ESTELLE. The aviation business; from Kitty Hawk to Wall Street. 342p $3 Vanguard

629.13 Aeronautics, Commercial. Airplane industry and trade (W) 40-8261

Review of the economic and financial development of aviation as a business, concluding with arguments for nationalization, particularly in time of war. Index.

Booklist 36:395 Je 15 '40

"This is a story told in terms as cold as cash. The facts are made to speak for themselves. But facts need qualification. . . It is good to point out the errors of the past, but when one goes beyond the statistics, he may find the charges are not as incriminating as they appear at first." H. L. Smith

Books p9 Je 2 '40 600w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 My 31 '40 40w

"Altogether this book is a storehouse of absolutely necessary accurate information. I have but two criticisms to offer. The book could stand stylistic revision, and Miss Freudenthal would have strengthened her case against the business by recording more fully the extraordinary record of efficiency and technical progress of the present operating companies." O. G. Villard

+ — Nation 150:629 My 18 '40 1000w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:31 Jl '40

"Clear, ably documented financial history of American aviation."

+ New Yorker 16:91 Ap 27 '40 30w

"This is a pioneer volume and it is admirable pioneering, contriving through lucid literary craftsmanship to make what is necessarily an involved and statistically inclined story into a coherent and often entertaining narrative. While its canvas is far more restricted, in some respects Miss Freudenthal's book can be compared with Ida Tarbell's masterful 'History of the Standard Oil Company.'" G. P. Putnam

+ Sat R of Lit 22:24 My 25 '40 650w

FREY, ALBERT WESLEY. Manufacturers' product, package and price policies; modern merchandise management. 429p $4.50 Ronald

658.7 Retail trade. Marketing 40-4846

"Merchandising policies and practices are evolved for the solution of vital product, price and package problems. Mr. Frey discusses design (style, fashion, piracy, simplification); product development (new uses, quality, improvement, expansion of line, packaging, identifying); forecasting quantity to be manufactured; and merchandising research in both the laboratory and the market." Management R

"Professor Frey's timely book is a welcome addition to the literature on manufacturers' marketing policies. Preface remarks indicate that the book is directed toward business executives, but it is written in such a careful well-organized style as to make it suitable for classroom use." G. B. Tallman

+ Am Econ R 30:400 Je '40 120w

Management R 29:159 Ap '40 50w

FRIEDLAENDER, ROBERT (ROBERT PRECHTL, pseud). Titanic; tr. by Erna McArthur. 368p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Secker, Martin]

40-7415

Novel based upon the Titanic disaster of April 14, 1912. It is a dramatic rendering of the story of that disastrous maiden voyage, and of the parts played by passengers on the ship, with an allegorical slant included.

"It is a complex business, and drags now and then in the telling, but there is compensation in the vivid narration of the closing scenes. The narrative has a cumulative strength. The curious and incredible calm of the first minutes after the liner ripped its length over the hidden ice is most effectively conveyed. So also is the sense of unreality that held panic at bay." George Conrad

+ — Books p10 Ap 14 '40 340w

"The author labors his symbolism to the point of utter incredulity. His book should be read not for its shrill allegory of the fall of the Titans, but for its well-told, detailed and profoundly moving record of the sinking of the Titanic." E. S. Fainsod

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ap 20 '40 750w

"In the 369 pages there are, here and there, passages and episodes of considerable interest and value, but because of the fog of monotonous side-issues besetting the true story it is not possible to recommend the book as a whole." Philip Williams

— + Commonweal 32:172 Je 14 '40 300w

"Herr Prechtl's story of the two days aboard the Titanic immediately preceding the great disaster of April, 1912, is a queer mixture of fact and fiction, and in my opinion it would have been a better book if the 'film stuff' had been omitted. . . But having entered this criticism, I can find much to praise in a book that differs so remarkably from the average novel." J. D. Beresford

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 22 '38 460w

New Repub 102:554 Ap 22 '40 50w

"An interesting, powerful and disturbing novel about one of the best known tragedies of the sea." Lloyd Eshleman

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 14 '40 950w

"The mere facts about the Titanic and their testimonial to human dignity and courage in the face of death still produce shudders. The same cannot be said for Mr. Prechtl's novelistic orchestration on a plan that suggests the author's admiration for Thomas Mann's 'Zauberberg.' . . The intention is praiseworthy, the method almost as old-fashioned as the jacket illustration." G. C.

— Sat R of Lit 21:19 Ap 13 '40 340w

Time 35:100 Ap 22 '40 60w

"The book is enthralling enough to demand to be finished in one gulp, but there is enough thought in it to justify a second reading."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p517 Ag 6 '38 430w

FRIEDLANDER, WALTER, and MYERS, EARL DEWEY. Child welfare in Germany before and after Naziism. 273p pa $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press [pa 9s Cambridge]

362.7 Children—Charities, protection, etc. Children—Law—Germany 40-10827

"One of the leaders in welfare work in Germany, former head of a public child welfare agency in Berlin, presents an elaborate description of the welfare system as it developed during the years of the democratic republic and of its decay under National Socialism. He has made use of material collected by Earl Dewey Myers, who studied welfare work in Germany before his untimely death." Survey

"A lucid, readable and convincing account—of the effects of the national-socialist doctrines on child welfare and education is made available in this timely volume." Elizabeth Redden

+ Am Econ R 30:651 S '40 220w

Reviewed by Frieda Wunderlich

Survey 76:310 O '40 310w

FRIEDMAN, IRVING S. British relations with China: 1931-1939. 255p $2 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council [10s Allen, G]

327.42 Great Britain—Foreign relations—China. China—Foreign relations—Great Britain 40-11697

"A serious, factual account, stressing economic and political conditions prior to July 1937 and during the war in China. Important developments in the policies and programs of all powers in relation to the Far Eastern situation are evaluated, with an estimate of possible future conditions and adjustments in a post-war period. Selected bibliography." (Booklist) Index.

FRIEDMAN, I. S.—Continued

"For the serious student of present-day developments in the Far East, no more thought-provoking work has appeared than Dr. Friedman's." H. F. MacNair
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1219 D '40 850w

Reviewed by Boyd Carpenter
Ann Am Acad 213:192 Ja '41 300w

Booklist 37:111 N 15 '40

"Dr. Friedman's accurate, well documented case history suggests the utter futility of treaties, agreements and the rest of diplomacy's outworn paraphernalia in dealing with the new international immorality of 'dynamism.' Even Hitler may have learned from the Japanese in this dubious field. Officially supported smuggling as a fiscal weapon against both China and the western powers was ingenious and effective, and its story gives a dash of piratical romance not often found in an historical study. The index and the comprehensive bibliography add to the value of this work to serious students." B. C. Walker
+ Current Hist & Forum 52:58 S '40 210w

FRIEDRICH, IRMA. The separated island; one summer at Martha's Vineyard [il. by Rose Chavanne]. 234p map $2 Messner
40-7020

The separated island was Martha's Vineyard, where Parnel and her brother Thomas spent a summer visiting their grandparents. The excitement began when grandma had to be rushed to the hospital for an operation, and the children took a hand in helping grandfather pay the bills.

Booklist 36:369 My 15 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Mr 31 '40 350w

"Adults might question the children's ability to cope so easily and successfully with financial problems in connection with the farm, but they will heartily approve the descriptions of everyday life and the splendid relationships between a younger and older generation. Fifth and sixth graders will enjoy it." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 65:354 Ap 15 '40 120w

"One feels the salt air blowing through this story and the characters are so real it seems that next summer we shall surely all meet again." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 65:852 O 15 '40 50w

"This is not so much a success story as it is of youth, growing, expanding and responding to the needs and joys of a beloved place. . . There are an exuberant gayety and humor in the quick, vivid writing, writing which makes the first green peas as exciting as a new dress. Sometimes the author strays into adult impression and allusion, but she writes always with a delicious sense of people and place, and with overtones of beauty and harmony." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 My 26 '40 400w

Wis Lib Bul 36:101 My '40

FRIEND, ALONA. Mixed doubles. 313p $2.50 Greystone
40-33215

Story of a woman tennis star, her successes in a tournament on a West Indies island and her failures as a woman and a friend.

"'Mixed Doubles' is amusingly written, though at times too transparently smart." Lisle Bell
Books p14 O 6 '40 300w

Reviewed by Margaret Clark
Boston Transcript p2 S 28 '40 180w

"The novel is a gay, frothy and readable version of happenings aboard ship and the petty squabbling and abundant cocktailing of the tennis enthusiasts in Sumra. . . It doesn't really seem to matter a lot, but meanwhile the story is lively, luxurious, sub-tropical and amusing, written in a pleasingly smooth style with an abundance of neat conversation." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p23 S 29 '40 280w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '41 300w

FRINGS, KETTI. Hold back the dawn. 338p $2.50 Duell
40-27692

South of the California border, in Tijuana, Mexico, a group of white collar immigrants are waiting for their quota numbers, so they can enter the United States. The story is about the tragedies and comedies in the lives of these people.

Booklist 37:68 O 15 '40

"If Ernest Hemingway were a young woman named Ketti Frings and bringing out a first novel today, he might begin his story the way 'Hold Back the Dawn' begins. For Ketti Frings writes a muscular and vigorous prose; in her descriptions particularly she is a little toughie. When her character drawing grows up to her descriptions, she will have something; in fact, she has something now." Lorine Pruette
+ Books p12 O 13 '40 650w

"A tale of hope deferred, it has a particularly warm-hearted love story for its central plot. The author writes with simplicity and directness, and only an occasional wisecrack betrays immaturity."
Nation 151:373 O 19 '40 70w

"A moving and disturbing book, written in clipped, vivid sentences."
+ New Repub 103:394 S 16 '40 50w

"Miss Frings's novel is free of pretensions, and free of forced action. Out of its theme the tale develops naturally, gaining color and suspense through clever dialogue, shrewd observation and utter sincerity of feeling. To write a novel about disillusioned people, condemned to passivity, is a hard enough task in itself. But to write such a book thrillingly, give it suspense, life, and even a note of happiness, is a remarkable achievement." Marianne Hauser
+ N Y Times p7 O 6 '40 650w

New Yorker 16:77 S 28 '40 40w

FRISKEY, MARGARET. Seven diving ducks; pictures by Lucia Patton. [32p] $1 McKay 40-7602

Picture-story book for the very young. It is the story of a family of seven small ducks, all but one of them perfect divers. Circumstances combined to change the timid one into an accepted member of the family, and then there were "seven diving ducks."

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p14 My 5 '40 130w

"It is all very nonsensical, with excellent full-page drawings in orange and black full of comic details sure to delight young eyes."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 120w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 26 '40 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:270 Jl '40 30w

"The timid child can gain courage and comfort from the seventh duck's trials and the brave ones will laugh at Lucia Patton's merry pictures." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p26 Ap 28 '40 220w

FRISKEY, MARGARET. Surprise on wheels; a read-it-yourself story; pictured by Lucia Patton. 32p $1 Whitman, A.

40-32142

Simple story of three small children with an urge to build something big, something which would go, and what came of it. Written in the vocabulary of a pre-school child. For five-year-olds.

"It is a repetitive text for the child just learning to read or it may be used in reading to children from two to five. . . Gaily colored pictures alternate with black and whites, and these, combined with the large clear type make it an attractive book." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 65:926 N 1 '40 100w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '40 50w

FROME, DAVID, pseud. See Brown, Z.

FROST, FRANCES M. Kate Trimingham. 240p $2.50 Farrar

40-33216

Character sketches of several members of a New England community, particularly Miss Trimingham who taught music, and Sara Drew, her best friend, who refused to sit idle just because she was seventy-two and a great-grandmother. When tragedy overtakes Miss Kate, Sara Drew stands by her in the face of the disapproval of the whole village.

"Ably Miss Frost develops the various characters in the book and shows where and how their lives touch. But the pace of the book and its drama are too highly accelerated in the unexpected act of Gaddy when she finds the constant quarreling of her parents more than she can bear. . . Even a small town cannot go as completely haywire in slinging defilement on a lovable woman as Miss Frost would have us believe this one did. And Sarah Drew's whimsicality in the face of tragedy seems a little out of key." Rose Feld

+ — Books p10 D 8 '40 600w

"Cleverly done and held together by a slender plot involving a double tragedy. Has real humor and pathos. For adults. Will appeal to the discriminating rather than to the general reader." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 65:874 O 15 '40 70w

"A Barrie-like whimsical touch prevents it from becoming either too sentimental or too morbid."

Nation 151:540 N 30 '40 30w

" 'Kate Trimingham' is cut from the same piece as Frances Frost's other novels. It is written, that is, with delicacy and humor and with a fine sensuous feeling for New England landscape. Unfortunately, it is also sentimental—a weakness which characterizes Miss Frost and which appears, alas! to be growing on her. There is something too quaint and pretty-pretty about this artless village tale." She has neither whitewashed nor satirized." F. S.

+ — N Y Times p24 N 17 '40 650w

"Because Frances Frost is a poet and not merely 'poetic' she has mastered a diction as serviceable in prose as in verse, precise, subtle, and plain, reflecting as it should the self same qualities of mind. . . Miss Frost has told her story so quietly, with such economy of statement, that the reader might almost fail to recognize what he is reading about. Actually, he is reading about the same things that have prompted many writers to violent and bitter diatribes against New England life. . . Miss Frost has dimmed none of the horror of these things, but she has treated her entire scene as an adult and not as a hysterical adolescent first confronted by human ugliness." E. H. Walton

+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 D 14 '40 330w

FROST, FRANCES M. Uncle Snowball. 299p $2.50 Farrar

40-27127

Uncle Snowball, the Haywards' hired man, had arrived unexpectedly on their New England farm in the midst of a snowstorm and had stayed seventeen years. He had periodic drinking bouts and fits of wanderlust, but he always returned to the family he loved. The book describes one year in the lives of Will and Nancy Hayward, with their eight children to add fun to almost any situation, Grandma to exercise her straight-laced disapproval of Snowball, and Uncle Snowball, father confessor and friend to all the family—except Grandma.

Booklist 36:238 F 15 '40

"Uncle Snowball's repertory gives Miss Frost a chance to develop what is by all odds the happiest feature of her book: the interpolated ballads. Some are familiar, others strange but obviously of the folksong genre, and some of the most delightful ones I suspect Miss Frost of having improvised to suit her purposes. Whether Uncle Snowball is riding home drunk or sober under the stars singing to amuse the children or shouting out for sheer joy of living because he has discovered that Miss Mary Manoonigan loves him a bit, it's all one to me: the man is good!" F. H. Bullock

+ Books p10 F 11 '40 450w

"This is a cheerful book which manages to bring at least the greatest of the cheerless facts of life into its frame of general warmth and good humor. A more careful stylist might almost have made of this that long awaited work, a good novel with a happy content, which everyone is still waiting for. A more careful stylist and six other people." Ruth Page

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 2 '40 180w

"A New England interlude all very static and gentle, but handled with considerable charm."

+ New Repub 102:254 F 19 '40 40w

"Uncle Snowball with his songs, his laughter, his tenderness and his solid sense will take root in the hearts of readers as he did in the Hayward household. So well has Miss Frost painted the portrait of a unique character that one almost forgets that his humor, his wisdom, his philosophy and his poetry are those of his creator." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p7 F 11 '40 350w

"The prettier side of farm life. . . It is a tribute to Miss Frost's skill as a novelist that she can make this seem not syrupy but friendly and credible."

+ New Yorker 16:85 Mr 23 '40 70w

"A bubbling, homespun sketch of a New England farm family and their eccentric but lovable hired man. . . The constant raillery and banter among the children may be precocious enough to delight the parents, but much of it is tiresome for the reader, giving to the whole book an impression of triviality which is undeserved. The characterizations and backgrounds are sharp and distinct, and many readers will relish the warm humanity of the novel, and acquaintance with a group of characters who live their days with courage and laughter." R. A. C.

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:20 Mr 2 '40 250w

Wis Lib Bul 36:99 My '40

FROST, HARRIET. Nursing in sickness and in health; the social aspects of nursing. 217p il $2 (10s) Macmillan

610.73 Nurses and nursing 39-15809

"This book describes the way in which the health and social aspects of nursing are incorporated into the curriculum at the New York Hospital School of Nursing. 'The first part deals with the general philosophy which should permeate every course of study and find application in every service of the hospital; it also describes certain courses used in building it up. The second part attempts to show the placement of the social elements as they appear and reappear throughout the curriculum in the above mentioned school. . . This plan

FROST, HARRIET—Continued
is presented, not as a model in any sense,' but merely as a way one school has fused these elements in the curriculum." Am J Pub Health

"Miss Frost has written an exceptionally helpful and timely book and all those who are interested in nursing education are her debtors." E. G. Fox
+ Am J Pub Health 30:437 Ap '40 500w

Reviewed by Dorothy Deming
Survey 75:357 N '39 250w

FROST, JACK (JOHN EDWARD FROST). Harvard and Cambridge; a sketch book. 90p $1.50 Coward-McCann

378 Harvard university. Cambridge, Massachusetts 40-34144

Sketches of buildings and architectural details of buildings on the Harvard college campus and in nearby Cambridge. Each sketch has a short identifying paragraph.

"For all Harvard students and others whose memories are stored with personal impressions of the buildings and bridges and vistas that Jack Frost has sketched this should be a happy solution of the Christmas gift problem. And for those who know the university and the town only as their imaginations have depicted them, it will be of even greater value and certainly of equal interest."
+ Books p36 D 1 '40 160w

"Mr Frost is not equally successful in these drawings; a few, chiefly those of the Harvard chapel and Baker library, are hardly satisfactory considered as architectural renderings. Yet the book shows progress in observation and draftsmanship. Most of the views are reproduced with delicacy and true comprehension of the craftsman's, or etcher's art, and not a few have force and feeling. The person who knows Cambridge will enjoy retracing its scenes with Mr Frost as companion."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '40 280w

FRY, ROSALIE K. Ladybug! ladybug! [35p] il $1 Dutton

40-11707

"Picture book of two ladybugs (the only popular bug) who stayed awake all winter. Their good friend the black beetle found them a neat little house, in return for which kindness they made him a blanket which completely cured his lumbago." Library J

"This is not imitation natural history; it is a little child's ladybug-world come to pass in neat, bright, gay little pictures as humorous as those on the screen but of a quieter humor." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 Jl 7 '40 290w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 S 30 '40 120w

"A delicately amusing picture book. . . The exquisite pastel illustrations are carefully suited to the text and both will please children from four to six years of age." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 65:596 Jl '40 70w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 130w
Wis Lib Bul 36:170 D '40

FUESS, CLAUDE MOORE. Calvin Coolidge, the man from Vermont. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 522p il $4.75 Little

B or 92 Coolidge, Calvin (W) 40-27145

"Full-length biography of the Vermont President, derived in part from new material supplied by Mrs. Coolidge and the late Frank W. Stearns. The author is critical only in detail. He defends Coolidge's record in the Boston police strike and makes almost no mention of his inactivity in the face of Harding's legacy." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. G. Kerwin
Am Pol Sci R 34:785 Ag '40 230w
Booklist 36:263 Mr 1 '40

"Although it will be listed, and properly enough, among the non-fiction volumes of 1940, the latest life of Calvin Coolidge is really one of the mystery stories of the year. For the rise of this Vermont Yankee to the highest office in the land remains almost as baffling, despite the labors and researches of Dr. Fuess, as it was when Coolidge occupied the White House and as it has remained in the decade which has passed. This is not to say that Coolidge's biographer does not throw additional light on his shadowy subject. But it is not enough light. The book, all in all, is an apology for the strange little figure rather than an explanation of the man." H. L. Pringle
Books p5 Mr 10 '40 1000w

"The author has given us more than a picture of an interesting man; he has enriched our literature with a notable biography that will stand for all time. . . This is the Calvin Coolidge that many of us discerned, but only a privileged few could really know." L. S. Mayo
+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 9 '40 1350w

"This is the best biography of Coolidge that has been written." Francis Downing
+ Commonweal 31:555 Ap 19 '40 650w
Foreign Affairs 18:754 Jl '40 60w

" 'Calvin Coolidge' is an 'in-no-sense official' biography. Writing in the easy, assured style of the after-dinner biographer Mr. Fuess paints a picture of a pocket Lincoln. It's a portrait for the White House library, but the interesting thing about it is that the painter let something slip in. Unseen by the artist the unhappy shadow of the true Cal rises from the canvas like a mist." Lovell Thompson
Nation 150:342 Mr 9 '40 1000w

"One of the characteristics of the biography is its evidence of good taste. Because Mrs. Coolidge still lives and probably because she would have it so, the figure of the wife of Calvin Coolidge is kept in the background. Although the book emphasizes details of the personal life of the man, it gives only occasional suggestions of his home. . . In contrast with this reticence is one of the outstanding contributions of the book. This is the detailed story of one of the most amazing friendships in American history, that between Frank W. Stearns and Calvin Coolidge. It is a central theme of the biography and is magnificently done." R. H. Gabriel
+ New Eng Q 13:538 S '40 650w

Reviewed by Max Gissen
New Repub 103:594 O 28 '40 1100w

"Mr. Fuess is the admiring friend. He is not, however, a friend who glosses over his hero's shortcomings, once they are plain to him. It is just that he has so completely identified himself with his subject that the more serious faults have become invisible. . . Mr. Fuess is as honest as Mr. Coolidge. His details add up to something different from greatness, but he does not cheat in presenting them. He cannot accept the theory that Coolidge was a mediocre man, but he does not disguise the evidence which caused many persons to believe him mediocre." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 10 '40 1650w

"Slow going, but Dr. Fuess performs the first service of a biographer: he gives us a believable human being in whom, oddly enough, there burned a faint flame of genuine sensibility."
+ New Yorker 16:90 Mr 9 '40 90w

"This is the last word on Calvin Coolidge, an honest, fair estimate of him, dramatic, entertaining, informative, above all authentic, and never dull. Fuess presents the real Coolidge as his personal letters to his father, his wife, and his friends reveal him (much of this material made public for the first time), and as his intimates knew him and saw him. . . I do not hesitate to recommend this biography." J. F. Dinneen
+ Sat R of Lit 21:7 Mr 9 '40 550w
Time 35:84 Mr 11 '40 350w

FULLER, IOLA. The loon feather. 419p map $2.50 Harcourt
(W) 40-27210

Historical novel of Indian life on the island of Mackinac in Lake Huron in the early 1800s. The story is told ostensibly in the first person by Oneta, daughter of Tecumseh, who passes her girlhood in the family of her mother's second husband, a French trader, but eventually goes back to her own people.

Atlantic My '40 80w
Booklist 36:283 Mr 15 '40
Bookmark p11 Mr '40

"The concessions to conventional fiction in Miss Fuller's story are apparent enough. The things which save the book and keep it from being just another run-of-the-mill historical novel are the genuine richness of the background, the freshness of narration and the fairness with which Miss Fuller presents her central problem—that of red world matched against white." S. V. Benét
+ — Books p7 F 25 '40 700w

"Not an exciting story. 'The Loon Feather' has beauty and depth, and contributes to an appreciation of an historical period." S. H.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 2 '40 230w

"Miss Fuller shows none of the Indian's harsher side—her picture is a bit idealistic as her story is a bit long drawn out. She has however undoubted gifts and the serene loveliness that emanates from her pages comes as balm to spirits surfeited by cruelty and horror on the printed page as well as in a war-torn world."
+ Cath World 151:382 Je '40 250w

"An altogether admirable and unusual novel."
+ Christian Century 57:705 My 29 '40 150w

Reviewed by D. S. Rankin
Commonweal 31:438 Mr 8 '40 550w

"An impressively good first novel."
+ New Repub 102:321 Mr 4 '40 70w

"A whole lost way of life is recreated in these pages. Mackinac is portrayed as a kind of glamorous melting pot where half-breeds and Indians, Americans and French moil about in vivid disorder. An era was passing, a new one scarce begun, and the resultant atmosphere is infinitely picturesque. 'The Loon Feather,' however, does not depend wholly on quite such an obvious appeal. Half its charm resides in the character of Oneta herself, as it unfolds quietly, delicately before one." E. H. Walton
+ N Y Times p2 F 25 '40 1100w

New Yorker 16:78 F 24 '40 60w

"'The Loon Feather' is a remarkable first novel, beautifully written, firm in outline, sure in direction." R. A. Cordell
+ Sat R of Lit 21:5 F 24 '40 400w

"It is very easy, as even veteran writers have found, to lean toward sentimentalism in writing of the red men, but Miss Fuller has avoided this pitfall entirely and presented a clear and honest picture of the slow retreat of an old civilization before the advance of a new one."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 25 '40 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p397 Ag 17 '40 420w

Wis Lib Bul 36:48 Mr '40

FULLER, JOHN FREDERICK CHARLES. Decisive battles: their influence upon history and civilisation. 1060p maps $4.50 Scribner [2v ea 16s Eyre]
904 Battles 40-9578

The author describes and places in history thirty-seven "decisive" battles and campaigns from the time of Alexander to the present. The twentieth century battles are The siege of Port Arthur, 1904-1905; The battles of the Marne and Tannenberg, 1914; The battles of Sari Bair and Suvla Bay, 1915; The battle of Vittorio Veneto, 1918; The battle of Warsaw, 1920; The battles of Mai Chio and Aragon, 1936 and 1938. Index.

"Fuller has brought new viewpoints to Creasy's standard work while extending the story of military history down to 1938. Not all will agree with his political deductions, but this does not detract from the value of his book. It is well indexed, the maps and diagrams are clear, and it is written in such non-technical language that it will be as readily understood by civilian as by military readers." G. L. McEntee
+ Am Hist R 46:450 Ja '41 250w

"Every man is entitled to his own views, but when they are expounded in so naive and uncritical a fashion as in this book, some objection and reservation is, I believe, in order. Fuller's account of military operations is usually clear and reliable, and for this reason his book has real value. Had he, like Creasy, confined himself to adding a few dates to carry on the story from one battle to another, there would be little to object to. Instead he has attempted to supply connecting narrative and to establish the historical meaning of the military conflicts of which he treats. These sections of the book are for the most part thin and inadequate and are all too likely to leave the reader with a pretty sorry impression." W. L. Langer
— + Books p9 Jl 14 '40 1150w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 My 23 '40 360w

"I don't think that all the battles discussed in this book were decisive, in the sense that out of them flowed new civilizations, but there can be little doubt that many of them were indeed 'continental divides' for new cultures and civilizations. . . In spite of the defects that mar the brilliance of the book, we do well to read it. Its journalistic style, its simple and robust prose and its diagrams of the battles recommend it to the general reader." Joseph Calderon
+ — Commonweal 32:273 Jl 19 '40 460w

"The reading of military literature must and will increase in this country as time goes on, but it will not be necessary for those in search of information to plow through the thousand pages of General Fuller. Although they are based, as is claimed, on a thousand books, they also contain a surprising amount of amateur and even erroneous history, told in a bombastic style. The world outlook they reveal is far more fascist than British. In short, the book makes one wonder what General Fuller is thinking and doing in the present war and what he might do after it is closed." Alfred Vagts
— New Repub 103:284 Ag 26 '40 600w

"General Fuller goes back to the original authorities, and the research involved in his work, as indicated by the hundreds of references, is immense. The slips are very few. . . Both to students and to the general reader the work can be confidently recommended, and we shall eagerly await the succeeding volume. But we hope the General will look to his grammar."
+ — New Statesman & Nation 19:188 F 10 '40 290w (Review of v 1)

"If the General had confined himself to his proper subject there would have been little but praise for him. . . The fault we have to find with him is different. He cannot keep his political prejudices from bursting all bounds. He hates democracy, and shows his hatred without remorse. . . We are thus prepared for a series of eulogies of General Franco, and for a number of very dubious statements about the Spanish parties. All this is utterly outside the range of military history."
— + New Statesman & Nation 19:474 Ap 6 '40 370w (Review of v 2)

Reviewed by H. W. Baldwin
N Y Times p9 Ag 18 '40 1300w

"General Fuller is not the world's best writer, and he is opinionated. And he is inclined, strangely enough, to skimp a little in matters of military organization and equipment. But his footnoting is extraordinary, and his indexing

FULLER, J. F. C.—Continued
is good. His book, evidently, is a supreme effort, and well worth serious attention. Personally, I am decidedly glad to possess a copy for study and reference. General Fuller, despite his testiness, deserves a place in every serious library." Roger Shaw

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:19 Je 29 '40 320w

Spec 164:634 My 3 '40 950w

"Possibly the general has been carried away by his combined fear of the bankers and the Communists, and ought not to be taken too seriously in his political comments. Otherwise, this is an informative volume." D. D.

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 My 30 '40 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p666 N 18 '39 700w (Review of v 1)

Times [London] Lit Sup p155 Mr 30 '40 650w (Review of v 2)

FUNK, WILFRED JOHN. If you drink. 171p il $2 Funk, W.

178.1 Alcoholism 40-34171

"Survey of the physiological and psychological effects of alcohol on the human body. It provides factual information about such intriguing aspects of imbibing as the rate of oxidization of two ounces of alcohol per hour in the system, how and why alcohol produces fat. . . It delves into the maze of psychological effects of drink, listing the alibis a drinker concocts to salve his conscience before taking a drink. . . The underlying plea is for moderation." Sat R of Lit

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 18 '41 180w

New Repub 103:458 S 30 '40 40w

" 'If You Drink' is an amusing, informative, and presumably well-authenticated survey." Oliver Durrell

Sat R of Lit 22:20 S 21 '40 320w

"Mr Funk does not preach at all and he does not condemn drinking but he does advocate moderation. The illustrations by Robert S. Robinson are extremely pat. If one never drank a drop he would still get a lot of enjoyment from reading this book."

+ Springf'd Republican p5 N 4 '40 140w

FUNK & Wagnalls Standard junior school dictionary of the English language, giving the spelling, division, pronunciation and meaning of more than 39,000 words and phrases, with illustrative examples of their correct use in English speech and literature, together with 4,000 synonyms and 1,500 pictorial illustrations in half-tone, line, and color, including full-page plates; ed. by Charles Earle Funk. 752p pyroxylin impregnated cloth $1.32 Row

423 English language—Dictionaries 40-4629

"In this clearly printed and well-illustrated dictionary, 39,000 terms are defined for the use of students in the four grades preceding high school. Selection of terms was based on their frequency in literature, science and the arts. Abbreviations, names of persons and places, common nouns, prefixes and suffixes are presented in one alphabet. . . This dictionary is planned for younger pupils than the same publishers' Standard High School Dictionary reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin for July 1939 [Book Review Digest, 1939]. It is briefer, containing about three quarters as many entries. It is simpler, omitting the derivations of words and the appendixes, as well as using a more elementary preface. It retains the same order, arrangement and illustrations of the volume for more mature readers." Subscription Bks Bul

"Because of its simplicity and its large type it should be useful also to adults with limited reading ability. The Standard Junior School Dictionary is recommended for use in the home and in the elementary school."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 11:19 Ap '40 650w

FURNIVALL, JOHN SYDENHAM. Netherlands India; a study of plural economy; introd. by A. C. D. de Graeff. 502p maps $8 Macmillan [25s Cambridge]

991 Netherlands Indies [39-20815]

"The sub-title of this important study is somewhat misleading. The work is not narrowly confined to a study of plural economy. . . It is indeed of very broad scope. It constitutes a history of Dutch East Indian policy and administration from the beginning to the present time. . . In the concluding chapter the character and problems of a plural economy such as found in Netherlands India are examined." Pacific Affairs

"The significance of this book is by no means confined to Mr. Furnivall's familiarity with the previous Dutch investigations. Focusing primarily on the economic aspects, the author has succeeded in combining a detailed examination of the history and present position of the Dutch in the Indies with a broad sweep of generalization and hypothesis, which is of value far beyond the particular colonial region with which he is dealing. In consequence the book is of the first importance both for those who are seeking a closer acquaintance with Netherlands India and for those who are concerned with the general question of colonial policy and problems." Rupert Emerson

+ Am Hist R 45:609 Ap '40 700w

" 'This book fully deserves to be called a remarkable book'; I agree cordially with this opinion in an introduction by Jonkheer de Graeff, governor-general of Netherlands India from 1926 to 1931. The author, late of the Indian civil service in Burma, had the experience of a colonial administrator to sharpen his attention and to inform his judgments. He has derived his facts from the only satisfactory source, the immense Dutch literature on the subject, and has checked facts and opinions by travel in Java." Clive Day

+ — Eng Hist R 55:139 Ja '40 1700w

"Some of the terminology is open to criticism. . . But a criticism of phraseology should not be overemphasised and the substance of the book calls for nothing but praise." R. V. V.

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 My 26 '39 260w

Reviewed by G. E. Harvey

New Statesman & Nation 18:21 Jl 1 '39 750w

"Mr. Furnivall has written an excellent study, one in which abstract theory and practical observations are happily balanced. All students of colonial policy will gladly welcome this new addition to the literature of the subject." A. Vandenbosch

+ Pacific Affairs 12:439 D '39 800w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p243 Ap 29 '39 750w

FYLEMAN, ROSE, ed. Bells ringing [with il. by Irene Mountfort]. 88p $1.25 Stokes [2s 6d Blackwell]

821.08 Children's poetry 40-336

Small anthology of verse for boys and girls. The poems are grouped under such headings as: Out and about; Something of cities; Birds and boats; Fun; Splendid folk; Tales; Strange things and lovely things.

"This small, though choice collection of poems for children made by one who writes poetry and stories for boys and girls and knows what they like, can well serve as an introduction to longer and more complete poetry anthologies, which all children should have to grow up on." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 25 '40 100w

" 'Bells Ringing' follows the plan of Rose Fyleman's other little anthologies, 'Here We Come A'Piping' and 'A'Piping Again,' with somewhat older children in mind. This third volume is characterized by the same high level of selection, the same success in finding fresh and unhackneyed poems with an appeal for children." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p38 N 12 '39 190w

FYLEMAN, ROSE, ed. Pipe and drum. 88p il $1.25 Stokes
821.08

Companion anthology to Here We Come A'Piping, and A'Piping Again (Book Review Digest, 1937, 1938). It contains forty-five poems and ballads of land and sea, romance, history, etc. Table of contents but no index. For ages eight to twelve.

Booklist 37:74 O 15 '40

"The book is printed in good type and numerous pen sketches give variety to the pages. While most of the poems will be found in other anthologies, the advantage of this particular collection is that it is small, attractive, and will appeal to children." E. G. Mullan
+ Library J 65:661 Ag '40 140w

G

GABA, LESTER. Soap carving, Cinderella of sculpture. new ed 78p il $1 Studio 731 Soap carving

Describes soap carving, showing correct use of the knife, blocking out the carving, soap painting, adding fabrics and other accessories, backgrounds, window displays, etc. Illustrated with photographs.

Boston Transcript p1 S 21 '40 70w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 20 '40 270w

GABRIEL, RALPH HENRY. The course of American democratic thought; an intellectual history since 1815. 452p $4 Ronald 917.3 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Intellectual life. Philosophy, American. Democracy 40-5064

"When the idea of democracy itself is attacked, it requires ideational defence. What have Americans hitherto meant by democracy? Professor Gabriel in the present volume attempts to meet this need and answer this question. His book is divided into six sections, chronologically ordered. The first discusses tendencies in democratic theory before the rise of sectionalism. The second deals with the Civil War period. The third is a study of the Gilded Age. The fourth, not too clearly defined in time, discusses the ideas of William Graham Sumner, Turner, Josiah Royce and William James. The fifth analyzes the progressive era. The last brings us through the World War." Boston Transcript

Reviewed by C. A. Beard
Am Hist R 46:164 O '40 460w

"Professor Gabriel's book is extremely well written, is in general liberal in its viewpoint, and is full of brilliant insights. Moreover, certain of the chapters are fine interpretations of movements and of individuals. The whole work has a certain movement and constitutes an effective analysis of the continuance of a tradition of thought, modified but not destroyed by changing climates of opinion and by the impact of changing concepts of man and his universe on the one hand, and by changes in the size, speed, and economic foundations of the American scene on the other. . . Nevertheless, the completed work is rather a piece of brilliant impressionism than a well rounded presentation of its title theme, with the consequence that the author's merits of variety of training at times themselves become defects." T. I. Cook
+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:559 Je '40 1550w

Reviewed by B. F. Wright
Ann Am Acad 211:213 S '40 500w
Booklist 36:380 Je 1 '40
Bookmark p6 N '40

"Professor Gabriel has given us one of the significant books of our historical literature—one of the few that attempt interpretation on the grand scale. This book is not that continuation of Parrington for which we have been waiting, but it is the best thing of its kind since Parrington. It is a book that must be read and pondered by all students of our cultural development and one that illuminates the future as well as the past." H. S. Commager
+ — Books p3 Je 23 '40 1350w

"I fear Mr. Gabriel has not wholly shaken himself free from economic history, and one of the failures of the economic historian has frequently been his failure to give education its proper place in the picture. Mr. Gabriel's performance seems to me for these reasons imperfect, but what he has done is excellently done in substance, whatever its demerits in style, and I regard the appearance of this volume as an indication of a new trend in historical writing which is wholly to be welcomed." H. M. Jones
+ — Boston Transcript p1 F 24 '40 1150w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 57:575 My 1 '40 170w

"The student of American history will find this a thought-provoking volume, an impressive saga of the great American adventure of democracy as the method of government which, with all its limitations, provides for the individual the greatest degree of freedom." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 14 '40 850w

"The chapters on Melville, Whitman, Sumner, James, and Holmes are the best in the book. Here there is comprehension, sympathy, and clarity. The two chapters on Symbolism are in my opinion the least satisfactory. The very style of the writing suffers. It is usually clear, forceful, and free from cant, but here it sometimes descends to sociological jargon." H. G. Townsend
+ — New Eng Q 13:547 S '40 1000w
New Repub 103:361 S 9 '40 60w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith
Sat R of Lit 21:16 Ap 6 '40 850w

"In addition to a more realistic understanding of the present social and intellectual scene, Professor Gabriel's book will be a valuable aid to those, who, on all levels of teaching, would really give meaning to American history. It should be on the 'must' list of every teacher of American history and institutions. It is to be hoped that a second volume covering the period up to 1815 will soon be forthcoming." C. P. Schleicher
+ Social Educ 4:442 O '40 750w

Reviewed by R. F. Nichols
Social Studies 31:325 N '40 250w
Time 35:88 My 6 '40 400w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton
Yale Law J 50:359 D '40 1250w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers
Yale R n s 29:837 summer '40 330w

GAER, JOSEPH. Consumers all; the problem of consumer protection. (National problems ser) 208p il $2; text ed $1.32 Harcourt
339.4 Buying. Commercial products. Cooperation (W) 40-8720

"This book is intended to fill the existing need for a description of the consumer problem as a whole: how the problem arose, the factors complicating it, what might be done to cope with it effectively, the status of the consumer movement today, the role of the co-operatives in the American consumer movement, and the type of legislation which exists, or is still needed, for consumer protection. Considerable space is devoted to the problems of budgeting, to the facts about goods which every consumer has a right to know, and to the reliable guiding principles which may be applied in buying major consumer goods and services." (Foreword) Index.

GAER, JOSEPH—Continued

Booklist 37:6 S '40

" 'Consumers All' is not a book merely to be read once for information and laid to one side for future reference; it is a practical textbook, to be methodically studied; fifteen 'consumer projects' for such study, by class or individual, are outlined at the end of the book. Meanwhile, however, even the casual reader will have learned a great deal, in these succinct chapters, about a problem which enters, needless to say, into every home."
+ N Y Times p20 O 20 '40 430w

"Joseph Gaer has written a book which, with great clarity and straightforwardness, points out the character of our growing consumer consciousness, its attendant and inevitable confusions, and the direction which it seems to be taking in America. . . The consumer has needed just such a practical book as this." Alston Waring
+ Survey 76:342 N '40 200w

GAER, JOSEPH. Fair and warmer. (National problems ser) 137p il maps $1.25; text ed $1 Harcourt

551.5 U.S. Weather bureau. Weather forecasting (W) 40-312

Discussion of the problem of weather forecasting and the work of the United States weather bureau. The sun, atmosphere, humidity, dust in the air, the shape, surface and rotation of the earth, and other elements affecting the weather, are studied. For readers of twelve and older. Index.

Booklist 36:290 Mr 15 '40

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson
Library J 65:261 Mr 15 '40 80w
Wis Lib Bul 36:45 Mr '40

GAER, JOSEPH. Men and trees. (National problems ser) 118p il maps $1.25; text ed $1 Harcourt

634.9 Forests and forestry. U.S. Forest service (W) 39-24206

Concise account of forest conservation and the achievements and aims of the United States forest service in the United States. Glossary of forestry terms, list of national forests, index.

"Will be useful in adult education classes as well as in junior high school and public libraries."
Booklist 36:290 Mr 15 '40

"Men and Trees in the National Problems Series is little more than a handbook—well bound and attractive but too short to be the book most needed. The arrangement of the material is somewhat confusing and the information itself is presented jerkily with captions topping every few paragraphs. But no fault can be found with the sincerity and enthusiasm of the author or with the interest and reference value of many of the facts he presents." Miriam Snow
+ — Library J 65:261 Mr 15 '40 130w
Wis Lib Bul 36:45 Mr '40

GAG, WANDA. Growing pains. 479p il $3.75 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-27727

Diary and drawings of this American artist for the years 1908 to 1917. She was only fifteen when her father died, and there were several younger children, so the earlier pages of the diary are concerned mainly with economic struggles. The diary closes with Wanda's departure from Minnesota with a national scholarship for the Art Students' League of New York.

Booklist 37:88 N 1 '40

"This diary is not a conscious literary exercise; it is the unaffected account of the struggles of a girl who was determined to make herself an artist, and who succeeded nobly. Throughout the book the author's extraordinary purity of mind shines out; she had talent, and what is rarer than talent and finer than facility —character. She faced life, never whined, truckled, or hoped for miracles, and with enormous self-discipline, developed her capacities to the fullest extent." Thomas Craven
+ Books p2 S 29 '40 850w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 S 24 '40 650w

"This is a most readable record of normal, wholesome development, told with the unspoiled, untampered-with naivete of the most pathetic era of life, 'where the brook and river meet'. If we laugh as we read, the laughter will have a touch of wistfulness in it. Life is never again more serious or more definite." M. H.
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '40 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist
Commonweal 33:147 N 29 '40 240w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk M 16:338 S '40 650w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:845 O 15 '40 70w

"A record like this can go farther in recalling to us our own youth and in increasing our understanding of and sympathy for all young people than a dozen manuals of adolescent psychology or a hundred statistical tabulations and generalizations. I recommend it to my fellow librarians." M. C. Scoggin
+ Library J 65:860 O 15 '40 170w

Reviewed by Katherine Woods
N Y Times p9 O 20 '40 750w

"A naïve, charming record of adolescence and young womanhood."
+ New Yorker 16:78 S 28 '40 20w

"These diaries are remarkable for many reasons, for their lively style, for their 'documentary' value, for their droll appraisals. They are chiefly memorable, however, as a joyful testament of faith." Frances Smyth
+ Sat R of Lit 22:12 O 5 '40 650w

GAINARD, JOSEPH A. Yankee skipper; [his] life story. 265p il $3 Stokes

B or 92 Seafaring life. Athenia (ship). City of Flint (ship) 40-31568

After a few chapters on his early experiences in the first World war, Captain Gainard's book is chiefly devoted to two recent episodes: the rescue of the survivors of the Athenia, and the City of Flint's capture by the Germans, the subsequent voyage to Murmansk, the trip down the Norwegian coast and final freedom.

"Captain Gainard isn't a fancy writer but he can tell an interesting story." P. J. Searles
Boston Transcript p1 S 21 '40 200w

"One reads Captain Gainard's exciting narrative with considerable respect for the cool judgment of this Yankee deep-sea ambassador." H. T.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 S 9 '40 500w

"Capt. Gainard's account of his thrilling adventures on the sea constitute a modern Odyssey of such gripping interest that one can hardly put down the book until one has finished it." B. R. Copithorn
+ Churchman 154:17 O 1 '40 280w

Reviewed by Philip Williams
Commonweal 32:493 O 4 '40 260w

Reviewed by J. A. Sohon
Library J 65:651 Ag '40 80w

GAG (gog)

"It is [the] hard-boiled refusal to toss off pyrotechnics, lighting luridly events in themselves sufficiently grim and gripping, which is the keynote to the interest the Yankee skipper has created in his relation. He refuses to be cheap or theatrical. He stands by his creed of being a careful, thinking mariner, and the result is page after page of convincing narrative." I. A.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 S 14 '40 290w

Springf'd Republican p8 S 11 '40 420w

GAINES, AUDREY. While the wind howled. 271p $2 Crowell

40-32557

Detective story.

"As a narrator, Carrie seems to have taken to overwrought verbiage by turns with her homely common sense passages. All the same, she's an amusing enough companion on a murder tour and must be credited with smooth detection. Come the third murder, the plot grows taller. Some ingenious tricks and plenty of speed." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p19 O 13 '40 150w

"There is rather too much disconnected or unimportant talk in the unraveling of the puzzle of the two apparently unrelated deaths. But the story strikes its notes of mystification and romance, even though it doesn't come up to the average of its kind." Kay Irvin

+ — N Y Times p16 O 6 '40 200w

"Plentitude of nasty characters, much ill-fated romance, blackmail, bloody doings in the snow, and not too surprising finish. Good average."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:28 O 19 '40 40w

GAINES, MRS HELEN FOUCHE. Elementary cryptanalysis; a study of ciphers and their solution; sponsored by American cryptogram association. 230p $3.50 Am. photographic pub. [21s Chapman]

652 Cryptography. Ciphers 39-31782

This study of the analysis and solution of ciphers progresses from the simpler forms to the more complex types such as are used by secret organizations and governments all over the world. Numerous examples are provided for decipherment. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:170 Ja 1 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 24:54 O '39

GAITHER, MRS FRANCES ORMOND (JONES). Follow the drinking gourd. 270p $2.50 Macmillan

40-5534

Story of pre-Civil war days in Alabama. Mas John Austen found his Georgia plantation wearing out, so he bought a tract of land in Alabama, sending some Negroes and an overseer to farm the land. The project was not a success and after the death of Mas John and his son Mas Robbie, the place fell into ruin. The drinking gourd of the title refers to the Great Dipper, the guide for runaway Negroes on their way north.

Booklist 36:325 Ap 15 '40

Bookmark p13 My '40

"Mrs. Gaither has done her best writing in this awakening to realization and in the honest feel for things of the soil. The rolling contours of the land, the windings of the streams, the arousing of the seasons, and the sounds and smells of the plantation she has conveyed with a warm pleasant earthiness." Muriel Chatain

+ Books p11 Mr 17 '40 650w

Reviewed by Margaret Clark

Boston Transcript p8 Mr 23 '40 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '40

New Repub 102:450 Ap 1 '40 50w

"It is really a surprising story Mrs. Gaither has given us here, a panoramic novel in brief, the kind of chronicle of an era which might have sprawled over a thousand pages but actually takes less than three hundred. Written with beautiful simplicity and economy, too mellow for tragedy, 'Follow the Drinking Gourd' nevertheless seems just and compassionate, moving and true." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 17 '40 800w

"A refreshing change from the usual Southern novel."

+ New Yorker 16:106 Mr 16 '40 40w

"Mrs. Gaither's feeling for character, for region, for situation are alike in authenticity, and her novel is fertile with the three qualities. She presents the economical wastefulness of slavery, and its inimical effect on all concerned—even upon the land where the institutions were scarcely questioned." Frank Daniel

+ Sat R of Lit 21:15 Mr 16 '40 550w

Wis Lib Bul 36:100 My '40

GAITHER, ROSCOE BRADLEY. Expropriation in Mexico; the facts and the law. 204p $2 Morrow

338.2 Petroleum—Mexico. Eminent domain. Mexico—Constitutional law 40-9423

"In March, 1938, the Mexican Government seized practically all the property of the American and British oil companies engaged in the industry in Mexico. Is this act 'Expropriation' or is it 'Confiscation'? In this book a lawyer with many years' experience in the oil industry both in this country and in Mexico discusses the situation and reveals the record of Mexico's oil legislation, particularly since 1917." (Publisher's note) Bibliography of cases. Index.

"Mr. Gaither declares that his purpose is to 'bring the Mexican and American people together in sincere ties of friendship.' The argument of his book may be irrefutable, and he may also be justified in believing that expropriation was unjust to the oil companies and harmful to Mexico; but the promotion of international friendship would seem to require a willingness at least to examine in a more sympathetic spirit the arguments used by the Mexican government." H. B. Parkes

Books p13 Ag 25 '40 800w

"It is, perhaps, unfortunate that nowhere in the book does Mr. Gaither acknowledge that the situation in Mexico may have been induced, at least in part, by the unsavory record which certain foreign interests made by their political intrigues there. The book would also be strengthened by recognition of the fact that Mexico is currently in the throes of a social, political and economic revolution and that revolutions are notoriously inconsiderate of precedents, laws and rights which have greater weight under more settled conditions. On the whole, however, Mr. Gaither's concise book can perform a valued service to those who have been strongly prejudiced in Mexico's favor or who have heard only the Mexican side of the question." J. G. H.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 5 '40 470w

GALDSTON, IAGO. Progress in medicine. 361p $3 Knopf

610.9 Medicine—History (W) 40-32411

Review of the advances and achievements in the field of medical science during the past one hundred years. The topics covered are bacteriology, nutrition, glands, psychiatry, and clinical developments. Index.

Reviewed by J. R. Earp

Am J Pub Health 30:1483 D '40 400w

Booklist 37:112 N 15 '40

"For the many youngsters entering upon their college careers vaguely heading toward a study of medicine, it should be required reading. . . For that increasing number of people who have discovered that the care of the health cannot be brought about by the undivided efforts of the doctors of medicine, this book will enable them to set their thinking in order and to grasp the essential importance of an educated public opinion in providing for the health of the people in democracy." Hugh Cabot, M.D.

GALDSTON, IAGO—Continued

+ Books p23 O 13 '40 900w

"Warmly human in tone, combining stores of knowledge with a tempered conviction of the social responsibilities of medicine."

+ New Repub 103:638 N 4 '40 50w

"Scholarly and readable volume." Frank Fremont-Smith, M.D.

+ Survey 76:373 D '40 400w

GALENSON, WALTER. Rival unionism in the United States. 317p $3.25; pa $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

331.88 Trade unions. American federation of labor. Congress of industrial organizations 40-11652

"It is a general practice among writers on labor problems to treat dual unionism and rival unionism as identical. For a quarter of a century, however, careful students have insisted that the two are not the same. Dual unionism, they have said, is merely the coexistence of two or more independent labor organizations operating among workers of the same class. Rival unionism is dual unionism with one element added: active competition between the organizations for members and contracts with employers. Mr. Galenson constructs his book upon this distinction, confining his attention to rival unions and the problems that arise out of that rivalry for legislatures and courts." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by E. E. Witte

Am Econ R 30:879 D '40 800w

"It is a highly creditable work. In style, it is succinct, yet not superficial; precise, yet not academic; clear and logical, yet not abstract. No other writer has entered so completely, so intimately, and so impartially into the subject. A mine of information has been methodically and patiently assembled, skilfully presented and plentifully footnoted, so that the book can be read and re-read with profit and admiration." Smith Simpson

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1235 D '40 320w

"Mr. Galenson painstakingly provides material with which we can form intelligent opinions. It is a book primarily for the student, but it could be read with profit by our political and editorial pundits as well." J. R. Walsh

+ Ann Am Acad 211:231 S '40 650w

Management R 29:311 Ag '40 430w

Reviewed by J. R. Walsh

Survey G 30:42 Ja '41 250w

GALLAGHER, MRS LOUISE BARNES. Frills and thrills; the career of a young fashion designer; il. by Jeva Cralick. 278p $2 Dodd

40-32614

Vocational story for high school girls. It is the story of Mary Bray, forced to leave college after her father's death to support herself and her mother. At first she tries modeling. She has her failures and her successes, but keeps working steadily up the ladder in the fashion business, until she reaches the top.

"Mary Bray's lively career, earnest all the way through, makes one of the best up-to-date vocational stories for girls or women." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 12 '41 480w

"The career story of a young fashion designer, which is a 'perhaps' purchase only. Libraries with a heavy call for vocational material may want to consider it. The career element is so thoroughly interspersed through the story that its value is minimized. . . There is too much story that only clouds the real purpose of showing the progress of a fashion designer. Girls really interested in this type of work as a vocation do not need to have the material so 'dressed up' for them. The characterization is good, and several of the people in the book really stand out as individuals. Certainly not a first purchase." M. R. Lucas

Library J 65:928 N 1 '40 300w

GALLAUDET, HERBERT DRAPER. We went to war. 116p $2 Coward-McCann

811 European war, 1914-1918—Poetry

39-25136

Brief sketches in verse of Americans in the first World war—men on the battle line and in camp, officers, and profiteers at home.

"Six months ago these poems of the World War, clever descriptions of personalities and records of camp life and battle, would have seemed to come too late. Now they seem almost contemporaneous."

+ Christian Century 56:1140 S 20 '39 90w

"As poetry, Mr. Gallaudet's verse is no more than capable; as history, from its very simplicity and candor, it is something more. He doesn't pull any punches and he doesn't go in for special pleading. That's the way the thing was—these are some of the things that happened to certain average Americans. And, in spite of the amateurishness of some of its technique, his verses have a certain terrible timeliness. For, if it happens to us again, that's the way the Clem Beatties and the Bill Doaks, the Jock Buntings and the Captain McGraws will be." S. V. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 F 3 '40 130w

GALLICO, PAUL WILLIAM. Secret front. 381p $2.50 Knopf

(W) 40-31626

Continues the adventures of Hiram Holliday, ex-proof reader on a New York newspaper, now a foreign correspondent in Europe. The book opens with Hiram caught in Warsaw by the beginning of the war and follows him as he searches for proof of a strange Nazi secret.

Booklist 37:116 N 15 '40

"One of the most utterly extravagant wartime fantasies that any one would ever want to read. Here it is, all of it: more adventures of Hiram Holliday. Hiram's friends and fans need no introduction to him, of course; for those who do not yet know him these few references should be introduction enough; whether as invitation or as warning." H. M. Shaw

+ Books p12 O 6 '40 270w

Reviewed by Drake de Kay

N Y Times p20 O 13 '40 650w

"This book is swift, current, clear, and light as a feather." G. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:23 D 21 '40 170w

"Hiram Holliday's escapades in this book are frankly fantastic but they add up to a first-class adventure yarn. 'The Secret Front' is fast-moving and exciting. The reader hopes that Mr Gallico will keep Hiram rolling right along—umbrella and all."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '40 430w

GALLUP, GEORGE HORACE, and RAE, SAUL FORBES. The pulse of democracy; the public-opinion poll and how it works. 335p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

301.15 Public opinion. U.S.—Politics and government. American institute of public opinion (W) 40-27570

"The director of the American Institute of Public Opinion and one of his associates present in this book what they term an ad interim report on the public opinion poll as a new instrument for improving self-government. After a brief survey of the use of straw votes in the past, they describe the methods of present polls of opinion, devoting chapters to such matters as the technique of sampling, the choice of issues, the phrasing of questions, and meeting the people. Findings on the Supreme Court enlargement plan, Townsendism, Birth Control, and other fields of investigation are discussed in separate chapters. The third part of the book deals with evaluations of the continuous cross-section survey of public sentiment as a useful democratic method." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Atlantic S '40 90w

Booklist 36:424 Jl 15 '40

"Much of the book is written in a somewhat pedagogical style (scientific opinion-samplers inevitably tend, like other experts, to develop a language of their own) but it remains an important document and should be read with profit by politicians, editors and the common man." Stanley Walker

+ — Books p4 Je 30 '40 2050w

Reviewed by E. L. Quinn

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 6 '40 750w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 10 '40 480w

Reviewed by Robert Offergeld

Current Hist & Forum 51:6 Ag '40 490w

Foreign Affairs 19:251 O '40 20w

"The book is readably written, and should prove of interest to everyone who is thinking with concern about essential democratic procedures." Alice Higgins

Library J 65:541 Je 15 '40 360w

"This book is as definite a milestone as the public opinion poll which it discusses. It is well worth serious study by every American who cherishes his duty to vote. In France democracy has turned out to be a 'stumblebum.' The public opinion poll, by taking 'the pulse of democracy,' can play an important role in keeping the same thing from happening here." A. D. Freiberg

+ Management R 29:345 S '40 490w

"Best when it describes polling techniques and discusses survey results, this book is considerably weakened by its excursions into the broader fields of abstract governmental forms. In general these excursions are tedious, and give rise to the suspicion that they are included merely to give the book a wider appeal and to prove that Dr. Gallup is no mere adding-machine operator, but a Social Philosopher who can polish a generality and shadow-box with a dictator as well as the next. . . The book, in general, tends to be excessively wordy. It does afford a good opportunity to gain some understanding of the method of the public-opinion survey, but no better than that which is afforded by pamphlets which can be obtained free from Dr. Gallup by writing to him at the American Institute of Public Opinion." J. H. Spingarn

— + New Repub 103:122 Jl 22 '40 700w

"We must be prepared to find that parental pride in Dr. Gallup leads him at times to over-estimate our dependence upon this new instrument for measuring public opinion. There is at times the suggestion that if it were not for the American Institute of Public Opinion or the Fortune poll, or similar inquiries, we should not know what is going on in the country. . . These are minor reservations about a book of many admirable qualities. It tells a fascinating story of our own times. It is a contribution to sound political thinking. Above all, it carries an affirmation of democratic faith that is heart-warming." Simeon Strunsky

+ — N Y Times p6 Je 30 '40 1400w

"Too long, but an interesting and authoritative book about what seems to be an important development in American democratic practice."

+ — New Yorker 16:71 Je 29 '40 70w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith

Sat R of Lit 22:7 Jl 27 '40 1600w

"Much of this book is necessarily of a technical nature, but the discussions of such political phenomena as band wagon trends, Louisiana's long acceptance of dishonest government and the powerful thrust of California's ham-and-eggs campaign, are enlightening and not confusingly statistical. The volume offers comfort also to those who, in this day of emphasis on democratic failures, have feared for the existence of the democratic state."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 7 '40 1100w

Reviewed by C. R. Miller

Survey G 29:521 O '40 550w

GAMBLE, MRS MARGARET TURNER, and PORTER, MRS MARGARET CHANDLER. To market, to market. 279p il $2 Bobbs

641.31 Marketing (domestic). Food (W) 40-27543

Shopping guide for the housewife, containing data on the selection of wholesome meat, poultry, dairy products, fresh fruit and vegetables, canned goods, etc. Index.

Booklist 36:407 Jl 1 '40

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '40

"This book is wholly practical, amazingly complete, supplied with charts, lists and tables, and illustrated with helpful little drawings. It is up-to-the-minute and often amusing. It is indeed a gem—not to say a talisman, to bring good luck into the kitchen and the household accounts."

+ N Y Times p23 My 19 '40 340w

GAMOW, GEORGE. The birth and death of the sun; stellar evolution and subatomic energy; il. by the author. 238p $3 Viking

523 Sun. Universe. Stars. Atoms (W) 40-27571

"George Gamow, author of 'Mr. Tompkins in Wonderland,' professor of theoretical physics at George Washington University, erstwhile student of Niels Böhr, is an internationally recognized authority on stellar evolution, and gives in his latest book 'in the simplest terms of which he is capable, an outline of the fundamental discoveries and theories that now permit us a general view of the evolution of our world.' " (Scientific Bk Club R) Chronology. Index.

Booklist 36:426 Jl 15 '40

Reviewed by Gerald Wendt

Books p7 Je 30 '40 850w

"Professor Gamow's main activity in astronomical problems dates from 1938. It is not surprising, therefore, that the astronomical sections of the book, especially those not relating to the sun or to white dwarf stars, lack the authoritative character of the physical sections. . . As a safeguard, the reader should look carefully for any expressions of uncertainty concerning the various astronomical theories discussed. When such an uncertainty is expressed, however mildly, the theory is very apt to be speculative. With this warning in mind, the reader who wishes to learn about modern physics and its application to astronomy should find much to his liking in 'The Birth and Death of the Sun.' The reviewer especially recommends the first half of the book." F. L Whipple

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Jl 6 '40 440w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:44 O '40

"Gamow's theory is about as good as any. But like others that come from physicists who are concerned purely with atomic transmutations it completely ignores celestial mechanics. . . It must not be assumed from all this that Professor Gamow is preoccupied with his own views. . . Any one who reads him will learn just how the physicist today approaches the problem presented by the stars. There is no better popular book than this on the course of atomic physics. It bears the stamp on every page of a bold, original mind." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ — N Y Times p5 Je 23 '40 1400w

"A first-rate popularization. Lots of helpful illustrations."

+ New Yorker 16:72 Je 29 '40 40w

"A most significant and scholarly book, it encompasses such vast reaches of astronomical knowledge that one's imagination is stimulated and one's intelligence richly satisfied. Professor Gamow has illustrated the text with excellent sky photographs and schematic drawings from his own pen." A. H. Compton & others

GAMOW, GEORGE—Continued
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:1 Jl '40 900w

GAMOW, GEORGE. Mr Tompkins in Wonderland; or, Stories of c, G, and h; il. by John Hookham. 91p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge]
530.1 Relativity (physics). Quantum theory 40-4473

"In form and illustration, this seems to be a juvenile. In reality it is a whimsical and amusing exposition of such mysteries of modern physics as the quantum theory, relativity and curved space. Mr. Tompkins wandered (in dreams) into several wonderlands where these things were strangely evident. An appendix explains these concepts in popular but less fantastic terms." Christian Century

"It is just the thing to interest a smart inquisitive sixteen-year-old boy with a turn for natural science and a sense of humor."
+ Atlantic Mr '40 50w
Chem & Met Eng 47:656 S '40 190w
Christian Century 57:251 F 21 '40 70w

"The technique has been much used by popularisers of science in the Soviet Union, but is apt to be too whimsical for the prosaic Western European reader. At the end of the book Professor Gamow gives three excellent straight lectures which are perhaps the best popular statements of relativity and quantum theory that have ever been written. They can be enthusiastically recommended to both scientific and general readers who want a succinct explanation of the theories, with simple illustrations of their consequences." J. G. C.
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 16 '40 150w

Reviewed by J. A. Crowther
Nature 145:567 Ap 13 '40 600w
New Repub 102:449 Ap 1 '40 60w

Reviewed by Barrington Gates
New Statesman & Nation 19:20 Ja 6 '40 300w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:25 Ap '40

"This charming volume is dedicated to Lewis Carroll and Niels Bohr. The mixed dedication serves to describe the spirit of the book to a paradoxical nicety. The problem the author had set himself was to mix classical nonsense with unclassical physics in order to produce a common sense account of such simple matters as relativity and quantum theory. The wonder of it all is that the reader somehow gets more sense out of the nonsense and more physics out of the fantastic than one would expect when confronted with such a modern witch's brew." W. M. Malisoff
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 17 '40 600w

"The serious student of theoretical physics will chuckle with delight as he reads about Mr. Tompkins' whimsical experiences, and anyone who has been baffled in his attempt to comprehend quantum theory, four-dimensional space-time, and relativity may discover that the door of understanding is opened by this description of the wonderland of scientific dreams. The three lectures, 'given by the professor, which inspired the dreams of Mr. Tompkins,' are excellent models for the popular presentation of difficult scientific principles."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:2 F '40 270w

"Mr Tompkins's fantastic adventures are not only entertaining but they help the reader build up in his mind a clearer concept of those problems under consideration. . . While 'Mr Tompkins in Wonderland' is meant primarily for lay consumption, it does presuppose a knowledge of physics, if not mathematics."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 9 '40 300w

"The book is amusing, but in no sense frivolous, for the author sees to it that in such postulated circumstances the fantastic experiences of Mr. Tompkins's dreams are consistent with the new concepts of space, time and motion which we owe to modern physics. The stories appeared originally in the scientific monthly Discovery, and many students, as well as general readers, will be glad to have them in book form. An index would have added to their value."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p747 D 23 '39 240w

GANKIN, MRS OLGA (HESS), and FISHER, HAROLD HENRY. Bolsheviks and the World war; the origin of the Third International. (Hoover lib. on war, revolution, and peace. Publication) 856p $6 Stanford univ. press
335.4 International, Third. Communist party (Russia). European war, 1914-1918 —Russia 40-14271

"The purpose of this book is to make available in English a collection of documents on the origin of the Third or Communist International. During the decade before 1914 the groups which composed the Russian Social Democratic Labor party were in a turmoil of dissension caused mainly by conflicting theories of organization and tactics. These disputes greatly distressed the leaders of the Second International, and they tried, without success, to persuade the Bolsheviks to accept the kind of compromise by which other socialist parties maintained the formal unity required by the International. . . Certain documents are given which relate to these matters, to Lenin's defense of the Bolshevik viewpoint and his attempts to organize the Lefts within the International. A great majority of the documents which we reproduce originated during the World War." (Pref) Chronology. Bibliography. Biographical notes. Index.

Reviewed by P. E. Mosely
Ann Am Acad 213:205 Ja '41 650w

"In careful scholarship and able editing the present volume compares favorably with any of its predecessors." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 S 14 '40 500w
Current Hist 51:46 Mr '40 60w

"A collection of documents ably and carefully selected from the mass of material dealing with the international socialist movement during the conflagration of 1914-18. . . The documents, which are necessarily somewhat fragmentary, are skillfully woven into a surprisingly readable and consecutive story by the editorial comments preceding each section or injected between the separate documents." M. T. Florinsky
+ N Y Times p26 D 1 '40 850w
Social Studies 32:42 Ja '41 160w

GANN, ERNEST KELLOGG. Sky roads. 123p il maps $2 Crowell
629.13 Aeronautics. Airplanes (W) 40-27440

A pilot with the American Airlines describes, authoritatively but in a popular manner, the training of commercial pilots, and the organization and control of air travel. Developments of the industry from the World war to the present are described. For junior and senior high schools. No index.

Booklist 36:369 My 15 '40

"More accurate and technical information about airplanes . . . is given here than in any other popular book known to the reviewer. It is all perfectly intelligible, and absorbingly interesting to the air-minded layman, but it does make the whole enterprise seem so complicated that one wonders what will happen when the sky is full of amateurs flying their own. They ought at least to read Mr. Gann's book, and so should the thousands of boys who are interested in aviation."
+ Christian Century 57:453 Ap 3 '40 100w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:845 D 16 '40 30w

"Ernest K. Gann, who is himself a pilot, has described the work of the airlines with so much imagination, so much appreciation of the dramatic quality in everyday airline flights, and such an onward-looking attitude toward the future of commercial flying in this country, that even non-air-minded readers are likely to find themselves stirred by the writer's wise enthusiasm." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 Jl 21 '40 400w

"Good for either adult or juvenile collections."

+ Wis Lib Bul 36:96 My '40

GANTENBEIN, JAMES WATSON. Financial questions in United States foreign policy. 264p $3.25 Columbia univ. press [16s 6d Oxford]

332.0973 U.S.—Foreign policy. Foreign exchange. Finance—U.S. 39-25263

"This book furnishes concise and authoritative analyses of several of the more important groups of financial matters of an international character which are today of great concern to our government in the conduct of foreign affairs. Foreign exchange controls, intergovernmental debts, foreign dollar bonds in default, international double taxation and the increasing necessity of governmental financing of foreign trade—all emphasize the tragic importance of financial problems in international affairs." (Commonweal) Bibliography. Index.

"The book shows much care in preparation, and is well organized. Its merits are the meticulousness with which official aims are presented, and the success achieved in reducing a large amount of information to a compact and usable form." K. E. Poole

+ Am Econ R 30:426 Je '40 430w

"A study of the financial aspects of our foreign policy which is most timely and useful to students of international relations. . . In his treatment of United States financial controls, such as customs collection arrangements, in certain backward countries, the author could profitably have expanded his description beyond the footnote devoted to the problem. The question of allocating space to this or that subject is, however, largely a matter of personal opinion on which no two people could be expected to agree. The book is altogether a valuable contribution in an increasingly important field of American diplomacy, and political scientists are very much indebted to Mr. Gantenbein for his authentic and thoroughly documented volume." B. H. Williams

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:142 F '40 490w

"The subject is a good one, but unfortunately this book adds little either to the factual knowledge about these problems or to the analysis of them, and it is not well enough written to be very useful as a survey of what is already known. . . On the whole, both the thought and the presentation give a rather studentish impression." Eugene Staley

Ann Am Acad 208:202 Mr '40 180w

Bookmark p10 N '40

"In this excellent volume the author devotes himself to the financial problems which have arisen within comparatively recent years to plague the foreign relations of the United States. Less critical than descriptive and analytical, the book devotes sections to foreign-exchange instability, exchange control, the intergovernmental debts, foreign dollar bonds in default and international double taxation. To the reader who wishes a simply written but authoritative account of these various problems this book should be invaluable."

+ Books p15 Ap 14 '40 80w

Reviewed by W. P. Tucker

Christian Century 57:739 Je 5 '40 230w

Reviewed by J. J. O'Connor

Commonweal 31:52 N 3 '39 60w

Foreign Affairs 18:569 Ap '40 10w

"The book will be useful principally as a college text and as a handbook for busy government officials and editorial writers. In it they will find much pertinent information skilfully arranged, with frequent citations and copious quotations from government documents and standard secondary works. For the research worker and the thoughtful citizen who wants to know the factors which have influenced government policy and the reasons why one policy and not another has been chosen the book will be less satisfactory." P. W. Bidwell

+ — J Pol Econ 48:600 Ag '40 490w

"The material presented is well chosen, clearly arranged, and helpfully documented. The book makes accessible a body of material not readily available elsewhere. More than this, it treats certain subjects, as in the case of bondholders' protective organizations in the United States, which have not previously been examined in any detail. It is a reflection of the changes that have taken place in this field in recent years that a majority of the topics discussed in this volume are entirely absent from comparable books published a decade or so ago." C. R. Whittlesey

+ Pol Sci Q 55:285 Je '40 550w

GARCIA LORCA, FEDERICO. Blood wedding (Bodas de sangre) [a tragedy in three acts and seven scenes] tr. by Gilbert Neiman. 61p pa 50c New directions

862

"A peasant tragedy, simple and brutal, with lyrics. Some of the flashing quality of the original Spanish comes through." New Yorker

"In the recently translated Blood Wedding, a magnificently simple and subtle three-act tragedy, we live in the blood and bone of a group of peasants universal to any time or place. There is no special pleading, no propaganda, no address on the part of the author to his own or any other particular group. And Lorca is to Spain what John Synge was to Ireland and the younger Gerhardt Hauptmann to an earlier Germany." Alfred Kreymborg

+ Living Age 358:95 Mr '40 70w

New Yorker 15:56 D 30 '39 20w

"If anyone wants to understand what kind of a poet Lorca was, he had better read through this tragedy in its entirety, first of all. Then, and then only, one can understand why Lorca's loss at the age of thirty-seven was so great a one to Spanish literature. As for his political views, they are not really important. The fact remains that he was a poet, of a kind the world is not likely to see ever again." J. G. Fletcher

+ Poetry 56:343 S '40 330w

"What gives the tragedy its passionate life is the music that cannot be translated. Mr. Neiman was, therefore, beaten before he started. One's only hope of salvage lies in asking [1] if 'Blood Wedding' is an actable, sayable play in English; and [2] if it is as faithful as it could possibly be to the text of 'Bodas de Sangre.' The answer to both questions is No." D. F.

— Sat R of Lit 21:21 Ja 13 '40 350w

GARCIA LORCA, FEDERICO. The poet in New York, and other poems; the Spanish text with an English translation by Rolfe Humphries. 209p $2.50 Norton

861 40-10534

Collection of poems by the Spanish poet who was killed in Granada in the early weeks of the Spanish war. The Spanish originals are included, with the translations of the poems. There is a memoir by the poet's friend, José Bergamín, and a biographical note by another friend, Herschel Brickell. Many of the poems were written in 1929 and 1930 when García Lorca was living in New York and studying at Columbia.

"With few if striking exceptions, the poems in this book are purely, madly, lyrical. One recognizes here not so much the Andalusian troubadour, steeped in native folksong, the musician who was de Falla's most brilliant

GARCIA LORCA, FEDERICO—Continued
pupil, the dramatist who delighted Madrid with his plays of peasant life, but rather the surrealist painter, the companion of Dali, the singer beset by visions of doves and bulls, cocks and crocodiles, seraphim and gypsies, glossy packs of cards and churches in the moonlight. . . The most intelligible passages are those which deal with scenes and moods familiar to the sophisticated American and especially to the New Yorker." Babette Deutsch
+ Books p14 Je 9 '40 950w

"To the complicated and sometimes private poems of the original author, Mr. Humphries has brought poetic powers of his own that do not merely translate the letter and spirit of the Spanish versions which this book includes; they create as well; and what they create is a valuable and individual contribution to American poetry."
+ Boston Transcript p13 Je 17 '40 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '40

Reviewed by Eugene Jolas
Living Age 359:93 S '40 1150w

"With each fresh addition to our knowledge of Federico Garcia Lorca, the poet's genius becomes more impressive. That extraordinary brilliance which struck one at once, in the first few of his poems to be translated, has turned out by no means to be an intermittent or accidental thing—it was sustained. Brilliance came as naturally to him, in fact, as dullness or preciosity to others; it was simply his speech. Nothing could be more remarkable, in this new collection than the apparently inexhaustible fertility of Lorca's imagination. It was everywhere at once, it was prodigal, it was fantastic—the subjective and objective worlds rolled up and ignited in a single ball—the quotidian married singularly to the classic, the folk-song crossed with the baroque." Conrad Aiken
+ New Repub 103:309 S 2 '40 750w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 16:82 Je 1 '40 350w

Reviewed by J. G. Fletcher
Poetry 56:343 S '40 330w

"Of the recent attempts to translate Lorca into English this is the most nearly successful. So qualified a statement necessarily sounds like faint praise: actually, it is high praise. One has only to look back at the well-meant blundering of the Spender-Gili translations, or at New Directions' schoolboy howler version of 'Bodas de Sangre,' to be aware of how great a distance separates them from Rolfe Humphries's work." Dudley Fitts
+ Sat R of Lit 22:10 Ag 10 '40 250w

Reviewed by R. W. Short
Yale R n s 30:214 autumn '40 850w

GARDEN CLUB OF NORTH CAROLINA. Old homes and gardens of North Carolina; phot. by Bayard Wootten; historical text by Archibald Henderson; comp. by Mrs Charles A. Cannon; Mrs Lyman A. Cotten [and] Mrs James Edwin Latham. ltd ed 56p 100pl $10 Univ. of N.C. press

728 North Carolina—Historic houses, etc. Gardens—North Carolina 40-27096

Photographs of one hundred of the old houses and gardens of North Carolina, each with a descriptive sketch, giving dates and history. Some of the houses are occupied by descendants of their eighteenth-century builders.

Booklist 36:234 F 15 '40

"This book is evocative both in text and in picture, for its historical notes have substance and variety, and many of the houses show ancient dignity and romantic charm. One turns the pages of the past in looking at many old houses and a few gardens, and in recalling the families who once lived here—and who in many cases still do."
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 14 '40 350w
Special Libraries 31:339 S '40

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. The case of the baited hook. 281p $2 Morrow
(W) 40-27296

Detective story.

Booklist 36:307 Ap 1 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p16 Mr 10 '40 150w

"Perry Mason continues to get in my hair. His latest is quite typical." Marian Wiggin
— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '40 60w

"This is the one of the present reviewer's favorites among Erle Stanley Gardner's books." K. I.
+ N Y Times p23 Mr 17 '40 200w

"Plot involves some expert double-crossing, blackmail, baby-farming, and slick stock-jobbery—cleaned up swiftly by needle-sharp deducing. Thirty-third Degree."
Sat R of Lit 21:18 Mr 16 '40 50w
Time 35:76 Ap 1 '40 50w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. The case of the silent partner. 278p $2 Morrow
(W) 40-32558

Detective story.

Booklist 37:138 D 1 '40

"Erle Stanley Gardner's books may be a bit short on Old World culture, but they're long on entertainment qualities for the deep-dyed fan. If sales figures mean anything, the Perry Mason tales, especially, are exactly what the public wants, and this is the best one of them in quite some time." Will Cuppy
+ Books p24 N 17 '40 120w

"Introduces two new wrinkles: non-courtroom finish, and police opponent worthy of Perry's steel. Wind-up likely to make you gasp. Slick as ever."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 N 30 '40 50w
Time 36:84 D 2 '40 40w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. The D.A. goes to trial. 283p $2 Morrow 40-10769

Detective story.

Booklist 37:14 S '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p9 Jl 28 '40 150w

"Definitely a book for D.A. fans." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '40 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p13 Jl 28 '40 180w

"Payoff as unexpected as it is logical, and events leading up to climax well sprinkled with thrills and action. Grade A."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 S 14 '40 40w
Time 36:72 Ag 5 '40 60w

GARDNER, HORACE JOHN. Let's celebrate Christmas. 212p il $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

394.268 Christmas (W) 40-27728

Collection of party suggestions, plays, carols with music, legends, poetry, and stories, all useful at the Christmas season. Index.

Booklist 37:83 N 1 '40

"For home, school or church, the materials here collected will be useful and suggestive."
+ Christian Century 57:1282 O 16 '40 20w

"An enormous amount of material is included which can be used by adults in giving children's parties, plays and so on at Christmas time."
+ Churchman 154:4 D 15 '40 20w
Commonweal 33:157 N 29 '40 30w
Survey G 29:636 D '40 30w
Wis Lib Bul 36:155 N '40

GARDNER, JAMES PETER. Reminiscences of a Scottish laddie. 135p il $2 Humphries

B or 92 40-14661

A retired banker looks back over his childhood and youth, recalling especially the years he spent in a little Scottish village not far from Melrose. At the age of twelve he came to America, and the reminiscences of his earlier years here are added to the Scottish memories.

"Here is a pleasant little volume of recollections. . . [It] has real personality."

+ Books p14 Ag 11 '40 210w

Boston Transcript p1 Ag 10 '40 30w

GARNETT, CHRISTOPHER BROWNE. Wisdom in conduct; an introduction to ethics. 458p $3.50; text ed $2.50 Harcourt

170 Ethics. Social ethics 40-4288

"Following Confucius, Socrates and Aristotle in defining Ethics as 'the study of wisdom in conduct,' the author seeks to show what this means, by analysis of other theories, formulation of the general characteristics required of any ethical system, and applications of his own theory to specific modern situations. More recent ancestry than that specifically cited by him seem to be James, whom he quotes, and Dewey, whom he emulates. Addressing professional philosophers, he writes clearly enough for laymen." (New Repub) Reading lists. Index.

"This book is designed primarily for laymen and introductory college courses. Garnett has a clear and felicitous style and a wide familiarity with the Great Names. There is an excellent index and good bibliography for each chapter. The volume is easy and interesting reading." Read Bain

+ Am Soc R 5:976 D '40 500w

"A great deal of thought and work has gone into this book, which is a discussion of the total ethical situation as it affects modern humanity. . . The most stimulating idea advanced in this book is that, although prudence is wisdom, it is wisdom of a circumscribed sort: real wisdom, whether for the individual or the society is always something emergent, forming new values, and is the outcome of imagination, knowledge, discrimination." M. M. Colum

+ Forum 103:326 Je '40 700w

"The book is simply and clearly written and will unquestionably prove of value to many teachers who have been wanting a volume of this sort." R. G. Ross

+ J Philos 37:441 Ag 1 '40 300w

New Repub 102:449 Ap 1 '40 80w

"The socially minded will get from this ably written treatise a long range view of what human welfare means. Those who are too engrossed in problems of administration will do well to heed the words. 'The ultimate test of the solution of all group problems lies in the effect upon the character and conduct of persons.' " Henry Neumann

+ Survey 76:180 My '40 440w

GARRATT, GEOFFREY THEODORE. What has happened to Europe? [Eng title: Europe's dance of death]. 351p maps $2.75 Bobbs [10s 6d Allen, G]

940.5 Europe—Politics. European war, 1939- (W) 40-5858

Written by a British Liberal and intended primarily for the American public, the book is a rapid account of the sickness of Europe from its early symptoms in the nineteenth century to the outbreak of the present war. Mr Garratt criticizes unsparingly the subterfuges and evasions of the political leaders and the failure of democratic government in Great Britain and France. The final chapter suggests the part which he believes most Englishmen hope America will play in the coming years. Index.

Booklist 36:322 Ap 15 '40

Bookmark p13 N '40

"Nobody who has followed Mr. Garratt's political and literary career could but rejoice at the announcement of his new book. After 'Mussolini's Roman Empire,' we were anxious to hear more from Geoffrey Garratt. And we got more than we expected. 'What Has Happened to Europe' is the best Mr. Garratt has ever written. It is one of the few outstanding works among the many—the too many histories of our time. It is a magnificent book." Ursula Wasserman

+ Books p17 Ap 7 '40 1000w

Reviewed by R. C. K. Ensor

Manchester Guardian p7 Je 7 '40 480w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery

Nation 150:487 Ap 13 '40 750w

"A British journalist, foreign correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, analyzes Europe's sickness. This time it is not the usual rehash of old dispatches, magazine articles and sensational 'inside' stories, but an honest, intelligent and well written discussion by a man who seems as disgusted with the past as he is discouraged about the future. He warmly advises the United States to stay out of the mess."

+ New Repub 102:481 Ap 8 '40 70w

New Statesman & Nation 19:596 My 4 '40 300w

New Yorker 16:107 Mr 16 '40 40w

"This book has the quality of an exciting novel though it presupposes a basic knowledge of the European situation. . . The only regret one may feel upon laying down the book is that it is so short. Here for once we want to be told more, especially on the subject of the development and decline of democracy in the three great European countries. The witty and unusually frank pen of this experienced and warmhearted Liberal might have painted them for us in even clearer colors. Moreover, many would find it easier to follow Garratt's detailed account with the aid of a chronological table. But even so this is one of the most rewarding and important political books which has come to us from England in some time." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 21:9 Ap 6 '40 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p154 Mr 30 '40 800w

Wis Lib Bul 36:111 Je '40

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe

Yale R n s 29:811 summer '40 490w

GARRISON, KARL CLAUDIUS. The psychology of exceptional children. 351p il $3.25 Ronald

371.92 Child study. Educational psychology 40-3949

"About one-fourth (5 chapters) of Dr. Garrison's book is devoted to a preliminary consideration of the origins of child behavior, individual development and differences, trait differences and education, and measurements in education (as well as in psychology). About one-sixth of the space (4 chapters) is given to a discussion of gifted children, slightly less than one-fourth (6 chapters) to mentally retarded children, and slightly over one-fourth (6 chapters) to children with visual, auditory, speech, and orthopedic defects, to children of lowered vitality, and to problems of left-handedness." Am J Psychol

"It is not clear why the title of the book is limited to the 'psychology' of exceptional children since it contains much that is not psychological. To the reviewer its place seems to be limited to the general student in psychology or education who merely wants a brief overview of the field without any thought of specializing in its clinical, social, or educational phases. As a text its value will be enhanced if the course is offered by a specialist who can supplement the book with extensive first hand experience. Most of the questions at the chapter ends are excellent. The author has shown considerable versatility and skill in the construction of varied and provocative exercises." J. E. W. Wallin

GARRISON, K. C.—Continued
Am J Psychol 53:475 Jl '40 750w

Reviewed by R. E. L. Faris
Am J Soc 46:633 Ja '41 80w

GARTH, DAVID. Road to Glenfairlie. 330p $2 Kinsey 40-8745

International intrigue, romance, mystery and adventure bring together finally a young American foreign service man and the lost heiress of a Scottish earldom.

Booklist 37:37 O 1 '40

"You'll find it one of David Garth's best entertainers, colorful and nimble in pace." Lisle Bell
+ Books p8 Je 2 '40 200w
Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 30w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p23 My 12 '40 120w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '40 170w

GARVEY, CHESTER ROY. The activity of young children during sleep; an objective study. 102p il $2 Univ. of Minn. [9s Oxford]
135.232 Sleep. Child study 39-28089

This study analyzes the general character of the sleep of young children, and the relation of various factors, such as time of going to bed, room and outdoor temperature, afternoon naps, sleeping posture, etc. to the quietness of their sleep. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by C. F. Jacobsen
Am J Psychol 53:172 Ja '40 240w
J Home Econ 31:585 O '39 30w

GASS, SHERLOCK BRONSON. Family crisis. 278p $2.50 Reynal
B or 92 40-27211

Recounts the story of a five-years' struggle for life and independence. In 1893 the author and his family were so hard-pressed for money that they were evicted from their Chicago flat. On borrowed capital they bought a small steam laundry in Dayton, Ohio, and the whole family turned in to help make a living out of it. Their years of hardship are retold graphically but without self-pity.

Booklist 36:281 Mr 15 '40

"There is no over-painting in this book, and the strength of the struggle stands out all the more clearly for its pianissimo treatment. Professor Gass has not rhapsodized over the roar of the machines and the 'souls' of his characters. They are too busy fighting. But he has not forgotten the midsummer sky, and the half-open saloon doors and seething humanities of Saturday night. And he has not forgotten his deep affection for these people." D. E. Shapiro
+ Books p4 F 25 '40 420w

"In tone 'Family Crisis' is dispassionate, cool and detached. It records, interprets, but makes little effort to move the reader. There is understatement rather than overstatement, irony for humor, analysis instead of dramatic presentation. It gives one the impression of being entirely honest—a book quiet, sober, and natural, extremely well-written, and altogether without pretentiousness." Dorothy Greenwald
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 24 '40 310w
Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 15 '40 500w

Reviewed by L. L. Riley
Churchman 154:17 Mr 15 '40 190w

"Not the usual heroic hard-work-makes-a-man-of-you tale at all, but cheerful recollections of how five people starved and sweated in a genteel way. A nice book."
New Repub 102:321 Mr 4 '40 30w

"Though the writing is without any particular beauty or distinction, it has clarity and directness, and the book as a whole reveals rather better taste than is usually shown by those who describe what used to be called private affairs for the benefit of the public." L. M. Field
+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 3 '40 700w

"Homely, humorous narrative and genuine social history."
+ New Yorker 16:79 F 24 '40 30w
Springf'd Republican p12 F 22 '40 550w
Wis Lib Bul 36:68 Ap '40

GASSNER, JOHN. Masters of the drama. 804p il $3.75 Random house
809.2 Drama—History and criticism. Dramatists. Theater (W) 40-27441

A history of the theater from ancient times to the present in which emphasis is laid on drama and dramatists, rather than on its associated arts. The author is a drama critic, lecturer on the theater, in charge of the play-reading department of the Theatre Guild for the past ten years, and a teacher of drama at Hunter college and at the dramatic workshop of the New School for Social Research. Bibliography. Index of playwrights. Index of subjects.

Booklist 36:362 My 15 '40

" 'Masters of the Drama' is actually a history of the theater from pre-Aeschylean days to William Saroyan, and it proceeds relentlessly from nation to nation as well as down the centuries. Such a survey might easily become perfunctory or dull, but Mr. Gassner himself shows no signs of a flagging interest, and that, in such cases, is half the battle. His book is long, methodical, even paced and (except for some colloquialisms which seem to me inappropriate) soberly written. But it is not dull." J. W. Krutch
+ Books p4 Je 2 '40 850w

" 'Masters of the Drama' is the most compact history of drama that I know and it is at the same time inclusive and well balanced. . . 'Masters of the Drama' is a book intended for the student, but any reader with an interest in the theatre will find it fascinating." Grenville Vernon
+ Commonweal 32:86 My 17 '40 240w

Reviewed by Harold Clurman
New Repub 103:91 Jl 15 '40 800w

" 'Masters of the Drama' by its very intent and fulfillment sets itself apart from any other contemporary book written on the theatre. One will have to seek far and wide for a similar display of scholarship, careful judgment and criticism. To be sure, Mr. Gassner writes of history; but it is history brought vividly to life by a man who understands as well as loves the drama and the men who have worked and are working in it today. In short, it is a book which will compel all to study, read and reread again." William Kozlenko
+ N Y Times p18 My 12 '40 900w

"A superior piece of work, detailed, balanced, and genuinely critical. Good illustrations and appendices."
+ New Yorker 16:91 Ap 27 '40 30w
Pratt p19 autumn '40

"All in all, Masters of the Drama, which the jacket calls 'the story of the theatre and its creators from primitive man to the present day,' would seem to require space on every well-stocked theatre shelf." E. J. R. Isaacs
+ Theatre Arts 24:459 Je '40 500w
Wis Lib Bul 36:124 Jl '40

GASSNER, JOHN, ed. Twenty best plays of the modern American theatre; ed. with an introduction. 874p $3 Crown
812.08 American drama—Collections (W) 39-32159

Contents: Winterset, by Maxwell Anderson; High Tor, by Maxwell Anderson; Idiot's Delight, by R. E. Sherwood; Johnny Johnson, by

Paul Green; Green Pastures, by Marc Connelly; You Can't Take it with You, by G. S. Kaufman and Moss Hart; End of Summer, by S. N. Behrman; The Animal Kingdom, by Philip Barry; Boy Meets Girl, by Bella and Samuel Spewack; The Women, by Clare Boothe; Yes My Darling Daughter, by Mark Reed; Three Men on a Horse, by George Abbott and J. C. Holm; The Children's Hour, by Lillian Hellman; Tobacco Road, by Jack Kirkland and Erskine Caldwell; Of Mice and Men, by John Steinbeck; Dead End, by Sidney Kingsley; Bury the Dead, by Irwin Shaw; The Fall of the City, by Archibald MacLeish; Golden Boy, by Clifford Odets; Stage Door, by Edna Ferber and G. S. Kaufman. Bibliography.

Booklist 36:173 Ja 1 '40

Pratt p19 autumn '40

"Mr. Gassner's vivid and pungent preface adds greatly to the value of a book which succeeds in presenting the diversity and intrinsic vigor of Broadway during the last decade." Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts 24:299 Ap '40 430w

GATES, CALEB FRANK. Not to me only. 340p map $3 Princeton univ. press

B or 92

Autobiography of an educator-missionary, who spent fifty years in Turkey, twenty-nine of them as president of the American-owned Robert College in Constantinople. The author deals not only with missionaries and missionary work but also presents a picture of social and economic conditions in Turkey and observations on political and international events. Index.

Booklist 37:173 Ja 1 '41

Christian Century 57:1617 D 25 '40 100w

"If a reader has the slightest appreciation of valiant courage, any enjoyment of thrilling adventure and any zest for history in the making, he will find in this splendid book reason to be proud to be an American, glad to feel his identity as a member of the human race and inspired to higher valuations of the significance of Christ, the church and the service of God to mankind." A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 154:17 D 1 '40 200w

N Y Times p12 Ja 26 '41 550w

"Dr. Gates's book is a simple, clear, and modest narrative of a busy life. What is remarkable is the wisdom and good sense in every paragraph, the calm analysis of missionary work, with its pitfalls and tediums, and the love of every race in the Levant." H. N. MacCracken

+ Sat R of Lit 23:10 N 9 '40 950w

Social Studies 32:47 Ja '41 40w

GATES, DORIS. Blue willow; il. by Paul Lantz. 172p $2 Viking

(W) 40-32435

An appealing story of the little daughter of a "migratory worker." Her sole hold on beauty and security was a sensitive imagination and a blue willow plate, the latter left over from the family's more prosperous days in Texas. Janey's wanderings came to an end at last in an adobe house, a suitable home for the blue willow plate.

Booklist 37:122 N 15 '40

"It is right that children should be told, like this, something of the conditions under which the drifting worker's child must live. There is no point in making them angry, for there is nothing children can do about it, and strong emotion is less than useless without an outlet in action. This story is not angry; it has understanding. The author has taught in such camp schools, knows her people, and knows how to make children see something of their side of the social story." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 17 '40 320w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 11 '40 230w

Churchman 154:4 D 15 '40 60w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk M 16:430 N '40 30w

"With rare sympathy and understanding Miss Gates has drawn a warmly human little girl, sensitive to beauty and with great capacity for loving." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:437 N '40 90w

"Here is an appealing story of courage and fortitude handled with dignity and considerable skill. Miss Gates has worked as librarian among the children in the migrant camps of California, so writes from experience. In Janey Larkin she has created a character with a fine philosophy of life and an innate love of beauty which persists in spite of (or perhaps because of) poverty and adverse circumstances." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 65:983 N 15 '40 230w

"Sensitive and courageous story." Lena Barksdale

+ Nation 151:455 N 9 '40 10w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele

New Repub 103:844 D 16 '40 40w

"In a day when children are probably conscious earlier than ever before of the troubles of the world this story, which is also good narrative, presents a situation honestly but in a way which does not exceed the emotional capacity of the 9 to 12-year old, making it fresh and vital in terms of the small possessions and the great desires of all the Janies of today." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 5 '41 330w

"The ending is happy without being sentimental. All in all, an unusual children's book."

+ New Yorker 16:128 D 7 '40 60w

GATHORNE-HARDY, ROBERT. Three acres and a mill. 361p il maps $4 Macmillan [15s Dent]

910.4 Voyages and travels. Gardening

[40-27212]

Taking as a starting point the unsettled conditions in England in 1938, the author, a writer and botanist, contemplates twelve years of country living and gardening on a small estate not far from London. He recalls his many visits abroad, to Spain, Teneriffe, and Iceland, in search of rare plants, as they come back to him in a visit to his own rock garden.

Booklist 36:279 Mr 15 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p26 Mr 3 '40 400w

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 20 '40 30w

"Garden-lovers and travel-lovers will be equally pleased."

+ Christian Century 56:1580 D 20 '39 100w

"[The author describes] his journeys with exceptional vividness and witty turns of speech and anecdote. His love of beauty is shown specially in his description of the wild flowers which were the main reason for his travels, but, though every chapter is full of flowers and their scientific names, this need not deter any ordinary reader who is neither botanist nor gardener, for he will find plenty of human interest in the graphic narrative." A. W. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 6 '39 270w

"Travel, agreeable enough for its own sake, becomes doubly enjoyable when undertaken with a complementary purpose. Mr. Gathorne Hardy, wanderer and botanist, is thus the ideal traveller. He likes 'foreign parts'; he enjoys the excitement of getting there; he likes the unfamiliar things he sees and the alien characters he meets; he likes the wines and the inns and the goat-paths and the caves; he is unsophisticated enough to rejoice freely in them, yet sophisticated enough to express his pleasure in descriptive English. A boyish enthusiasm irradiates all the pages of a book so

GATHORNE-HARDY, ROBERT—Continued
charmingly frank and personal that any outside comment seems irrelevant if not impertinent." V. Sackville-West

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:466 S 30 '39 420w

"This is an unusual book, sincere, interesting, and often beautiful. It is illustrated, too, with beautiful photographs. It is a good book for us to read, written in England on the eve of war."

+ N Y Times p3 D 24 '39 440w

"Somehow, in spite of all his dilettantism, in spite of his monocle and his mill—which isn't a mill anymore but a sort of scenic property like the one in Marie Antoinette's village—in spite of the fact that I don't care so much for arctic-alpines in gardens as in the arctic and on alps, the poet often caught me by the buttonhole. I don't think he is yet quite fused with the botanist, but both men are interesting." D. C. Peattie

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:7 Ja 6 '40 450w

Spec 164:120 Ja 26 '40 150w

"As a gardener Mr. Gathorne-Hardy obviously has his merits. One likes particularly his admiration for the native English plants—even though some of them, such as the harebell, have proved troublesome weeds when introduced into the garden—and it is very pleasant to find a horticulturist who pays attention to the common bog orchids (incidentally, he will regret to learn that even the revised nomenclature to which he refers on p. 349 is now out of date). His book, moreover, contains much more than botany and horticulture, and will be enjoyed by many who take no specialized interest in either."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p511 S 2 '39 600w

GAUDIN, ANTOINE MARC. The principles of mineral dressing. 554p il $5 McGraw

622.7 Ore dressing 40-1088

"This college text stresses principles rather than machine descriptions, details of practice, or discussions of auxiliary operations. It takes account not only of older processes which still retain their value but also of such later developments as flotation, adhesion, flocculation, and dispersion methods, including much new material on the theory of grinding and crushing, the mechanics of solids moving in fluids, jigging and tabling, and magnetic separation. For the convenience of students who desire to skip the mathematics of the subject, these parts are usually relegated to smaller type. There are 260 illustrations. The author is Professor of Mineral Dressing in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"An excellent classroom text, thoroughly modern." O. C. Ralston

+ J Phys Chem 44:532 Ap '40 230w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:9 Ja '40

GAY, ZHENYA, and CRESPI, PACHITA. Manuelito of Costa Rica. [40p] il $1.50 Messner

Children in Costa Rica 40-30188

Picture-story book showing some of the manners and customs of Costa Rica thru the lives of Manuelito and his six small sisters.

Booklist 37:94 N 1 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ja 5 '41 210w

"The brilliant tone of the pictures, their humor and warm tropical atmosphere make a striking picture book of this simple, light-hearted story. Manuelito's preparation for Christmas is especially appealing." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:341 S '40 100w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:847 O 15 '40 30w

"Zhenya Gay has made some of her most charming pictures, warm and brilliant in color and full of the atmosphere of the country. . . This is a picture-story book that presents another country to children with grace, humor and understanding and one that boys and girls from 6 to 8 will thoroughly enjoy." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 O 20 '40 240w

New Yorker 16:126 D 7 '40 30w

Wis Lib Bul 36:151 N '40

GEDDES, NORMAN BEL. Magic motorways. 297p il $3.50 Random house

625.7 Roads. Traffic regulations. Highway engineering (W) 40-27321

A description of the General Motors show, Futurama, at the New York World's Fair, illustrated with many pictures. The exhibit showed the designer's idea of what the model highways, the countryside, and the city of the future would be like.

Booklist 36:319 Ap 15 '40

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes

Books p1 Ap 28 '40 900w

"Superficially, Mr. Geddes appears to put forward a program of highway building that, if followed, would end congestion and greatly reduce our accident toll. But actually his chief concern is for the long-distance traveler. Speed is the controlling factor in his thinking. Billions of dollars are to be spent on six and eight-lane highways to permit a small part of the nation to drive across country at 75 and 100 mph. The obvious result would be to deprive the great bulk of the people of much needed improvements and additions to local roads."

— Eng N 124:80 My 23 '40 260w

"Eight million persons are reported to have braved the queues to view the 'Highways and Horizons' exhibit at the World's Fair in New York, of which 'Magic Motorways' is the designer's exposition. The same skill that was applied there to the flow of people through a magnificent spectacle is applied in the book to a flow of words, pictures, and ideas directed to setting up desire. In its own terms the performance is a splendid one, and is worth the assiduous study of publicists working in a democracy." Douglas Haskell

Nation 150:489 Ap 13 '40 240w

Reviewed by Bruce Bliven

New Repub 102:767 Je 3 '40 650w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p23 Mr 24 '40 1600w

Pratt p11 autumn '40

Reviewed by R. G. Tugwell

Sat R of Lit 21:3 Ap 13 '40 2000w

Theatre Arts 24:612 Ag '40 200w

GEIJERSTAM, GOSTA AF. Northern winter; a tr. from the Norwegian by Joran Birkeland; il. with drawings by the author. 178p $2.50 Dutton

839.8 Norway—Social life and customs (W) 40-32608

Random memories of the hunting days and celebrations of a lonely Northern winter, about which the author says, "I merely sit here and turn the pages of an old sketchbook I made and let my thoughts flow where they will."

Booklist 37:154 D 15 '40

"By all odds these episodes might have been as banal as the hunting stories our own menfolk bring back, but there is as much beauty and clarity in Mr. Geijerstam's language as in this rugged Norwegian scenery—even at the mundane task of inspecting foxtraps, 'the daytime moon stood palely in the sky.' And there is humor here, too, genuine youthful fun, with a bit of harmless horseplay interspersed." Muriel Chatain

+ Books p12 O 6 '40 460w

"It is such a flat and colorless tale that it would not seem worth criticizing it so sharply if the author did not decidedly have a fine gift for intense observation which, we think, should enable him to write a far better book. Once in a while this gift shows itself in sudden, striking descriptions. . . There are some lively spots in a lame tale that has the same pseudo-simple 'blood and soil' quality that Nazi-German literature cultivates with so much care. Only a writer of great imagination can afford to be consciously naïve, and even then his naïveté might easily grow sterile, as it happened with Hamsun. We wish sincerely that Gösta af Geijerstam would for a while forget about Summer and Winter and write instead a book with his full intelligence and human experience." Marianne Hauser

— + N Y Times p7 N 17 '40 600w

"The author of 'Northern Winter' is fortunate in possessing so able and sympathetic a translator as Joran Birkeland, to whom should be given a great deal of the credit for interpreting af Geijerstam to English readers. Theirs is a literary partnership which seems to ripen and mellow with each succeeding translation, and one which it is to be hoped will continue without interruption."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 2 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 36:168 D '40

GEISE, JOHN JACOBS. Man and the western world. 2v 541,545-1041p il ea $2.75; also in 1v $4.50 Harcourt

901 Civilization—History 40-8950

A history of civilization which emphasizes the different types of civilizations which have developed in the western world from pre-literary times to the present. The author distinguishes seven civilizations—Collectional, Hunting, Peasant, Archaic, Ancient Imperial, Hellenic, and Roman—which were ancestral to our civilization and two—Byzantine and Muslim—which are parallel with it. Index at end of each volume.

"The book's literary style is simple, its content is not encyclopedic, and its study aids are numerous. Students should find the diagrams, chronologies, maps, marginal notes, cross references, pronouncing index, line drawings, and illustrations very helpful in retaining the broad concepts of Western civilization. The history professor of the old school might be disturbed by the relatively reduced amount of space devoted to formal history. For his own good, it might be well for him to adopt Geise's book as a basic text." J. H. Landman

+ Ann Am Acad 211:222 S '40 550w

"This reviewer feels that Mr. Geise has not quite succeeded in one of his main purposes, to eliminate 'encyclopedic content.' In such a work that is practically an impossible task. He has, however, an excellent organization, a lucid style, and a way of stating facts which ought to lead to classroom discussion. For a teacher willing to take the trouble to use the 'aids to teaching' incorporated in the volume, it ought to make a highly successful textbook." P. S. Klein

+ Social Studies 32:44 Ja '41 480w

GEISEL, THEODOR SEUSS (DR SEUSS, pseud). Horton hatches the egg, by Dr Seuss [il. by the author]. [55p] $1.50 Random house

(W) 40-27753

The story of Horton, the elephant with a sense of duty, is told in rhyme and picture. Horton took up the job of sitting on an egg deserted by a flighty mother bird, and saw the thing thru to a surprising finish.

Booklist 37:122 N 15 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p11 N 10 '40 240w

"It is warranted to bring laughter to all children and many adults who will be glad that Dr. Seuss has invented this elephant who was 'faithful one hundred per cent.' " A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:434 N '40 50w

"Such wonderful nonsense cannot be described, but it will certainly be enjoyed." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 65:846 O 15 '40 30w

Reviewed by M. F. Potter

Library J 65:929 N 1 '40 220w

"For my part, I think we should be abjectly grateful for a funny book this year. It will do families good to laugh, as everyone of them will have to laugh, at this ridiculous yarn." Irene Smith

+ Library J 65:929 N 1 '40 230w

"A moral is a new thing to find in a Dr. Seuss book, but it doesn't interfere much with the hilarity with which he juggles an elephant up a tree. To an adult the tale seems a little forced in comparison to his first grand yarns, less inevitable in its nonsense, but neither young nor old are going to quibble with the fantastic comedy of his pictures."

— + N Y Times p10 O 13 '40 240w

New Yorker 16:125 D 7 '40 30w

GELDEREN, J. VAN. The recent development of economic foreign policy in the Netherlands East Indies. 90p map $2 (5s) Longmans

330.991 Netherlands Indies—Economic policy

"Professor van Gelderen of the University of Utrecht presents clearly and comprehensively a survey of recent economic measures of the government of Netherlands India (N.E.I.), their political and economic background, and their consequences. The six short chapters embody lectures delivered in 1938 at the Graduate Institute of International Studies in Geneva." Pacific Affairs

"Within the limits imposed by its length the book gives a valuable survey of the economic facts, figures and trends of the depression period. In a concluding chapter the author attempts an evaluation and a forecast which lays considerable stress on a process of economic decolonization centering in part in the continued growth, under close governmental supervision, of native and local industries." Rupert Emerson

Am Hist R 45:961 Jl '40 300w

Foreign Affairs 18:383 Ja '40 30w

"Although written in ample detail, the discussion is not crowded with irrelevant facts but adheres strictly to its subject, providing a valuable handbook for a study of the economics of this period." Patricia Glover

+ Pacific Affairs 13:369 S '40 460w

GELLHORN, MARTHA ELLIS. A stricken field. 302p $2.50 Duell

(W) 40-27213

The experiences of Mary Douglas, American war correspondent, who went to Prague during the interval between the Munich pact and the Czechoslovakian anschluss. Thru the sufferings of two German refugees, Rita and Peter, the heartbreaking life of the hunted, weary people is made manifest to Mary.

Booklist 36:283 Mr 15 '40

"The novel ends on a note compounded of unspeakable horror and tragedy. . . This is the weakness of this brave, final novel. Its writing is quick with movement and with sympathy; its people alive with death, if one can put it that way. It leaves one with aching heart and questing mind. Perhaps something can yet be done." Rose Feld

+ Books p4 Mr 10 '40 900w

"Miss Gellhorn tells her story swiftly, with impact and vivid, terse insistence. It is not pleasant reading, for in the end even man's courage, even nobility of spirit seem without purpose in a city bewildered as this, and so many others. But if you can put it down, it will be because you feel the woe man wreaks on man is too great to be borne, too great to read about." Pamela Taylor

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 16 '40 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '40

Nation 150:521 Ap 20 '40 200w

GELLHORN, M. E.—Continued

"Largely because it wavers so on the borderline of fiction and non-fiction, 'A Stricken Field' is a hard book to appraise. Considered as a novel it is something of a failure—lacking as it does most of the elements that give a novel pith and point—yet its material is so poignant and so well handled that one cannot dismiss it lightly. Miss Gellhorn, as she has previously proved, is an admirable reporter. . . 'A Stricken Field' is at its best a compelling book and a moving one, but as a novel it is weak. Miss Gellhorn has done better in her articles." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 10 '40 900w

New Yorker 16:89 Mr 9 '40 60w

"It is no accident that Miss Gellhorn, a journalist by profession, is at her best when describing general events or sketching the political background. If her individual characterizations lack vitality, she knows how to describe a crowd; how to paint the despair of people, clustered hopelessly in a shabby refugee home. . . 'A Stricken Field' is told with sensitivity. Mary Douglas's pity is the author's own pity for the misery that she has watched. It is hard for the reviewer to point out the weakness of a novel which in spirit is so much on the right side, and which reveals so clearly the author's strength of feeling." Marianne Hauser

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:10 Mr 9 '40 650w

Time 35:92 Mr 18 '40 900w

GENAUER, EMILY. Modern interiors today and tomorrow. 256p il $2.50 Illustrated editions

747 House decoration. Furniture 40-27076

"This work, consisting of photographs and text, is offered as 'a critical analysis of trends in contemporary decoration as seen at the Paris Exposition of Arts and Technics and reflected at the New York World's fair.' " Springf'd Republican

"It is unfortunate that the illustrations are in black and white, for the most cursory study of this book proves how much of its effectiveness the modern interior owes to color and lighting effects. But to those who like contemporary decoration in its varied forms the volume should be a rich mine of inspiration."

+ — Books p22 Ap 7 '40 180w

Pratt p16 autumn '40

Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 230w

GENEVOIX, MAURICE. The last hunt; tr. from the French by Warre Bradley Wells; with il. by Lynd Ward. 281p $2.50 Random house

40-6582

Story of the pursuit of a great stag in a French forest by two hunters, one a killer, the other a sportsman. The stag's life cycle is followed from babyhood, to his later years as a king and leader.

Booklist 36:345 My 1 '40

"This is not a sentimental story, though there is in it a touch of something that may well be called mysticism. It is pagan. The complex life of the forest denizens is here, the panic flight from man's murderous assault, the wholeness of the forest. Granted any feeling at all for animals, any response to the realm of nature, I simply do not see how any one can forget this book, after once sensing its spell." John Patton

+ Books p7 Ap 14 '40 600w

Boston Transcript p1 Je 1 '40 130w

"There is a cool freshness in the portrayal of life in the forest, and a detachment which enhances the inevitability of doom, whether at the hands of nature or of man. The animals neither speak nor think, yet the reasons for their actions are clear. Well done and readable. Illustrated by Lynd Ward. Not for younger readers because of the cruelty, but for those who like Salten." L. M. Kinloch

+ — Library J 65:209 Mr 1 '40 120w

New Repub 102:554 Ap 22 '40 50w

"A book of rare distinction, of imaginative insight and deep knowledge of a world fast vanishing, as many worlds have vanished, through the inability of mankind to curb its own instincts. Feeling and sympathy are conveyed with an objectivity which makes all its points without stressing them, and leaves with the reader an impression of great beauty, clarity, and poetic truth. The translation carries with unusual success the quality of the text, and Lynd Ward's wash illustrations are an interesting departure from his woodcuts." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 7 '40 800w

"Beautifully written account. . . The stag recalls your old friend Bambi, but M. Genevoix, in spite of a keen eye and a delicate pen, lacks something Herr Salten has in abundance. As it is, 'The Last Hunt' will probably appeal only to those predisposed toward hunting."

+ — New Yorker 16:91 Ap 6 '40 70w

"It is a tight book so intimately authentic that even the most fastidious hunter will find no excuse for carping. And it is a strange book for many, many reasons." Carroll Munro

Sat R of Lit 22:15 Ap 27 '40 400w

" 'The Last Hunt' succeeds; partly because of a certain amount of literary artistry rare and welcome in animal fiction; partly because of a skilful and nostalgic evocation of the wild, vast beechwoods of France and the animals that roam them."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p553 N 2 '40 330w

GERARD, FRANCIS. Golden guilt. 288p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Rich]

Detective story.

"Plush but readable." Will Cuppy

Books p26 Mr 3 '40 140w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '40 60w

"It is all very complicated, not to say confused; and of course it is wildly implausible. But the story has originality and swift movement, and readers who have liked John Meredith in the past will probably like him even better now." Kay Irvin

+ — N Y Times p16 Mr 3 '40 170w

"Fantastic beginning matched by subsequent melodramatic incidents. Not too credible but sufficiently exciting. Thriller."

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:16 Mr 9 '40 30w

GERARD, FRANCIS. The law of the river. 286p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Rich]

40-10295

Ten stories in which the author carries on, by permission, the lives of the characters in Edgar Wallace's Sanders of the River stories. The scene is the African coast near Lagos; the date, 1914 to 1918.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 Je 2 '40 180w

"Some of [the stories] are riotously funny, especially 'Bones, the Typist,' 'M'kuri the Buried' and 'The Apiarist.' Some of the others are almost sober; but whenever Bones appears he is shadowed by a burst of laughter. The only drawback is the climate of West Africa and even that is not too uncomfortable when you meet it in print." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '40 80w

N Y Times p12 Je 16 '40 150w

"Most of the ten stories in this book are humorous, some very good, some schoolboyish."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p541 S 16 '39 50w

GERARD, RALPH WALDO. Unresting cells. 439p il $3.75; college ed $3 Harper

576.3 Life (biology). Cells 40-31505

"Under popular chapter captions, the author of this biochemical volume writes in detail of the growth, composition, and operation of organisms, from the simple and obscure origin of the cells to the complex entity of the human body. He theorizes on the probable place where life started and speculates on how the first enzyme came into being. Microscopic examination of the amoeba, its digestive process and division of cells, leads to a chemical study of protoplasm, in order that we may understand some of the basic problems of life. A brief examination of the fundamental ideas of pure chemistry are introduced here before the complex and important story of protoplasmic structure is told. Here we read of colloid solutions, electrical affinities, surfaces, and membranes." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

Booklist 37:85 N 1 '40

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley
Books p21 O 13 '40 320w

"Written by a competent American physiologist with a gift for popularizing difficult knowledge, this profusely illustrated volume is a good introduction to the processes of evolution from ameba to man, and is particularly valuable for its detailed accounts of the chemistry of cell development."
+ New Repub 103:638 N 4 '40 60w

"Excellent popularization of modern biology. Fully illustrated."
+ New Yorker 16:71 S 7 '40 40w

Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 S '40 380w

GERICKE, WILLIAM FREDERICK. The complete guide to soilless gardening. 285p il $2.75 Prentice-Hall

631.58 Plants—Soilless culture (W) 40-27322

Complete exposition of the technique of soilless gardening, with step-by-step instructions from seed-bed making to harvesting the crop. Chapters on apparatus, the nutrient solutions, and physical conditions, are followed by instructions on the growing of vine crops, potatoes and other root vegetables, leaf and seed vegetables, berries, and various flowers and shrubs. Instructions for using the method in the home are given. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 36:320 Ap 15 '40

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley
Books p14 My 26 '40 300w

"Recommended for amateurs interested in soilless gardening." W. H. Clark
+ Boston Transcript p13 Ap 11 '40 210w

"Sounds wonderful, but no careful reader of Dr. Gericke's excellent manual will make the mistake of thinking hydroponics is either easy or inexpensive."
New Repub 102:513 Ap 15 '40 80w

"This book, with its words of caution and its specific information concerning the techniques of hydroponics, comes at an opportune moment. It will encourage and inform the conscientious gardener and at the same time discourage the dilettante."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:2 Mr '40 300w

"It is odd that the impression left of an extremely able, authoritative and balanced work should be one of scepticism. Yet this is the impression left on me by Dr. Gericke's book: the impression that hydroponics, whatever its potentialities, has not yet reached the stage where its adaptation to the life of the community can be either very wide or very practical. . . This view does not at all mean that Dr. Gericke's very thorough, sensible and in places highly technical work should be missed. On the contrary, it deserves minute attention." H. E. Bates
+ — Spec 165:225 Ag 30 '40 800w

GERMAN white paper; full text of the Polish documents issued by the Berlin foreign office; with a foreword by C. Hartley Grattan. 72p pa $1 Howell, Soskin

940.532 European war, 1939—Poland. European war, 1939—Documents, etc, sources 40-31787

This pamphlet contains the text of certain diplomatic documents alleged to have been seized in Poland after the conquest of that country by Germany. The documents include reports and summaries of conversations between Allied, Polish, and American ambassadors and others. The foreword by C. H. Grattan discusses the nature and purposes of "color books" in general and this one in particular.

"The German government has given us, more than once, reason to disbelieve anything it has ever said. . . The purpose of the German White Paper is to compromise the legal governments of the democracies and especially to compromise the government of the United States through its President and his envoys to England and France." P. S. F.
— Books p2 Je 23 '40 600w

"The purpose of the Germans in publishing these documents—whether true or false—is undoubtedly to wean American public opinion away from the foreign policy of the Roosevelt Administration. The omission of an introduction and the inclusion of documents which have nothing to do with the major charges lead one to the conclusion that the Germans are trying to camouflage a direct affront to the United States Government. If so, the camouflage is lamentably thin." C. E. Schorske
Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 480w

"Not only is there nothing startling in these sixteen 'secret' papers, but nothing that hadn't been known, and quite well, before their publication. The authenticity of this White Paper has been denied, and it is indeed possible that all this is a Nazi forgery. But the liars, in that case, were not very imaginative."
New Repub 103:198 Ag 5 '40 50w

School & Society 52:48 Jl 20 '40 20w

Springf'd Republican p10 Je 28 '40 490w

GESELL, ARNOLD LUCIUS, and others. Biographies of child development; the mental growth careers of eighty-four infants and children; a ten-year study from the Clinic of child development at Yale university; pt. 1, by Arnold Gesell; pt. 2, by Catherine S. Amatruda, Burton M. Castner [and] Helen Thompson. (Paul B. Hoeber bk) 328p il $3.75 Harper

136.7 Child study. Psychology, Physiological 39-1968

"The present work by Gesell and three associates is the result of cumulative observations carried out over a period of ten years, on eighty-four infants and children. A wide diversity of cases, mostly typical and touching many aspects of child psychology, is to be found in this study. The primary aim of the authors is to assess the prognostic value of the normative criteria used at the Yale Clinic of Child Development." Nature

"The book is of interest to those who have followed the earlier work at Yale and should be considered merely as a supplement to the earlier volumes, not as an independent work or general treatise on child development." M. S. Ryan
Am J Psychol 53:476 Jl '40 400w

"The book is carefully written and may be recommended to psychologists in Great Britain."
+ Nature 145:140 Ja 27 '40 110w

"These are not just a progression of case histories, monotonous for the lay reader, to be understood only by the professional clinician. Each represents an important contribution of data for anyone interested in development and growth and demonstrates a consistency of behavior which rests upon 'a biological characteristicness which lies at the core of human individuality.' "
+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:2 Ja '39 450w

GESELL, ARNOLD LUCIUS, and others. The first five years of life; a guide to the study of the preschool child; from the Yale clinic of child development [in three parts]. 393p $3.50 Harper

136.7 Child study. Psychology, Physiological. Education of children 40-8731

"A study of mental growth and behavior development based on The Mental Growth of the Preschool Child [Book Review Digest, 1925]. It has been entirely rewritten and expanded in the light of experience and investigation. Gives examination records and forms; photographs show stages of development. A book for students rather than for parents." (Booklist) Index.

"Here is a book that cannot be too highly recommended." R. A. Bolt + Am J Pub Health 30:1125 S '40 280w

Booklist 36:375 Je 1 '40

J Home Econ 33:43 Ja '41 170w

"Dr. Gesell long has been America's outstanding authority on the topography of infancy and childhood. . . For him, guiding the tourist through or around some of the densest thickets to vantage points where long vistas are suddenly revealed, is clearly a labor of love. . . As Abe Lincoln is supposed to have said: This is an excellent book for anyone who likes this kind of book. Moreover, it is easily the best of this kind of book." O. C. Irwin
+ — Survey G 29:356 Je '40 500w

Wis Lib Bul 36:109 Je '40

GESHKOFF, THEODORE IVANOFF. Balkan union; a road to peace in southeastern Europe. 345p map $3 Columbia univ. press

949.6 Balkan states 40-30475

An outline of the development of the federated Balkan idea since the days of antiquity. The book contains also a summary of the Balkan conferences during the 1930s, which gatherings are said to "have contributed a great deal to the establishment of comparative peace in the Balkans." The author is a native Bulgarian, formerly in the Bulgarian diplomatic service, and an associate of the late Premier Stambuliski. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Am Pol Sci R 34:822 Ag '40 500w

Reviewed by H. N. Howard
Ann Am Acad 213:192 Ja '41 500w

"Dr. Geshkoff tells the story well. But it is a tale that has been told more than once (by Professors Kerner and Howard, for example); and the present work suffers from nearly all the defects of its predecessors. The work is too much a summary of official documents; reality rarely gets a look-in. No attempt is made to analyze the basic problems; there is no examination of the validity of the various claims and counter-claims; we are not shown whether federation is practical; there is hardly a hint of the role of public opinion and, what is more important, of the great powers. How do the Bulgarian people as contrasted with their rulers, feel about Dobruja and other territories? The book does not give an answer. And the more the pity as Dr. Geshkoff, himself a distinguished Balkan leader and publicist, could no doubt have written an extremely enlightening book on the basis of his own experience and intimate knowledge." Albert Viton
+ — Christian Century 57:854 Jl 3 '40 900w

"The real value of the work does not lie in Geshkoff's analysis of the internal and external forces working for and against the Balkan Union but in his presentation of numerous interesting historical facts pertaining to Balkan history, a reprint of thirteen original documents and a very good bibliography of eleven pages. Furthermore, the work will be used not so much as the best study of its topic . . . but as a useful collection of highly diversified information on a region which is one of the least known to the American public." J. S. Roucek
+ Commonweal 32:173 Je 14 '40 400w

Discussion by the author
Commonweal 32:290 Jl 26 '40 350w

Reviewed by O. I. Janowsky
Survey G 29:562 N '40 180w

GETMAN, FREDERICK HUTTON. The life of Ira Remsen. 172p il $3.50; cl $2.50 Journal of chemical educ, 20th & Northampton sts, Easton, Pa.

B or 92 Remsen, Ira 40-34640

"This work was prepared by one of Remsen's students, who not only knew and loved him but who has visited the places where Remsen lived and worked. He has had placed at his disposal the rich material collected by Newell, Reid, and the Remsen family. The result is not exhaustive like the Osler biography; it is condensed and easily read." Chem & Chem Eng N

"This story of Remsen's life should become a classic, as Cushing's life of Osler has already become." E. C. Bingham
+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:1042 N 25 '40 310w

Chem & Met Eng 47:725 O '40 230w

GIBBONS, STELLA (MRS ALLAN BOURNE WEBB). My American. 444p $2.50 Scribner [8s 6d Longmans]

40-30529

One day in London in the late 1920s two children had a few words together, and the boy, son of well-to-do Americans, gave the little girl a nickel, mistaking it for a shilling. Years later, when the boy has failed to make a success of his life and the girl has won literary fame, the two come together again. This novel, in alternating chapters, traces the course of their lives between these two points in time.

Booklist 37:35 O 1 '40

"'My American' is definitely an unusual book. It is a genuinely romantic story and a curiously appealing one, since there is little or no mawkishness about it, and yet it concerns itself chiefly with the little graces and affections. . . There is a deal of skill here in making an unashamedly simple love story come to have significance and in sustaining the reader's interest in its unfolding. The unearthly and ominous note which is sounded so definitely throughout gives the book its particular and arresting flavor." Iris Barry
+ Books p8 S 1 '40 600w

"It is not a very good book. Nevertheless, Stella Gibbons can write and interest is sustained throughout My American by her ability to contrive incident and to give life to her characters. She is most successful with the minor characters since the nature of her novel permits her to draw them with the gently acid realism of which she is such a master; but the Boy and the Girl are handled with kid gloves and suffer by it." Eleanor Godfrey
— + Canadian Forum 20:60 My '40 320w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 D 5 '39 330w

New Repub 103:310 S 2 '40 60w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 18:898 D 16 '39 220w

"The whole book has the charm of rattling good story-telling. . . Mention should be made too of a rich abundance of minor characters—from Porty, one of the boys who was always luring Amy's father out for a quick one, to Myron, the Vermont hired man in the American boy's home. The reader should have as much enjoyment in reading 'My American' as Stella Gibbons obviously had in writing it." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p7 S 1 '40 700w

Reviewed by John Marks
Spec 163:842 D 8 '39 200w

"The fairy-tale convention hardly matches the flat colloquialism of style that Miss Gibbons employs throughout, but is doubtless as legitimate as any other. It is worked out, however, in rather trivial and unilluminated incident. Miss Gibbons is too unselective here to make the best of her gifts."

Times [London] Lit Sup p719 D 9 '39 370w

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. Broken pledges. 320p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Hutchinson] 40-7109

Continues the experiences of John Barton, American newspaper man, begun in This Nettle, Danger (Book Review Digest, 1939). It covers the period from July, 1938 to September, 1939, during which time John wins and marries Lady Anne Ede. The book is mainly a series of conversations about the state of Europe as seen thru the eyes of the various characters.

"Mr. Gibbs is not a subtle novelist and not at his happiest in this little propaganda story. American love for the mother country and sympathy for the Allied cause will not be enhanced by this sort of thing. But there is some good talk here. I wish Philip Gibbs would give us a book full of it and leave out his painfully contrived fiction." F. T. Marsh
— + Books p12 Ap 28 '40 700w

"Sir Philip Gibbs's new book is another excellent topical novel. This Englishman throws illuminating light upon current affairs, whether he does it as a super-journalist or a writer of fiction. He is serenely at home in the international scene. This time there is very little story, but what there is completely charms the reader." Olga Owens
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 27 '40 800w

"All in all, while Sir Philip fails to make any remarkable contribution to the discussion of those problems now rocking the world, he does present a transcription of policies, events and reactions into the language of the very-everyday man."
Cath World 151:507 Jl '40 230w

Reviewed by G. W. Hill
Library J 65:300 Ap 1 '40 160w

"Mr. Gibbs always writes with the authority of a knowledge of international affairs, but it is a pity that his indefatigable industry is not enlivened by more enterprise in literary expression. Journalistic clichés flow from his fountain-pen with an enervating and soporific fluency which, in spite of the pressing immediacy of his subject-matter, is only too liable to lull his reader into a state of unresponsive somnolence." Wilfrid Gibson
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 N 17 '39 120w

"Belongs pretty far down on the list of Gibbs fiction."
— New Repub 102:586 Ap 29 '40 40w

"'Broken Pledges.' Here, one thought, will be a new Gibbs, a Gibbs devoured by righteous fury, a Gibbs let down and rampant. Read the book hastily and you might carry away the impression that the author of 'Blood Relations' and 'Great Argument' was taking the definite stand one would have expected from the title and its factual significance. But search it scrupulously, as this reviewer did, from end to end and you are staggered to find that Philip Gibbs is still Philip Gibbs, impracticable exponent of an idealism and impartiality that, in a world of hard and bitter realism, get him nowhere." J. S. Southron
— + N Y Times p22 Ap 28 '40 600w
Sat R of Lit 22:27 My 25 '40 290w

"There is very little story, but the book is engagingly readable and, as always, Sir Philip paints some excellent conversation pieces in which every point of view (including that of the Germans) is put fairly and convincingly. But we should have liked to hear more of his views about the Russian problem and its mysteries."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p653 N 11 '39 240w

GIBSON, JOHN, pseud. Patrician street. 355p $2.50 Vanguard 40-8658

A story of ancient Rome during the Christian persecutions. The language of the story is that of modern realism; the picture painted is that of a brutal, decadent civilization.

"'Patrician Street' is lusty and colorful, and John Gibson—like his Romans—pulls no punches." Lisle Bell
Books p18 Ap 28 '40 180w
Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '40 100w

GIBSON, KATHARINE. Jock's castle [il. by] Vera Bock. 140p $2 Longmans
(W) 40-13169

England in the days of Henry VIII is the scene of this children's story. Jock Howison, a miller, and his dog Sniffer, settle down near an old castle. Gradually a collection of poor and needy folk settle down with him. Then Jock rescues Prince Henry from some ruffians and is knighted for his efforts, and Jock and his retainers move into the castle.

Booklist 37:18 S '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 N 17 '40 350w

"Vera Bock's illustrations and decorations are perfect accompaniments for this sprightly tale." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p6 N 25 '40 180w
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '40

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:343 S '40 80w

"A whimsical story, chock full of delightful humor and characterization. Unlimited in age appeal, it will be enjoyed by those who like something fresh and different. Vera Bock's drawings are delightful." E. G. Mullan
+ Library J 65:714 S 1 '40 160w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:849 O 15 '40 50w

"If there is any one who can make a fifteenth-century castle seem a cozy, livable kind of place it is Katharine Gibson, and that is just what the author of 'The Oak Tree House' has done in another joyous story of Old England." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p12 S 22 '40 320w

"Amusing." Z. C. Durrell
+ Sat R of Lit 23:9 N 16 '40 30w

"This story of old England will please all younger children; it is a sort of wonder-story that lingers in the memory when as well told as this is and as beautifully illustrated."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 200w

GIBSON, OLIVE G. The isle of a hundred harbors. 287p il $2.50 Humphries
917.291 Cuba 40-31062

Describes the geography, the people, the flora and fauna, of Cuba, with a short sketch of Cuban history. The author is a teacher in a Cuban mission school and has lived on the island for many years. Bibliography.

"The book is an excellent introduction for prospective visitors and a help to sympathetic understanding."
+ Christian Century 57:952 Jl 31 '40 80w
Commonweal 32:355 Ag 16 '40 30w

GIBSON, WILLIAM MARION. Aliens and the law. 200p $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press 323.67 Aliens 40-27564

"Some legal aspects of the national treatment of aliens in the United States." (Subtitle) Partial contents: National treatment provisions in United States treaties; Property rights of aliens; Treatment of aliens in the matter of taxation; Aliens' right to work; Aliens in American courts; Table of cases; Bibliography; Index.

GIBSON, W. M.—Continued

Reviewed by Luella Gettys
Am Pol Sci R 34:1003 O '40 460w

"This is a well-organized and succinct handbook for those in need of an outline of the legal position of aliens under both international and American municipal law. Unfortunately the succinctness of the volume constitutes its greatest defect, for it but gives the bare bones of a structure which is of increasing importance in a world of moving populations and migrating peoples. . . The volume is pervaded by a lack of realism, particularly in regard to the relationship of American municipal to international law." J. P. Clark
+ — Ann Am Acad 213:209 Ja '41 450w

Booklist 36:406 Jl 1 '40

Reviewed by M. R. Konvitz
Columbia Law R 40:1305 N '40 850w

New Repub 102:833 Je 17 '40 50w

Reviewed by H. A. Fierst
Yale Law J 50:540 Ja '41 550w

GILBERT, DOUGLAS. American vaudeville; its life and times. (Whittlesey house publication) 428p il $3.50 McGraw

792.2 Vaudeville. Actors and actresses (W) 40-33666

History of American vaudeville and the people who made it, from the opening of Tony Pastor's Fourteenth Street theater in 1881 to the death of Albee in 1930. An appendix contains an alphabetical listing of standard vaudeville acts from 1880 to 1930. Index.

"Masterly representation of an intimate and pleasing phase of earlier American life."
+ Atlantic D '40 180w

Booklist 37:170 Ja 1 '41

"Fascinating and valuable tale. . . For students of American theatrical history, Mr. Gilbert's vast research and findings make an incredible footnote of great value." Richardson Wright
+ Books p4 N 3 '40 1000w

Reviewed by Stark Young
New Repub 104:116 Ja 27 '41 130w

Reviewed by Brooks Atkinson
N Y Times p9 D 1 '40 600w

"An affectionate, name-crammed chronicle [of an art] . . . which had a certain animation and humanity that our movies and radio shows seem to lack. Great reading for anyone who can remember."
+ New Yorker 16:88 O 26 '40 50w

"Mr. Gilbert's book is valuable documentation and entertainment for all those interested in a phase of American life and amusement now past but not to be forgotten. An important phase, for it was on the vaudeville stage that many of our celebrated actors, dancers, and singers served their apprenticeship to more important careers." Melville Cane
+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 D 14 '40 500w

Reviewed by George Beiswanger
Theatre Arts 24:831 N '40 1250w

GILBERT, GEORGE BLODGETT. Forty years a country preacher. 319p il $2.75 Harper

B or 92 Clergy—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-27516

The author is an Episcopal clergyman in Middletown, Connecticut. The publishers chose him as a "typical country preacher" from a thousand who were nominated for the authorship. His autobiography shows him as a man of humanity and spirit, who has spent forty years as a parish leader. The book is filled with anecdotes about people he has known and helped or met in the course of his useful life.

Booklist 36:397 Je 15 '40

Bookmark 2:10 Ja '41

"There is no smugness in this book, though there is a certain self-satisfaction. It affords an excellent antidote for too much reading of today's front pages and too much listening to commentators on what Christian Europe is up to this summer." S. H. Holbrook
+ Books p1 My 26 '40 1400w

"This is a refreshing book that deserves a sunny spot in anyone's library. Probably the Rev. George Blodgett Gilbert is the kind of man whose recurring birthday anniversaries bring him mild surprise, but only widen his circle of happiness. We can enjoy envying a man like that." Allen Jacobs
+ Boston Transcript p1 My 25 '40 750w

"The publishers frankly admit that they had this book written in the hope that it might be a worthy clerical companion to Arthur Hertzler's popular Horse and Buggy Doctor. It is. The theme is as attractive, the preacher whom they selected out of a thousand who were nominated for the honor of authorship had a real story to tell, and he puts into the telling of it a contagious enthusiasm which is likely to leave the reader feeling that he has wasted his life and missed a wonderful time by not being a country preacher." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 57:704 My 29 '40 300w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 154:15 Je 1 '40 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

"A book which ministers and theological students ought to read for suggestion, stimulation, and encouragement to carry on their work." S. E. Greene
+ J Religion 21:102 Ja '41 340w

Reviewed by C. L. Glenn
New Eng Q 13:562 S '40 650w

Reviewed by D. D. Lynn
New Repub 103:148 Jl 29 '40 600w

"It is a high-spirited and absorbingly interesting book: hearty in its zest for living, astringent often in its dry comment, essentially a book of incident which may be funny or tragic or exciting, always full of human brotherhood and of git-up-and-git. . . His memories go back to the horse-and-buggy and the bicycle. But this is no picturesque tale of rural quaintness in a vanished era. It is a story of today and a stimulus for tomorrow, as it points to the necessary persistence of the church's service to human beings, in the multiplicity and the changes of their need." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p4 My 26 '40 1750w

"A warmhearted, sensible book, good for your megrims."
+ New Yorker 16:94 My 25 '40 60w

Reviewed by Edward Daniels
+ Sat R of Lit 22:17 Je 8 '40 400w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '40 230w

Wis Lib Bul 36:126 Jl '40

GILBERT, MRS KATHERINE (EVERETT), and KUHN, HELMUT. A history of esthetics. 582p $4.25 Macmillan

701 Esthetics—History 40-2060

"Solid reading in a scholarly, documented history of the theories of esthetics since the days of the Greeks. Planned for use as a college textbook, with chapter references for further reading." (Booklist) Reading lists at ends of chapters. Index.

Booklist 36:234 F 15 '40

"There is naturally, in the less than six hundred pages, considerable compression, so that occasionally, as in the chapters on German romanticism and romantic ideas, the authors are reduced to names and formulas. But the remarkable nature of their achievement is the vital sense they give to theories by placing them in terms of their environment, their tradition, and the arts over which the formulas hovered, and which lent them their richness of meaning. . . One must add that the book is marked by a warmth which does not distort the cool analysis, and by graciousness without prettification. The book will be invaluable to all students in esthetics, and makes available a learning and an insight that a source-book would not have quite conveyed. But a little more extensive quotation would have made this brilliant account even more useful than it is. There is a helpful students' bibliography." Irwin Edman

+ J Philos 37:217 Ap 11 '40 950w

"This 'History of Esthetics' is a very well written one. . . It is an account rendered by two authors who know their way around in the history of the arts, and obviously love the subject matter out of which esthetic speculation grows. The authors are highly equipped philosophical analysts, and cultivated citizens of that larger world of interest and experience out of which the arts grow. Their history, therefore, is not a dry recounting of abstract formulas. They see these formulas in terms of the living uses in art and life which they successively formulated." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Times p5 S 8 '40 1700w

Sat R of Lit 22:18 My 4 '40 120w

GILES, DOROTHY. Singing valleys; the story of corn. 361p $3 Random house

641.3315 Corn (maize) 40-31809

An interpretation of American history in terms of corn—the maize of the American Indians. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:86 N 1 '40

"Altogether a forthright and easy-to-read book." S. H. Holbrook

+ Books p6 N 3 '40 800w

"Whenever Miss Giles deals with the origins, legends, folkways and cooking practices connected with corn she is in excellent vein. . . One's reservations about Miss Giles's book have mainly to do with passages in which the poetic quality seems forced, and with her economic disquisitions. The sex life of corn is no doubt beautiful, but her chapter makes a bit too much of it. Her comments on the blunders of the AAA are not strengthened by a table showing imports of corn, hogs, cattle and tallow which were a small drop in the bucket compared with American production. . . The book is uneven. Some will find it too sentimental for their tastes. However, its heart is in the right place." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p4 S 29 '40 1550w

"When, in a middle chapter, Dorothy Giles blames lumbermen ripping off timber at the head of the great valley for all the washouts in the cornfields of the midland, she is, I am bound to say, talking partial nonsense. But this may be passed over as a technical detail, and one possibly open to argument, in a book of such rooted virility, eloquence, and charm. It is a book, moreover, which relates, and brings into a living relationship, fundamental facts and legends about our land and people that will interest everyone." Russell Lord

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:10 O 26 '40 900w

GILFOND, MRS DUFF. I go horizontal. 281p $2.50 Vanguard

B or 92 Encephalitis, Epidemic (W) 40-27386

About ten years ago the author, a young newspaper woman, so healthy that all doctors seemed to wear halos, woke up with a bad headache one morning. At first she thought it was the plumbing, but in time she was forced to resort to doctors. After several wrong guesses the sixth man diagnosed her case as lethargic encephalitis, sleeping sickness. This book is a condensed record of some of her experiences during the long years while she was trying to get well.

Booklist 36:343 My 1 '40

"Somehow Duff Gilfond has managed to write a spirited and even humorous book about a dreadful illness. . . Most of us will not have encephalitis, but we shall be extraordinarily lucky if some time we do not take our place in the crowded waiting room. How will we act? How survive the body's indignities? Here is a woman who has come through, not yet to complete recovery but to such an improvement as the writing of this book attests. She did it with courage and fortitude, with tears, rebellions and jokes, and she has come through." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p20 Ap 7 '40 410w

"If you are looking for a book about the spiritual benefits of long illnesses, this isn't it. It wasn't that kind of disease. But if you doubt the capacity of human beings to endure—for a maddeningly long and indefinite period—not only pain but the frustration of nearly every normal wish, this is a book that proves that capacity. And proves it magnificently, for every page was written under 'The Cloud'—and yet nearly every page is funny." Rebecca Pitts

+ New Repub 103:222 Ag 12 '40 220w

"As the record of a sufferer from an obscure disease, Mrs. Gilfond's story is both interesting and unusual. It is also surprisingly objective and high-spirited. She can get a good deal of amusement—now, anyway—out of all her bewilderments, mistakes of doctors and nurses, blind alleys of pain. She can draw a word-picture of this doctor and that, sketch in some of her fellow-patients, confess briskly to her own peculiarities of behavior in the throes of physical suffering and mental stress. And she preserves a real jauntiness of style which makes her book the more readable."

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 7 '40 430w

"An impish spirit—courageous without the parade of courage—infuses this curious story."

+ New Yorker 16:99 Ap 13 '40 50w

"Duff Gilfond couldn't be downed. And that is why her book is in no sense a depressing one. On the contrary. Even when recalling her darkest moments there is no trace of morbidness or self-pity in her brief allusion to them, and she always remains the gallant fighter. We follow her from one specialist to another, sharing her suspense, but always delighting in her courage, wit, and journalistic skill at lively narrative and portraiture that is colorful and incisive." M. S. U.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 Ap 20 '40 460w

Time 35:100 Ap 22 '40 70w

GILKEY, JAMES GORDON. A faith to affirm. 170p $1.75 Macmillan

230 Christianity. Liberalism (religion) (W) 40-27729

Statement of the liberal Protestant beliefs, showing "how this new gospel differs from the gospels proclaimed in the past. [It also suggests] ways by which these modern religious beliefs can be made convincing and helpful to human beings today." (Prologue)

Booklist 37:83 N 1 '40

"The last chapter on the education of children in the art of religion is splendid. It handles this problem with insight and fine feeling. The book as a whole is most worth while." Maynard Cassady

+ Christian Century 57:1515 D 4 '40 650w

'Those familiar with Dr. Gilkey's other books will understand and like this, his latest. His viewpoint is that of a liberal who has worked his way through to a sound and sure religious life without losing the best values of mysticism." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 154:16 O 1 '40 100w

Reviewed W. R. McNutt

Crozer Q 18:80 Ja '41 210w

Reviewed by H. W. Hansen

J Religion 21:103 Ja '41 80w

GILL, RICHARD COCHRAN. White water and black magic. 369p il map $3 Holt

918.6 Ecuador—Description and travel. Curari. Indians of South America (W) 40-9575

Ten years ago the author and his wife operated a dude ranch in Ecuador. An accident which left Mr Gill paralyzed turned his thoughts to the medicinal uses of the Indian poison curare, and when after four years he was well enough to travel he went once more to the jungle to pursue the search. This is the account of the Gills' "functional exploring" for medicines, and a description of their life in their jungle "ranch." Index.

"A frankly popular book (and excellent reading on this score), the present work will be of interest to the ethnobotanist, the ethnologist, and the anthropologist concerned with advances in modern psychiatry." Weston La Barre
+ Am Anthropol 43:103 Ja '41 180w

Reviewed by Edith Guevara
Books p2 Jl 7 '40 900w

"'White Water and Black Magic' is something more than the ordinary escapist travel book. Richard Gill knows and loves his jungle country, and it has a meaning through him, for the world. Abundant photographs add much to the evocative charm of his story." Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p11 Jl 9 '40 750w

"He has a rich sense of humor, and an understanding of that of the Indians, yes, and of animals as well. . . Mr. Gill's depiction of the sweetness of life on the hacienda, the close comradeship with his Nina, to whom the book is dedicated, his nice sense of balance in appreciation of men and life; his respect for the dignity and qualities of primitive man as well as for the jungle where beauty vies with death, are all pages, where between the lines, one may read the charm, sincerity, courage and intellectual honesty of the writer." C. W. Furlong
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 10 '40 750w

"This is an unusually good book on many counts." E. F. Allen
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 28 '40 490w

"Superior travel book."
+ New Yorker 16:67 Jl 13 '40 40w

"One of the best 'travel books' in some time, though there is very little travel in it." F. P.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 Jl 20 '40 330w

"A veritable artesian well of jungle lore and Jivaro Indian magic, closely guarded by superstition and a distrust of white men handed down through centuries from the Incas, Mr Gill's new book is unusually informative and has the added grace of being entertainingly written."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 10 '40 750w
Time 36:82 Jl 22 '40 430w
Wis Lib Bul 36:167 D '40

GILL, RICHARD COCHRAN, and HOKE, MRS HELEN L. Paco goes to the fair; a story of far-away Ecuador; pictures by Ruth Gannett. [39p] $2 Holt

Children in Ecuador 40-14540

Two little Indians living in the mountains of Ecuador, Paco and Pepita, left at home to dye some wool when their father and mother went to the fair, used some ancient Inca dye instead of the cheap imported red. The children found themselves in disgrace until some white strangers chanced upon the despised wool, and turned disgrace into good fortune for the family.

Booklist 37:139 D 1 '40

"The story is told with humor and fellow-feeling. The case for beauty against fashion, for honest craft against mass production, is pleasantly put." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 N 17 '40 240w

"Books about South America are timely and we warmly recommend this one; first because it is a good story and also because of the interesting details about life in far-away Ecuador." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 27 '41 280w

"Slight though the story is, the feeling it conveys for true craftsmanship makes a fitting accompaniment to the pictures." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 17:35 Ja '41 100w

"Here is a picture book of Ecuador which is outstanding. The story, which children up to nine or ten will enjoy, is pleasing. . . The pictures, done by Ruth Gannett, are unusually fine. The dignity of the people and the detail of the background are clearly portrayed. The colors are well chosen, and the map on the end papers adds to the effectiveness of the book." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 65:926 N 1 '40 150w

"With the national interest in South America needing expression in children's literature, this book is worth having for its interpretation of Ecuador. The pictures are sculptural studies of Indian life, sure in knowledge and permanent in value. The writing is less sure in its style, and the story falls short of its potential significance. We wish that Paco's contribution to the ancient craft of dyeing created an artistic rather than a commercial climax, and that the museum representatives commanded respect. However, the brief story is told straightforwardly, and children up to 10 will gain knowledge of a little-known region." I. S.
+ — N Y Times p44 N 10 '40 240w

"This straightforward tale of two Ecuador-Indian children, of their wool-dyeing, and their happy encounter with white visitors from the north, is one of the best of the many South-American-background books of the season. Ruth Gannett's handsome pictures in color are refreshingly unprettified."
+ New Yorker 16:127 D 7 '40 40w

GILL, TOM. Gentleman of the jungle. 280p $2 Putnam

40-6701

Romantic tale of life and love on a banana plantation somewhere in Central America.

"Mr. Gill throws in quantities of color, including details of the banana business. He has been under fire in several Central American revolutions and knows his terrain." Will Cuppy
Books p14 Ap 7 '40 120w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '40

"The story is energetic with swift action and tense with suspense. There are gang fights, robbery, a fierce duel in the jungle, stratagems, intrigues, crooked gambling and crooked politics. It's a realistic story whose characters have the breath of life in them, and it's expertly done. Tom Gill always writes well, but here he has fairly surpassed all his previous writing." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 31 '40 260w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 2 '40 100w

GILLMOR, FRANCES. Fruit out of rock. 269p $2.50 Duell

40-14496

Tragic story of the Arizona fruit growing country, of Amanda, who loved the orchards, and of Stephen whom Amanda loved. Stephen herded goats in a land where goats should not have been, and because of them the flood came to the valley.

Booklist 37:68 O 15 '40

"In slow-moving prose, quiet save for some brief poetic and too 'purple' flights, Miss Gillmor catches something of the feeling of her landscape, the motion, too, of her receptive though not entirely passive characters. She writes with charm and without the sentimentality that many Western novelists insist upon getting down in print. Her plot is simple, her characters far from complex, her scene is drawn in with a few lines, her book reads easily." E. L. Walton

+ Books p8 Ag 18 '40 440w

"This is a simple enough story, but it is told in such fitting exquisite prose that the very monotony of its quietness has the rhythm of poetry and becomes the sound of running water in a canyon. Shut in by those honey-colored walls of rock, one is suddenly conscious that those gently purling waters are fast rising and one is borne along on a story which mounts to terrific heights." Ruth Blodgett
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 7 '40 650w

"Miss Gillmor's style, simple, distinguished, at times somewhat stylized, evokes the country in its varied moods of beauty and austerity—the desert heat, sun and stillness, the light-filled valleys; the small sounds of the desert; winds crying over high rock, the circling hawk, the cool night filled with the flow of canyon water. The characters, though their problems and their language are those of present-day Americans, have the elemental directness and intensity of figures in a ballad." Anita Moffett
+ N Y Times p7 Ag 18 '40 700w
New Yorker 16:66 Ag 24 '40 60w
Sat R of Lit 22:20 S 14 '40 320w
Time 36:84 Ag 19 '40 90w

GILMAN, ELIZABETH L., ed. Picnic adventures, by Faith Baldwin, Henry Beston [and others]; il. by John O'Hara Cosgrave II. 192p $2 Farrar 40-7600

Twelve picnic stories for boys and girls. The picnics cover a wide territory, from an Iowa farmer's picnic of thirty years ago, to the account of a Mongolian feast. Contents: We all drank pop: an Iowa picnic, by Phil Stong; All on a summer's day; a Nantucket picnic, by Elizabeth Enright; The Maples give a party: a Vermont picnic, by Frances Frost; Mr Thoreau's Christmas turtle: a Walden picnic, by Anne Colver; Boiling the Billy: an Australian picnic, by Faith Baldwin; The eighth-grade picnic: a Staten Island story, by W. H. Temple; At the edge of the desert: a Mongolian feast, by Eric Purdon; Going down to the meadow, by Sophie Kerr; Hoosier barbecue, by W. E. Wilson; The amber beads: family picnic—circa 1885, by I. H. Irwin; Picnic under a pine, by Henry Beston; Cake at midnight: an Alaskan picnic, by N. B. Mansfield.

Booklist 36:414 Jl 1 '40

"This book is that unusual sort of anthology; a collection not of reprints but of original stories, written as it were to order. The 'order' so clearly coincided with their own desires, the authors so plainly needed no more than a chance to pull a picnic out of their memories, that an air of unforced spontaneous joy pervades the book. It is a piece of editorial inspiration of which any anthologist might be proud." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 My 5 '40 140w

"All the ingredients that put spark and spice into picnics can be enjoyed in full flavor in this collection of short stories." M. A. Whitney
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 25 '40 120w

"Recommended for large libraries and young people's collections." J. F. Sauer
+ Library J 65:455 My 15 '40 130w

"If there is one word which has the quality of stirring up enthusiasm and excitement as quickly as 'circus' it is 'picnic,' and it was a happy thought of Miss Gilman's to compile this anthology of stories." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Ap 14 '40 280w

GILMORE, ALBERT FIELD. Who was this Nazarene? a challenging and definitive biography of the Master. 331p $2.75 Prentice-Hall
232.9 Jesus Christ—Biography 40-35351

"This book is written out of a deep conviction that Jesus was not God, but that as the Son of God he became the great Teacher and demonstrator of divine Power, because he was able to overcome material law through his understanding of spiritual Law, the Law which governs God's Kingdom." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by S. J. Case
Books p12 Ja 19 '41 160w

"Dr. Gilmore by his diligence has helped make better known the nature and character of the Nazarene." Tully Nettleton
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 16 '40 850w

"An excellent non-technical handbook for laymen." W. F. Thompson
+ Churchman 154:17 D 15 '40 70w
Living Age 359:491 Ja '41 180w

GILSON, ETIENNE HENRY. Mystical theology of Saint Bernard; tr. by A. H. C. Downes. 266p $3.50 (10s 6d) Sheed
B or 92 Bernard de Clairvaux, Saint. Mysticism 40-10261

"This is a copiously documented but clearly expounded study of the mystical renaissance which Saint Bernard added to the various others of the twelfth century. We see how the saint came to Citeaux, leaving all things except his Ciceronian heritage; how he fastened on the seventy-third chapter of Saint Benedict's Rule and, following the Benedictine ascesis to attain to beatifying union by the way of humility and the divesting oneself of all self-will, he supplied the doctrinal justification for the Benedictine synthesis, viz., that the Holy Spirit substitutes love for fear as reward for the long apprenticeship of humility." Commonweal

"Those who wish to pursue their interests in the writers of the days of Citeaux will find the pages well documented; those who seek more light than is given in the text may enjoy the copious and illuminating notes. All this proves that the volume in hand is a scholarly piece of work and appeals to scholars. But it is to be hoped that research students in these matters will not be the only ones to avail themselves of the work." W. J. McGarry
+ America 63:303 Je 22 '40 220w

Reviewed by Richard Flower, O.S.B.
Commonweal 32:46 My 3 '40 170w

"The reader will certainly watch with admiration the expositor's firmness of tread as he pursues his course, as well as the wealth of learning and felicity of illustration which enrich the notes on points of detail. If he hesitates here and there in the choice of interpretation he frankly admits the difficulty and explains why it arises with so much sympathy and understanding that one could almost imagine St. Bernard saying: 'Well, I suppose I did mean that if M. Gilson says so. In any case, I am not prepared to disagree.' "
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p324 Jl 6 '40 650w

GILSON, MARY BARNETT. What's past is prologue; reflections on my industrial experience. 307p $3 Harper
B or 92 Labor and laboring classes—U.S. Industrial relations (W) 40-32652

Autobiography of a woman pioneer in industrial relations work. After graduating from Wellesley College in 1899 the author went to work in the Pittsburgh library system, where she first came in contact with industrial workers. From years of personnel work in a Cleveland clothing factory she went to industrial investigation. At present she is a member of the faculty of the University of Chicago. Index.

Booklist 37:136 D 1 '40

"If 'reflections on my industrial experience' sound like drab stuff, a glance between the covers of the book will soon dispel the misconception. The Scotch Presbyterian forthrightness to which Miss Gilson confesses, her

GILSON, M. B.—Continued
vigor, fairmindedness and possibly that classical education, combine to make this an unusually interesting and vividly written autobiography." Mary Ross

+ Books p10 Ja 19 '41 600w

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 7 '40 320w

"The book is much more than entertaining. The account of her experience with the Joseph & Feiss Company and its attempt to combine scientific management with sound personnel principles is full of the most practical conclusions and advice. Her discussions of psychological tests, the promotion problem, the introduction of time study, company unions, the adjustment of grievances, and many other problems, could be read by personnel directors and top executives with both profit and enjoyment." A. E. Dodd

+ Management R 29:453 D '40 490w

"Miss Gilson's book is the story of a gallant and balanced life, and of a personality too broadly based to be shaken by fashions in thinking. It belittles the quality of her achievement to remark that hers has been a woman's career, starting from scratch in the unperceptive nineties. Her record is remarkable in its own unqualified right." Palmer Harman

+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 N 16 '40 490w

GINGRICH, ARNOLD, ed. See Esquire (periodical). Bedside Esquire

GIONO, JEAN. Joy of man's desiring; tr. by Katherine Allen Clarke. 458p $2.50 Viking 40-9861

Poetically written novel about a wandering acrobat, with a hedonistic philosophy of life, who comes to a lonely plateau in southern France. There he finds the peasant farmers struggling to gain a living, add to their savings, and nothing more. He settles down with them and gradually imbues them with his ideas of beauty. The farmers reduce their plantings, make friends with a stag and his family, plant their fallow fields with narcissi, and learn to like the new way of living. Then tragedy enters the earthly paradise and the acrobat departs.

Booklist 36:412 Jl 1 '40

"Giono has been called pagan, but what he sets before us is uncannily close to the 'life more abundant,' of which the New Testament speaks. His approach is to the emotions, secret longings, instinctive desires and none of his books are to be judged by intellect or logic, though his style is aimed equally at the intellect and the senses." Iris Barry

+ Books p4 Je 9 '40 1000w

Reviewed by May Sarton

Boston Transcript p1 Je 22 '40 1150w

"Giono's theme and even his approach are by no means isolated phenomena in contemporary French literature, but their characteristic poetic quality recalls rather a minor genius of the late eighteenth century, Bernardin de St. Pierre. The author of Paul et Virginie has the same sensitive and intimate appreciation of natural beauty and grandeur, the same feeling for a simple rustic communism, the same lyric fervor, the same sketchy and anecdotal construction, the same absorbed and humorless solemnity; and both at their worst have the same soft silliness. Giono is, however, in several respects, the more accomplished artist." L. A. MacKay

+ Canadian Forum 20:188 S '40 460w

"While at times his naturalism is uncomfortably and even crudely outspoken, the general tone established is one of poetic appreciation of the beauty which lies all about. Coming in an era of hatred and destruction, of murder and machines, his song has the quality and the unexpectedness of a pearl let fall in a pig sty."

+ Cath World 152:121 O '40 150w

GIONO (jō-nō)

"Will be treasured by all who love beauty, who find joy in the common things of life." J. F. Mulholland

+ Christian Century 57:855 Jl 3 '40 480w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears, Jr.

Churchman 154:20 S 1 '40 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '40

"There are magnificent descriptive passages, but there is an underlying hopelessness that will make the book of interest to a limited adult group." Lena Ruppert

Library J 65:452 My 15 '40 120w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien

Nation 150:783 Je 29 '40 430w

"Giono writes poetry in the form of novels—strong, often beautiful poetry which one must admire and may even love. His style, his choice of words and characters serve but one purpose: to express nature poetically. The peasants in 'Joy of Man's Desiring' are true poetically; they are not realistically seen. Human passions are neither less nor more important than the wild passions of animals or clouds." Marianne Hauser

New Repub 103:92 Jl 15 '40 600w

"The most haunting beauty of the book is caught in moments, in scenes, in single incidents and bits of dialogue, rather than in the whole development of its theme. But it is a beautiful story of renewal nevertheless, set in terms of a kind of cosmic faith, and in a lovely and fearless imagery." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p2 Je 9 '40 1550w

"In an ordinary period Giono's work would appear extravagant but rather beautiful. Today it is difficult to take his message seriously. His simple shepherds are now being blown to pieces in Picardy or on the Maginot Line. . . Giono would reply that all this does not affect the poetic truth of his own emotion. That may be so, but a mere reviewer, try as he will, cannot be as impersonal. Giono's work isn't nonsense, but at the moment it just seems nonsense." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 16:113 Je 15 '40 700w

"In 'Joy of Man's Desiring' no one is entirely alive and convincing except Jourdan, in spite of a wealth of acute observations and imaginative hints about human behavior. It is as if the author were impatient of the laborious individuality of people, at the same time developing with loving and economical care the personality of tree and flower, fox and lizard." I. W. Athey

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:6 Je 22 '40 500w

"Jean Giono has a genius for observing, and recording the splendors of the natural world, the beauty of natural tasks and pleasures. The book has been given an excellent translation."

+ Time 35:90 Je 10 '40 220w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:vi autumn '40 410w

GIPSON, LAWRENCE HENRY. British empire before the American revolution; 4v; v 4, Zones of international friction: North America, south of the Great Lakes region, 1748-1754. 312p maps $5 Knopf

942.07 Great Britain—History—18th century. Great Britain—Colonies. U.S.—History—Colonial period (36-20870)

For the first three volumes of Professor Gipson's monumental work see Book Review Digest, 1936. "The first [volume] dealt with Britain and Ireland, the second with the Southern American colonies, the third with the Northern colonies, and this and the next deal with the zones of international friction between the British, French and Spaniards in America during the critical years from 1748 to 1754. In this volume we have to do with the Spanish in Florida, and the French in New Orleans and up the Mississippi to the Illinois country. In the Vth we are promised accounts of the French versus the British in Canada, the Iroquois Confederation, and the abortive Albany Convention of 1754." (N Y Times)

Reviewed by Max Savelle
Am Hist R 45:890 Jl '40 850w

Reviewed by S. E. Morison
Books p12 S 1 '40 900w

Reviewed by S. M. Scott
Canadian Hist R 21:78 Mr '40 500w

Reviewed by R. H. Brown
Geog R 31:161 Ja '41 210w

"The work is not one for the tired business man or the radio fan, but that is far from saying that it is in any way related to the dry-as-dust Ph.D. theses. Dr. Gipson, who is a graduate of Oxford as well as of American universities, and head of the History Department of Lehigh University, has not only a wide scholarship but a humane touch and a flair for selecting arresting and fascinating quotations from the authorities, manuscript and others, which he has consulted. He also knows how to write. His work does not fit into the Strachey school of biography but it is not heavy or ponderous." J. T. Adams
+ N Y Times p16 Ap 14 '40 900w

Reviewed by H. I. Priestley
Sat R of Lit 22:19 Ag 31 '40 1050w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 3 '40 150w

"Professor Gipson's contribution to colonial history is an exceedingly useful one, and in many ways his work is a fine example of sound and thorough scholarship." C. M. Andrews
+ — Yale R n s 30:425 winter '41 400w

GIRLING, ZOE (MARTIN HARE, pseud). Polonaise. 273p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Heinemann]
(W) 40-2693

"A study of divorce and of the effect of a decide-for-yourself-darling education on a sensitive boy, half English and half Polish. Poland, however, is the protagonist of the story—Poland, an idea for which, during the past few centuries, many men have died." New Yorker

Bookmark p13 My '40

Reviewed by Rose Feld
Books p3 Ja 21 '40 800w

"As a group study of six children equally English and Polish the novel has solid merit. They are individuals, they ring true to their sexes, their ages, and their upbringings. The writing is light, and the novel seems to aim at being at once an entertainment and an interpretation of Polish patriotism. It succeeds in being a psychologically acute study of children in Warsaw." Harold Brighouse
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 O 24 '39 290w

"The children's presence and the author's clear, fresh style make it engaging."
+ New Repub 102:94 Ja 15 '40 50w

Reviewed by J. S. Southron
N Y Times p7 Ja 21 '40 700w

New Yorker 15:71 Ja 20 '40 70w

" 'Polonaise' was completed last June. . . It is like reading a gay and lively letter received after a telegram has brought news of the death of its writer. This well-written novel, however, is by no means cheerless, and the greater irony we read into it is outside the author's intention. Like Martin Hare's other novels, 'Polonaise' is gently ironical, almost malicious in some of its portraits, and there is an occasional flash of dry cynicism that recalls Somerset Maugham or Rose Macaulay. Better than the wit and irony is the humor, sympathetic and wise." R. A. Cordell
+ Sat R of Lit 21:5 Ja 20 '40 500w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 4 '40 100w

"Miss Hare has some telling illustrations of Polish patriotism and of the English innocent abroad, and, although all her characters, including the children, are inclined to be stiff-jointed, her psychological contrasts are not uninteresting. The very urgency of her sentiment, however, has betrayed her; what she feels about Poland and the Polish people escapes her in a rather naive and shapeless fiction. A further drawback is that the social values she emphasizes on either side are the superficial ones."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p627 O 28 '39 300w

Wis Lib Bul 36:100 My '40

GIRVAN, MRS HELEN. The house at 231; il. by Alan Haemer. 305p $2 Farrar 40-14196

Mystery story for girls.

"This is one of the mysteries for girls worth putting into a collection because it has interest as well as mystery." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 S 8 '40 210w

"Background, characterization, and plot are all better than in the average mystery story for girls." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 65:714 S 1 '40 110w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Nation 151:456 N 9 '40 20w

"The mystery of the little old house in a New York side-street is not a very spectacular one, a matter of a loose tile in a Dutch-tiled fireplace and of the vagaries of a charming, elderly boarder, but 'teen-aged girls, once started on it will finish it for the sake of its impulsive, light-hearted heroine and her original manner of earning a living." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p10 S 29 '40 320w

GITLOW, BENJAMIN. I confess; the truth about American communism; with an introduction by Max Eastman. 611p $3.75 Dutton

335 Communism—U.S. (W) 40-27077

A thoroly disillusioned ex-leader of the Communist party in the United States gives a detailed account of its works, its personalities and its relations with Moscow.

Reviewed by J. E. Moffat
Am Econ R 30:655 S '40 110w

Reviewed by R. C. Brooks
Am Pol Sci R 34:562 Je '40 550w

Reviewed by Florian Znaniecki
Am Soc R 5:836 O '40 320w

"Benjamin Gitlow's book is not merely another volume of sensational confessions. It is a personal and political history of the utmost relevance for an understanding of the American Communist party. . . What he has to say is told with a sincerity and candor, as well as a pitiless honesty toward his own past, which convey an unmistakable impression of authenticity. At every point where he touches on matters capable of objective verification, his story checks. . . It is indispensable to the student of politics and social affairs, a fascinating story for any one, and should be a positive boon for the annual crop of innocents who are drawn into Communist peripheral organizations under false pretenses." Sidney Hook
+ Books p3 Ja 14 '40 2050w

Reviewed by E. B. Garside
Boston Transcript p13 Ja 12 '40 700w

Foreign Affairs 18:570 Ap '40 20w

Reviewed by Stephen Naft
Living Age 358:192 Ap '40 500w

Reviewed by Robert Bendiner
Nation 150:396 Mr 23 '40 950w

"A controversial approach at best, but his straight facts are a contribution to radical history."
+ New Repub 102:93 Ja 15 '40 50w

"This is a long book. Every page is filled with stories to point up Gitlow's thesis. Almost every story is damaging to some past or present Communist politico. It will be objected by many that Ben Gitlow, who testified before the Dies Committee, is a renegade and an informer. That is a natural reaction, stimulated in advance by the book's unfortunate title. It will be said with some justice that the book contributes to the drive against civil liberties. The fact is, however, that anyone who reads Ben Gitlow's story will appreciate the man's honesty. . . He does not tell it vulgarly, but with a blunt truthfulness that is for him a moral cathartic. For liberals and radicals generally it will highlight some of the danger spots of political organization." R. H. Rovere

GITLOW, BENJAMIN—Continued
+ — New Repub 102:154 Ja 29 '40 650w

"Mr. Gitlow lacks a sense of proportion, and this makes him treat the spectacle of Communist mice in America gnawing each other (his own figure of speech), with as much detail and emphasis as that of the major struggles in Moscow. His book is valuable as confirming the slavish dependence of American communism on the Soviet dictatorship." R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p5 Ja 14 '40 1500w

"Informative, though the factional squabbles make tedious going."
+ — New Yorker 15:63 Ja 13 '40 60w

"The methods and connections of the organization are laid bare to the last detail. So is its make-up, with convincing sketches of the leaders. If the sketches are touched with the acidulous malice of a disgruntled man, they are all the better for that; and if the tale of factional squabbles becomes tedious, it all the better explains why communists make more noise than they make converts." Fletcher Pratt
+ Sat R of Lit 21:17 Ja 27 '40 350w

"Can be recommended as a sincerely-written and presumably accurate picture of communism's mutations in the United States. An introduction by Max Eastman vouches for much of the material, and Mr Gitlow's previous high position in the party must have given him access to the truth. The book, of course, is far from unbiased, as Mr Gitlow was a factional leader, and its dryness and length (597 pages) makes it somewhat difficult for the general reader."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 14 '40 750w

"The volume is not devoid of mistakes. Mr. Gitlow's account of the forces in the Socialist party leading to the 1935 split contains a number of inaccuracies, but on the whole he has written a carefully documented and authentic story about one of America's minority movements which no student of this subject can afford to ignore." H. W. Laidler
+ — Survey G 29:303 My '40 370w
Time 35:80 Ja 22 '40 1000w

GLASGOW, ALICE. Sheridan of Drury Lane. 310p il $3 Stokes

B or 92 Sheridan, Richard Brinsley Butler
40-34153

Biography of that romantic dramatist, wit, theatrical producer and member of Parliament, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, author of The Rivals and The School for Scandal. Chronology, bibliography, index. The illustrations are from old prints and photographs.

"In spite of its title this book is not to be put in the ordinary run of meretricious commercial biography. It is a serious work, reflecting a sincere affection for its subject and a painstaking effort to know both him and his period as they actually were. It is written simply, straightforwardly, and in the best of good taste."
+ Atlantic D '40 140w

" 'Sheridan of Drury Lane,' though readable enough, comes at times perilously close to putting itself out of the class of biography and into that of the scandal memoir. since its short length is generously padded out with casual bits of gossip about the dear eighteenth century and its naughty beauties who carried on so elegantly with all sorts of fascinating rakes and reckless beaux. There is also a brief sketch of the theater of the time which does not appear to be based upon too intimate a knowledge and on page five there is an amusing slip which certainly does not inspire confidence." J. W. Krutch
+ — Books p19 D 15 '40 440w
Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 32:532 O 18 '40 380w

"Miss Glasgow is readable, quotable, and has some facility of expression, but she writes a biography as if she were a novelist. Her research is said to be considerable, but this reviewer found it frequently debatable though she erected no sign posts at the controversial points. The library that buys this volume thinking to get an authoritative biography is bound to be disappointed. At best the reader will find this volume a stimulant for reading other books about the period." George Freedley
+ — Library J 65:707 S 1 '40 130w
New Yorker 16:112 O 19 '40 30w

GLASGOW, MAUDE. The subjection of woman and traditions of men. 341p $3 The author, 360 Central park west, N.Y.

396 Woman—History and condition. Woman —Social and moral questions 40-12565

"The book is not a history of women, for but a few are discussed; it merely depicts the adverse environment in which she was so often confined, some of the obstacles standing in the way of her progress, and the source of the latter as the author sees them. . . The opening chapters here deal briefly with the biological basis of sex, upon which so many peculiar ideas have been held, including that of the superiority of one sex over the other." Pref.

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette
Books p18 S 8 '40 1100w
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 20 '40 60w

GLASPELL, SUSAN. The morning is near us. 296p $2.50 Stokes [7s 6d Gollancz]
(W) 40-27078

Combined mystery and psychological novel, the scene of which is a small American town. It develops the story of the tangled relations of the Chippman family, which are gradually brought to light when Lydia Chippman returns to her old home after nineteen years of wandering in foreign countries.

Booklist 36:283 Mr 15 '40
Bookmark p13 My '40

"One might wish that the author had endowed her [heroine] with a less sensational past. But many readers will find sentiment, sincerity and tension in this story of a conflict between today and yesterday." A. H. Eckstein
+ — Books p5 Mr 31 '40 1000w

"The story is left a little unsubstantial, a little detached from reality, floating just above the ground, like a child's balloon on a string. Nevertheless, it has its string to tether it to reality, and, like the balloon, it is bright and delicate, with a certain waywardness and unexpectedness of movement to charm the eye and hold the watcher fascinated." Dorothy Greenwald
+ — Boston Transcript p8 Mr 23 '40 700w
Cath World 151:250 My '40 290w

"The story will be spoiled if a reader peeks at the last chapter. Marred a little it will be, in any case, because the spell of the narrative is not quite enchanting enough to make John Chippman's self-sacrifice wholly convincing; but nothing mars the atmosphere, the stretching of the threads of suspense, and, above all, the charm of Lydia." W. K. R.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 2 '40 650w
Churchman 154:35 Ap 1 '40 80w

"The author has used somewhat the same psychological situation which she used in Brook Evans, but where that book sprawled and sagged, this one is a miniature of perfection, as Ethan Frome is perfect." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 65:210 Mr 1 '40 120w

"Austere, fact-stating, and direct, Miss Glaspell's prose is charged upon occasion with the exquisitely right degree of emotion. Her writing is a lovely instrument serving in 'The Morning is Near Us' to make suspense magical." Harold Brighouse
+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 27 '40 210w

"Except for the unnecessarily shrill climax, the book preserves a tone of quiet sympathy and searching analysis entirely worthy of Miss Glaspell's competent hand." L. B. Salomon
+ — Nation 150:286 F 24 '40 250w
New Repub 102:449 Ap 1 '40 40w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 19:279 Mr 2 '40 260w

"A novel which is distinctly original and which has a subtle kind of excitement about it. Having once started 'The Morning Is Near Us,' I do not see how any one could lay it down until he or she has penetrated its mysteries. Nor do I see how any one could be quite unmoved by the lovely, limpid honesty of Lydia, or fail to enjoy the accustomed skill and grace of Miss Glaspell's style." E. H. Walton
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 24 '40 700w

"Miss Glaspell is able to take care of tangles, but the book is noteworthy more for its thoroughly believable heroine than its story. She is both kind-hearted and likable. Before she finds out what is wrong with her family, she has created a comfortable home for two adopted children and made friends with all the neighbors."
+ New Yorker 16:85 Mr 23 '40 80w

"The plot assumes a Eugene-O'Neill-and-water quality, and is neither quite credible nor sufficiently moving for the hints it scatters as it moves along. However, there is a solution of sorts, and it seems that Lydia's sunny goodwill is to be victorious over the shadows of the past. The writing is graceful, but facile." Kate O'Brien
+ — Spec 164:296 Mr 1 '40 160w

"The character of Lydia is delicately and charmingly drawn. Her gay heart, in spite of her perplexities, her strength of character even when she detects the murmuring of disapproval —all this is finely shown. But why such a fantastic plot, why such long drawn out suspense, when every one in this little town knew that Lydia was illegitimate? Even the reader suspects it from the moment of Lydia's arrival. The narrative seems morbid and artificial, even if Miss Glaspell does imbue us with a real affection for Lydia."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 24 '40 550w
Time 35:100 My 13 '40 60w

"Miss Glaspell has written good novels and has her moments even in this but so artificial and extravagantly yearning a tale comes as a sad surprise."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p109 Mr 2 '40 420w
Wis Lib Bul 36:49 Mr '40

GLASS, DAVID VICTOR. Population: policies and movements in Europe. 490p $6 (25s) Oxford

312 Europe—Population. Great Britain—Population [40-34135]

"Expanding and bringing up to date his shorter work, The Struggle for Population [Book Review Digest, 1936], the author includes a much fuller discussion not only of governmental policies but of population movements, the causes of such movements, and the methods and techniques of delineating them." Ann Am Acad

---

"Dr. Glass has not attempted an interpretation in terms of systematic social theory, but his excellent account of policies (containing a wealth of detail and many suggestions of causal relationships) and his discussion of demographic techniques constitute an indispensable datum for such theoretical work." Kingsley Davis
+ Ann Am Acad 213:211 Ja '41 600w
Nature 146:381 S 21 '40 1250w
Times [London] Lit Sup p402 Ag 17 '40 500w

GLASSCOCK, CARL BURGESS. Here's Death valley. 329p il map $3 Bobbs

979.487 Death valley, California 40-14628

An informally written narrative history of Death Valley from the days of the Forty-niners to those of Death Valley Scotty. Index.

Booklist 37:114 N 15 '40

"It is plain that Glasscock loves his job. What he writes is good reading because it grows out of his enthusiasm. His forte is compression, but there are chapters in this book which I, for one, wish were not compressed, but extended into a book." C. J. Finger
+ Books p14 O 27 '40 1150w

"Mr. Glasscock knows the terrain and its history, legends and personalities. From these materials he weaves a desultory but informing narrative that will give delight to everyone who has ever seen the valley, and to many who have not. He deflates the 'Scotty' myth pretty thoroughly, but he might have done even more in that direction without going beyond the facts, according to information gathered by this reviewer on the ground."
+ Christian Century 57:1250 O 9 '40 300w

"Glasscock's 'Here's Death Valley' is as inclusive as its title, and the writing is racy, the matter as instructive as it is entertaining. He has that effective, light touch requisite to the Western historian, but we must not be deceived by the lightness. Back of it is sharp, relentless observation and a precise weighing of values." Idwal Jones
+ N Y Times p5 S 29 '40 800w
Sat R of Lit 23:22 Ja 25 '41 230w

GLASSER, CARRIE. Wage differentials; the case of the unskilled. 169p $2 Columbia univ. press

331.2 Wages 40-33342

"The purpose of this study is to investigate certain aspects of the problem of differences in income arising among a homogeneous group of workers. Part I sets the statistical basis for this investigation by describing the patterns of wage differentials among unskilled labor in different industries and geographical areas. Part II has a double function: first, to organize into a general theoretical framework the various factors which bear on wage differentials among a single class of workers, and secondly, to describe in a more concrete fashion the general nature and action of a number of these causal factors." (p 13) Selected bibliography.

Reviewed by R. E. E. Harkness
Crozer Q 17:317 O '40 40w
Management R 29:388 O '40 50w

GLENN, ELSIE, and GLENN, MORRIS. Amandus, who was much too big; il. by Kurt Wiese. [63p] $1.50 Macrae Smith co.
39-23984

About a dog named Amandus that nobody wanted because he was too big—nobody, that is, but John Henry who bought him from the pet shop at a bargain.

"If this shows a child, or his elders that whether small or big, it is wiser to emphasize it than to apologize for it, the jolly little tale with its many jolly pictures will have earned its right to live." M. L. Becker
+ Books p32 N 12 '39 210w

"The book is too slight in content to have a lasting interest but Kurt Wiese's drawings have humor and appeal and the repetition and short simple sentences will make the book useful for inexperienced readers." A. T. E.
N Y Times p10 F 4 '40 120w

GLOVER, CARL ARCHIBALD. With the twelve. 276p $2 Cokesbury press

225.92 Apostles. Jesus Christ—Teaching 39-31569

Studies of each of the twelve disciples in their relationship to Jesus. Part one deals with the sources and ministry of Jesus; part two consists of biographies of the twelve. Bibliography. Index.

"Undergirded with scholarship, but primarily designed to make these men, their problems and their achievements live today. First class sermon material."
+ Christian Century 56:1169 S 27 '39 40w

"The book is interestingly written." E. W. Powell
+ Crozer Q 17:148 Ap '40 130w

GLUECK, NELSON. The other side of the Jordan. 208p il map $2.50 Am. schools of oriental research, 409 Prospect st, New Haven, Conn.

913.3945 Transjordania—Antiquities. Bible. Whole—Antiquities 40-31332

"The territory directly across from Palestine, that is, across the Jordan from Jericho, extending both north and south, is described in its present condition, and has also been examined by this practical archaeologist for the historic lore which lies hidden under the sand heaps swept by the winds of time across the desert country." Christian Science Monitor

Christian Century 57:977 Ag 7 '40 70w

"To those who enjoy this type of investigation, who find entertainment in following the footsteps made by mankind in its ascending path, this volume contains much important material told in a manner which easily grips the reader. The illustrations from photographs are numerous and add much both to the interest in and value of the message." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 28 '40 550w

Reviewed by I. G. Matthews
Crozer Q 18:66 Ja '41 600w

GLUECK, SOL SHELDON, and GLUECK, MRS ELEANOR (TOUROFF). Juvenile delinquents grown up. 330p $2.50 Commonwealth fund

364 Juvenile delinquency 40-9761

"Most students of juvenile delinquency will remember the reverberations which followed the publication of the Gluecks' excellent monograph, One Thousand Juvenile Delinquents [Book Review Digest, 1934]. The study created a great deal of discussion in many quarters and proved exceedingly useful in developing a critical attitude toward certain methods employed in the treatment of juvenile delinquents. Juvenile Delinquents Grown Up throws further light on the nature of criminal behavior and the machinery for the treatment of criminals by presenting new data pertaining to the lives of the famous original one thousand juvenile delinquents first introduced in the 1934 publication." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

Reviewed by E. D. Monachesi
+ Ann Am Acad 211:238 S '40 550w

Reviewed by W. D. Lane
Books p20 Je 30 '40 350w

Reviewed by F. J. Kobler
El School J 41:151 O '40 550w

New Repub 103:94 Jl 15 '40 50w

"It is needless to say that this book is characterized by the sound scholarship and fearlessly scientific spirit one expects of its authors." J. N. Ulman
+ Survey 76:276 S '40 350w

GODDEN, RUMER (MRS LAURENCE FOSTER). Gypsy, gypsy. 288p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Davies]

(W) 40-12734

A château in Normandy is the scene of this character study of a sadistic woman. Madame Barbe de Longuemare was English, a middle-aged widow with fox-red hair, a woman who had never ceased to be a cruel child. With a fiendish persistency she spoiled everything with which she came in contact—lives or age-old customs—until everybody hated her except her doting old Nana. Thru the eyes of her young niece is told the story of a gypsy family, camped upon the château land, and of the havoc Barbe caused, which ended in murder.

"The book is readable, and descriptively charming, but it has not the peculiarly controlled power of implication and understatement which distinguished Miss Godden's first novel [Black Narcissus, Book Review Digest, 1939]. Though it makes for entertainment on a wet evening, it doesn't quite succeed in convincing you that any of the characters are probable, let alone possible."
+ — Atlantic S '40 150w

Booklist 37:35 O 1 '40

" 'Gypsy, Gypsy' is an unusual book on every count. The writing is distinguished for somber beauty, piercing as a ray of moonlight on black waters; the characterization sensitive and subtle, the story poignant and enthralling. . . A gentle love story unfolds in the shadow of the tragedy and comes to peaceful ending. But it is the central theme, striking and violent, which gives this book its distinction." Rose Feld
+ Books p5 Ag 11 '40 850w

" 'Gypsy, Gypsy' is a one-character book. Aunt Barbe, a truly evil spoiled child grown up, dominates the book and suppresses all the minor characters. You never know more about Henrietta than that she is a nice girl who has grown up in Aunt Barbe's shadow. Rene is a mere prop. Nana and the gypsy are foils for Aunt Barbe. You emerge baffled that so feeble a book can carry itself with such an air of distinction." Lewis Gannett
— + Boston Transcript p11 Ag 7 '40 600w

Reviewed by Olga Owens
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 10 '40 370w

"What saves the book from complete mediocrity is the aunt's quite conscious design superstitiously to relieve herself of the evil she has done in life, of the evil in her, by creating evil in the lives of other people. It's an ambitious book and Miss Godden almost pulls it off. Certainly this is a truer, if less sensational novel than her first one, and her flair for creating the mood of a country and giving her reader the feeling of a place is still strong." Harry Sylvester
+ — Commonweal 32:372 Ag 23 '40 210w

"Like Miss Godden's earlier books, 'Gypsy Gypsy' is written with the care and devotion of one who treats novel-writing as an art." J. D. Beresford
+ Manchester Guardian p7 My 17 '40 140w

"It is always a fascinating story. One is held by it; so, in reading—even before one stops to realize the subtle perfection of form, the natural awareness and troubling suggestion, the strangeness and penetration and beauty, that make it an extraordinary achievement, and leave its echoes calling in one's mind." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p5 Ag 11 '40 900w

New Yorker 16:62 Ag 10 '40 50w

"Gypsy Gypsy, graceful and sensitive in its characterisation and in its evocation of life in a château and a village of Normandy, tells a somewhat incredible tale of sadism and violence. But if the facts are not quite convincing, the whole serves well as an allegory of good and evil, which the author manages quite movingly. She has no pomposity, her touch is delicate, and she is vigorously on the side of the angels." Kate O'Brien
+ — Spec 164:666 My 10 '40 70w

GODDEN, RUMER (rū'mer)

"While lacking the distinction of 'Black Narcissus,' 'Gypsy, Gypsy' is a striking story, vividly and cleverly told. It has the elements of a mystery tale, but is on a higher plane. It is a character study rather than a narrative and even the minds of the humble characters are made plain to us." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 11 '40 650w

"To the telling of this lurid, rather hopped-up tale Rumer Godden brings three saving graces: an acute sense of psychological tension and overtone, a coolly notable skill at prose, a peculiar ability in atmospheres (she seems particularly to be obsessed with the look of pale things in darkness). These talents alone may not make a first-rate novel: but they have a snaky power to hypnotize, and a certain distinction."

Time 36:67 Ag 12 '40 330w

"The story has a carefully studied grace of manner and works its Normandy properties into a decorative water-colour. Apple orchards, villagers, dogs, sails, the parish priest's soutane, Aunt Barbe's magenta sash, all are turned to pretty effect. There are, too, many flashes of cleverness in dialogue. But the emotional substance of the story seems to be entirely artificial; there is not a shred of spontaneous feeling anywhere. One cannot believe in Aunt Barbe or in the gypsy or even in Henrietta, all of whom have their being in a mere succession of mysterious postures."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p229 My 11 '40 380w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:xii autumn '40 20w

GOERTZ, ARTHEMISE. South of the border. 507p $3 Macmillan

917.2 Mexico—Social life and customs (W) 40-33582

Partly fiction, partly travel-narrative, this is an account of a visit to Mexico when the author and "Aunt Jo" stayed with friends in small Mexican towns, shared in their feasts and gayeties, recalled bits of history and observed modern ways and customs.

"This is a personal book, packed to the full with the author's own happy response. Yet it is not a superficial enjoyment: Miss Goertz really had her eyes open to present conditions and problems as well as to bits of legend and history. Her book thus has a genuine interest." David Tilden

+ Books p34 N 17 '40 260w

Christian Century 57:1346 O 30 '40 40w

"Stories of the fiestas are told with gusto and humor, while through them all the author shows a remarkable ability to recreate the color and flavor of the country and people she met. The legends which interlard the book are a trifle too well known for repetition." Peggy Baird

+ — New Repub 104:158 F 3 '41 200w

"From the experiences and observations of herself and Aunt Jo, Arthémise Goertz has written a readable and enlightening book. In the general flood of books about Latin-American travels she has produced something which is really original, because it is open-eyed, individual and sincere."

+ N Y Times p8 O 27 '40 500w

"A very rich and spicy but far from digestible mass of brilliant observation, chatter, scenic beauty, odd types, native festivals, literary pertness, history, and legend." Carleton Beals

Sat R of Lit 23:18 N 9 '40 410w

"'South of the Border' is a light but vivacious book for those who feel that geographical information should have the enhancement of fiction. The Mexican atmosphere is well handled."

Springf'd Republican p8 O 23 '40 950w

GOETSCH, HELEN BERTHA. Parental income and college opportunities. 157p $1.85 Teachers college

378 Education—U.S. Education, Higher 40-35216

"In this report intellectually gifted students continuing their schooling are compared with those not continuing their schooling to discover the psychological, economic, and social selection which takes place between high school and college. The family background and individual plans of approximately a thousand Milwaukee public high school graduates . . . were surveyed, and the economic status of their parents was determined. The evidence which the author has assembled in this volume shows conclusively that the ideal of equality of educational opportunity is not being realized, since most of these capable youths were not in school simply because of lack of finances." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. No index.

Am Econ R 30:904 D '40 80w

Social Studies 31:335 N '40 30w

GOGARTY, OLIVER ST JOHN. Going native. 294p $3 Duell

B or 92 (W) 40-5039

Continues the autobiographical reminiscences begun in the author's As I Was Going Down Sackville Street (Book Review Digest, 1937). In the guise of one Ouseley, he describes the reactions of an Irishman to the way of life in England.

Atlantic Ap '40 90w

"There is something at once so mad, so deliberate, so pawky and so exotic about this essay-novel that perhaps it should best be described simply as Mr. Gogarty at his most irrepressible and characteristic. . . The book is preposterous and lots of fun in its own extraordinary way, if somewhat reminiscent of medlars, Stilton and well hung gamebirds." Iris Barry

+ Books p2 F 25 '40 370w

Boston Transcript p8 Mr 23 '40 370w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum

Forum 103:196 Ap '40 340w

"Entertaining, scandalous, and not very important book. . . As a famous Irishman, the author works wit, poetry, and Dublin for all they are worth; but he is undeniably amusing."

+ — Nation 150:401 Mr 23 '40 100w

Reviewed by Eileen Holding

New Repub 102:479 Ap 8 '40 470w

"The general effect of the book is one of unity: above all is the witty, gay and mischievous Gogarty contributing once more to the gayety of nations. The satire is keen but gentle—none of Swift's 'savage indignation' here; fast the dart and thrust of innuendo. The reader has to keep on his toes." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 3 '40 600w

"Like many willful but genuine personalities, Gogarty is often irritating and puzzling, but when you get the hang of him (he gives no helpful hints) he exudes a special flavor all his own. He doesn't try to be everyone's dish. As he might say himself in one of his feebler moments, Oliver is an acquired taste." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 16:74 F 24 '40 410w

"Mr. Gogarty too easily falls into the literary equivalent of the gravely tipsy to whom the repetition of any improper word is indescribably amusing. He forgets that impropriety is entertaining only when it is a condiment, not course after course. In 'Going Native' there is alas! far too much of this. But there are other things if you look for them, witty, delightful, and beautiful things." R. E. Roberts

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:6 Mr 2 '40 750w

Time 35:74 Mr 4 '40 280w

GOHEEN, JOHN DAVID MACLAY. The problem of matter and form in the De ente et essentia of Thomas Aquinas. 137p $2 Harvard univ. press [8s 6d Oxford]

189.4 Thomas Aquinas, Saint. De ente et essentia. Ontology. Substance (philosophy) 40-6897

"In treating of the ultimate principles of corporeal substance, Saint Thomas sometimes identifies potency and act with matter and form and sometimes with essence and existence. The student is thus confronted with the following problem: If matter is not the same as essence and if form is not the same as existence, what does Saint Thomas have in mind when he predicates potency of both the matter and the essence of a corporeal substance and act of both its form and its existence? This is the problem which Mr. Goheen attempts to solve in the present study." Commonweal

Reviewed by D. Dalrymple
Commonweal 31:538 Ap 12 '40 270w
J Philos 37:305 My 23 '40 500w

GOLDING, LOUIS. The world I knew. 338p $3 Viking [8s 6d Hutchinson]

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-14763

Fictionalized autobiography of this Jewish writer, born in Manchester, England, in 1895. The son of an unsuccessful Hebrew scholar, he left home at eleven to live with a sister, and from that time on has educated and supported himself. The book is filled largely with his reminiscences of his travels in many lands and the people he met, while searching for health and for materials for his books.

Booklist 37:34 O 1 '40

"Whatever the ultimate tragedy of the disasters that have impelled the writing of this book, there is no hint of melancholy in its record of the world which Mr. Golding has known and may not know again. It does not give a backward look to bemoan vanished freedoms and lost horizons, but affirms that such things can be and are good. . . The intensity of the emotions that have surrounded the writing of the book has infused it with the warmth and glow of all the happily remembered moments that ordinarily lie scattered in corners of one's memory and are summoned up only one by one." Mary Ross
+ Books p2 Ag 25 '40 1000w

"Only in the opening chapters does the narrative drag at times. Mr. Golding quotes too much of his own juvenile verses. When once he gets himself grown up and out of Magnolia street he is a charming companion, whether he be playing a hurdy-gurdy in Corinth or discovering that Hollywood has much in common with Oxford." DeLancey Ferguson
+ — Boston Transcript p2 S 14 '40 280w
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '40

"The merit of Mr. Golding's chronicle lies in the unusual mixture of ecstasy and brevity. . . One's only complaint is that, with such excellent territory, he often passes by too hurriedly. . . However, the public that carried speed-mania into its reading will be delighted to get so far round the world in little more than three hundred pages, while those with more taste for dalliance will recognise that while Mr. Golding never stops long he never stops in vain." Ivor Brown
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 9 '40 350w
New Repub 103:310 S 2 '40 50w

"A rich and fascinating book." H. J. Forman
+ N Y Times p5 S 8 '40 1350w

"Mr. Golding is not ashamed of being well educated, urbane, and humorous. Neither he nor his adventures ever fall into banality."
+ New Yorker 16:67 Ag 24 '40 60w

"While many of the experiences described are emotional and as such peculiar to Mr. Golding, an outstanding feat of his as a writer is to describe sights common to countless travel-books in a way to make them more specifically visible to the reader."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p160 Mr 30 '40 460w

GOLDMAN, RAYMOND LESLIE. The snatch. 241p $2 Coward-McCann 40-9008

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p20 My 5 '40 170w

"The plot is simple, the clues are fairly obvious and, unless you are in the throes of spring lassitude, you should be able to work it out faster than Rufus." Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 My 11 '40 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p27 My 5 '40 220w

"Refreshing dialogue and veracious characterizations joined to puzzle that has tense moments and startling solution. Above average."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 My 4 '40 40w

GOLDSCHMIDT, RICHARD BENEDICT. The material basis of evolution. 436p il maps $5 Yale univ. press

575.01 Evolution. Genetics 40-12233

This study is devoted to the understanding of the process of evolution, and is based on less technical material in the Silliman lectures delivered at Yale university in December, 1939. "Essentially, the book constitutes an attack upon the gene theory of evolution, the prevailing theory of orthodox geneticists today. According to the gene theory, new varieties and geographic races arise as the result of the accumulations of gene mutations. In time, races and varieties are believed to become progressively differentiated from one another until they become distinct species. It is just this point that Goldschmidt disputes. Following Dobzansky, he distinguishes two levels of evolution, micro-evolution (the minute changes in the germ plasm responsible for differences among individuals of a race or races of a species) and macro-evolution (changes resulting in new species, genera and higher taxonomic categories). Orthodox geneticists believe that the same mechanisms underlie both micro- and macro-evolution, but Goldschmidt regards the two types of evolution as due to entirely different mechanisms." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

"This somewhat advanced and technical treatise by a master geneticist is rather difficult to review for a layman audience because it presupposes an intimate knowledge of modern genetics. Nevertheless this reviewer regards the book as so important that it would be unwise to let it pass without notice in this journal. . . [The author's] views, decidedly heterodox at present, are supported and documented by an immense amount of observational and experimental evidence, much of which is derived from the author's own personal experience. It is too early to predict the effect of these new theories upon the prevailing evolutionary and genetic views of the day. They are disturbing, but undoubtedly healthy in effect. Many of us have long since been dissatisfied with gene mutations as materials for progressive evolution. Perhaps Goldschmidt has given us a way out of a long-standing dilemma." H. H. Newman
+ Christian Century 57:1515 D 4 '40 650w

"This [is a] very important contribution. . . Its author, at present a professor of zoology in the University of California, is widely known among serious students of genetics for his distinguished research during the past thirty years, concerning sex determination, physiological genetics and evolutionary processes. Here the reader will find the results of Dr. Goldschmidt's mature deliberations concerning the genetical and developmental potentialities of organisms that nature may use as materials with which to accomplish evolution. But the reader must already be prepared by previous study of the subject, for this is an erudite book, and no attempt is made to avoid technical terms or ponderous ideas."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 Je '40 420w

GOLDSTEIN, DAVID. Jewish panorama. 394p $3 Catholic campaigners for Christ, Astor station, Boston

296 Jews 40-7093

"Dr. Goldstein is a convert from Judaism to Catholicism. . . The book's 'objective is positive—to further the knowledge of present-day Jewry among Christians, and the knowledge of orthodox Christianity among Jews.'" Commonweal

"The author's discussions of the Protocols of Zion, Kol Nidre, and other anti-Semitic bludgeons are well done. In fact, the book is so sound and valuable in what it offers that one regrets the number of typographical errors that will distract many readers." J. E. Coleran + — America 63:161 My 18 '40 550w

"A very useful book, well informed, sympathetic, honest and clear, popular rather than critical or exhaustive."
+ Cath World 151:766 S '40 180w

"Although there are many things in David Goldstein's 'Jewish Panorama' that will lift the eyebrows and probably send the more argumentative to their typewriters banging out rebuttals, nevertheless this reviewer found the book a just and frank appraisal of a leading contemporary subject." Reginald Kennedy
+ — Commonweal 32:65 My 10 '40 340w

"I have lingered through this volume and found scarcely anything which seems to underwrite its publication. The author evidently wishes to bring orthodox Jews and Catholic Christians together, but it is lay-type of writing and appeal. His discussion of Christianity has not the slightest breath of modern critical difficulties." Vergilius Ferm
— Ethics 50:482 Jl '40 50w

GOLDSTEIN, HARRIET IRENE, and GOLDSTEIN, VETTA. Art in everyday life. 3d ed 497p il $3.75 Macmillan

740 Art. House decoration. Clothing and dress 40-27840

"Modern design in painting, domestic architecture, and furniture is given more attention, suggestions for boys' and girls' rooms are amplified, new material has been added on other topics, and many new illustrations replace old ones." (Booklist) For first and second editions see Book Review Digest, 1926 and 1933. Index.

Booklist 37:218 Ja 15 '41
School & Society 52:640 D 14 '40 40w

GOLDSTEIN, SIDNEY EMANUEL. The meaning of marriage and foundations of the family; a Jewish interpretation. 95p 50c Bloch

173.1 Marriage. Family 40-4651

"A discussion of the ethical, religious and sociological aspects of the family in our own times, as seen from a Jewish standpoint. The author is associate rabbi of the Free Synagogue, New York, and chairman of the committee on marriage and the family, Central Conference of American Rabbis." Christian Century

"A modest and sensible little volume."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 16 '40 60w
Christian Century 57:185 F 7 '40 50w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

Reviewed by Baruch Braunstein
J Religion 20:412 O '40 210w

GOLLOMB, JOSEPH. What's democracy to you? 118p $1.75 Macmillan

321.8 Democracy (W) 40-11810

"This book scrutinizes the course of our democracy as most of us must, with a lay outlook, concentrating on main currents, with eyes only for outstanding landmarks in our past and present, and with a glance ahead." Foreword

Reviewed by D. M. Young
Books p7 Jl 14 '40 400w
Christian Century 57:770 Je 12 '40 60w

"What's Democracy to You? as a book, lacks unity and direction. For those readers who are already well informed on present-day world affairs, it will add little in the way of a new approach; for those readers who are seeking a background in democratic problems, it is too indefinite to be of much help." R. D. Minnich
— Library J 65:499 Je 1 '40 130w

"Told simply, dramatically and with the urgency of last night's radio broadcast."
+ New Repub 102:833 Je 17 '40 30w
Wis Lib Bul 36:134 O '40

GOODE, GERALD, ed. The book of ballets, classic and modern; introduction by Leonide Massine. 246p il $3 Crown

792.8 Ballet 39-33736

"Gerald Goode, the compiler of this book, is the press agent of Sol Hurok, the distinguished ballet impresario. . . Generally speaking, [the pictures] consist of the same cuts which are annually employed in the souvenir program books which are sold at ballet performances. However . . . there are included scenarios and photographs of several other works from other companies. In some 80 ballets listed, less than half a dozen are by the Americans. The scenarios are punctuated with a line or two of musical themes." Boston Transcript

Booklist 36:210 F '40
Books p20 Ap 7 '40 90w

"The descriptions are not very interesting and are extremely inconsistent in form. . . However, there are some fine photographs and excellent color plates which are nice to have if one has lost one's programs of the last few Monte Carlo seasons." Lincoln Kirstein
— + Boston Transcript p1 N 18 '39 240w
Theatre Arts 24:304 Ap '40 20w

GOODE, KENNETH MACKARNESS. Ten points for advertisers. 299p $3 Harper

659.1 Advertising 40-10076

The author attempts to show why and how business thru vigorous advertising strategy could help the nation's recovery from depression. In specific detail he sets forth the ten points against which the effectiveness of advertising campaigns should be pretested. Index.

Management R 29:230 Je '40 280w

"The book is abundantly supplied with contrasting examples of good and not-so-good advertisements of many articles. Statistics are abundantly supplied as to practical returns from this or that kind of angling for buyers. The big idea in Mr Goode's mind is of course, to help advertisers make the most effective approach to the public; but the public itself might find the book very interesting for casual reading, dipping into it at random and absorbing some scrap of worth-while information."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 D 3 '40 420w

GOODENOUGH, ERWIN RAMSDELL. An introduction to Philo Judæus. 223p $2.75 Yale univ. press

181.3 Philo Judæus 40-34181

In this introduction to the work of Philo Judæus, the first chapter discusses Philo's life,

GOODENOUGH, E. R.—Continued
some modern interpretations of his significance, and the methodological principles to be used in understanding his work. The second chapter contains a program for the reading of Philo's extant works. The remaining chapters contain studies of Philo as a political thinker, as a Jew, as philosopher, and as a religious mystic. The author is professor of the history of religion at Yale university. Bibliographical note. Index.

"Every page is stimulating and suggestive. All who are concerned with the interpretation of religion today, whether experts in ancient philosophy or not, will want to become acquainted with this book." M. H. Shepherd, Jr.
+ Christian Century 57:1518 D 4 '40 800w

"The author modestly designates his work as intended to introduce the general reader to the subject. Actually his highly compact and ahead-of-time study is indispensable to advanced students." H. R. Willoughby
+ J Religion 21:103 Ja '41 170w

GOODFELLOW, RAYMOND CHARLES, and FREEMAN, MAX HERBERT. Fundamentals of business training; il. by Chichi Lasley. 515p map $1.80 Macmillan

650 Business education 40-27694

"This textbook for ninth year students gives information on the business world of today and explains the fundamental principles of salesmanship and of getting along with people. The development of sound social and economic habits and training for everyday living are stressed. It is simply written in the student's own language." Booklist

Booklist 37:64 O 15 '40
Social Studies 31:333 N '40 20w

"The author is to be commended for his success in combining personal-use values with training and fundamental skills. The book should prove a challenge to the teacher who wishes to stimulate students in learning about the real situations of his social and economic environment." T. R. Snavely
+ Social Studies 31:376 D '40 190w

GOODRICH, CALVIN. First Michigan frontier. 352p maps $2.50 Univ. of Mich.

977.45 Michigan—History. Dertoit 40-28590

"Michigan, unlike her neighboring states of the Northwest, had an early frontier, developed by the French over a century before the arrival of the Yankee settler, and continued, with some modifications, by the British until the advent of American rule in 1796. It is this early French-British frontier which Mr. Goodrich has undertaken to describe. . . The introductory chapter outlines the entire era. For the rest, chronological development is abandoned, and taking his stand in the early 1760's, when French rule had ended and that of England was just beginning, he endeavors to re-create a static picture of the society and institutions of the time. Then, as now, Detroit was of overwhelming importance in the Michigan scheme of life, and the larger portion of the contents of the book is devoted to this commercial and administrative center." Books

"The story presented is packed with human interest, and is admirably fitted to serve as an antidote to all who are in danger of becoming sated with American history as it is depicted on the Silver Screen." M. M. Quaife
+ Books p28 N 17 '40 700w

"With no pretense to either literary or general reader interest, Calvin Goodrich's carefully documented survey of provincial Detroit from 1701 to 1763 is a scholarly compendium of facts that will not merely fascinate the intelligent Detroiter interested in the two and a half centuries of the history of his city, but must everywhere command the respect and attention of students of American history." A. J. G.
+ N Y Times p36 N 10 '40 200w

GOODSPEED, EDGAR JOHNSON. Christianity goes to press. 115p $1.50 Macmillan

225.1 Bible. New Testament—History. Bible. New Testament—Publication and distribution (W) 40-27387

This book, based on lectures delivered at the University of Virginia in 1939, tells the story of New Testament publication from the days when Paul's letters were first published down to the present. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:337 My 1 '40

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
Books p10 Je 2 '40 400w

"The book is replete with shrewd observations and interesting facts about the copied and the printed Word in its many versions. . . The reviewer recommends the book heartily to groups and classes who wish to approach the study of the New Testament from a fresh and rewarding angle." A. N. Wilder
+ Boston Transcript p6 My 25 '40 350w
Christian Century 57:546 Ap 24 '40 190w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller
Churchman 154:15 My 1 '40 180w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 17:304 O '40 250w

"A remarkably fascinating story told simply, with scholarly wisdom, and with evidence of how much imagination rightly plays in putting together non-chronologically related material. The New Testament becomes a new and living book with the help of Goodspeed." Vergilius Ferm
+ Ethics 50:481 Jl '40 200w

"The book is written in Professor Goodspeed's invariably clear and delightful style and would serve admirably to introduce a new reader of the New Testament to some of the most interesting problems in the study of that literature." John Knox
+ J Religion 20:304 Jl '40 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p588 N 23 '40 550w

GOODSPEED, EDGAR JOHNSON. The four pillars of democracy. 148p $1.75 Harper

201 Religion—Philosophy. Civilization. Faith 40-36195

The four pillars of democracy which Dr Goodspeed discusses in this volume are man's faith in science, his faith in humanism (culture), his faith in society (economic and social interrelationships) and finally his faith in religion. These faiths the author sees as not mutually exclusive but as mutually inclusive, all needful in helping man to achieve the best in life.

Booklist 37:235 F 1 '41

"In writing this book, Professor Goodspeed lays aside his technicalities of scholarship but not the clarity of thought and the felicity of style that are inseparable from him. This might be called, if the title had not been preempted long ago, 'The Religion of a Mature Mind.' "
+ Christian Century 57:1617 D 25 '40 60w

"Professor Goodspeed writes with the breadth of understanding of modern conditions which bespeaks the careful thinker and sound logician. While he diverges somewhat from his accustomed path of religious writings, the spiritual appeal is by no means lacking." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 25 '41 500w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore
Churchman 155:19 Ja 1 '41 270w

GOODWIN, FRANK STIER. Jonathan Swift, giant in chains. 450p il $3 Liveright

B or 92 Swift, Jonathan 40-33969

A partially fictionized biography of Jonathan Swift, which is "avowedly an endeavor to tell the story with emphasis on its drama, romance, and achievement." (Christian Science Monitor) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Goodwin's book is not an improvement on the work of his immediate predecessors. He has no new material to contribute, no fresh interpretation to offer. What he has done is to take the story as he found it and apply to it the technique of a novelist, supplying concrete detail, dialogue, and dramatic touches with a free hand. . . Except for being oversimple in method, ordinary in style, and slightly illiterate in the confusion of lay and laid and a few other small niceties, Mr. Goodwin's book does what it sets out to do, that is it reduces Swift's biography to straightforward and readable narrative in which all perplexities are smoothed away. It is too simple an approach to the dark intricacies of the human spirit and the motives of statesmen." G. F. Whicher
Books p32 D 1 '40 390w

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 16 '40 480w

"Mr. Goodwin's biography deals mainly with Swift's political and personal relationships rather than attempting to evaluate him critically as an author. This treatment heightens the interest value of the book and saves it from the danger of stodginess which catches up with so many tomes of this kind. An excellent piece of workmanship." L. B. Bloch
+ Living Age 359:593 F '41 450w

"This book does not quite succeed either as popular or as scholarly biography. It represents a kind of bifocal writing, common at present, which is likely to cause stumbling in an overambitious author." Alexander Cowie
Sat R of Lit 23:13 Ja 4 '41 700w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 23 '41 600w

GOODWIN, JOHN B. L. The pleasant pirate; pictures: Warren Chappell. [32p] $2 Knopf 40-31801

Nonsense story told in rhyme for children of six and up. It is all about a soft-hearted pirate who helped the lonely Mrs Dooley and her two children, living on the little green island of Sequonnet, to rejoin their husband and father, who was living in Singapore.

"A refreshingly original nonsense story. . . The pages look like prose, so the discovery that the tale is told in rhyme adds the spice of a surprise to the book." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p7 D 29 '40 160w

"The pictures in color and wash are beautiful as well as funny."
+ New Yorker 16:126 D 7 '40 40w

GOODYKOONTZ, COLIN BRUMMITT. Home missions on the American frontier; with particular reference to the American home missionary society. 460p $3.50 Caxton printers
277.3 Missions—U.S. 40-1723

"This book, which is the outgrowth of a doctoral dissertation prepared at Harvard University under the direction of the late Professor Frederick Jackson Turner, deals with only one phase of the home missionary movement in the United States, namely, the work of Protestants from the East in the new settlements on the Western frontier. Local missionary activities in Eastern states and cities, Indian missions, missions among the Negroes, and the work of the Roman Catholic Church have either been omitted or treated incidentally to the main topic. For the sake of clarity emphasis has been put on the work of the Congregationalists and Presbyterians, especially their joint activities through the agency of the American Home Missionary Society." (Pref) Selected bibliography. Index.

"The work is a valuable contribution to American church history, accurate in substance, judicious in tone, well documented for the use of students."
+ Christian Century 57:146 Ja 31 '40 280w

"This work brings to attention a hitherto little-known area of American Christianity and is a valuable contribution to the growing number of studies in this field." C. T. Thrift, Jr.
+ J Religion 20:413 O '40 550w

Reviewed by Robert Fortenbaugh
Social Studies 31:139 Mr '40 400w

Wis Lib Bul 36:62 Ap '40

GORDIN, ABBA. Communism unmasked. 311p $2.50 I. N. Hord, 327 4th av, N.Y.
335.4 Communism 40-14273

Criticism of communism, which the author asserts "is not socialism but politicalism"—the exploitation of the proletariat by a new class of masters.

Am Econ R 30:655 S '40 10w

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee
Ethics 51:123 O '40 320w

GORDON, JAN. A step-ladder to painting. 293p il $2.50 Greenberg [5s Faber]
751 Painting—Technique 39-29493

Simply written guide for the beginning painter, which includes considerations of the use of oil and water color, problems of composition, and analyses of famous pictures. The book, written by an English painter, has been edited and adapted for American users by Jacob Getlar Smith. Illustrated with drawings, and photographic plates. Index.

Booklist 36:195 Ja 15 '40

"Mr. Gordon writes in that deceptively simple style that is understandable to every reader. The real reason for his clearness and readability lies in the fact that he has proved what he has to say, and so is but sharing his experience and knowledge." E. C. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 6 '40 360w

"While this book is primarily intended for beginners in the craft of painting, it will also be of use and interest to all professional and amateur students of painting, to teachers and to those who do not paint but want to know something of painting technique. The author is one of the best known modern painters in England."
+ School Arts 39:8a Ap '40 110w

"The book is written primarily for the instruction of the working painter, whether beginner or advanced, and is full of practical suggestions for his work, but its clear exposition of the principles and technic of painting make it especially valuable also for the layman. The style is vivacious, imparting to the reader the evident enthusiasm of the author."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 My 17 '40 110w

GORELIK, MORDECAI. New theatres for old. 553p il $4.50 French
792 Theater 41-1312

A modern scenic designer here reviews the history of stage production, both in the far past and in modern times. He argues that older forms must be replaced by new techniques. Bibliography. Indexes.

"Mr. Gorelik's book leaves much room for argument, and the realization of its program is too dependent upon the economic status of the theatre, the quality of its audiences, and uncertain political conditions to be accepted as inevitable in the immediate future. . . Still, he has written a penetrative and stimulating work, vividly descriptive even in its analyses, and of distinctly pioneering importance." John Gassner
+ — N Y Times p5 Ja 19 '41 1000w

"Vigorous and challenging, especially in dealing with the modern Russian and German styles, but not always very well organized."
+ — New Yorker 16:80 Ja 18 '41 70w

GORKY, MAXIM, pseud. (ALEXEI MAXIMOVICH PYESHKOFF). Culture and the people. 224p $2.50 Int. pubs. [7s 6d Lawrence]

947.084 Russia—Intellectual life. Russia—Social conditions. Communism—Russia 40-494

Series of occasional articles and addresses written for the Soviet papers between 1929 and 1935. Their general theme is the rise of culture in the Soviet Union and its rapid decline in all other countries.

Am Soc R 5:466 Je '40 70w

"The papers exhibit an astigmatic fanaticism, a disregard for the facts, a blind acceptance of the dictatorship that impugns the sincerity of Gorky's plea for culture and of his expressed desire for a truly human and humane way of life. . . The book is crammed with passages which would be humorous if they were not so tragic to any reader of current history as it is presented in the daily press." Babette Deutsch
— + Books p20 F 11 '40 750w

"Gorki's defence of the Soviet Union is wholehearted, and there are many aspects of its development upon which his comments are revealing, not least his emphasis on the tragic conditions of the early years and the degree to which the wholesale and barbaric cruelty of the Whites was responsible for the Red Terror. The weakness of the approach is that Gorki paints everything in black or white in an unrelieved monotony; everyone who does not accept his valuations is simply a selfish lackey of capitalism." H. J. L.
Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 5 '40 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p222 My 4 '40 550w

GORMAN, HERBERT SHERMAN. James Joyce. 358p il $3.50 Farrar

B or 92 Joyce, James (W) 40-27146

Well-documented biography covering Joyce's career to date. The author spent ten years gathering his material. Some of the chapters include descriptions of Joyce's youthful rebellion against his religious education; his poverty-stricken early days in Paris; his marriage; his trips from one European city to another while looking for teaching jobs; and his struggle to get his books published.

"Mr. Gorman always writes carefully and well. In this book his pen is energized by admiring friendship and a devout belief that Mr. Joyce is a great literary artist. Hence his subject is made as attractive as it can be made. Nevertheless the book remains one for the initiate and the devotee rather than for the general reader who is less interested in Mr. Joyce and less impressed by his literary quality."
+ Atlantic Mr '40 60w

Booklist 36:263 Mr 1 '40

"Handsome and admiring life. . . Mr. Gorman's book is the best record we have of Joyce's incessant struggles for recognition, the endless persecutions inflicted upon him; but necessary as it is to acknowledge that fact, there remains something terrifying about Joyce's self-centered mind. It is interesting to learn from Mr. Gorman's book that he has always read the work of other men only in the light of his own." Alfred Kazin
+ Books p5 F 18 '40 1300w

"'James Joyce' is a solid, substantial, rather sluggish work. Its movement is slow for two reasons. Mr. Gorman is serious in his fidelity to fact, and as the facts he has sought are, to the outer eye, often trivial, his pages do not free themselves from minute details. The slightest scrap of evidence is faithfully preserved. . . Mr. Gorman is successful in his main purpose—which is to give us a sympathetic picture of a stubborn, heroic man carrying out his artistic purpose in the midst of poverty, neglect, illness and misunderstanding. Joyce takes his place in the long procession of geniuses who have clung doggedly to their aims and who, once they had succeeded and their stories told, have awakened the admiration of mankind. Future students of Joyce will be immensely indebted to Mr. Gorman." H. M. Jones
+ — Boston Transcript p1 F 17 '40 1100w

Reviewed by Robert Peel
Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 23 '40 490w

"Author has highest respect for Joyce, believes his writings will become classics. Very intimate and readable biography, principally for adults." Lena Ruppert
+ Library J 65:117 F 1 '40 90w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel
Nation 150:339 Mr 9 '40 700w

"Gorman has given us an accurate, warmly compassionate and intelligent portrait of James Joyce. It is a true geology and astronomy of his mind. But everything has not been said about him. There are regions of his spirit that require new telescopes to see and to describe." Eugene Jolas
+ New Repub 102:313 Mr 4 '40 650w

"The cooperation of the subject of a biography is a great asset to a biographer. Obviously Joyce has told Mr. Gorman many things that we are glad to know about him, and Mr. Gorman has passed them on to us. . . For reasons inherent in its matter, the first half of Mr. Gorman's book is the most interesting. Here he presents in detail, with imagination and power, the milieu and moment out of which Joyce rose in all the high tension of passion and irony which troubles the Irish mind." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p1 F 18 '40 1500w

"Mr. Gorman's 'James Joyce' will probably not prove standard. It records a still unfinished life. It contains little or no formal criticism of Joyce's work, and makes no pretensions to doing so. It is properly reticent about those more intimate personal experiences on which 'A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man,' 'Ulysses,' and even the puzzling 'Finnegans Wake' must in part be based. Mr. Gorman writes earnestly rather than brilliantly and there are no intuitive flashes that might reveal Joyce from the inside, but his story is as solid an exterior biography as we have a right to expect." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 16:78 F 17 '40 750w

Pratt p23 autumn '40

"In spite of its bias and its lack of generosity and even justice, and its imperfect comprehension of the Irish background, this is an intelligent book and has the advantage of a first-hand knowledge of the subject and his ideas." M. M. Colum
— + Sat R of Lit 21:10 Mr 16 '40 1900w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 24 '40 1150w

Time 35:86 F 19 '40 600w

GOSS, MRS MADELEINE (BINKLEY). Bolero; the life of Maurice Ravel. 303p il $3 Holt

B or 92 Ravel, Maurice (W) 40-4084

Taking her title from the composition which took the musical world by storm but which to Ravel himself was one of his least important works, Mrs Goss has written the first complete biography in English of the French composer and an account of his works. Appendices give a list of his compositions, as well as of the recordings of his works. Bibliography. Index.

"As a biography it is nothing, because the author had nothing to write about. Ravel was the most reserved of men; he had no intimates, few acquaintances, and his life had no public interest outside of its professional routine. Thus the book is chiefly of value to the historian of French music."
Atlantic Mr '40 50w

Booklist 36:281 Mr 15 '40

"This book is singularly rich in stimulating information and provocative ideas. Mrs. Goss, herself a musician, has been at pains to gather all available material from associates of Ravel still living, especially from his brother, Edouard." John Erskine

+ Books p6 Ja 28 '40 950w

Reviewed by Charlotte Bassett

Boston Transcript p1 F 10 '40 450w

Reviewed by G. E. Shipler, Jr.

Churchman 154:17 Mr 15 '40 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '40

"In this accurate and illuminating biography, Mrs. Goss has dealt justly with both the man and his art." Lloyd Morris

+ Forum 103:204 Ap '40 320w

"Mrs. Goss does not devote her story to panegyrics of Maurice Ravel. She sees him in relation to his time and his contemporaries. She values his music highly, and she is not alone in her appreciation. Perhaps, as the years go on, Maurice Ravel's work will diminish in favor. But Mrs. Goss does not concern herself with predictions of immortality. She has made it her business to see Maurice Ravel whole, and she seems to have succeeded so far as industry, perception and her subject allowed." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 28 '40 900w

"An intelligent job."

+ New Yorker 15:63 Ja 27 '40 40w

"Mrs Goss has written a sincere and unassuming book, which supplies more information about the composer and his work than is obtainable in any other work in English."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 4 '40 750w

Wis Lib Bul 36:68 Ap '40

GOTSHALK, DILMAN WALTER. Metaphysics in modern times; a present-day perspective. 110p $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press [9s Cambridge]

110 Metaphysics

"This book aims to give an elementary account of metaphysics in the modern period (1637 ff.). It seeks to make a few fundamentals of its subject stand out with great clearness, so that the general reader will possess a useful orientation toward modern metaphysical thought and the special student will be provoked to reconsider the broader aspects of his own thought about modern metaphysics." (Pref) The author is associate professor of philosophy at the University of Illinois. A short selected bibliography. Index of proper names.

"Here is an excellent book on the baffling subject of metaphysics." E. S. Ames

+ Christian Century 57:1211 O 2 '40 700w

Reviewed by Justus Buchler

N Y Times p47 D 1 '40 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p618 D 7 '40 300w

GOTTSHALL, FRANKLIN H. Design for the craftsman. 149p il col pl $2.75 Bruce pub.

745 Handicraft. Design, Decorative 40-14548

"An introduction to the universal laws of design. Intended as a text for classroom or self-study. The principles outlined are accompanied by drawings and photographs. The author is director of industrial arts at the Martha Berry College, Mt. Berry, Georgia." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 37:113 N 15 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:33 Jl '40

GOUDGE, ELIZABETH. The bird in the tree. 339p $2.50 Coward-McCann [8s 6d Duckworth]

(W) 40-27487

When David was a little boy, orphaned by the first Great war, Grandmother and he created a home for themselves and Grandmother's children and grandchildren at Damerosehay, on the Hampshire coast. Years later David fell in love with his uncle's wife and the home he had helped to create was in danger of ruin. David and Nadine felt their love was supreme but when Grandmother, Nadine's children, and the ancient house itself combined against them, David and Nadine capitulated.

Booklist 36:383 Je 1 '40

"To many who read this novel it will be the best-written fiction they have yet read; on the other hand, many will be surprised to find themselves reading with such respect something that could be called light fiction. But it could never be called light-weight. It is possible for a pleasantly written novel, if it tells the truth, to lift up the spirits and make them light. So, in an hour of sinking spirits, does this story." M. L. Becker

+ Books p4 My 26 '40 600w

"The characters in this novel are well portrayed, and the story is by no means without humor. With her austerity Miss Goudge combines a lovely sensuous awareness. You will love this Hampshire coast, the little Village and above all, the kind old house. David and Nadine act out their touching story, but what matters most is that forgotten stretch of marshland, where a man's spirit may rest and grow whole again." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 18 '40 320w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 8 '40 500w

"For the adult reader who likes quiet books with charm and good character portrayal, and for adolescent readers." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 65:397 My 1 '40 250w

"It is in no hackneyed sense that one calls this a completely satisfying book. You can read it more than once with satisfaction." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 My 12 '40 750w

"Prettily written, with pleasing horticultural and meteorological touches."

+ New Yorker 16:92 My 25 '40 40w

Sat R of Lit 22:21 Ag 3 '40 190w

Times [London] Lit Sup p245 My 18 '40 370w

GOUDGE, ELIZABETH. Smoky house; il. by Richard Floethe. 286p $2 Coward-McCann [7s 6d Duckworth]

(W) 40-27730

Fanciful tale of the English West country and smuggling in the post-Napoleonic era. It is the story of an innkeeper and his five charming children, their two dogs, and the donkey, and of what happened when the family extended their hospitality to a wandering fiddler.

Booklist 37:94 N 1 '40

"It is a story exquisitely written, with the cadence of happiness and just enough 'real life' to carry the fantasy. . . [Miss Goudge] takes the children who read her book clean out of the turmoil of today, and there would be no easier way for the adult to escape it for an hour than by reading 'Smoky House' aloud to a little listening group, but I believe that in this group the adult will be only a visitor." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 O 20 '40 750w

Cath World 152:381 D '40 140w

"Elizabeth Goudge, well known for her adult novels, has written 'Smoky House' especially for young people. The same delightful characterization, descriptions of the countryside and happy relationship between older people and children are found in this story, half fact, half fancy." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 D 19 '40 240w

"As in all the books by Elizabeth Goudge the children are drawn with great understanding and sympathy. Each is a definite character. . . Here is a beautifully written

GOUDGE (gōōje)

GOUDGE, ELIZABETH—Continued
book, rich in poetry and magic, mystery and excitement." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:343 S '40 140w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk M 16:430 N '40 70w

"There is romance and excitement in this story which is at once very wise, very beautiful, and delightfully funny." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 65:849 O 15 '40 60w

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald
Library J 65:878 O 15 '40 180w

" 'Smoky House' is a gracious story with virtue rewarded and the wrongdoer brought to see the error of his ways. The humor with which the author has drawn the children, the grace of style, the charm of the English countryside so deeply felt by the author that reader, too, finds the West Country a land of enchanting beauty keep the book from oversweetness. . . The book is beautifully designed; Richard Floethe's drawings, which are decorations rather than pictures, have in their pale brown coloring an illustrative charm and catch the other-world atmosphere of the story." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p10 N 10 '40 320w

"This novelist's first book for not very young people is perhaps for a special audience—certainly not for the literal-minded. To those who like the sound of a story about smugglers on the English west coast a hundred years ago, with talking dogs, the pointed-faced Good People, and a spirited set of children all taking a hand in events, it will be a delight."
+ New Yorker 16:129 D 7 '40 60w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong
Spec 165:658 D 13 '40 160w
Times [London] Lit Sup p634 D 14 '40 40w

GOUDY, FREDERIC WILLIAM. Typologia. 170p $3 Univ. of Calif.

655.24 Type and type founding. Printing—History 40-28756

"Studies in type design and type making, with comments on the invention of typography, the first types, legibility, and fine printing." (Subtitle) The author, a great modern type designer, discusses the work of other designers of type in the past, and tells the story of his new type, University of California old style, along with some of his philosophy.

Booklist 37:169 Ja 1 '41

"Though Mr. Goudy claims no literary graces, the lucidity of his expression and the urbane, scholarly sound of his Latin derived vocabulary conveys a distinct and pleasing impression." Margaret Clark
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 160w

"Mr. Goudy has reason to be highly pleased with his new type, with his theory, with his ability as an author. 'Typologia' is pleasing to the eye, each page is attractive and alive. I found the letters a trifle condensed, without the space that I should like between words. Frankly, I could not read 'University of California Old Style' as rapidly as some of Mr. Goudy's other types. But it is an ideal face for a university press which has to publish so many varieties of works that a dignified general face, not a specialized one, is the need. Mr. Goudy has again demonstrated he is alone in his field, the master of his craft, the true artist who has the knack of making his artistic creation practical." C. A. L.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 11 '41 300w

"It is a notable book on various counts, the most important being the definitive exposition of the manner in which the greatest type-designer of his day works, and of the esthetic and practical considerations that influence his letter forms. . . The book is well illustrated and worthy of its type face." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p23 D 15 '40 200w

GOULD, JOHN. New England town meeting; safeguard of democracy [il. with phot. by the author]. 61p $1 Daye

352.074 Local government—New England 40-8189

Brief, popular description of the New England town meeting, illustrated with many photographs showing men and women in characteristic poses.

"Mr. Gould is a citizen of Brunswick, Maine, who has taken part in town meetings these many years. Moreover, his eyes and ears have been open alike for serious town business and for little nuances, mannerisms and the like. His text may be said to be authoritative, even to pointing out the correct (Yankee) pronunciation of 'see-lect-man.' The many fine photographs he has assembled from various towns could not be better." S. H. Holbrook
+ Books p13 My 26 '40 550w
New Eng Q 13:579 S '40 110w
New Repub 102:481 Ap 8 '40 50w

"Town Meeting is traditional and picturesque, but it is much more than that. It is seen here significantly as a 'safeguard of democracy.' "
+ N Y Times p25 My 19 '40 320w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '40 170w

GOULD, LESLIE A. American youth today; with a foreword by Eleanor Roosevelt. 307p il $2 Random house

362.7 American youth congress. Youth (W) 40-13996

The story of the American Youth Congress and a defense of its acts and policies. The author is treasurer and publicity director of the Congress. Index.

Booklist 37:6 S '40

"Leslie Gould has written a slangy, fast-moving and well documented book. Himself a young man and a leader of the organization which he describes, he makes no attempt to be either scholarly or objective." Spencer Klaw
Books p5 Jl 21 '40 750w

Reviewed by J. C. Skinner
Boston Transcript p1 Jl 20 '40 750w
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '40

Reviewed by Pierre Loving
Living Age 359:290 N '40 330w

"The book is written with a youthful volubility and 'freshness' (in the slang sense) that will be irritating to many readers, especially adults. Mrs. Roosevelt, kindly and patient friend of all youth, endorses it in a foreword in which she says 'it is only fair to hear both sides of every question' and admits that she has 'no great illusions about the perfection of any organization or of any group.' She also welcomes it because she thinks it will 'add to the sum total of knowledge about the youth problem in this country.' The reviewer concurs, but suggests that there is another meaning in which the term 'youth problem' might be used." R. G. Fuller
Sat R of Lit 22:15 Ag 3 '40 650w

GOULD, STEPHEN, pseud. See Fisher, S. G.

GOVAN, MRS ADA CLAPHAM. Wings at my window; il. by Dorothy Bayley. 198p $2.50 Macmillan

598.2 Birds. Bird banding (W) 40-35408

At a time when she was oppressed with physical pain and mental distress the author happened to observe a gallant little chickadee singing bravely during a blizzard. When she fed him he immediately went and gathered up all his friends and relatives to share the food. That was the beginning of a new interest for Mrs Govan, and the present book records her experiences with bird feeding, bird banding, and finally a bird sanctuary.

Booklist 37:213 Ja 15 '41

Christian Century 57:1483 N 27 '40 30w

"Mrs. Govan's descriptions of bird plumage, of bird individuality, of bird behavior, especially love-making scenes, are entrancing and sympathetic. There is a chapter on teaching children to love birds written with deep feeling and sincerity." A. M. Colt

+ Library J 65:873 O 15 '40 160w

"Mrs. Govan's writing is never sentimental; on the contrary it is concrete, anecdotal and briskly informative. But her unpretentious and unusual book has a real loveliness. And Dorothy Bayley's drawings are full of perky charm."

+ N Y Times p9 N 10 '40 400w

GOVAN, MRS CHRISTINE NOBLE (J. N. DARBY, pseud). Sweet 'Possum valley; il. by Manning de V. Lee. 202p $2 Houghton (W) 40-33630

Five cousins spend an exciting and happy summer on a southern farm in ante-bellum days. By the author of Those Plummer Children (Book Review Digest 1935).

"The pride of Sweet Possum Valley is its 'characters'—Ed Martin, who makes ballads to order and tells the tallest tales since Paul Bunyan; Uncle Jephtha, who knew the famous witch that haunted the Bell Family, and tells about her in hair-raising detail, such as this iron-nerved time of life enjoys. There is a mystery, brief and slight." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 10 '40 240w

"The children are natural, wholesome boys and girls, active and full of fun, and will appeal to readers of ten and twelve. The Southern dialect may keep a few children away from the book, but on the whole it should prove a popular title." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 65:1092 D 15 '40 100w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p10 Ja 19 '41 310w

"Lively and entertaining." Z. C. Durrell

+ Sat R of Lit 23:9 N 16 '40 20w

GOVERNMENT and economic life; development and current issues of American public policy, by L. S. Lyon [and others]. 2v 519;791p v 1 $3; v 2 $3.50 Brookings

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Industry and state—U.S. U.S.—Politics and government (39-31511)

Volume one "is an interpretation of public economic policy in America. Trends and current issues are discussed in the light of the economic forces and governmental actions which have influenced and conditioned them. Such problems are considered as: modification of the anti-trust laws; determination of fair competition; government and labor action; amendments to the patent laws; monetary management; and evaluation of governmental agencies." (Management R) "The second volumes relates to the effect of government regulatory policies upon some of the larger elements of our economic system." (Eng N)

"In general, I envisage only one serious complaint about the book from the craft of professional economists and this from the teaching wing on jurisdictional grounds. They may feel that the Brookings Institution ought to work its research side of the street and not invade the college textbook field, traditionally an academic preserve, as completely as it has in this case. Perhaps, however, such complaint will be stilled by the fact that the book leaves ample room for more detailed and more fully explanatory studies of all of the phases of governmental relations to economic life which it discusses. At any rate, I understand no jurisdictional complaint has been made thus far. In fact it seems that the book is being used as a backbone book for college courses on its general subject matter, and well it might." D. M. Keezer

Am Econ R 30:367 Je '40 1000w

"The authors and the Brookings Institution have done a genuine service in bringing us up-to-date with a cross-section view of the relations of government with economic enterprise. The book is strongest in its factual analyses and presentation of trends; the theoretical implications and basic assumptions are less well developed. The second volume may be anticipated with interest if it shall sustain the level of contribution made in the first." Harvey Pinney

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:135 F '40 700w

"This volume is a valuable compendium of factual information, logically organized around focal problem areas, intelligently analyzed in terms of public policy. It is not the final word, but it is the best thing in print covering such a wide field of government-economic relations." Harvey Pinney

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1210 D '40 1000w (Review of v 2)

Reviewed by A. G. Coons

Ann Am Acad 209:225 My '40 1050w

Reviewed by A. G. Coons

Ann Am Acad 212:252 N '40 1150w (Review of v 2)

Booklist 36:208 F '40

Booklist 37:167 Ja 1 '41 (Review of v2)

"The authors are to be congratulated on having produced an extremely valuable background study and orienting introduction to current issues." J. M. Clark

+ Columbia Law R 40:953 My '40 700w

Reviewed by Milton Katz

Harvard Law R 53:1065 Ap '40 1150w

Management R 28:456 D '39 40w

"It is an extraordinarily important and timely book. And it is extraordinarily well done." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 150:314 Mr 2 '40 550w

"The authors treat controversial problems with scholarly detachment. They refrain from passing judgment either upon the policies which have been developed or upon current issues or proposals for reform in public policy toward the private enterprise system. We are indebted to them for a comprehensive and timely analysis of the policy and trends in the relation of government toward economic life." R. S. Short

+ Social Studies 31:231 My '40 260w

Reviewed by R. S. Short

Social Studies 32:45 Ja '41 800w (Review of v2)

Spec 164:458 Mr 29 '40 220w

"It should be helpful to legions of intelligent but bewildered citizens whose fragmentary information and observation needs orderly clarification. It may be salutary reading both for those who are convinced that everything now being done in Washington is unsound and those who are just as certain that new-deal policies are what the patient needs."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 18 '40 650w

GRABBE, PAUL, and MURPHY, GARDNER. We call it human nature. 120p il $2; text ed $1.75 Harper

150 Psychology (W) 40-27034

Photographs, diagrams, cartoons, and descriptive text present the fundamentals of psychology for the layman.

"If shortcomings must be pointed out, we may begin with the condensation of the text. The process of boiling down has progressed to the point of virtual stylelessness, which makes for rather choppy reading. Another result of this over-condensation is a relative lack of clarity. . . Further, some will note the lack of any sensory material whatsoever. . . Even if the above objections are valid, one can, with few misgivings, recommend this work to someone who wants to read a book, not too long,

GRABBE, P., and MURPHY, G.—Continued which will tell him something of what psychology is about." F. N. Jones
+ — Am J Psychol 53:479 Jl '40 400w

Reviewed by P. R. Farnsworth
Am Soc R 5:679 Ag '40 140w
Booklist 36:207 F '40
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 2 '40 10w

"Very ingenious, and probably sound."
New Yorker 16:83 F 17 '40 30w

"The text is clear, discriminating, and precise, and considering the limitations it sets itself, very good. The main limitation is its drastic brevity, a brevity which limits its contents to definitions and the barest explanatory exemplifications and arguments. Presumably the pictures are intended to make up for this and to provide a compensatory fulness." B. D. L.
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:21 Mr 9 '40 300w

"The symbol system is worked out on original lines and is skilfully used. The reproduction of the half-tone photos has not been an altogether happy one, since many of them are blurred, while the essential details of others on which the text depends are almost completely lost. But regardless of these discrepancies 'We Call It Human Nature' is a real contribution to popular psychology and it is likely to set a new pictorial standard for writers of psychology texts."
+ — Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 20 '40 370w
Wis Lib Bul 36:63 Ap '40

GRADY, ROY ISRAEL, ed. See The chemist at work

GRAF, OSKAR MARIA. The life of my mother; a biographical novel. 583p $2.75 Howell, Soskin

Graf, Frau Theresa (Heimrath)—Fiction
(W) 40-35925

"Semi-fictionized biography and autobiography by the exiled German novelist, a long and generous chronicle of a Bavarian peasant family between the reign of Ludwig II of Bavaria and the second year of Hitler's reign, centered on a full-length portrait of Tessa Heimrath, Herr Graf's mother." New Yorker

"'The Life of My Mother' is not an easy book to read, primarily because it is so full of people, incidents and emotion. It sprawls, it is disjointed, it is inchoate and uncontrolled, it lacks all the virtues of structure that a novel or autobiography should have. Yet, in spite of these faults, it succeeds in telling the story of several lives and paints a picture of a people. It has the force of desperate sincerity and purpose, a driving impulse to describe the Germany of the past in relation to and explanation of the Germany of the present. One feels, reading Graf, that the man has been shattered, blown to bits, and that in the writing of this book he is gathering the pieces together again for personal healing as well as for the reader's interest." Rose Feld
+ — Books p12 N 24 '40 750w

"Other refugee novels are more dramatic than this. I do not know that any tells you more of Germany or of life. Others reach more assured conclusions; I do not know of any that is as reassuring." Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p9 N 8 '40 750w
Nation 151:641 D 21 '40 90w

"Those who read 'Prisoners All' will recognize many of the characters and episodes. Yet while 'Prisoners All' was concerned chiefly with the author's own story, 'The Life of My Mother' reaches far beyond personal recollections, and deep into life. It has all the qualities of his earlier works; humor and social consciousness; candor and clarity of observation. What makes it superior to even his best books is its width of perception, and its great human warmth." Marianne Hauser
+ N Y Times p6 N 10 '40 850w

"Simply and movingly written."
+ New Yorker 16:102 N 16 '40 50w

"The record is so extremely personal, it admits us unashamedly to so many family intimacies, that it often makes the reader feel like an intruder. The blood and bone and heart of its author have gone into it so fully and so obviously that it makes criticism seem boorish and inappropriate. But, whatever else may be said of 'The Life of My Mother,' this may be said with absolute confidence: few biographies or autobiographies have ever been as candid." B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ja 18 '41 700w
Time 36:88 N 18 '40 500w

GRAFTON, SAMUEL. All out! how democracy will defend America; based on the French failure, the English stand, and the American program. 104p pa $1 Simon & Schuster

940.53 European war, 1939-. U.S.—Defenses. Democracy. European war, 1939—France 40-35222

Attempts to answer certain crucial questions now faced by Americans: "How can America defend democracy and retain democracy? How can America stop Fascism and not turn Fascist in the process? How can America live through this period of expanding war without adopting militarism as a way of life?" (Publisher's note)

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Nation 151:610 D 14 '40 350w

"One of the uncanny features of the author's genius as a columnist is his sense of the moment, and of the word that expresses the moment. Behind each is Grafton with an emotion about democracy and human values. Those values don't change but they get a surprisingly different and daringly appropriate expression from day to day. Hence when he writes anything as final in expression as a 104-page book, containing an account of events six months old, or even a year—the writing suffers. The chapter on England, though it has some good things in it, I personally would trade for two 'I'd Rather Be Right' columns, than the one which takes Halifax apart, for instance, and the one which analyzes Mr. Churchill's speech to the Italian people. . . [But] in my opinion the ideas and the political program implicit in [some] passages are too good, too important and too far-reaching to be left at that. Perhaps somebody will write a book taking one of them as a text. Perhaps Mr. Grafton will." C. R. Walker
+ — New Repub 104:124 Ja 27 '41 650w

"A hard-hitting pamphlet by this New York Post columnist—too black-and-white, but worth reading."
+ — New Yorker 16:88 N 2 '40 50w

"As history, the section on France shows an average of one gross error of fact or of interpretation per page; that on England, half as many. The American chapter is less arbitrary with the record but inexcusably shallow in its economics, though it contains some good obiter dicta. When a writer can shout as loudly on paper as Mr. Grafton does, he should realize better his responsibility. One feels that his intentions are doubtless praiseworthy, but that they are discredited rather than realized by intemperate language, false or misleading assertions, and recklessly inconsequential reasoning which lands him neatly in the enemy's camp." C. B. Thompson
+ — Survey G 30:92 F '41 370w

"Samuel Grafton writes I'd Rather Be Right, a New Dealing column in the New York Post. Both [his book and Laski's] are important because they talk out loud in public about hopes that most New Dealers prefer to talk about only among New Dealers. Both are, whether the authors know it or not, handbooks of revolution. . . To the minds of Authors Grafton and Laski, World War II is 1) a symptom that capitalist democracy can no longer solve its own economic and social problems; 2) a heaven-sent chance to ram through, under the guise of wartime necessity, radical social changes that citizens would never stand for in peacetime."

Time 36:85 N 11 '40 450w

GRAHAM, FRANK DUNSTONE, and WHITTLESEY, CHARLES RAYMOND. Golden avalanche. 233p $2.50 Princeton univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

332.41 Gold. Money—U.S. Currency question—U.S. 39-29447

"A history of the gold policy of the United States in recent years, indicting the present system of gold purchase as lacking rational economic grounds, and resulting, through the increase in bank deposit money, in an inevitable burden on the public." (Booklist) Index.

"Graham and Whittlesey have written a stimulating and thought-provoking book, one of the most important monetary tracts of our time. They leave us greatly in their debt. Many will not accept their conclusions. But, the reviewer finds himself in substantial agreement with the authors. They say this is only an interim, rather than a final, report. Regarding some of these problems and solutions they are still in doubt. We shall eagerly await further word from them regarding what should be done." C. S. Tippetts

+ Am Econ R 30:418 Je '40 1450w

Reviewed by R. B. Westerfield

Ann Am Acad 209:234 My '40 350w

Booklist 36:168 Ja 1 '40

"[The authors] might have been more explicit in suggesting that the United States should demand definite commitments from Britain and France as to the restoration of the gold standard at the end of the war as a condition of continuing our present gold policy. Likewise, they might have examined in more detail the idea, recently advanced by Mr. Aldrich, of restoring a free gold market, or of paying off part of the national debt with gold. Nevertheless, all those interested in one of the important and difficult American problems would do well to read this book." R. L. Buell

+ — Books p11 F 18 '40 750w

Foreign Affairs 18:570 Ap '40 120w

"In this readable and stimulating volume Graham and Whittlesey have given us a survey of the gold problem, which is bound to arouse interest and discussion. Whether the conclusions of the authors will find general acceptance or not, they will have contributed greatly to an understanding of the unprecedented inflow of gold over the last seven years." S. E. Harris

+ — J Pol Econ 48:904 D '40 950w

GRAHAM, JOHN. Housing in Scandinavia; urban and rural. 223p il maps $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press

331.833 Housing 40-27388

"Mr. Graham's book describes housing in Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Finland. He deals with the problem in a broad manner, not only giving the technical comments which an architect-author would be apt to make, but also sketching the measures necessary for social stability through the provision of opportunities for decent living. He compares conditions in Scandinavia with those in this country, and stresses the fact that the public ownership of land (for which Sweden and Denmark are known) offers a clue to the solution of the yet unsolved housing problem in the United States." (Boston Transcript) Index.

"Although the value of the book for reference purposes is somewhat lessened by the unusual mixture of anecdotes and statistics and by the treatment of statistics in a literary rather than in a more orderly form, the volume is probably the best American-written record and evaluation of housing improvement in four democracies working for the welfare of their people in the shadow or darkness of dictatorships." E. H. Hoben

+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:820 Ag '40 190w

Booklist 36:338 My 1 '40

Reviewed by W. F. Bogner

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '40 300w

Christian Century 57:641 My 15 '40 120w

"The pictures that accompany the text are well selected and while the author does not evidence much in the way of literary adroitness, the interest of his subject, as well as the comprehensiveness of his data, offsets what the book lacks in easy readability." Barry Byrne

+ — Commonweal 31:518 Ap 5 '40 480w

J Home Econ 32:398 Je '40 80w

"Mr. Graham gives an excellent exposition of the historical, economic, and sociological aspects of the housing problem, but his book would have had greater interest even for the layman if he had developed more fully the technical features of the Scandinavian solution."

Nation 150:634 My 18 '40 100w

New Repub 102:649 My 13 '40 40w

"The illustrations are good and particularly to be commended is Mr. Graham's catholicity of taste in design and in building type. The chapter on rural housing should prove of interest to many economists and sociologists here working in the rural fields. The author may be accused of an occasional over-indulgence in whimsy, but the book is readable and should be useful to both the technician and the layman interested in housing." C. F.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 Ag 17 '40 290w

GRAMATKY, HARDIE. Hercules; the story of an old-fashioned fire engine; il. by the author. [72p] $1.75 Putnam

(W) 40-34108

Hercules was a proud little fire engine in pre-motor days. Inevitably the day came when Hercules was left in the fire house, while the motor-driven engines dashed to all the fires. Then came the fire at the city hall, when all the newfangled engines got stuck and Hercules saved the day. Now he rests on his laurels in a museum.

Booklist 37:158 D 15 '40

"This is a book to read to five-year-olds, but their elders will enjoy doing so." M. L. Becker

+ Books p11 N 10 '40 240w

"The vivid pictures are all that any boyish heart could wish." E. V. W.

+ Cath World 152:375 D '40 30w

"A less engaging character than Little Toot Hercules is yet sufficiently brilliant and robust to please the average small boy who loves a fire engine." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:29 Ja '41 70w

"Both text and illustrations are gay and colorful and will amuse the large group of children from five to eight who enjoy personifying machines. Their elders who read it aloud will also be entertained." E. W. Turpin

+ Library J 65:1092 D 15 '40 100w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale

Nation 15:454 N 9 '40 10w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele

New Repub 103:843 D 16 '40 20w

"Hercules, for all his handsome looks, can scarcely be accounted a rival to Little Toot. His personality is not so carefully built up as was that light-headed little tugboat, and his adventure, less unexpected, seems to bear the cut of a ready-made. Nevertheless, his story is fun and the exciting pictures portray the glorious pandemonium of a four-alarm fire with such verve that you almost hear the clanging of old brass fire bells." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p34 N 10 '40 200w

GRAMLING, OLIVER. AP; the story of news; il. by Henry C. Barrow. 506p $3.50 Farrar

070.4312 Associated press. Reporters and reporting (W) 40-27785

Graphic history of the Associated press, from its beginning in 1848, with a staff of two, and six newspaper members, to the present, with its staff of 7200, and 1400 newspaper members in the United States and thruout the world. Index.

Atlantic N '40 240w

Booklist 37:131 D 1 '40

"It was a big job, and Mr. Gramling can afford to be proud of the result. Every honorable journalist also can afford to let himself experience a feeling of pride, for this is, in large part, the story of devotion to the ideal of truth in news. The book, to be sure, has its imperfections, but it covers a massive field and, in the main, does it completely and with feeling and clarity. . . It was unfortunate that, with all the photographs and splendid illustrations at hand, it was decided to illustrate the book with old-fashioned drawings by Mr. Henry C. Barrow. They are fifty years out of date, and unsuccessful in any event. But, with all this complaining aside, this is a book eminently worth reading." Stanley Walker

+ — Books p5 N 3 '40 1450w

"For future historians, A.P. will be an invaluable source book, for present readers an interesting footnote to history." Lowell Thomas

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:5 N 7 '40 450w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 65:761 S 15 '40 140w

Nation 151:457 N 9 '40 50w

Reviewed by Mary MacCarthy

New Repub 103:633 N 4 '40 370w

"It is a story to quicken the pulse of American newspaper men and women. His book can be read with interest and instruction by newspaper editors. It is a 'must' for the student of the American press. It will give the newspaper reader a better understanding of the news." Neil MacNeil

+ N Y Times p4 N 3 '40 1250w

"Fresh material and good reading."

+ New Yorker 16:91 N 30 '40 40w

"If there is little new in the book, and if it is rather discursive, it is none the less a record which the layman will read with many a thrill. For certainly, whatever its faults, the Associated Press has been extraordinarily successful in enlisting an enthusiasm and fidelity, and a readiness to give their lives if need be, of innumerable men during its long and colorful career." O. G. Villard

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:7 N 2 '40 900w

Social Studies 32:44 Ja '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '40 330w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 29:621 D '40 130w

GRANE, JOHN, pseud. The fugitive [Eng title: The man who took trains] [tr. from the German by Trevor and Phyllis Blewitt]. 301p $2 Harper [7s 6d Hamilton, H]

40-27442

Otto Silbermann, a Jewish Berlin merchant, is the fugitive. On Hitler's rise to power Silbermann changed the firm's name and handed over 51 per cent of the stock to his Aryan clerk. Silbermann himself became a fugitive, forever taking trains, trying to cross frontiers, suffering tortures of terror and indecision, and finally ending in a mad house.

Booklist 36:364 My 15 '40

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 Mr 3 '40 350w

"John Grane is a pseudonym, but everything else about the book has the unmistakable stamp of authenticity. It might be a case history, an illustration of all the newspaper accounts we have read of the horrible Jew-baiting in Germany. . . Don't be afraid of the subject. The author has used admirable restraint about it and has not laid on the atrocities. He concerns himself with the soul and spirit of a man in extraordinary circumstances, surely the best of all possible subjects for the novelist." Ann Springer

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 24 '40 400w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p3 N 10 '39 120w

"The reaction is not against Nazi brutality but against shoddy trading in human indignity. The book has nothing to add to the truth, and as the author has attempted to improve on the truth it is a good deal less effective; it strikes one disagreeably as a trick to win pity for pity's sake." Anthony West

— New Statesman & Nation 18:684 N 11 '39 110w

"Himself a young German writing under a pseudonym, one feels that the author has given a true account of an aspect of Kultur which is Herr Hitler's special pride. The translation by Trevor and Phyllis Blewitt is a notably fine piece of work." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 3 '40 650w

New Yorker 16:78 F 24 '40 40w

"Here is a book on Nazi Germany written with neither bitterness nor sentimentality. Grane does not use his novel as a lecture platform. He tells the desperate story of a desperate human being, and he tells it with tact and graphic simplicity." Marianne Hauser

+ Sat R of Lit 21:16 Mr 16 '40 370w

Times [London] Lit Sup p703 D 2 '39 200w

GRANT, FREDERICK CLIFTON. The gospel of the kingdom. 204p $2 Macmillan

232.9 Kingdom of God. Jesus Christ—Teaching (W) 40-9241

The Haskell lectures for 1940, delivered at the Graduate school of theology, Oberlin college. "The purpose of this book is to set forth and discuss the new approach to the life and teaching of Jesus, chiefly his Gospel of the Kingdom, and to the origin of Christianity which results from a fuller application of the methods of historical and literary research to the tradition underlying the gospels." (Pref)

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr

Books p18 S 15 '40 800w

"To read the book is to be taken into the midst of contemporary study of the gospels and the life and interpretation of Jesus. It is the most interesting book that we have in this area by American scholarship." A. N. Wilder

+ Boston Transcript p9 My 11 '40 700w

Reviewed by W. P. Lemon

Christian Century 57:1079 S 4 '40 850w

"Readers will differ radically in their judgment of this volume, the contents of which were lectures given last February at Oberlin. Probably all readers will feel it wrong, perhaps very wrong, in spots; but they will by no means agree as to what the spots are. . . [However] the candor, common sense, and insights which characterize this volume—save when he is too self-consciously 'standing in the need of prayer'—make it a distinct and important contribution." M. S. Enslin

+ — Crozer Q 18:67 Ja '41 800w

"One must pay high tribute to the Episcopal church in America for permitting a member of its clergy the freedom to inquire as is revealed in this book. We have here high heresies judged from centuries of interpretation. We have here an honest mind unafraid to speak plausible hypotheses of truth though the centuries are against him." Vergilius Ferm

+ Ethics 50:481 Jl '40 290w

"A stimulating book. Professor Grant is an acknowledged leader in the field of New Testament studies. He has put all students of Christian beginnings in his debt. Perhaps the outstanding value of this book is its positive appraisal of the results of these recent studies in terms of his own Christian faith." A. C. Purdy

+ J Religion 20:285 Jl '40 1000w

GRANT, JOAN. Life as Carola. 396p $2.50 Harper [10s 6d Methuen]

40-7416

This tale of renaissance Italy is written in the first person, as if, indeed, it contained the actual memories of a former incarnation of the author herself. The heroine is an illegitimate daughter of an Italian nobleman. Cast out at an early age from partial security she joins a band of strolling players, later enters a convent but escapes into marriage and has other adventures and experiences before her end.

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

Books p12 Ap 28 '40 800w

Reviewed by Olga Owens

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 800w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 O 31 '39 360w

"Whether the spirit or Miss Grant is responsible, one feels that the Renaissance is being seen darkly through a West Kensington glass. On matters of fact the book is richly spurious." Anthony West

— New Statesman & Nation 18:622 O 28 '39 750w

"Here is an unusual book that shines with fire (even though it is sometimes artificial fire), that is packed with incident, that is vivid, dramatic and skillfully put together—and yet one that this reviewer finds harder to value correctly than any that has ever fallen into his hands." T. C. Chubb

N Y Times p7 Ap 21 '40 700w

"The narrative is crisp and fresh, the characters solid and human. And so they remain until the obsession with visions gains control. But when Carola plumbs the mysteries of witchcraft, when she wrestles in a convent with orthodoxies and heresies, and, particularly, when she finds a precarious peace in marriage to an elderly scholar, the shrouds of mystical nicety are impenetrable." C. D. Abbott

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:16 My 25 '40 340w

"Miss Grant has undeniable powers of visual imagination, but she is too deeply concerned with metaphysical problems to be able to give a coherent account of what it felt like to be alive in 1520. By far the best part of the book is that which deals with Carola's childhood, for here the author does convey a convincing objective picture of the world as seen through the still uncritical eyes of the little girl. But as soon as Carola begins to develop, her vision becomes clouded with the Higher Thought. The story will not, however, disappoint those who connect sixteenth-century Italy with dagger thrusts in the dark, licentious soldiery, improbable Christian names, poison, pestilence, torture and the very sinister machinations of the Church." C. V. Wedgwood

— + Spec 163:694 N 17 '39 350w

"All the eloquence of the book is directed towards the evocation of other-worldly mysteries. To many, therefore, the essential charm of the story will lie in its profundity. Others, more especially those with a love of mystical literature, may regret that a handsome if unoriginal piece of story-telling has been joined to uplifting tushery."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p623 O 28 '39 550w

GRANT, MARGARET. Old-age security; social and financial trends; a report prepared for the Com. on social security [Social science research council]. 261p $2.50 Social science research council

331.2544 Old age pensions 39-27983

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

"The least satisfactory part of the study is the concluding chapter on 'Foreign experience and American problems.' It is apparent that the author has not studied the American system with anywhere near the thoroughness with which she studied the foreign systems. . . The six chapters preceding the argumentative final chapter, which recount the foreign experience, also, suffer somewhat from the orientation to American controversies. There is no twisting of the facts to support the author's thesis, nor the complete ignoring of developments which run counter to her position, but aspects which do not interest her receive scant attention." E. E. Witte

+ — Am Econ R 30:207 Mr '40 600w

Reviewed by C. M. Rosenquist

Am J Soc 46:628 Ja '41 150w

Reviewed by A. N. Christensen

Am Pol Sci R 34:381 Ap '40 310w

"This study is packed with facts. Nowhere else in like compass may be found so rich an array of information and conclusions, patiently gathered and authoritatively set forth." R. W. Kelso

+ Ann Am Acad 208:234 Mr '40 380w

"The author does not examine principles. She does not discuss, for instance, why, to whom and to what amount pensions should be paid; or the relative social merits of contributory and non-contributory pensions. But this excellent unofficial blue-book does furnish the raw material for a statement of the political and economic basis of old-age pensions."

+ Economist 139:735 D 14 '40 220w

GRANT, MARGARET, and HETTINGER, HERMAN STRECKER. America's symphony orchestras and how they are supported. 326p $3 Norton

785 Orchestras. Music—U.S. 40-27266

A brief history of symphony orchestras in the United States with detailed analysis, including many statistics, of their finances. There are chapters on budgets and sources of income, salaries of conductors and musicians, endowments and subscriptions, the importance of special concerts such as "pops" and children's, the influence of radio broadcasting, etc. Index.

Booklist 36:302 Ap 1 '40

Reviewed by Peter Bowdoin

Books p8 Jl 7 '40 700w

New Repub 103:198 Ag 5 '40 50w

"Admirable book."

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 17 '40 320w

GRAS, NORMAN SCOTT BRIEN. History of agriculture in Europe and America. 2d ed 496p $3.50 Crofts

630.9 Agriculture—History 40-27443

This revised edition of a book which first appeared in 1925 (Book Review Digest, 1925) carries the history of American agriculture from 1920 to 1940, with the addition of a chapter on Distress and relief in American agriculture, 1920-40. Index.

Am Econ R 30:387 Je '40 20w

"This revision unquestionably enhances the value of what has already proved to be a very useful volume." H. J. Carman

+ Am Hist R 46:456 Ja '41 260w

Booklist 36:367 My 15 '40

"A History of Agriculture by N. S. B. Gras first appeared in 1925, and since that time has been the standard work in the field. The revision fifteen years later is welcome." P. W. Wager

+ Social Forces 19:278 D '40 400w

GRAUMONT, RAOUL, and HENSEL, JOHN. Encyclopedia of knots and fancy rope work. 615p il $10 Cornell maritime press, 350 W. 23d st, N.Y.

677.7 Knots and splices 40-27035

"It is the purpose of this book to include, insofar as it is possible, all of the known kinds, types, forms and designs of knots, macramé lace, tatting, braiding, and ornamental rope work, in order that the art may be preserved as an historical record for future generations." (Pref) Detailed directions are given for making every variety of knot, from the simplest to the most complicated. Illustrated with 311 plates. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 36:209 F 1 '40

"The current annum's most thrilling, fascinating, absorbing, exciting, alluring, hypnotizing product of typewriter, pen or pencil." Baron Ireland

+ Books p2 Ja 14 '40 500w

Pratt p13 autumn '40

GRAVEL, FERN, pseud. Oh, Millersville! 110p $2 Prarie

811

"Fern Gravel, one discovers, is the pen-name of a little girl who thus christened herself for literature's sake 40 years ago, when she was nine years old. She lived in a small town in Iowa, and she wrote factually and interestingly about the people in that town. . . She reports on her uncle, who sold whiskey in his drug store, of which Fern disapproves. She reports on a piano concert given by Blind Boone, a Negro, in the Methodist church. . . Boredom and the eternal hope of escape to Chicago come out surprisingly, with genuine feeling." Boston Transcript

"The book is amazing, amusing, full of the human scene, and not to be missed, because there can't be another like it in the world." J. H. Holmes

Boston Transcript p9 D 23 '40 240w

"Every so often some precocity in pigtails mesmerizes a U.S. publisher into printing her verse creations. The resultant rash on the nation's body poetic generally passes away as soon as the publisher's advertising appropriation has been spent. Oh Millersville! is a collection of juvenilia that no American will want to see pass away."

Time 37:80 Ja 13 '41 340w

GRAVES, ROBERT. Sergeant Lamb's America [Eng title: Sergeant Lamb of the Ninth]. 380p map $2.50 Random house [8s 6d Methuen]

(W) 40-27841

A historical novel of the early years of the American revolution based upon the adventures of a Dublin man, one Sergeant Lamb of his Majesty's army. It begins with Lamb's early days in Dublin, and ends with his arrival in Boston as a member of the regiment taken prisoner after Burgoyne's surrender at Saratoga.

"On the whole it is disappointing. It has the factual verisimilitude of a story by Defoe, but it lacks vitality and that suspense which intrigues the reader. An interesting work, but uninspired."

+ — Atlantic D '40 80w

Booklist 37:175 Ja 1 '41

Reviewed by Milton Rugoff

Books p7 N 24 '40 1000w

" 'Sergeant Lamb's America' is a sound introduction to what may be a good historical novel." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p11 N 6 '40 280w

Christian Century 57:1519 D 4 '40 170w

Commonweal 33:157 N 29 '40 130w

"The casual reader may object that he is getting his history too straight, but the thoughtful reader will appreciate the honest effort to recreate a period and succession of important events which have present day significance. Recommended as an able novel; less sensational than the recent crop of American historical novels, but of lasting value." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 65:808 O 1 '40 100w

"The book is documented with various contemporary evidence. It is a novel to be read for its detail rather than the development of its narrative." J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p6 S 13 '40 130w

Nation 151:457 N 9 '40 80w

Reviewed by George Orwell

New Statesman & Nation 20:291 S 21 '40 360w

"It is a historical novel for which one has a very real respect. Its eighteenth-century style is so much finer than our own that it should have an astringent and salutary effect on the readers of the gaudy historical romances of our period. It should be added that the story, like the Claudius novels, is obviously to be continued and that the suspended action will be finally resolved. When it is finished it will be put alongside the novels of Kenneth Roberts on the same period and, of course, with Shaw's play about General Burgoyne in 'The Devil's Disciple.' " P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p7 N 24 '40 850w

"Lively reading, with perhaps too much history and not enough novel."

+ — New Yorker 16:85 N 2 '40 70w

"The Sergeant Lamb of the novel, who tells his memoir in the first person, is a likeable and forthright fellow, proud of his coat, with a keen professional eye for the details of soldiering, a set of honest British prejudices, and an Irish adaptability which stands him in good stead through his various adventures. The only trouble with the book is that, in reproducing so closely the style and matter of an eighteenth century memoir, Mr. Graves has sometimes forgotten that he is writing a novel." S. V. Benét

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:5 N 2 '40 500w

"Sergeant Lamb should be put into every school library and read by every boy or girl learning about the American War of Independence: and to say this is not in the least to disparage its value or attraction for the older reader. This [is an] excellent novel." J. A. Smith

+ Spec 165:322 S 27 '40 600w

Time 36:80 N 4 '40 650w

"How much [Mr Graves] has more or less directly abstracted from Sergeant Lamb it is not possible to tell; to what extent the plain and vigorous English of the narrative, with its occasional hint of Johnsonian rotundity or Gibbonesque elegance, is modelled upon Sergeant Lamb it is likewise difficult to say. At all events the book has a very taking period flavour and makes good reading. Somewhat formless as story-telling, it nevertheless provides a vivid and absorbing picture of the British Army of those years and also an engaging commentary on the causes of the War of Independence."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p469 S 14 '40 850w

GRAY, ELIZABETH JANET. The fair adventure; il. by Alice K. Reischer. 298p $2 Viking

(W) 40-12851

Story for girls of twelve to fifteen. The heroine, Page MacNeil, is the youngest member of a large jolly family, in which exciting things seem to happen to everyone but Page. The scene is a Southern college town.

Booklist 37:18 S '40

"Talk is bright and surroundings and events familiar. The MacNeils are neither rich nor poor, but when one of them needs a sudden sum of money for some special purpose the others manage to give up enough apiece to meet the demand, and they enjoy these round-ups as such a family does in real life. This family spirit of rallying-round is the best feature of a lively book." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 25 '40 420w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p13 O 31 '40 230w

"Introduces a modern American girl whose zest in life and straight thinking will win her many friends. While the doings of her lively family always take the center of the stage when Page MacNeil's own affairs seem of vital importance she throws herself into the excitements of the others with good humor and self-forgetfulness. Friendships and fun are mingled with her disappointments and the completed picture is that of a natural, generous girl whose family really did appreciate her and gave her the opportunity she craved. Older girls will especially enjoy her adventure." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:348 S '40 100w

Reviewed by D. L. Wood
Library J 65:714 S 1 '40 100w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 65:869 O 15 '40 40w

"This is an eminently readable story of youth with its chin up. . . The life of a small college town in the South is drawn with sure strokes, and the dinner-table conversations, the well-worn family jokes, the bantering, not too witty to be real, are as genuine as today's newspaper and far more fun to read." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p9 Ag 11 '40 470w

"First class." Gladys Graham
+ Sat R of Lit 23:25 N 16 '40 40w

Wis Lib Bul 36:142 O '40

GRAY, JAMES. The Illinois; il. by Aaron Bohrod. (Rivers of America) 355p map $2.50 Farrar

917.73 Illinois river (W) 40-34654

The eleventh volume in the Rivers of America series collects material as varied as the Indians, the French explorers, historical battles, the abolitionists, the martyrdom of Elijah Lovejoy, and studies of Lincoln in Illinois, Douglas and Grant. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:172 Ja 1 '41

"If one were so inclined, it would not be difficult to be critical of the handling of this tale. One could point to the lack of continuity, or to the near-juvenility of the chapter on the Illinois Indians. One could also cite too many little slips of fact, a number of failures to distinguish between fact and legend, and some exceedingly doubtful interpretations, to put the matter charitably. But it is impossible to be critical with Mr. Gray. For one thing, he writes too well. Good phrases sparkle from his pages. . . Graciously, disarmingly, Mr. Gray has taken a placid, almost dull river and made its story as rich and colorful as that of many a more famous stream." P. M. Angle
+ Books p4 D 1 '40 700w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 18 '41 650w

"The latest volume of the Rivers of America series is The Illinois—a general guarantee of popularity and usefulness in public libraries. It is recommended for purchase by libraries practically everywhere in the United States, especially because it presents the Lincoln marriage in a more generous way than is now usual and has numerous other points which make it a delightful Lincoln item. . . In Illinois, Iowa, and Missouri, it should prove a fascinating supplementary reader for junior high, high school and college students—in fact, might well be required reading." M. E. Clark
+ Library J 65:921 N 1 '40 150w

"A highly readable book, a gift book even, with, as it were, a bite. . . This account of the Illinois River is not only widely informed; its very layout of chapters is imaginative and expert." Stark Young
+ New Repub 103:835 D 16 '40 600w

"Mr. Gray can write dryly, with implications of irony, about the early history of the Illinois country. But when he touches the Lincoln saga, his mood changes, he grows almost rhetorical, there comes into his writing the Way-Down-Upon-the-Swanee-River, the Lincoln-thou-shouldst-be-living-at-this-hour note which invades us all when we think of the tall man with his tall stories and his sad face and grow wistful for his integrity, his certitudes and his humanity." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p5 N 24 '40 1050w

"Eleventh in the Rivers of America Series, and one of the best. . . Deftly written."
+ New Yorker 16:96 N 23 '40 60w

"Mr. Gray's pleasant, impressionistic volume, written with genuine gusto, emphasizes the history [of the Illinois]. He does not include some matters that oldtime lovers of the Illinois may think belong in the book. . . But he does trace the history of the stream and the 25,000 miles it drains with a skilful hand; a history sometimes noble, now and then poetic, but more often simple, homely, and appealing." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 23:14 D 7 '40 700w

GRAY, WILLIAM SCOTT, ed. Reading in general education; an exploratory study; a report of the Com. on reading in general education. 464p $2.50 Am. council on educ.

372.4 Reading 40-6533

A summary of current practices and problems in reading in high schools and junior colleges. Partial contents: Reading and factors influencing reading efficiency, by W. S. Gray; Relation of reading to other forms of learning, by Edgar Dale; American culture and the teaching of literature, by Lou L. LaBrant; Reading interests and tastes, by H. A. Anderson; Diagnosis and remediation, by Ruth Strang; The library, by E. A. Wight and Leon Carnovsky.

Booklist 36:406 Jl 1 '40

J Home Econ 32:477 S '40 60w

"Those librarians who regard their most important function to be educational consider themselves as teachers. They are more interested in the qualitative aspects of reading and other forms of communication than in the quantitative. In Reading in General Education they will recognize a book of the first importance. For those who have neither the training nor the time for extended study of reading problems, this volume performs a highly useful function by its timely, readable, and relatively complete presentation of the subject and its implications." M. A. Gelfand
+ Library Q 11:110 Ja '41 750w

GREBENSHCHIKOV, GEORGII DMITRIEVICH. Turbulent giant; an epic novel on Russian peasantry. ltd ed 392p $3 Alatas pub. co, Southbury, Conn.

40-13928

"Grebenstchikoff is the Siberian writer who now makes his home in Southbury, Conn. . . None of his works, before this book, has been published in English. . . Now having mastered his English to make his own translations . . . and set up his own printing and publishing establishment . . . he probably intends to give us all his major works over the next few years. . . Poorest of the poor in a poor Russian village, the widower, Petroyavan, and his daughter Dunya and little son Mikulka, and Grandmother Ustinya, barely keep body and soul together. . . Barin opens doors for two of them. Follow their separate adventures in towns and cities, their train of sorrows, joys, crime, sin and repentance in peace and war." Books

"It is a Russian novel in the classic nineteenth century manner, on the Dostoyevskian side, hovering between realism and emotional fantasy." F. T. Marsh
+ Books p20 O 27 '40 330w

Reviewed by Paul Rosenfeld
Nation 151:662 D 28 '40 550w

GREBENSHCHIKOV, G. D.—Continued

"This is a great story, remarkably well done. It would be interesting to know if Mr. Grebenstchikoff has made the translation himself. Here and there its imperfections are evident; even so, the beauties of the work shine through with unquestioned luster." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p7 Je 23 '40 900w

GREBENSTCHIKOFF, GEORGE. See Grebenshchikov, G. D.

GREBLER, LEO, and WINKLER, WILHELM. The cost of the World war to Germany and to Austria-Hungary. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of economics and hist. Economic and social hist. of the World war. Supplementary volumes) 192p $2.50 Yale univ. press

940.343 European war, 1914-1918—Economic aspects. European war, 1914-1918—Germany. European war, 1914-1918—Austria-Hungary. War, Cost of 40-13784

"This supplementary volume in the Economic and Social History of the World War is divided into two parts. The first, entitled The Cost of the War to Germany, is by Leo Grebler. His study of the effects of the World War upon German economy, and especially upon German industry, deals exclusively with the war period, thus permitting a clearer appreciation of the cost of the war itself, irrespective of the cost of defeat and revolution, and the ensuing disorganization. Part II, entitled The Economic and Financial Consequences of the World War for Austria-Hungary, is by Wilhelm Winkler. Mr. Winkler's study is also limited to the period of actual hostilities." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by Jacob Van der Zee

Am Pol Sci R 34:1044 O '40 290w

"The section dealing with Germany is much the more satisfactory summary, though it must be admitted that the difficulties presented by the thoroughly inadequate materials on Austria-Hungary are in many respects well-nigh insuperable. This is an admirable volume in many respects. . . It is all the more regrettable, therefore, that certain obvious flaws should have marred such excellent work. Most obvious is the restriction of scope to the terminal points of belligerent status." R. A. Brady

+ — Ann Am Acad 211:201 S '40 600w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 20 '40 180w

Foreign Affairs 19:257 O '40 20w

GREEN, ANNE. The Delamer curse. 298p $2.50 Harper

40-14188

During nine generations the Delamers had all died before they were thirty. In the tenth generation Isabelle Hart, the last of the Delamers, traced back to its source the story of the curse and succeeded in breaking its spell. The scenes of the story are laid chiefly in Paris in the 1920s, but when Isabelle writes it down she is visiting the ancient home of the Delamers near Washington in the summer of 1939.

"'The Delamer Curse' is an attractive piece of light reading, so ably written that one wishes Miss Green might for her next novel turn her attention to human material which she might have to master and organize rather than fabricate." F. H. Bullock

+ — Books p8 Ag 25 '40 480w

New Repub 103:362 S 9 '40 40w

"It is a fantastic tale full of strange happenings, never for a moment dull. There are pleasant passages on divers subjects—from the importance of dreams to the fascinations of the weather. There are clever characterizations, minor and major. . . It is to be hoped that no one will be misled by the book's title to look for a routine mystery yarn in this fey romancing." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 25 '40 650w

"Told somewhat in the style of Daphne du Maurier's 'Rebecca,' but not nearly as sharp or as clever."

New Yorker 16:65 Ag 24 '40 60w

"There is a sharp change of mood in the book that startles the reader. We jump from farce to magic to melodrama without warning as one does in a dream. It is a diverting, confusing, episodic, modern fairy tale." R. C. B.

Sat R of Lit 22:21 Ag 31 '40 400w

GREENBIE, MARJORIE LATTA (BARSTOW) (MRS SYDNEY GREENBIE). My dear lady; the story of Anna Ella Carroll, the great unrecognized member of Lincoln's cabinet. (Whittlesey house publication) 316p il maps $2.75 McGraw

B or 92 Carroll, Anna Ella. U.S.—History —Civil war (W) 40-32282

Biography of Anna Ella Carroll, a member of the Protestant branch of the Carroll family of Maryland, who is said to have served as Lincoln's close advisor during the Civil war, and to have been responsible for the plans for Grant's campaign in the West. Index.

"Although the book is not to be taken seriously as history, 'My Dear Lady' is far from being valueless. Even those who beg to be excused from believing that Anna Ella Carroll taught Grant how to fight and Lincoln how to rule must admit that she was a lady of quality, although not exactly the quality ascribed to her by her biographer." G. W. Johnson

— + Books p21 O 6 '40 900w

"While the book is fully documented and was read critically and approved by the well-known historians, Charles and Mary Beard, it is not encumbered by footnotes, technicalities, nor pedantry. It is a fine effort by the author of 'The American Saga' to do belated justice to this shadowy figure who is perhaps the greatest unrecognized woman in our history." L. B. Stowe

+ N Y Times p32 D 8 '40 1200w

New Yorker 16:88 O 26 '40 40w

GREENBIE, SYDNEY. Leisure for living. 288p $2.50 G. W. Stewart, 67 W. 44th st, N.Y.

179 Leisure. Conduct of life (W) 40-27545

Chapters on the art of making the most of leisure time. In his discussions of leisure for relaxation, for learning, for enrichment, and for reflection, the author suggests the lasting pleasures to be gained by intelligent use of time, instead of wasting it in the feverish pursuit of ephemeral pleasures. Index.

Booklist 36:405 Jl 1 '40

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '40

"For two years editor of Leisure magazine, the former Amherst resident elaborated his researches into an interesting book. There is nothing phenomenal about his work, for the individual must understand his own circumstances before he can undertake to make good use of free time. Once this is accomplished, Mr Greenbie's suggestions are helpful and constructive."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Ag 30 '40 480w

GREENE, GRAHAM. Labyrinthine ways [Eng title: Power and the glory]. 301p $2.50 Viking [8s 6d Heinemann]

40-7012

A man fleeing for his life, a Mexican Catholic priest, is the central character. Profoundly religious, yet too weak to resist whiskey, the priest alternately runs from the military authorities, and risks his life to bring the comfort of the church to the fearful, browbeaten Mexican peasants.

"Superbly told. And through the prosaic details runs a thread of mysticism, of something that guns and hate cannot destroy. This book is a splendid achievement, brilliant description, tense narrative—and something else besides."

+ Atlantic My '40 140w

"Mr. Greene has written a drama of character, conscience and circumstance of a kind that is rarely found in English—a kind in which the greatest of the Russians have proved their powers. He has written it with a profound and subtle understanding of the values involved and an unerring sense of how to make those values most effectively explicit. 'The Labyrinthine Ways' should give deep satisfaction and lasting pleasure to many different readers, for many different reasons." B. R. Redman

+ Books p3 Mr 31 '40 800w

"In addition to the brilliant originality discernible in Graham Greene's earlier books, 'The Labyrinthine Ways' reveals a developing command of language, characterization and mood. In this sombre analysis of the conflicting loyalties and desires of a soul in torment Mr Greene exhibits the talents of a mature novelist." Jean Arrowsmith

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 280w

Cath World 151:253 My '40 300w

"Mr. Greene's style is a model for economy of phrase. He is a master in the art of suspense. He seems to have the gift of understanding. Whether his character is a gringo dentist gone to seed, a brutal police lieutenant, a little boy reacting against pietist family pressure, a brave, resourceful little girl in a foreign land, or a truly humble 'whiskey priest,' it seems to make little difference. All speak for themselves convincingly; they are not easily forgotten. Graham Greene is a man to watch." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ Commonweal 31:478 Mr 22 '40 380w

"This is a harrowing tale, but its relentless refusal of any substitute for goodness leaves the reader exultant rather than depressed and marks out its author as an imaginative critic of life. He sees that there is no alternative in our present troubles but this and that the scene of the story should be laid in Mexico, beloved by some philosophers in fiction, gives to it an ironical pungency." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 5 '40 340w

"The imagery is topographically exact and evenly distributed over the story. The sequence of events is effective, the pace is exciting and the sudden pauses are often felicitous and nuggeted with poetry. The scene in the prison room, when that dark and stinking hole is taken as a symbol of the world, is lovely; the drama of the priest's confrontation in prison with the revolutionary lieutenant is powerful. There is subtlety in Mr. Greene's study of the yellow-faced informer, and there is an abundance of acute, even profound, remarks about man's nature and the psychology of religion." Ralph Bates

+ New Repub 102:549 Ap 22 '40 1000w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 19:371 Mr 16 '40 700w

"I suspect that this novel marks a stage of transition between 'Brighton Beach' . . . and the novels Mr. Greene has in store for the future. But however that may be, and whatever you may think of the point of view, the import behind the narrative, 'The Labyrinthine Ways,' like the other Greene novels I have read, is a first-rate piece of story telling." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 17 '40 900w

"Excellent characterization, admirable local color."

+ New Yorker 16:106 Mr 16 '40 60w

"I have never been in Mexico, but the atmosphere and detail of this book are convincing. So are the variegated people. So are the squalor and the heat and the venality of man, the sloth and the violence. And Mr. Greene has told the story of a truly spiritual struggle, in the breast of a miserable sinner, who can yet do brave things, in a fashion that sets this novel of his a little above and apart from his others. Also, he has now proved himself one of the finest craftsmen of story-telling in our time." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 21:5 Mr 30 '40 550w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 164:390 Mr 15 '40 300w

Time 35:88 Ap 8 '40 100w

"It is expertly done, and the curious thing is that a purposeful flattening dramatic effect and a trick of rather artificial phrasing both seem to help rather than hinder. Yet perhaps one needs to be of the author's religious persuasion in order to feel complete imaginative sympathy. What is otherwise unsatisfying in the story is its bleak division of human experience into shabby sins, lusts and violences on the one side, doctrinal salvation on the other. There seems to be hardly anything between—neither joy in life nor kindness, neither practical philosophy nor a gleam of humour. In brief, it is not so much an illusion of life that Mr. Greene achieves in this novel as an illustration of doctrine."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p121 Mr 9 '40 750w

GREENE, THEODORE MEYER. The arts and the art of criticism. 690p il $5 Princeton univ. press

701 Art—Philosophy. Criticism. Esthetics 40-4415

This volume is the result "of a project in which more than a dozen experts in a variety of fields have approached the cooperative idea of a 'society of scholars.' Mr Greene is a philosopher; his collaborators include art scholars, literary scholars, practicing artists, and fellow philosophers. Together they have sought to invade the 'no man's land' between art and philosophy and produce a work of philosophical esthetics based directly on specific examples rather than generalizations about art and beauty." (Springf'd Republican) Contains three hundred collotype illustrations, grouped at the end of the book, a chart, and indexes.

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

Reviewed by Charles Hartshorne

Ethics 51:116 O '40 500w

"This is a serious book; it cannot be read at one sitting; it was not made to be entertaining. It is pretty much of a comprehensive treatise on the various subjects implied in its title; yet it is not a mere reference book. Its shortcomings, as the reviewer has found them, may be forgiven to a certain extent by the difficulty of the undertaking. The choice of language and the precision of statement, which cause altogether too much repetition, constantly remind the reader that a professor of philosophy is speaking. Also one can frequently take exception to the analysis of particular works of art. . . Nevertheless, the book is provocative, and one feels that the author will deem it a success if it encourages others to consider what is the nature of art." G. H. Huntley

+ — Library Q 10:455 Jl '40 1000w

"A convincing but overelaborate case for a suggestive but not revolutionary methodology."

+ — New Repub 102:222 F 12 '40 40w

Reviewed by Dino Ferrari

N Y Times p30 D 8 '40 1400w

"The text is closely reasoned but perfectly lucid. It abounds in definitions, but if it splits anything it is prejudices rather than hairs. Apart from a few hard words like 'conative,' it is within the grasp of the general reader, and its appeal to the partakers of art is quite simple." James Barzun

+ Sat R of Lit 23:30 D 7 '40 1100w

Special Libraries 31:337 S '40

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 28 '40 120w

"Although Mr. Greene is not entirely wrong in claiming that the contributors to this work have discovered a certain stretch of no-man's land somewhere on the outskirts of psychology and aesthetics, it still remains doubtful whether it was worth their while to explore it so minutely with so little result."

GREENE, T. M.—Continued
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p475 S 14 '40 230w

GREENE, WARD (FRANK DUDLEY, pseud). King Cobra. 275p $2.50 Carrick
40-27436

The fictionized account of a secret organization called here the Red Riders. Altho supposed to be a patriotic organization, it is really nothing more than a nation-wide racket, and the story is of its rapid rise and eventual downfall.

Booklist 36:364 My 15 '40

"King Cobra is American history and stingingly has Dudley written it, however cloaked in fiction. History, like an idiot, repeats itself, and Dudley strikes a timely warning." Rose Feld
+ Books p10 Ap 14 '40 950w

"It is a humorous and mocking book. It is a fast and bloody story. But it is thoughtful too; in its tempered knowledge of people and events, it shows you what happened, and how it happened, and how in the onward march of human nature it will happen again. Read all about it and guess who done it." Otis Ferguson
+ New Repub 102:545 Ap 22 '40 550w

"This vivid work of fiction has a topical value for those who give thought to present trends. Are we on the eve of a recrudescence of superpatriot organizations more dangerous than ever because their leaders will be imbued with political motives rather than greed for money?" Drake De Kay
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 7 '40 600w
New Yorker 16:98 Ap 13 '40 70w

"It is apparent that the author is quite familiar with his subject. However, he has been entirely too impersonal and objective in his effort to fictionize fact. Not even the embellishments permissive in the name of dramatic license make 'King Cobra' tragedy, drama, or even melodrama. Nevertheless, it is passably entertaining reading. In fact, 'King Cobra' might be read profitably, particularly by the gullible and intolerant who are attracted to such un-American organizations as the discredited KKK, which, Mr. Dudley hints darkly, may ride again." Linton Wells
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ap 13 '40 210w

GREENE, WARD (FRANK DUDLEY, pseud). Route 28. 265p $2 Doubleday
40-33583

Route 28 was the highway leading away from New York into the hills and countryside of New Jersey. City people drove along it, bought farms or week-end cottages, seeking to escape from futility or unhappiness. The natives suffered their own frustrations and disappointments. The story tells what happened to some of these people and why the often-drunk real estate dealer was willing to sacrifice himself for a young boy's good in the end.

"Mr. Greene weaves these haunted people into a smooth and expert pattern. 'Route 28' does not assail one with the fresh power of 'Death in the Deep South.' Perhaps the designs of frustration are too familiar. But it does make a hunger for the land something to cling to, something indestructible." Page Cooper
+ Books p10 O 20 '40 700w

"Neat character bits, flashes of dialogue, cracks at New Deal economy, the country manners of rich city Jews and the absurdities of urban escapists, taproom buffoonery combine to provide some keen humor and never ill-tempered satire. But the serious passages seem to be frequently off-key and the dramatic action fails to convince. Easy and entertaining reading." F. T. Marsh
+ — N Y Times p24 O 20 '40 750w

GREENWOOD, FRANCES ANDERSON, comp. Bibliography of swimming. 308p $4.25 Wilson, H.W.
016.7972 Swimming—Bibliography 40-4240

A bibliography of about 10,000 books and magazine articles in nineteen different languages. Arrangement is alphabetical under author and one or more subjects with many cross references. There are four appendices listing (A) organizations promoting swimming; (B) sources for equipment and supplies; (C) films; (D) periodicals and publishers.

Reviewed by C. H. Keene
Am J Pub Health 30:1126 S '40 120w
Booklist 36:275 Mr 15 '40

"It is a book that almost every library, be it college, university, Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., recreation, public, or special, will find decidedly useful and worth having. Miss Greenwood has performed a real and genuine service and is to be congratulated on her result." W. M. Ranck
+ Library J 65:342 Ap 15 '40 500w

GREEVER, WALTON HARLOWE. Human relationships and the church. 96p $1 Revell
261 Sociology, Christian 39-32150

"A discussion of social problems from the standpoint of a fairly forward-looking Lutheran. Dr. Greever is at least sure that he knows precisely where the line runs which delimits the functions of the church from those of the state, and many in other communions who have been puzzled over that problem will turn with interest to his clear outline of the Lutheran position." Christian Century

Reviewed by W. A. Marzolf
Boston Transcript p5 Ap 6 '40 170w
Christian Century 56:1346 N 1 '39 70w

GREGG, ELLERY CLARK. How to tie flies; drawings and phot. by the author. (Barnes dollar sports lib) 83p $1 Barnes, A.S.
799.12 Flies, Artificial 40-27079

Drawings, photographs, and explicit text, demonstrate for the fisherman the art of tying flies. Contains a list of standard dressings of 334 flies, alphabetically arranged.

Booklist 36:285 Mr 15 '40

"Mr. Gregg's slender volume is an addition to the Barnes Dollar Sports Library, and a very good one. The price is fair, the printing and binding excellent, and the illustrations clear and satisfactory." T. S.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 13 '40 210w
Wis Lib Bul 36:96 My '40

GREGORY, MRS ADDIE (HIBBARD). A great-grandmother remembers. 238p il $2.50 Kroch
B or 92 40-27517

"These memoirs of a great-grandmother present a panorama which is on the whole charming, of Chicago from the Eighteen Sixties to today. The picture is focused on family and social life, but in the active existence of the Hibbards and Gregorys and their friends that included a great deal of philanthropic, educational, and even public interest." N Y Times

Booklist 36:397 Je 15 '40
+ N Y Times p8 Jl 14 '40 460w

GREGORY, HOMER EWART, and BARNES, KATHLEEN. North Pacific fisheries; with special reference to Alaska salmon. 322p $3 Inst. of Pacific relations

639.2755 Salmon. Fisheries—Pacific ocean 39-33672

"The study was prompted by the growing necessity of finding ways and means for conserving the supply of salmon and halibut in waters extending from California to Alaska, in the face of constantly improving methods of catching, processing, and marketing these fish. The authors have undertaken to examine and clarify the major aspects of these fishing industries, including the biological bases of the industries, habits of the fish, methods of taking, processing, and marketing them, and past and present efforts at conservation by California, Oregon, Washington, Canada, and the United States. Existing treaty arrangements for conservation are explained. The relative place of small-scale and large-scale fishing operations, with the advantages, disadvantages, and limitations of each, is surveyed. Problems of labor supply and unionization are examined. The importance of the fisheries in Alaskan economy is demonstrated." Am Pol Sci R

"This survey emphasizes the importance of the North Pacific fishing industry to Alaska, the Pacific Northwest and the United States. It will be of especial interest to those charged with the management of marine fishery resources, to those directly associated with the fishing industry, and to all students of economics and international law." S. H. Thompson

+ Am Econ R 30:387 Je '40 400w

"Twenty-seven tables and twenty-three graphs, distributed effectively throughout the book, add measurably to the clarity of the case made out by the authors, and in no way interfere with the excellent readability of the text." N. D. Houghton

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:174 F '40 220w

"Unusual skill and discrimination are shown in the selection of essential data, and the book is written in forceful, lucid, and entertaining style. Anyone wishing to get a broad, impartial, and well-balanced picture of the situation need look no further than to this volume. No other publication on the subject contains a discussion of similar scope and interest. It is a handbook alike for the student and the commercial operator." W. T. Bower

+ Ann Am Acad 208:227 Mr '40 370w

Foreign Affairs 18:753 Jl '40 10w

"Acute controversies exist in the fishing industry, such as pertain to labor, 'gear fights,' and conservation. Some of the authors' statements and conclusions regarding these matters may be challenged. But the work gives evidence of fearless, critical, and judicial approach to these as to all other questions." E. W. Allen

Geog R 30:167 Ja '40 450w

"This work represents a thoroughly competent and illuminating, though admittedly not definitive, study of the economic aspects of the North Pacific salmon fisheries. . . The authors have no neat, sure-fire solution; but they have performed a real service in drawing attention to the vital necessity for reaching (and that soon) some sort of solution." E. P. Hohman

+ J Pol Econ 48:455 Je '40 550w

Reviewed by B. H. Kizer

Pacific Affairs 13:92 Mr '40 1150w

GREGORY, JACKSON. The far call. 263p $2 Dodd

40-32559

Western story.

Booklist 37:156 D 15 '40

"If you like Westerns at all, Jackson Gregory should win your interest with his opening scenes of young love, murder and family life in Pleasant Valley." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 D 15 '40 160w

"Here is as pretty, lively and compelling a romance as Jackson Gregory has ever written. It was published serially under the title of 'Gambler's Choice.'" G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p21 D 15 '40 200w

GREGORY, JACKSON. The girl at the Crossroads. 225p $2 Dodd

40-12656

Story of a man and a girl marooned in a lonely California mountain cabin during a blizzard. The man is Jan Goyanza, a painter, famous and successful for his pastorals; the girl is Gia, a dancer.

Booklist 37:92 N 1 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 Ag 11 '40 80w

"While somewhat shorter and slighter than Jackson Gregory's other recent novels of the West of today, this one has his wonted zip and zest in the writing, his skill in characterization, his compulsion of unflagging interest in the tale."

+ N Y Times p32 N 17 '40 210w

GREGORY, SIR RICHARD ARMAN, 1st bart. Religion in science and civilization. 366p map $3 (12s 6d) Macmillan

215 Religion—History. Religion and science. Civilization—History [40-14442]

"The book is a discursive presentation of a large number of the results reached by anthropological inquiry regarding the part played by religion in the different phases of human culture. Some of it, however, is concerned less with religion than with rudimentary attempts at science—in Babylonian and Greek starlore, for instance—or with the allusions to contemporary scientific theories in an arbitrarily selected number of poets—Omar Khayyam, Dante, Tennyson, Chaucer, Milton, Donne, Goethe." (Spec) Index.

Nature 145:872 Je 8 '40 1900w

"Since Sir Richard has a large acquaintance with the results of anthropological inquiry in the various parts of the field over which he ranges, any reader less versed in that field will no doubt gain from such a book a good deal of knowledge which he had not before. Nowhere indeed does Sir Richard claim to contribute anything fresh of his own to what the specialist researchers have put forward: the book is one of popularisation, but to spread the results of research among the general public is, after all, a good work. So far as my own limited knowledge qualifies me to judge, the account which Sir Richard gives of the different religious and cultural phenomena surveyed is generally sound, though it seems to me unfortunate that he should set forth the fantastic imaginations of Professor Freud about Moses as if they were accepted by any competent body of opinion. I have noticed only one or two definite mistakes." Edwyn Bevan

+ — Spec 164:753 My 31 '40 900w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 28 '40 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p312 Je 29 '40 750w

GREIDINGER, BENJAMIN BERNARD. Accounting requirements of the Securities and exchange commission for the preparation of financial statements. 517p $5 Ronald

332.63 U.S. Securities and exchange commission. Financial statements 40-4171

"The author of this book approaches his topic primarily through a study of a selected number of deficient and amended financial reports and accountants' certificates on file with the Commission. He believes that this 'should permit the investigator to come to a reasonably clear understanding of the Commission's accounting requirements for the preparation of the prescribed financial reports as well as an acquaintanceship with that body's views on

GREIDINGER, B. B.—Continued
what are and are not "recognized and accepted accounting principles."' Various sections take up the financial statements to be filed, the detailed problems of the balance sheet, of the profit and loss statement and of accountants' certificates." Am Econ R

Reviewed by W. P. Fiske
Am Econ R 30:621 S '40 150w

"The book is systematically arranged, with an extensive bibliography and index. It is a valuable work both for students and for those who prepare financial statements." W. A. Hosmer
+ Harvard Business R 18:389 spring '40 130w

GREIG, MAYSIE (JENNIFER AMES, pseud). Dangerous cruise [Eng title: Dangerous holiday]. 275p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hodder]
40-8549

Susan, an English nurse who knows too much about the affairs of two men, one a young doctor, the other a millionaire who had at one time been accused of murder, finds both men on board the ship on which she is to take a voyage. To complicate matters the doctor's wife, who had deserted him, appears as the fiancée of the millionaire. It is not until the cruise is almost ended that the complications are cleared up.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p14 Je 16 '40 100w

"The author's style is as melodramatic as her plot, but, perhaps, readers looking for rapid-fire action will overlook that." B. S.
N Y Times p12 Je 16 '40 230w

GREIG, MAYSIE (JENNIFER AMES, pseud). A fortune in romance [Eng title: Grand relations]. 276p $2 Doubleday [8s 3d Hodder]
40-30101

"Judy is still very young, childlike and pretty when the part of her life revealed in this story ends, but she has fallen in love twice, been married once, left her husband, crossed the Atlantic four times, saved a jailbird's reputation and foiled three villainous relatives and a red-haired siren, all without losing her artlessness or gaining poise." N Y Times

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p11 Ag 18 '40 210w
Boston Transcript p7 Ag 31 '40 70w

"A year so crowded with events makes a diverting tale for a warm afternoon, and Miss Greig gives it excitement by letting the reader in on all the plotting of which innocent little Judy knows nothing." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p14 Ag 18 '40 200w

GREIG, MAYSIE (JENNIFER AMES, pseud). Make the man notice you. 271p $2 Doubleday 40-6910

An English girl, with determination but not too much talent, achieves success when she makes up her mind to escape the dullness of the English countryside by way of the movies.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p10 F 18 '40 120w
Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p17 F 25 '40 170w

GREIG, MAYSIE (JENNIFER AMES, pseud). Rich twin, poor twin. 276p $2 Doubleday [8s 3d Hodder] 40-31452

When they were ten years old Pearl and Mary Houghtonstone were separated; Pearl was adopted by wealthy Mrs Desmond, while Mary remained at the orphanage. Years later their paths crossed when Mary Stone became the secretary to David Woolf, a rising young politician—and Pearl's fiance.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p23 O 6 '40 130w

"Out of a mixture of politics and crossed love affairs Miss Greig makes an entertaining story, very British, and making good use of the war for its happy conclusion." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p26 O 6 '40 160w

GREIG, MAYSIE (JENNIFER AMES, pseud). Unmarried couple. 263p $2 Doubleday 40-6581

"The rightful heir to Oakfield Park was on his barge. On it too, posing as a jewel thief, was the heiress to millions, just escaped from a distasteful wedding, her own. By accident they saw an ad, put in the paper by the interlopers at his ancestral estate in England, wanting a married couple. The boy, just back from long years in Australia, had never seen his home, and he persuaded Kathleen to pose as his wife and try for the job. Of course they got it." N Y Times

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p17 Ap 14 '40 110w
Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p23 My 12 '40 120w

GREY, ZANE. 30,000 on the hoof. 304p $2 Harper
(W) 40-14076

Western story.

Booklist 37:92 N 1 '40
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p17 Ag 25 '40 110w

"Perhaps a little too much happens in the final chapters. . . But perhaps, too, that is why Zane Grey has so many followers. He moves slowly for the first 200 pages and then at the end rewards the reader for his patience. It is to be hoped that this is not the last fine yarn Mr. Grey has left posterity." Earl Wedrow
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 21 '40 400w

"The tale is long, slow-paced, factual with innumerable details, prolix in the telling. Yet it does move along, if at a lumbering gait, to its poignant catastrophe and thence to an effective climax. Zane Grey devotees will not be disappointed." G. W. Harris
+ — N Y Times p25 N 3 '40 250w
Times [London] Lit Sup p645 D 21 '40 100w
Wis Lib Bul 36:137 O '40

GRIFFIN, CHARLES CARROLL, ed. See National committee of the United States of America on international intellectual cooperation. Concerning Latin American culture

GRIFFITH, ERNEST STACEY. The impasse of democracy; a study of the modern government in action. 380p $3 Harrison-Hilton 321.8 Political science. State, The. U.S.—Politics and government. Democracy 39-30638

"In the concluding chapter of 'Recent Social Trends,' [Book Review Digest, 1933] a formidable barrage of questions was laid down by Professor Charles E. Merriam. Most of these questions dealt with 'the heavy pressure of powerful social, economic, and technical forces' threatening to crush the shell of a government which becomes more and more important in the social and economic situation. Dean Griffith's book is largely concerned with pressures of the same character. He does not, however, limit himself to American trends; his study attempts 'a synthesis of phenomena in all nations, even of those as diverse as Russia, Germany, and the United States.' " Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by W. S. Carpenter
Am Pol Sci R 34:569 Je '40 130w

"Many readers will find much with which to disagree in Professor Griffith's book, but this is precisely one of its merits. It is systematic, stimulating, and provocative." W. J. Ronan
+ — Ann Am Acad 213:198 Ja '41 700w

Reviewed by John Lydenberg
Boston Transcript p7 Ja 6 '40 450w

Cath World 151:763 S '40 220w

"Dean Griffith has the happy faculty of seeing visions without being visionary. Only minor errors mar his work as he focuses on the riddle of reconciling democracy and integralism. His solution is promising." Garland Downum
+ Christian Century 57:974 Ag 7 '40 700w

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee
Ethics 51:118 O '40 700w

Foreign Affairs 19:251 O '40 40w

New Repub 103:94 Jl 15 '40 60w

Reviewed by R. C. Brooks
Sat R of Lit 21:17 F 24 '40 330w

"The whole study is distinguished by its practicability. It describes government in action, in actual storm and stress, and explains its whys and wherefores. By such approach, analysis, and operational unfolding the author succeeds in detaching himself from the political climate and 'handing out' a vivid clean story, otherwise complicated. Thereby Dean Griffith also hits the bullseye, showing the recent developments and changes in the economic and political pattern of the United States to be a part of world trends." M. J. Shore
+ Social Studies 31:282 O '40 550w

GRIGGS, EDWARD HOWARD. Moral leaders. 240p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

920 6 anals 40-31589

"Brief biographies of Socrates, St. Francis, Erasmus, Carlyle, Emerson and Tolstoy, interpretative as well as factual, with stress upon the qualities of moral leadership." Christian Century

Christian Century 57:1145 S 18 '40 30w

"One of the advantages of this book is its easy-flowing style. It is a delightful relaxation to read it. Though the work is not profound, and though the nature of the lectures precludes an exhaustive treatment of any one man, the book is well worth reading. I should recommend it strongly to laymen and ministers. The latter, I am sure, will find the book very stimulating homiletically." G. W. Davis
+ Crozer Q 18:75 Ja '41 330w

GRIMM, FRANCIS W. A primer to bookbinding. 66p il $1.75 Houghton

686 Bookbinding (W) 39-32330

Simple, explicit directions for the beginner in bookbinding. No commercial work is included. The project method is used in developing the study, which will be useful for schools or those interested in bookbinding as a hobby. The author is a member of a firm of Madison, Wisconsin, bookbinders.

Booklist 36:233 F 15 '40

"Mr. Grimm's clearly written, concise and altogether practical manual of book-binding for the amateur should enjoy a most enthusiastic response. The diagrams and photographs are so thoughtfully chosen that even a non-handy person could do a pretty good job of binding a paper-backed novel."
+ Boston Transcript p7 D 16 '39 60w
Wis Lib Bul 36:13 Ja '40

GRINSTEAD, JESSE EDWARD. King of Hualpi valley. 255p $2 Dodge

40-30883

Western story.

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 17 '40 30w

"This story is of slighter substance than its predecessors from the capable and skillful J. E. Grinstead, but it is written with his wonted expertness and verve." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p22 S 8 '40 180w

GRINTER, LINTON ELIAS. Automatic design of continuous frames in steel and reinforced concrete. 141p il $3 Macmillan

624.17 Steel construction. Concrete, Reinforced 40-503

A highly specialized treatise containing all the information needed by the designer to apply automatic design methods to a continuous structure with straight or haunched members. Index.

Booklist 36:301 Ap 1 '40

"With its rather complete coverage of modern concepts of designing for continuity and its presentation of a design method planned for ease and accuracy, the book will be found both useful and stimulating."
+ Eng N 123:72 D 21 '39 250w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:13 Ja '40

GRISCOM, LLOYD CARPENTER. Diplomatically speaking. 476p $3.50 Little

B or 92 Diplomatic memoirs (W) 40-31596

The author of these memoirs was the son of a wealthy Philadelphia Quaker family. Before he was forty, he had served as an American diplomatic representative in England, Turkey, Persia, Japan, Brazil and Italy. This volume covers his early life, his diplomatic career, his career in politics, and his services in the World war. Index.

Booklist 37:89 N 1 '40
Bookmark 2:10 Ja '41

"Perhaps it is the all-pervading humor of the book that will first impress the reader. But as the amazing story unfolds he will appreciate with equal force the extraordinarily shrewd approval of personalities of which the humor is part and parcel, indispensably so. And then he will discover that at bottom the delightful raconteur is a man of extremely serious purpose, one of marked courage who worked very hard and often with brilliant success at serving his country." W. M. Houghton
+ Books p5 O 6 '40 1550w

"The book is well written throughout, it holds the reader's attention from beginning to end and contains much of permanent value. Time spent in reading it is certainly not wasted." Philip Nichols
+ Boston Transcript p1 S 28 '40 1200w

"You will enjoy this most delightful book, which only occasionally is spoiled by Protestant prejudice. For once we may believe the blurb, which declares that these memoirs are 'a truly extraordinary success story, a gay excursion into a world now past, and a personal history of a man of charm and spirit.' " B. L. C.
+ Cath World 152:627 F '41 500w

"A book of unusual charm and interest. I have seldom read a book that I more greatly enjoyed." J. F. Kennedy
+ Current Hist & Forum 52:6 O 22 '40 430w

Nation 151:400 O 26 '40 100w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p5 O 13 '40 1550w

"A graceful and often witty book."
+ New Yorker 16:79 S 28 '40 30w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '40 1550w

GRISMER, RAYMOND LEONARD, comp. Reference index to twelve thousand Spanish American authors; a guide to the literature of Spanish America. (Inter-American bibliographical and library association publications) 150p $4.50 Wilson, H.W.

016.86 Spanish American literature—Dictionaries, indexes, etc. 39-32334

"An alphabetical list of authors, mostly literary but including historians, with indication of nationality, dates of birth and death when known, pseudonyms, and with page references to works containing bibliographical and biographical information." Am Hist R

Am Hist R 45:994 Jl '40 50w

"This reference index is a timely and welcome publication which was sorely needed by scholars and librarians. To compile it has been an arduous task, and the author and his assistants well deserve the name of pioneers in this field. . . The arrangement of this Index is simple and of easy and quick manipulation." Carlos Castillo

+ Library Q 10:125 Ja '40 470w

"[An] excellent and helpful book. . . Accurate biographical and bibliographical information about Latin-American authors has been difficult to find, and it is easy to understand, for a recent count disclosed 177 writers named Gonzalez, 154 Rodriguez, 140 Fernandez, etc., etc., citizens of some twenty different countries. The present book bridges these lacunae by listing after the names of each of twelve thousand Latin-American authors those bibliographies, histories of literature and anthologies that provide information about them." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p16 S 15 '40 310w

GROBBEN, MARGARET MAUD. Industrial banking; a phase of consumer credit. 116p $1.50 Consumer credit inst. of Am, inc, 233 Broadway, N.Y.

332.31 Loans. Credit. Banks and banking 40-4336

Short outline of the institution of industrial banking: the business of making personal loans to industrial workers and other wage earners. Industrial banking is defined, its operation described, and some of the problems involved are discussed. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. C. Jennings
Am Econ R 30:640 S '40 280w

"The least that any reviewer can say about the book is that it is well organized, well written, and presents a good case in favor of the institution of industrial banking. That it does not go more deeply into the subject is due to the limitation of size. But considering its size and its preservation of simplicity throughout, it does a remarkably good job of describing the institution of industrial banking." Gilbert Harold

+ — Ann Am Acad 209:214 My '40 1000w

"The account of the way the business developed and its present methods of operation will be of interest to home economists concerned with the means and costs of obtaining credit for special family and personal needs."

+ J Home Econ 32:397 Je '40 80w

GROSE, CLYDE LECLARE. A select bibliography of British history, 1660-1760. 507p $9 Univ. of Chicago press [54s Cambridge]

016.942 Great Britain—History—Bibliography 40-2897

"The work contains some eight thousand titles relating to the period 1660-1760; of these, slightly under half appear as major numbered entries, and the rest are added in smaller type under the main entries. Grose lists—frequently with critical comments—collections of source material, collections of unpublished manuscripts, contemporary writings, and later studies; and he covers most of the fields of history: general, travel, constitutional, diplomatic, military, naval, economic, social, religious, cultural, local, and colonial." (Library Q) Index.

"Professor Grose has performed the valuable and difficult task of compressing the bibliography of a whole century of British history into one volume of moderate size. . . The organization, though somewhat elaborate, is clear; and the Index, as far as this reviewer has used it, is complete and accurate. It is inevitable in a highly selective bibliography of this sort that the specialist will learn nothing new about his particular field, that he will notice a few striking omissions, and that he will think that certain works might well be added to the exclusion of others. But, judging by the entries in the fields with which the reviewer is most familiar, anyone consulting the works listed by Grose will eventually come upon all that is important." Arthur Friedman

+ — Library Q 10:293 Ap '40 900w

"The work seems to be accurate and complete within its limits although the author prematurely knights Professor Trevelyan. The chief criticism must be of the arrangement; one notes for instance, two books on the Treaty of Utrecht appearing in entirely different sections. There ought surely to be more cross references."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p211 Ap 27 '40 140w

GROSSMAN, HAROLD J. Guide to wines, spirits and beers; maps and drawings by Conrado W. Massaguer. 404p $5 Sherman & Spoerer, inc, 130 W. 46th st, N.Y.

663 Wine and wine making. Liquors. Beer 40-32688

Guide to the wine and spirits industry. It gives historical backgrounds, geographical distribution, production and uses for the wines of France, Italy, Germany, Hungary, Spain, Portugal, Madeira, and the United States, as well as like data on many other spirits in general. Lists of wines and shippers of wines. Glossary. Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:149 D 15 '40

"Mr. Grossman writes appreciatively and lovingly of each beverage. Not too adjectival and ecstatic, as is the manner with some wine authors, but learnedly and always engagingly." Richardson Wright

+ Books p18 O 20 '40 480w

GROSSMAN, LEROY WHITNEY. Investment principles and practice. 266p pa $1 Longmans

332.67 Investments. Securities 39-19380

"[This work] is divided into four parts. Part I—one chapter only—deals with definitions of savings, capital, and investment. Part II—eight chapters—deals with investment media, limited to stocks and bonds. Part III devotes one chapter each to investment policies of individuals, banks, insurance companies, and trustees. Part IV—nine chapters—discusses investment procedure." Ann Am Acad

Am Econ R 30:165 Mr '40 20w

Reviewed by H. E. Hoagland
Ann Am Acad 206:196 N '39 400w

Reviewed by J. G. Plank, Jr.
Social Studies 31:142 Mr '40 100w

GROVER, EULALIE OSGOOD. Robert Louis Stevenson, teller of tales; il. by Marc Simont. 265p $2 Dodd

B or 92 Stevenson, Robert Louis (W) 40-6471

Biography of Stevenson for junior and senior high school age. The emphasis is upon his younger years, altho the book gives a complete survey of his life. Bibliography.

Booklist 36:400 Je 15 '40

"Examining it carefully one sees that controversial matters . . . have been left out for the excellent reason that children would not be in the least interested in them. Everything of importance to them is here. His courage—his strongest hold on the admiring affection of children—is brought out but not sentimentalized." M. L. Becker
+ Books p14 My 5 '40 380w

"Miss Grover writes a sympathetic and honest biography in well-balanced proportions for its purpose, without sentimentality or morbidness." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:173 My '40 160w

"Student days and restless young manhood are stressed, but it is a well-balanced account of the entire career of the man and author. . . Although the style is a bit pedestrian at times, it is a readable account of a man whose gallantry and endurance and gaiety in the face of great obstacles make him an appealing and inspiring figure to young people. Very evidently much labor and interest have gone into this book. . . Large print, rather poor illustrations." Eleanor Kidder
+ — Library J 65:355 Ap 15 '40 170w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:853 O 15 '40 20w

"Miss Grover's book shows a wise discrimination in emphasis and in the choice of material, and uses effectively quotations from Stevenson's own works and letters. . . [Her] well-written book, which has spontaneity and something of Stevenson's own pleasure in words, should encourage boys and girls to further explorations in the field of biography." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 My 19 '40 700w

"Miss Grover's book is not unwelcome because in its simple, enthusiastic way it takes a new attitude to Stevenson. She writes about R.L.S. with young readers in mind, and writes about him as if he were a character in one of his own stories. . . Stevenson will always be read and loved by the young and the warmhearted, and Miss Grover's book is a good one for children who are beginning to make acquaintance with one of the liveliest and most likable of English story-tellers, an essayist and poet whose gay courage we might do worse than try to emulate." R. E. Roberts
+ Sat R of Lit 22:8 My 25 '40 430w

GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD. The family and its social functions. 631p $3.50 Lippincott 173 Family 40-8753

"Whereas the author's earlier college textbook The American Family emphasizes contemporary family problems, the present one is more concerned with the social purpose of the family, merely taking its illustrations from American family life. The author has long been known to home economists as an outstanding writer, teacher, lecturer, and conference leader in education for marriage and family life." J Home Econ

"Altogether too often books and college courses on the family or marriage have been an ill-assorted mixture of anthropological facts, preaching titillation of the erotic, and episodic illustrations or so-called case materials. Seldom has there been a rigorous and consistent sociological treatment of the family as a social institution. This job Groves has accomplished. The Family and Its Social Functions is just what its title indicates. It is not a book of snappy stories nor of sexual guidance. . . For these reasons this book may be taken as an indispensable compendium of three decades of psycho-sociological study." A. J. Todd
+ Am Soc R 5:984 D '40 600w

J Home Econ 32:564 O '40 60w

Reviewed by C. J. Bushnell
Social Educ 4:591 D '40 600w

"Throughout the book the technical analyses are supported and illustrated with biological and anthropological data, skillfully woven into the discussion without the frequent error of oversimplification. In addition, the author has drawn upon his own wide knowledge of contemporary family life and upon his long experience as a teacher and family counsellor. The book is written in a clear and easy-flowing style that makes it attractive reading. The appendix includes highly suggestive subjects for reports and topics for discussion. The absence of reference lists is explained in a note which points out the desirability of using up-to-date bibliographies; these the author agrees to provide annually at very small cost." E. W. Gregory, Jr.
+ Social Forces 19:122 O '40 1200w

GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD, and MOORE, HARRY ESTILL. An introduction to sociology. new ed 737p map $3.25 Longmans
301 Sociology (W) 40-11194

"The present volume is a new work based upon Ernest R. Groves' An Introduction to Sociology, first published in 1928 and revised in 1932 [Book Review Digest 1933]. Much new material has been added to the chapters which appeared in those editions, and several new chapters have been written in an effort to keep abreast of the rapidly flowing stream of sociological literature. The section on social problems has been eliminated." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Barnett
Am Soc R 5:830 O '40 1000w

Reviewed by C. J. Bushnell
Social Educ 4:524 N '40 700w

"One adverse criticism of the book is in the seeming lack of care in the use of concepts, in the wording of definitions and in clearness of distinctions. . . This Introduction to Sociology is very complete and will be found especially valuable by those desiring a personalistic and functional approach to the 'science of social relations' with practical suggestions looking to improvement in human well-being." L. M. Bristol
+ — Social Forces 19:274 D '40 800w

Social Studies 31:333 N '40 20w

GRUBER, FRANK. The French key. 305p $2 Farrar 40-5222

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p14 F 4 '40 90w

"Mr. Gruber is the winner of an honorable mention in the Mary Roberts Rinehart mystery contest." Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p3 F 3 '40 40w

"The story makes lively and amusing reading." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 F 4 '40 160w

"Liberal education in numismatics, and how to live luxuriously on no funds; also much lively chatter and tricky plotting."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 F 10 '40 40w

GRUBER, FRANK. The laughing fox. 314p $2 Farrar 40-11297

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p15 S 15 '40 140w

"The speed is break-neck and the excitement almost too much. Any left-over emotions will be busily engaged by the lovely ladies present." Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 24 '40 70w

"Johnny Fletcher, book salesman extraordinary . . . is a good detective—good enough to clear up a mystery that has baffled the authorities and the newspapers for twenty years. Along with an unusually entertaining mystery story, the purchaser of this book gets for his money a liberal education in the art or science of crap-shooting." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p17 Ag 18 '40 180w

GRUBER, FRANK—Continued
"Johnny Fletcher and his friend, Sam Cragg, go detecting, and find out what no one else has been able to. On the whole, amusing."
+ New Yorker 16:68 Ag 24 '40 30w

"Choice data on dice-manipulating, silver foxes and gate-crashing. Also copper-riveted plot, speedy action and hard-boiled badinage. Natural!"
Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 24 '40 40w

GRUMBINE, E. EVALYN (MRS ANDREW MCNALLY, jr). Patsy breaks into advertising; with a foreword by Douglas Taylor. 324p $2 Dodd
(W) 39-31418

Story for older girls describing one girl's experiences as she breaks into the advertising game, and finally reaches her goal as advertising manager.

"From the first chapter with its sketches of proper and improper layout the story keeps its eye on practical detail, and by keeping well within the possibilities of a special field does not raise false hopes." M. L. Becker
Books p8 Ja 14 '40 300w

"Undergraduate conversation is rather banal, if realistic. Indirect tips on manners and dress for the business girl are well presented. Ad-Club talks, suggested college courses, and bibliographies are part of the narrative and detract somewhat from the story interest. This story will supplement, not duplicate, material in Nathalie Enters Advertising by Dorothy Hutchison." Maude Adams
+ — Library J 65:172 F 15 '40 110w

"Not very expertly written, this is one of the more obvious success stories, but it does supply much factual information." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p10 Mr 3 '40 110w

GRUNDY, JOSIAH. Square riggers before the wind; text and drawings by Wilkins W. Wheatly; photographic etchings by Sherman Trease. 263p $3 Dutton
623.822 Ships. Ship models 39-32207

"A book about the old square-rigged sailing ships, with an exposition of the simplified method of making scenic action models of these ships under sail." (Subtitle) The first half of the book is a description of life and work at sea aboard the old square riggers; the second half demonstrates the making of ship models showing the ships maneuvering under sail. Glossary. Index.

"Even to the veriest landlubber the first part of the book will be fascinating. After a few preliminary pages on the development of sailing ships the authors proceed to a vivid account of an era and a life that has almost disappeared. . . The volume is recommended to those who enjoy reading of life aboard a sailing ship, and also to those whose hobby is, or may be, the building of ship models."
+ Boston Transcript p13 N 9 '39 350w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:62 O '39
Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 24 '40 280w

GUDMUNDSSON, KRISTMANN. Winged citadel; tr. from the Norwegian by Barrows Mussey. 409p $2.75 Holt 40-33362

Romantic tale of ancient Crete and of the young Macedonian who became the last Minos and fell in battle when the barbarians destroyed Cnossus.

"In the exciting pace of a tale of adventure, in the fairy tale of the poor lad who wins the princess, Mr. Gudmundsson has strangely managed to enter the profundities of the disinherited human race, whose heaven is forever denied." Lorine Pruette
+ Books p2 N 17 '40 1250w

"There are vivid pictures of the land, the people, and the religious festivals, but the over emphasis of the sensual life may deter many library purchasers." H. B. Burdett
Library J 65:808 O 1 '40 220w

"With the color and richness of pre-historic Crete for a background, the Crete which reached its height at a time when the rest of Greece was semi-barbarous, Mr Gudmundsson has presented an interesting, carefully worked out story of an eager, sensitive, imaginative youth in the midst of an over-ripe civilization." L. M. Field
+ N Y Times p7 N 17 '40 650w

"A credible reconstruction of an ancient period, not cluttered up with archaisms but dramatic, readable, and alive."
+ New Yorker 16:95 N 9 '40 50w

"The hero is well chosen for showing us the pageant of Minoan life; not so well chosen otherwise, since he is vaguely introspective to the point of tediousness. . . The book will be read, however, not for its story, which is often static, but for its reconstruction of the time. . . On the whole, whether drawn from fact or fancy, the book gives a many-colored picture of a fascinating society." B. D.
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 4 '41 420w

GUERARD, ALBERT LEON. Preface to world literature. 536p $3.50 Holt 801 Literature. Literature—Philosophy
(W) 40-27324

"Mr. Guérard believes, like Mr. Adler, that literature should be divided only into good and bad, the quick and the dead. For him there are no national boundaries; literature is World Literature or nothing. His book deals non-academically with academic materials, discussing such matters as folklore, prose and verse, tendencies, genres and periods, and the social approach to literature." (New Yorker) The author is professor of general and comparative literature at Stanford University. The book contains a critic's glossary, and an index of names and titles.

Atlantic Jl '40 180w
Booklist 36:322 Ap 15 '40

"Perhaps 'Preface to World Literature' ought to have been reviewed by some one to whom its tone and spirit are less congenial. I can only say that to me it seems eminently sensible as well as illuminating and entertaining." J. W. Krutch
+ Books p5 Ap 7 '40 1150w

"I am sorry that I have not been able to read his book as he meant it to be read, with intervals between the chapters to contemplate a bit and browse among some of the hundreds of good books he mentions. No reviewer can. Having said this I may insist that while I like his book, I do not have to agree with his judgments. I am suspicious of a process of identifying poetry by detecting 'this high potential of emotion . . . a tremor a sympathetic vibration within ourselves,' and of recognizing a book of cultural value by the 'sense of inner growth' it gives me. We vibrate to too many things in this age, and our inner feelings are too turbulent to be trustworthy. But please notice that my willingness to disagree, this awareness to literary problems, is exactly what Mr. Guérard wanted to stir up in me as a reader, and is a small measure of the success of his book." W. M. Frohock
+ Commonweal 31:537 Ap 12 '40 700w

"The English would call this 'a middle-brow book.' Written for the average adult reader, with charm, in an open style, it has a kind of textbook character; but its summaries are pleasantly planned and its appendices informal. . . Apart from aiding the lay reader who wishes a guide to general literary 'culture,' the value of such a book as this is rather limited. For, although the judgments are catholic and there are no attempts at edification, this volume often slides over ground which should, at this late date, be broken up and plumbed." Louise Bogan

Nation 150:631 My 18 '40 500w

Reviewed by Leonard Brown

New Repub 103:124 Jl 22 '40 650w

N Y Times p4 Je 30 '40 750w

"I hope that 'Preface to World Literature will find its way into the library of the general reader as well as into that of the special student of literature. It is quite admirable and may be perused as a kind of supplement to Mortimer Adler's 'How to Read a Book.' . . [The author] is at once learned and urbane, often witty, always instructive. Had he more bite and a taste for public controversy, he could become an extremely influential literary critic, as Mencken was in his day. As it is, there is the danger that his admirable books will be read only by specialists, which would be a pity." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:74 Mr 30 '40 170w

Pratt p19 autumn '40

"Written with Gallic verve, witty, crystal clear, catholic, and delightful, Prof. Guerard's 'Preface' is both profound and stimulating." R. J. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p8 My 8 '40 650w

GUILLET, CEPHAS. The forgotten gospel. 395p $2.50 The author, 414 W. 118th st, N.Y.

261 Kingdom of God. Sociology, Christian 40-10851

"The book is an indictment not only of Communism and Fascism but of Democracy and Christian Civilization. The author describes how the gospel of Jesus failed of being tried out; and how Paul, who destroyed the incipient effort to embody it in a society, substituted the Church for this great experiment which he had cut short. For Jesus's gospel of the Kingdom, which prepared for life in a better Society, he substituted, as the result of his reading of Hebrew Scripture, a gospel of the Cross, which prepares for death and the heavenly kingdom. This the author calls a dogmatic and an ecclesiastical gospel as opposed to the social gospel of Jesus." Publisher's note

Christian Century 57:706 My 29 '40 100w

"This book arrests attention. The very title does so. It is written by a layman, a psychologist, not by a Biblical scholar, historian, or theologian. Perhaps that makes it all the more valuable to the average reader. We might ask for more exact scholarship in the treatment of certain texts in the New Testament. But the worth of the book lies not in its textual or historical criticism, of which it makes no pretense, but in the fact that it is the reaction of a highly trained man, a professor of psychology and religion, to the Christian theology and gospel as they (it) have been preached in our western churches." R. E. E. Harkness

+ Crozer Q 17:305 O '40 350w

Reviewed by Vergilius Ferm

Ethics 51:125 O '40 90w

"Though some points are debatable, his book is the sincere effort of an educator to present the gospel as what he believes it to be—the only medium by which the world may become a better place in which to live."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '40 900w

GUISE, CEDRIC HAY. The management of farm woodlands. 352p il maps $3 (20s) McGraw

634.9 Wood lots. Forests and forestry 39-29852

"A textbook for students and owners of farm woodlands and forest estates, particularly planned for the east, but generally applicable in other parts. It offers technical information on the growing, harvesting, and managing of farm forests for increased, continuous production. Chapters on the marketing of woodland products and on the preservative treatment of timber are included. Commercially operated forests are not treated. Photographs, maps, tables." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 36:170 Ja 1 '40

"A book which should prove of great value to sylviculturists in all parts of the world. While the theme is woodlands in the United States, the text is of much wider application, and should be read with profit by all who are interested in the full utilization of all types of agricultural land." W. E. Brenchley

+ Nature 146:475 O 12 '40 440w

GUMPERT, MARTIN. Heil hunger! health under Hitler; tr. from the German by Maurice Samuel. 128p $1.75 Alliance bk.

614.0943 Public health—Germany. Germany —Social conditions 40-27267

A study, based on official statistics and statements, of what the Hitler régime has done to the health of the German working classes. Dr. Gumpert, the author of a biography of Henri Dunant, the founder of the Red Cross, was, in pre-Nazi days, head of a large clinic in Berlin. He is a practicing physician and surgeon and now lives in New York.

Booklist 36:301 Ap 1 '40

"Dr. Gumpert has given us an important study, carefully documented, mostly from official Nazi sources, of the results of Nazi rule upon the health and strength of the German people, and the translation is admirably unobtrusive." G. M. A. Grube

+ Canadian Forum 20:59 My '40 290w

Christian Century 57:322 Mr 6 '40 60w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '40

Reviewed by J. J. Walsh

Commonweal 31:479 Mr 22 '40 320w

Foreign Affairs 18:756 Jl '40 20w

Reviewed by Franz Hoellering

Nation 150:452 Ap 6 '40 350w

New Repub 102:386 Mr 18 '40 50w

New Yorker 16:91 Mr 9 '40 40w

"A student trained in statistical skepticism may find all through the book that Dr. Gumpert has failed to give full statistical proof of his contention that the German nation generally is on the verge of physical collapse. Many of the statistical data seem to lack body and conciseness to warrant taking them at face value. . . With these restrictions this study of the German health situation can be well recommended." Toni Stolper

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:13 Mr 16 '40 600w

Springf'd Republican p10 F 29 '40 450w

"Although some of the conclusions may err on the side of optimism, the book as a whole is a refreshing corrective of wishful and muddled thinking."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p346 Jl 20 '40 360w

GUSTAFSON, ALRIK. Six Scandinavian novelists. 367p $3.50 Am.-Scandinavian foundation; Princeton univ. press

839.5 Novelists, Scandinavian. Scandinavian fiction—History. 6 anals (W) 40-27695

Biographical and historical interpretations and literary criticisms of six modern Scandinavian novelists: Jonas Lie; Jens Peter Jacobsen; Verner von Heidenstam; Selma Lagerlöf; Knut Hamsun; and Sigrid Undset. The author is professor of Scandinavian at the University of Minnesota. Index.

Booklist 37:65 O 15 '40

"Translations of Scandinavian novels have been increasingly frequent in recent years, but they have received no adequate critical comment in English and little literary history. Professor Alrik Gustafson's Six Scandinavian novelists meets to a large degree the need for careful criticism based upon thorough study of Scandinavian literary backgrounds. . . One limitation—the absence of all bibliography—may be explained by the book's being intended for a relatively general public. But this public, as well as the scholarly reader, would, I believe, be glad to find within the covers of the book at least a list of recommended translations." H. C. K. Naeseth

GUSTAFSON, ALRIK—Continued
+ — Library Q 11:126 Ja '41 900w

"Mr. Gustafson is never wholly categorical, for he sees the drollness that befalls when one attempts rigidly to pigeonhole genius. And since he leaves the door open, we shall confidently go our way in the happy belief that with his volume we have been reading not Chapter I but Chapter II of the modern awakening in Scandinavia." A. L. Olson
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 5 '41 900w

"Professor Gustafson has here presented America with a new and fascinating picture of literary Scandinavia, perhaps the soundest and most mature work in this field that has yet appeared in the English language." Einar Haugen
+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 Ja 18 '41 490w

GUTHMANN, HARRY GEORGE, and DOUGALL, HERBERT EDWARD. Corporate financial policy. 795p $5.35; to schools $4 Prentice-Hall

658.14 Corporations—Finance 40-11001

"The preface announces that this textbook is written from the point of view of internal, management policy, as opposed to the investment point of view. The subjects covered are, by and large, the same as those covered in most good corporation finance textbooks, but the authors hold throughout to their announced emphasis. Broad subjects covered are, in order, forms of business organization, corporation securities and capital structure, promotion and financing of corporations, investment banking and security exchanges, short-term financing, treatment of surplus, expansion, and failure, reorganization, and liquidation." (Ann Am Acad) Selected references. Index.

"Extraordinarily good are the chapters on railroad finance, which is placed in proper perspective with recent railroad history; on mergers and consolidations, where difficult material is given lucid presentation; on holding companies, whose advantages (as well as disadvantages) are fairly presented to students, whom other writers try to convince that the holding company is a device of the devil; and on receivership and reorganization, typically the subject given the weakest treatment by other books in this field. . . Add to this a simple, clear style and we must hail a real achievement in American text writing." Shaw Livermore
+ Am Econ R 30:872 D '40 700w

"Noticeable for its absence, except for almost casual mention, is the subject of investment companies, though this omission is understandable in the light of the financial management emphasis. Particularly well organized are the chapters on business failure, receiverships, reorganizations, and liquidation. . . This is a well-written textbook which steers a middle course between oversimplification and encyclopedic detail. Students should find it readable, though they cannot pay it the doubtful compliment of being 'easy.'" H. M. Teaf, Jr.
+ Ann Am Acad 212:265 N '40 600w

H

HAAS, WILLIAM HERMAN, ed. The American empire; a study of the outlying territories of the United States; contributors: W. O. Blanchard [and others]. 408p il maps $4 Univ. of Chicago press

917.3 U.S.—Territories. U.S.—Insular possessions. U.S.—Territorial expansion
(W) 40-32210

Symposium on the territorial possessions of the United States, in which are discussed their resources, opportunities, people, geographical background, economics and special problems. Contents: The era of overseas expansion, by I. J. Cox; Puerto Rico, by Rafael Picó and W. H. Haas; The Virgin islands of the United States, by E. B. Shaw; The Panama Canal zone, by W. O. Blanchard; Alaska, by O. W. Freeman; The territory of Hawaii, by J. W. Coulter; The commonwealth of the Philippines, by C. C. Cruz, L. J. Borja, and W. H. Haas; "Manifest destiny" in greater America, by I. J. Cox and W. H. Haas. Index.

Booklist 37:88 N 1 '40

"Considering the interest inherent in the material, and its special current importance, it is regrettable to find this a very dull book, with few claims to the attention of either the general reader or the specialist."
Nation 151:585 D 7 '40 120w

"While the volume is a useful compendium of information, some readers are likely to feel that it was written and published months too early. Interest has shifted of late from the economic and social problems of these possessions to their place in our defense system—an aspect of the subject which receives too brief treatment. . . Since the volume is obviously intended for serious readers, the complete absence of footnotes and bibliography excites some surprise." J. W. Pratt
+ — Social Studies 32:87 F '41 440w

HABE, HANS. Sixteen days [tr. by Basil Creighton]. 379p $2.50 Harcourt [8s 6d Harrap]
40-27215

Against the background of Geneva in the days of the Munich crisis of September 1938, a triangular plot unfolds. The characters are Anton von Römer, a German chemist; Walter Hagenauer, a Nazi diplomat; and Vera, Hagenauer's wife, between whom and von Römer there develops a moving love story.

Booklist 36:283 Mr 15 '40

"In spite of its concentration on international political situation, Mr. Habe's book is first and foremost a novel. Scenes brilliantly real and dramatically handled . . . are incisively drawn. And all of the individuals in the novel, save only Vera who is at times blurred in romantic shadows, are as real as the cars they ride in and the drinks they drink." F. H. Bullock
+ Books p2 Mr 3 '40 950w

"Despite its murky symbolism, this is an adult and intelligent novel." Charlotte Bassett
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Mr 9 '40 320w
Christian Century 57:320 Mr 6 '40 80w
Churchman 154:35 My 1 '40 60w
Commonweal 31:439 Mr 8 '40 220w

"In such a situation we have all the ingredients of melodrama; but Herr Habe is too sincere and subtle an artist to be content merely to exploit the crudely sensational elements of intrigue, and this is no conventional spy story. All the characters are informed with a vital individuality; so that we, who likewise are entangled in the web of disastrous circumstance, watch their struggles with the keenest fellow-feeling." Wilfrid Gibson
+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 3 '39 400w

"Altogether a book that might easily have gone hysterical, but Mr. Habe keeps it within the limits of simple, effective dramatics."
+ New Repub 102:449 Ap 1 '40 60w

"Habe is not quite equal to [his] task. He fumbles a bit in his big scenes; in the transitions he digresses unnecessarily; and he uses creaking literary devices that Thackeray would have thought old-fashioned. Nevertheless, there is a freshness and a vigor, in this novel, and particularly a brave determination to face the issues, that must win attention and respect." Harold Strauss
+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 10 '40 800w

"First-rate reading."
+ New Yorker 16:62 Mr 2 '40 100w

" 'Sixteen Days' is a powerful and thoughtful novel that must command respect as a genuine literary achievement in a field that is cluttered with merely tendentious fiction." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 21:15 Mr 16 '40 600w

"If ever a book needed the blue pencil this one does. An excellent idea, a tense and neat style, an original treatment of an old plot—but all spoilt by determination to prolong the agony. Where action fails monologue takes charge. The strong point of the book is the skilful way in which the author throws the shadow of the Munich negotiations over Geneva and its people. The weak point is the failure to sustain interest in the lesser events which throw the chief figures together."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p703 D 2 '39 300w

HACKER, LOUIS MORTON. Triumph of American capitalism. 460p $3 Simon & Schuster

330.973 U.S.—History. U.S.—Economic policy. Capitalism (W) 40-30705

This is an "effort to describe, analyze and explain genetically two great developments in our American system; the first the full emergence of mercantile capitalism on this continent, and the second the triumph of industrial capitalism. . . The book, falling into two parts, is polarized about two great conflicts. One is the Revolution. . . The other is the Civil War." (Books)

Reviewed by J. G. Herndon

Am Pol Sci R 34:1232 D '40 480w

Booklist 37:29 O 1 '40

Bookmark 2:4 Ja '41

"Mr. Hacker has written a remarkable book. It is not a systematic history of the economic development of the American people—that has been done by other hands. It is an interpretive study, much of it brilliant and all of it suggestive, of the main trends in the economic growth of the nation. . . But at various points in describing the full emergence of industrial capitalism as a result of the Civil War the author is tempted into generalizations which will make all but the hardened economic determinist blench. . . But these passages in which Mr. Hacker pushes his economic interpretation of our general history too far do not greatly impair the essential merit of his volume." Allan Nevins

+ — Books p8 S 29 '40 1800w

"At times, Hacker is so eager to develop his thesis that he distorts by omission. . . But these are minor flaws in an otherwise notable book. Mr. Hacker brings scholarship and independent thinking to his consideration of the underlying economic and political forces at work in American history." M. Y. Sweezy

+ — Boston Transcript p1 S 21 '40 700w

Reviewed by E. L. Lynch

Commonweal 33:30 O 25 '40 650w

"Mr. Hacker has written a very useful book. Some of its usefulness arises from its omissions. Part of its usefulness arises from its being an antidote to the oversimplifications and loose thinking of those who go to another extreme and ignore the changes wrought in our physical environment by the machine age." L. B. Bloch

+ Living Age 359:286 N '40 550w

"This is an economic history of the United States that makes sense. It is synthesis, interpretation, and forecast that are meaningful for today's problems—Louis Hacker is aware of history as a stream that flows into the present." Lewis Corey

+ Nation 151:396 O 26 '40 850w

"On the whole the quality of the work is high. We have in this book the most ambitious attempt yet made to apply historical materialism to the interpretation of American history. Both as an example of method and for the light which it sheds, 'The Triumph of American Capitalism' is a notable achievement. There are in my opinion, however, certain deficiencies in Mr. Hacker's analysis, and by far the most important of these concerns his treatment of northern capitalism in the second half of the nineteenth century. . . What I regard as by far the weakest part of Mr. Hacker's book [is] the conclusion. Here, in place of a prognosis based on rigorous analysis of economic and class forces, such as characterizes earlier parts of the book, we find an incongruous note of wishful idealism." P. M. Sweezy

+ — New Repub 103:564 O 21 '40 1500w

"A readable, scholarly, freshly documented [book]. . . Belongs on the same shelf with Andrews and the Beards, though the author forces his thesis a little."

+ New Yorker 16:83 S 21 '40 80w

Reviewed by John Chamberlain

Sat R of Lit 22:11 O 12 '40 950w

Springf'd Republican p8 O 29 '40 600w

HACKETT, FRANCIS. I chose Denmark. 291p $2.50 Doubleday

914.89 Denmark. National characteristics, Danish (W) 40-34292

In 1918 Mr Hackett married Signe Toksvig, daughter of a prominent Danish journalist. During the years that followed he and his wife paid annual visits to Denmark and in 1937 decided to make their permanent home in Copenhagen. In this book he draws a picture of the land and people which reveals the reason for his choice. In a final chapter Mr Hackett, who was in America at the time of the Nazi invasion, expresses his hope for Denmark's ultimate release from bondage.

Booklist 37:151 D 15 '40

"Francis Hackett is a historian—and an Irishman. His book may read at times like an obituary, written with the anguished tenderness of a man recently bereaved. But it is equally an affirmation of faith in resurrection. . . One closes 'I Chose Denmark' with the conviction that the civilization it describes was too sound, too deeply rooted to be permanently extinguished." Ted Olson

+ Books p4 N 24 '40 850w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 4 '41 650w

"I devoutly wish the virtues of Danish socialism and the tenets of the New Republic had never been brought together, even if only in a book. I like his social criticisms, I like his love of the earthy and simple, I like especially his descriptive prowess. But I do not favor becoming sentimental about clean faces, punctuality, the eradication of syphilis and illiteracy. They are conditions to be worked for. I'll save my sentiment for an old grandmother who died among her loved ones instead of in an institution, even a sociologically perfect Danish one. And I want to laugh delightedly at the smudge on a pretty colleen's nose, not run for a social worker." W. M. Callahan

+ — Commonweal 33:259 D 27 '40 750w

"A compact and meaty little volume prickly with prejudices, but abounding in sanities too, —it's important as another sidelight on European politics."

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:4 D 10 '40 210w

Reviewed by A. M. Colt

Library J 65:921 N 1 '40 160w

Living Age 359:492 Ja '41 350w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 151:611 D 14 '40 440w

Reviewed by A. L. Olson

+ N Y Times p22 D 8 '40 1200w

New Yorker 16:101 N 16 '40 80w

"The reviewer hopes that this book will be read especially by those who shout that 'small nations are doomed.' Coalescence or alliance with largescale 'powers' may be feasible for a bellicose purpose, but, for development of individuality, for variety, for democratic coöpera-

HACKETT, FRANCIS—Continued
tion, and for cultural refinement, history seems to point to the efficacy of the principle of voluntary coöperation." Marius Hansome
+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 D 21 '40 700w

HADDOW, ANNA. Political science in American colleges and universities, 1636-1900; ed. with an introduction and concluding chapter by William Anderson. 308p $2.50 (12s 6d) Appleton-Century

320.7 Political science—Study and teaching 39-32834

"The work does not pretend to be a complete history of American political science. It deals almost entirely with the efforts of men within academic walls to develop what we now call political science and to present it to their students. Who these men were, what courses they offered, what books they used, what ideas influenced them, what things each one particularly emphasized in his work, how the teaching changed from time to time, and how political science finally became disentangled from history, economics, moral philosophy, law, and other subjects,—these are principal threads to be followed through this book." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

"Professor William Anderson, whose introduction and concluding chapter complete the volume, deserves thanks for his enthusiasm in bringing this doctoral dissertation to the attention of his fellow-workers in the study of government." E. P. Allen
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:558 Je '40 650w

Reviewed by P. H. Odegard
Ann Am Acad 209:240 My '40 1600w

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 16 '40 10w

HADER, MRS BERTA (HOERNER), and HADER, ELMER. The cat and the kitten [il. by the authors]. 98p $2 Macmillan

(W) 40-33934

The story of a little girl's much beloved cat Minnie, and what happened to Minnie's five kittens, especially Timmy, short for Timid.

Booklist 37:177 Ja 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 N 10 '40 240w

"Pedigree is an unknown word to these cats, but personality is not." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 65:852 O 15 '40 20w

Reviewed by Sonja Wennerblad
Library J 65:1092 D 15 '40 100w

"Good and amusing illustrations. Humorous." Katharine Scherman
+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 N 16 '40 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 60w

HAGEDORN, HERMANN. The bugle that woke America; the saga of Theodore Roosevelt's last battle for his country. 223p il $2 Day

B or 92 Roosevelt, Theodore. European war, 1914-1918—U.S. 40-33610

An account of what Theodore Roosevelt did in speech and writings to further the cause of American preparedness both before and after the United States entry into the Great war. Index.

"This book has a worthy purpose. That purpose is to remind Americans of the parallel between the problems of foreign relations and preparedness of 1914 and of 1940, and to recall to Americans of this generation the prophetic and eloquent analyses of those problems by Theodore Roosevelt. . . All of this is illuminating, and if Mr. Hagedorn had been content to recall to us these apt quotations without embellishment or interpretation he would have rendered a useful service. Unfortunately the text is accompanied, as it were, by a running commentary of an unaccurate and prejudiced character. These defects of treatment are so serious that they deprive the book of a large part of its effectiveness." H. S. Commager
— + Books p38 N 10 '40 1300w

Reviewed by Francis Brown
N Y Times p19 Ja 12 '41 750w

"Though frequently showing a gift of historical interpretation, Mr Hagedorn is essentially a hero-worshipper and identifies himself unduly with the attitude of his subject. In other respects his book is a breezy and readable account of what Col Roosevelt was doing and saying in the war years."
Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '40 900w

HAGEDORN, HERMANN. Combat at midnight; a book of poems. 102p $2 Day

811 40-5771

"A 'book of poems,' but also a prophet's cry, a trumpet blast, a gong of revolt against self-centered living and a materialistic civilization. The substance of it, the author admits, is 'old stuff, thousands of years old.' It is neither more nor less than a call to men to listen to the voice of God." Christian Century

"The poems are poor as poetic art, but moving and rousing in their human appeal. They say things which cannot be repeated too often at the moment, and may appeal to many readers who find the approach of Auden or Eliot to similar themes too oblique and obscure."
+ — Atlantic My '40 110w

"Hagedorn's ideas on the remedy for individual and world ills may satisfy some readers, may seem to others an unrealistic oversimplification of solution to a complex problem. None will deny that his poems build from sincere conviction, that their analysis of character is excellent, their dramatic intensity high, their dialogue well-rounded, genuine."
+ Books p16 Ag 25 '40 210w

"The reader will be ill advised to conclude at once that it is milk and water. It is strong medicine for a sick world."
+ Christian Century 57:354 My 13 '40 80w

HAGEN, OSKAR FRANK LEONARD. The birth of the American tradition in art. 159p il $3.50 Scribner

759.1 Painting, American. Painters, American 40-27216

History of American painting from about 1760 to the Revolution, with considerable emphasis laid upon the European background. Contents: The archaic phase of Colonial art; John Smibert; Robert Feke; John Singleton Copley in New England; Benjamin West; Copley in Europe. The author is professor of the history of art, University of Wisconsin. Index.

"No new sources have been brought to light, nor will all specialists agree with the author's reinterpretation of the older, published sources. Secondary works on American arts are readily available through standard controls, but there is no proof that these tools have been systematically employed. The index is useful, and the 116 illustrations are well reproduced, but they refute quite as much as they sustain the author's main contention that our colonial art is essentially 'underived' from European sources." G. C. Groce, jr.
Am Hist R 46:423 Ja '41 240w

Booklist 36:278 Mr 15 '40

"Copley he greatly admires, and the two chapters given over to Copley's work are by far the most interesting in the book. The fullest discussion of the subject yet published, they present a novel and pertinent analysis. . . Concerning the next generations of painters there is a great body of ascertainable fact, but in dealing with this data Mr. Hagen has made many errors, ranging from minor mistakes like the consistent misspelling of Charles Willson Peale's name, to major ones like giving Peale to Boston, not Philadelphia, and categorically stating that Trumbull did not go abroad during the Revolution." J. T. Flexner

+ — Books p21 Ap 21 '40 460w

"The study of early American painting benefits greatly from such constructive and readable interpretations as this book, but care must be taken in these days, when the critical history of early American art is in the making, that whole chapters are not cut out of new cloth." Louisa Dresser
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ap 6 '40 550w

"We could wish that the qualities which Mr. Hagen believes to be peculiarly American had been discussed more freely. A somewhat naive angularity, a departure from social graces, a fairly uncompromising realism, a bold emphasis upon design: these make the main portion of it, but for the most part we must derive these qualities for ourselves, and occasionally the sense of them is lost in the abundance of biographical detail and in the running arguments with Mr. Alan Burroughs. But the details have their importance, and Mr. Hagen's ardors are refreshing. He has written a basic work in all senses of the term, as important for its method of approach as for its disclosures." Constance Rourke
+ — Nation 150:342 Mr 9 '40 600w

"A book which as a whole cannot be too highly valued." Russell Cheney
+ New Eng Q 13:342 Je '40 450w

"'The Birth of the American Tradition in Art' represents as perceptive and scholarly and sympathetic a criticism of the era dealt with as we have had. This book is a genuine contribution in the field." E. A. Jewell
+ N Y Times p19 Ap 14 '40 1000w
New Yorker 16:92 Ap 27 '40 20w

"When Professor Hagen reproduces side by side Feke's 'James Bowdoin' and Highmore's 'Gentleman in a Murrey Velvet Coat,' as evidence that Feke visited London in 1747, his comparison is less than convincing. . . As a whole, however, 'The Birth of the American Tradition in Art' deals in a genuinely critical manner with a subject too often approached with inadequate scholarship or with no scholarship at all." O. L.
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:20 Mr 23 '40 380w

"Prof Hagen's book, though unduly argumentative, is a study replete in historical and technical knowledge, and reflects firsthand understanding of artistic values. All qualified students will learn much from it, though they will not accept all of the author's deductions and conjectures—his disparagement of Smibert's motives in coming to America, for one thing. The illustrations are aptly chosen." E. N. Jenckes
+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 2 '40 1200w
Wis Lib Bul 36:65 Ap '40

HAGEN, VICTOR WOLFGANG VON. See Von Hagen, V. W.

HAGER, MRS ALICE (ROGERS). Wings over the Americas. 162p il map $2.50 Macmillan

918 Aeronautics—Flights. Latin America—Description and travel (W) 40-30770

"Journal of a flight around South America—down the West Coast to Santiago, across to Buenos Aires and Rio, and up through the Caribbean—by Pan American Clipper. In addition, notes on the Atlantic Clipper and Pacific-Alaska Airways. The author didn't get away from the airports much, but she gives you a clear picture of what American and other airlines are doing in South America. Photographs." New Yorker

---

Booklist 37:88 N 1 '40

"Any one who has ever been to South America or hopes to go there; the few who know about aviation and the many who have only the foggiest notion, have a genuine pleasure in store for them in this little volume with its exceptionally informative photographs and blithe and veracious report." Agnes Rothery
+ Books p2 Ag 11 '40 950w
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 10 '40 20w

"A most interesting and informative book." A. L. Jewett
+ Library J 65:590 Jl '40 250w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 65:855 O 15 '40 20w
New Repub 104:94 Ja 20 '41 70w
New Yorker 16:64 Ag 10 '40 70w

"[The] book, which gives the impression of having been written as hastily as its material was gathered, reveals in frequent snatches of anecdote something of the heroism and ingenuity that, in less than a generation, has covered the Americas with wings—something, too, of the political and economic consequences. But [the author] has had to lean so heavily on mere hearsay, the stuff of fables, for her information that her book cannot be set down as anything more than a slight and slap-dash account of air-travel in the Western Hemisphere." L. J. H., Jr.
— + Sat R of Lit 22:22 Ag 31 '40 320w

HAGOOD, MARGARET JARMAN. Mothers of the South; portraiture of the white tenant farm woman. 252p $2 Univ. of N.C. press [9s Oxford]

396.0975 Women in the South. South—Social conditions. Farm tenancy. Mothers 40-3626

Study of the case of the women in southern white tenant farm families. After an introductory chapter on types of farms and farming, the book describes women in the fields, in housekeeping, child bearing and rearing, community activities, etc. Index.

"For the academic reader and the specialist, the last section of the book gives a valuable account of the technique of the study The combination of statistical, case, and survey methods is admirably adapted to the material. The book answers many questions about the quality of a group which produces more than its share of the nation's population. It raises others which should stimulate further research." Gladys Boone
+ Am Econ R 30:435 Je '40 320w

Reviewed by L. W. Doob
Am J Soc 46:408 N '40 370w

Reviewed by J. E. Wills
Ann Am Acad 209:228 My '40 550w

"The combination of scientific approach and simple, pleasant style will make the book appeal to a wide variety of readers."
+ J Home Econ 32:183 Mr '40 140w
N Y Times p16 Jl 7 '40 550w

"No recent publication on the South is more welcome than Dr. Hagood's Mothers of the South." W. E. Cole
+ Social Forces 18:450 Mr '40 700w

"Dr Hagood's descriptions of her conversations with these southern mothers regarding bearing and rearing children and other private subjects are realistic, vivid and unvarnished. The question arises whether the scenes could have been less vividly described without endangering their significance, subjecting them to discount, or inviting a careless reading." J. S. C.
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 19 '40 550w

HAHN, EMILY. Steps of the sun. 313p $2.50 Dial press
40-32133

"Differences in mores and morals of East and West are graphically held out for inspection in [this novel]. It is not, however, a book of wide implications, but an intimate narrowed account of a triangle, consisting of a high caste, cultured Chinese, his wife and an American woman and their conflicting love. The scene is laid in present-day Shanghai." N Y Times

---

HAHN, EMILY—Continued

"Miss Hahn herself has lived in China for seven years, and her desire to reproduce a large contrast is obvious. But with all her sincerity she has not fulfilled her theme's wider hopes. Her heroine and hero are essentially unimportant people, and it is two self-absorbed temperaments which are in conflict, as much as or more than two traditions and ways of living." John Patton
— + Books p14 S 29 '40 330w

"Anyone who has read Miss Hahn's Chinese sketches in the New Yorker is aware of her sensitive and revealing prose. Written beautifully, we found her story of an inter-racial marriage extremely distasteful." Olga Owens
— + Boston Transcript p2 S 28 '40 120w

"Sharp, efficient writing, aided by the fact that Miss Hahn knows Shanghai the way you know your own city block."
+ New Repub 103:534 O 14 '40 70w

"'Steps of the Sun' contains too much interesting material and is too frankly written to be dismissed with a shrug, yet it is not a stirring novel. This is due to the slim slowly moving plot and more especially to the author's failure to evoke sustained emotional reactions toward her characters. They are an ineffectual lot whose difficulties appear fairly commonplace and whose lack of courage and fastidiousness is more irritating than sympathy rousing." M. L. Rossbach
+ — N Y Times p21 S 29 '40 700w
New Yorker 16:77 S 28 '40 50w

"Miss Hahn takes the time to present the Chinese society in Shanghai in its own terms and values; somehow it is the Americans among them who seem strange. It is this inversion of the equation which defines the novel's special quality, its strength and weakness both." N. L. R.
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 4 '41 330w

HAHN, MANNEL. So you're collecting stamps! a guide for those who are beginning a collection; sketches by the author; phot. by R. Boyd Anderson. 192p $2.50 Dodd
383 Postage stamps (W) 40-27217

Advice for the beginner—with some information which might be of value to the seasoned collector—on why and how to collect stamps including both the mechanical and financial details as well as hints on how to develop special interests and foster the joys of the hobby.

Booklist 36:276 Mr 15 '40
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Mr 10 '40 130w
Boston Transcript p2 F 10 '40 50w

"Intended primarily for novices, 'So You're Collecting Stamps' will serve others as an authentic handbook of practical stamp-collecting."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 Mr 21 '40 110w

HAIGHT, GORDON SHERMAN. George Eliot and John Chapman; with Chapman's diaries. 261p $2.75 Yale univ. press
B or 92 Eliot, George, pseud. (Mrs Mary Ann [Evans] Cross). Chapman, John 40-35116

John Chapman, the London publisher who brought Mary Ann Evans (George Eliot) from the country to work on the liberal paper, The Westminster Review, kept diaries in which the course of his friendship with the novelist was outlined. The present volume contains a long introduction describing this strange combination of a literary and a more intimate relationship, with Chapman's diaries for the years 1851 and 1860. Index.

"This book bears all the marks of an American Ph. D.'s thesis; if it is not that, it should be. Producing it was a sheer waste of hard, grinding labor; reading it is a sheer waste of attention." A. J. N.
— Atlantic F '41 120w

"The account of the discovery of the diaries is a story in itself. The book is recommended to those whom a decidedly academic atmosphere will not prevent from enjoying a great deal of Victorian literary gossip, a novel and yet complimentary view of George Eliot, and the acquaintance of as mealy mouthed a hypocrite as ever lived." Francis Steegmuller
Books p10 Ja 26 '41 370w

Reviewed by E. B. Gulick
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 18 '41 550w

"Like its distinguished predecessors, this volume is a scholarly work, evidently based on long and painstaking research. Nearly every statement of fact is documented by a footnote. But Mr. Haight's account of George Eliot's relations with John Chapman, editor of the 'Westminster Review' is of quite as much interest to the general reader as it is to the professional scholar." J. F. MacDonald
+ Canadian Forum 20:326 Ja '41 700w

"An informative, if rather academic, literary study."
Nation 152:28 Ja 4 '41 120w
N Y Times p12 D 15 '40 600w

"Dr. Haight has done a splendid piece of work. Here we have not only the text of Chapman's diaries for 1851 and 1860 (the only available years); but an admirable biographical essay in which there is enough material about Chapman and his circle to make this book indispensable for all students of the time, for all biographers of George Eliot. I do not know any book which throws so much light on the muddle, the fineness and the pettiness, the genuine liberalism, and the incredible bigotry of progressive Victorianism as this monograph of Dr. Haight's and Dr. Edward Everett's 'The Party of Humanity.'" R. E. Roberts
+ Sat R of Lit 23:10 Ja 18 '41 900w
Time 36:88 N 18 '40 800w
Times [London] Lit Sup p657 D 28 '40 1800w

HALDANE, JOHN BURDON SANDERSON. Adventures of a biologist [Eng title: Keeping cool, and other essays]. 281p $3 Harper [7s 6d Chatto]
504 Science—Addresses, essays, lectures (W) 40-27488

Collection of essays, lectures, and broadcasts, by an English biologist. The essays cover a wide range of subjects, but the greater part of them is concerned with various aspects of life and death, nutrition, and heredity, with some excursions into the realm of unsolved problems of science.

Booklist 36:378 Je 1 '40

"Any volume of Professor Haldane's is worth reading from cover to cover. . . On glancing through the two dozen essays, I feel that their charm, directness and smoothness of diction equal their diversity." William Beebe
+ Books p5 My 12 '40 700w

"In Mr. Haldane, fortunately, there is found that rare and welcome combination, a top-flight scientist who not only makes his subject understandable but, at the same time, invests it with a certain romantic appeal." H. B. Kane
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 15 '40 370w

"The book is well worth reading and there is little use in picking out and criticizing certain parts, even certain remarks concerning the Catholic Church and Christianity in general. These things arise from totally different premises and from ignorance of what makes life worth while for us. Dr. Haldane is a brilliant man, but totally one sided. He is blind to the spiritual half of man and cannot be expected to produce a satisfactory analysis of the ills of society." W. M. Agar
+ — Commonweal 32:133 My 31 '40 360w
Manchester Guardian p3 F 27 '40 220w
Reviewed by Harold Ward
New Repub 103:360 S 9 '40 280w

"These are the occasional [papers] of an eminent scientist, and most of them are packed with scientific instruction and speculation. But what is most striking about them is not so much the efficiency of the writing, the acuity of its mental outlook or the concentration of the scientific dose, as the glowing fact that Professor Haldane is an extraordinarily active citizen as well as an extraordinarily active scientist, and that in him citizenship takes precedence." Barrington Gates

+ New Statesman & Nation 19:250 F 24 '40 800w

Reviewed by W. M. Malisoff
N Y Times p6 My 26 '40 1100w

"A few of the twenty-seven essays in the book are devoted to Haldane's central theme—that really effective scientific progress is possible only in a sane world—and some (these are the weakest) to an exposition of his materialist-socialist faith. But most of them are straight popularization of a high order, succinct, dryly humorous, clear. . . For me, books like this are 'inspirational' literature. This is not necessarily a statement of their permanent value; I mean only that the accident of our distraught times lends them an almost accidental extra worth, moral rather than literary." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 16:95 My 11 '40 1150w

Reviewed by H. W. Smith
Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 29 '40 460w

"This is a controversial book—the sincere expression of one man's philosophy, coupled with incontestable scientific facts. One must recognize that Professor Haldane is a crusader, and respect his honesty, even though reserving judgment on some of his political conclusions." A. H. Compton & others
Scientific Bk Club R 11:1 My '40 650w

"As a popular expositor of scientific knowledge Professor Haldane's qualifications are, indeed, as near perfect as we have any right to ask. He knows his subject; he writes freshly and clearly, and, being himself extremely zealous to discover what the universe is made of and how it works, he succeeds in communicating his zeal to his readers. To open one of his books is to embark on a voyage of intellectual adventure under the guidance of an extremely competent pilot, who first intrigues our curiosity by a hundred and one odd questions evoked by the scenery on the way, and then satisfies it with answers still odder." C. E. M. Joad
+ Spec 164:256 F 23 '40 800w

"Fellow scientists will judge Haldane by their criteria. We laymen must be grateful for being given the run of a biologist's mind as it explores the future. We are brought up to date, thrilled at the audacious explorations so wisely tempered by the known facts, and chastened by our ignorance." Leon Whipple
Survey G 29:355 Je '40 550w
Time 35:94 My 20 '40 150w
Times [London] Lit Sup p32 Ja 20 '40 800w
Wis Lib Bul 36:124 Jl '40

HALDANE, JOHN BURDON SANDERSON. Science and everyday life. 284p $2 Macmillan [5s Lawrence]

504 Science—Addresses, essays, lectures (W) 40-27518

Seventy brief articles republished from the Daily Worker, treating various aspects of science in language suited to the lay reader. In his preface the author says: "In each article of this book I have tried to do two things. I have tried to give a few facts which are not yet to be found in textbooks, and which a student leaving a university with an honours degree would not be expected to know. And I have tried to bring these facts into relation with everyday life." Partial contents: Nature's speed limits; Synthetic superstition; Thunderstorms; Some mathematical conundrums; Weather and history; Explosions; The economics of cancer; Why earthquakes? The vitamins; Painkillers; Why marriage is a lottery; Probability; Do continents move?

Booklist 36:407 Jl 1 '40

"The pervasive element of propaganda will alienate many readers who could profit materially from the author's scientific knowledge, but this is not all. His literary style, while on the whole better than one might expect to find in a series of daily articles and certainly not lacking in facility, is undistinguished in general and not seldom afflicted with passages of positively bad English. . . So it must be said that in spite of Professor Haldane's many virtues his bent for propaganda and his lack of literary fastidiousness appear to constitute serious defects in his writing." H. M. Parshley
+ — Books p17 Je 16 '40 1050w

"Followers of Karl Marx and believers in 'radical' theories will be delighted at the analogies between science and society that Haldane continually draws. Non-believers in Marxian hypotheses will be as strongly repelled and will declare these selfsame analogies to be forced, illogical or downright untrue. But both will agree that social theories aside, many of Haldane's points are extremely well taken. Both will also agree that Haldane has accomplished his purpose of writing an understandable book of real scientific worth." Albert Dietz
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Jl 6 '40 260w
Christian Century 57:740 Je 5 '40 40w

"A Socialist, [the author] takes a sly dig at Capitalism here and there, as impeding application of scientific knowledge for the betterment of social life. He makes mistakes as to religion, chiefly by not thinking his allegations through. But for all these slight blemishes, the book is well worth reading." A. L. Byron-Curtiss
+ — Churchman 154:18 S 1 '40 100w

"Professor Haldane's facts are always interesting, and he relates them to everyday life by humane and illuminating comment." J. G. C.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 3 '39 120w
Nation 151:281 S 28 '40 160w

"Those who subscribe to the Daily Worker are privileged to read every week some of the most successful expositions of popular science in contemporary journalism. It is not possible to discuss the implications of this fact in a brief review; but if Prof. Haldane's modesty would permit him to admit that he is both a first-class man of science and a first-class educator, his faith would make him insist that he would be neither were he not a first-class Marxist. This collection of articles is certainly as political as it is scientific, and its author would believe it less scientific if it were less political." John Langdon-Davies
+ Nature 145:201 F 10 '40 600w

Reviewed by Harold Ward
New Repub 103:360 S 9 '40 300w

"The only criticism of this excellent book that a layman would be qualified to make is that Professor Haldane indulges in some rather strange contortions at the end of each article to make science toe the party line."
+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:802 D 2 '39 220w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:26 Ap '40

"As a popularizer of science Dr. J. B. S. Haldane has few peers. Unlike most professors who occasionally stoop to conquer an uninformed public, he rightly assumes an utter lack of a technical vocabulary or of technical knowledge on the part of that public. . . Like all converts to communism, Professor Haldane feels it a holy duty to drag in Marx, Engels and Lenin by the hair if need be. Sometimes the result is funnier than he intends." Waldemar Kaempffert
+ — N Y Times p9 Je 16 '40 800w
New Yorker 16:116 Je 15 '40 30w

Reviewed by Amabel Williams-Ellis
Spec 164:456 Mr 29 '40 320w
Springf'd Republican p8 Je 11 '40 480w

HALDANE, J. B. S.—Continued

"The book is to be welcomed for its very effective presentation of a large number of novel facts and ideas which ought to be familiar to the public. The author's obvious predilection for Marxist doctrines will hardly detract from the book's value to intelligent readers. It is to be hoped that this stimulating collection of essays will soon be followed by a further volume on similar lines."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p691 N 25 '39 220w

HALE, CHRISTOPHER, pseud. See Stevens, F. M.

HALE, ORON JAMES. Publicity and diplomacy; with special reference to England and Germany, 1890-1914. 486p $4 (21s) Appleton-Century

327.42 Press—Great Britain. Press—Germany. Great Britain—Foreign relations—Germany. Germany—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Europe—Politics 40-12764

This study of English and German relations during the period 1890-1914, is mainly an exploration of the interrelationships between the peoples of the two countries, the newspapers, and the acts and words of statesmen and others. The author is associate professor of history in the University of Virginia. Index.

"A very meaty volume, skillfully compounded of factual data and of interpretation, to whose scope and quality it is difficult to do justice in a brief review." P. S. Pierce

+ Ann Am Acad 212:239 N '40 320w

"The volume is scholarly, detailed, thoroughly documented and illuminating. It will prove most valuable to the specialist." C. P. J. S.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 20 '40 350w

"It has become important, from the standpoint of the statesmen, so to inform the public (or so to misinform it) that public opinion will support desired measures. Thus the public's control becomes largely illusory and fictitious; it may get what it wants, but only after it has been led to want what the insiders want it to want. This is 'propaganda.' . . A scholarly and well documented treatise."

+ Christian Century 57:902 Jl 17 '40 240w

Social Studies 32:42 Ja '41 330w

HALE, RANDOLPH. Prodigal bandit. 256p $2 Dodge

Western story. 40-30884

Boston Transcript p1 Ag 17 '40 40w

"Randolph Hale is a new writer of Western stories. In this his first book he has achieved an ingenious and novel tale and told it so well that every word counts and the reader's interest is gripped and held to the very end." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p30 O 20 '40 270w

HALL, ANNA GERTRUDE. Nansen; il. by Boris Artzybasheff. 165p $2.50 Viking

B or 92 Nansen, Fridtjof (W) 40-27268

Biography of the Norwegian scientist, Arctic explorer, and statesman. It begins with his youthful days as ski champion, and tells the whole story of his life. Altho written for young people, it will be useful for adults also.

Booklist 36:308 Ap 1 '40

"A long-awaited book is here. It was worth waiting for. It is one of our best biographies for young people." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Mr 31 '40 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '40

"No more inspiring, no more timely biography has appeared recently among books for young people. Whoever reads it for its exciting adventure may well put it down with gratitude and a renewed belief that in spite of failures there is such a thing as international brotherhood. Boris Artzybasheff's splendid illustrations add distinction to a finely made book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:172 My '40 120w

"This story is thrilling and informative. It is the latter part of his life that is all-important to the author and she conveys her enthusiasm to her reader. Miss Hall shows how all the experiments and gropings of Nansen's early years as scientist and explorer built up the Nansen of his maturity, the servant of his fellow men. The subject matter is so interesting, the aim of the book so clear, that one does not mind the uneven style." M. N. Baker

+ Library J 65:166 F 15 '40 100w

"In an age of self-seeking tyrants, the life of the Norwegian naturalist, scientist, explorer, statesman, and humanitarian, Fridtjoh Nansen, serves as a reminder that there are still 'giants in the earth.' Nansen—a beautiful piece of book-making in cool blues and white—shows his steady growth from an impulsive, self-willed boy to the courageous and wise man who held fast to the belief that 'hatred could be overcome by brotherliness.'" M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 65:856 O 15 '40 80w

"In the light of this record it is not surprising that the tone of the book sometimes takes on a trace of hero-worship, and if there is a sketchiness in dealing with the more intimate side of his life, this stands, nevertheless, as a dramatic and inspiring portrait of a modern giant. Boris Artzybasheff has made some illustrations for this book, including a very useful map, which must stand among the most distinguished of his work." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 17 '40 600w

"Artzybasheff's cold, ice-blue illustrations are very fine, but the text is marred by a lack of intimate detail and by the biographer's tendency to underline the inspirational aspects of her subject matter. Recommended, though, for the chapters on Nansen's crossing of Greenland and on his bitter, three-year voyage in the Arctic Current." K. S. W.

+ — New Yorker 16:99 My 18 '40 60w

Social Studies 31:287 O '40 20w

"Younger readers may not be particularly interested in the details of Nansen's life as a statesman, but they will be fascinated by the account of the expeditions to Greenland and the North Pole. The story should have a good effect on them, for the author has developed fully the idealism, heroism, and profound beauty of Nansen's character." M. L. Pfaelzer

+ Social Studies 32:45 Ja '41 140w

Wis Lib Bul 36:102 My '40

HALL, MRS ESTHER GREENACRE. Mario and the chuna; il. by J. M. de Aragon. 61p $1.75 Random house

Children in Argentina 40-27696

Mario was a small Argentinian boy whose only pet was a chuna, a bird clever at throwing stones. The chuna was very useful in the cornfield, but quite a nuisance at home. The story describes how the bird finally proved its worth at home too.

Booklist 37:75 O 15 '40

"The characters are alive and vital, especially Mario and his fat, lazy father who is lord of the household." Marian Herr

+ Library J 65:769 S 15 '40 130w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:853 O 15 '40 20w

"The central idea of the book is fresh and original, and there is a quiet humor in this tale of Mario." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 N 3 '40 250w

"Simple and appealing." F. G. Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 N 16 '40 40w

HALL, FORD POULTON. Government and business. 2d ed 455p $4 McGraw

380.16 Industry and state—U.S. Government ownership—U.S. 39-34171

"A college textbook, first issued in abbreviated outline form in 1934 [Book Review Digest, 1935] and now expanded into a full text. It gives a comprehensive picture of government control of business, both federal and state, with documentation and reading references." Booklist

"The book will prove helpful to those who are giving general courses on the relation of government to business. The treatment is sane, and usually accurate." Eliot Jones
+ Am Econ R 30:401 Je '40 300w

Reviewed by C. B. Hagan
Am Pol Sci R 34:384 Ap '40 150w

Booklist 36:200 Ja 15 '40

HALL, JAMES NORMAN. Doctor Dogbody's leg; with drawings by Warren Chappell. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 371p $2.50 Little (W) 40-9898

Doctor Dogbody, for fifty years a surgeon in His Majesty's navy, was wont in his retirement to regale his companions in the taproom of Will Tunn's Cheerful Tortoise, with tales of his adventures, and particularly of how he lost his leg, an accident which varied with every tale. The book contains ten of these tales: The Cheerful Tortoise; The silver buckle; For Russia; The vulnerary water; Rule Britannia; The happy return; Attica, the twelfth; April first on April second; Feadle and Foster; The Greenwich pensioners.

Booklist 36:429 Jl 15 '40

"Mr. Hall knows, not only how to create atmosphere, but, once it is created, how to tell a rattling story that partakes of the quality of legend. Dr. Dogbody, in his yarns, is always precise and specific—the very first tale shows that." S. V. Benét
+ Books p1 Jl 14 '40 1350w

"All in all, Doctor Dogbody is someone to remember. Yet there is more to Mr. Hall's book than this sea-going Munchausen. He has worked into the stories a vast deal of English maritime history covering roughly the period from the American Revolution to the Napoleonic era." G. K. Smart
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 20 '40 550w

"Mr. Hall again proves his outstanding ability to write of the sea and of sailors. He has a vigor of description that plunges the reader into the heart of the eighteenth century, and makes the little navy surgeon and his companions stand out as live personalities. It is to be feared, however, that Dr. Dogbody's Leg, in spite of its many fine qualities, will appeal to a limited audience. Readers who do not like the Munchausen variety of tale are apt to find it rather uninteresting."
+ — Cath World 152:251 N '40 200w

"Excellent reading at any time." J. A. Sohon
+ Library J 65:591 Jl '40 80w

"The eighteenth-century flavor is a little forced; otherwise this is passable fun."
+ — New Repub 103:38 Jl 1 '40 60w

"'Doctor Dogbody's Leg' is a tour-de-force from beginning to end, and an uncommonly successful one." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 14 '40 480w

New Yorker 16:66 Jl 13 '40 70w

"In 'Doctor Dogbody's Leg,' James Norman Hall demonstrates that he can work within a circumscribed compass and never muddy the surrounding waters by a single false step, that without sounding one portentous note he can produce an eminently satisfying book. And that surely, is a test of a writer's skill." Charlton Ogburn, Jr.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:5 Jl 13 '40 550w

"James Norman Hall has struck off a happy character in his bland, blue-eyed old surgeon. If its 18th-Century flavor is not distinguished, neither is it strained, and the same goes for Warren Chappell's pen-&-ink illustrations."
+ Time 36:70 Jl 15 '40 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p569 N 9 '40 180w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 30:xii autumn '40 140w

HALL, JAMES NORMAN. The friends. ltd ed 34p on rag pa $2.50 Prairie

811 Robinson, Edwin Arlington—Poetry 39-16245

"The first volume of poetry by James Norman Hall, who has become widely known as the co-author of the Bounty novels. In a long poem of some six hundred lines of blank verse, three friends discuss the work of Edwin Arlington Robinson. The discourse includes sound, if not new, appraisals of Robinson." Poetry

"A well rounded, witty and trenchant appraisal of the poet's work. It is a little masterpiece of criticism that manages in composition to approximate the special flavor of Robinson's own style and method."
+ Books p16 F 4 '40 250w

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger
Poetry 55:105 N '39 200w

HALL, MRS MARY (ROSS). Children can see life whole; a study of some progressive schools in action. 157p $2 Assn. press

371.3 Education—Experimental methods 40-10353

"By extended visits to several progressive schools and a careful study of their methods and results, the author collected the data to show how children can be taught, and actually are being taught, to get some adequate views of the nature of the world and of society, and to find their places and to develop appreciation and responsibility." Christian Century

"While no great amount of attention is given to 'religious education' as such, intelligently religious persons will not fail to see that this is religious education. Church school officers will find the book unusually stimulating."
+ Christian Century 57:116 Ja 24 '40 90w

Reviewed by E. J. Chave
J Religion 20:414 O '40 270w

Reviewed by David Snedden
School & Society 52:168 S 7 '40 380w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '40 700w

"The volume contains some excellent source material for a reader interested in the details of progressive school practice. It remains, however, the evaluation of a rather casual observation and curiously enough reveals little attempt to find out from children themselves what constitutes for them the meaning of their experiences." V. T. Thayer
+ — Survey 76:280 S '40 280w

HALL, SAMUEL WARREN. Tangier island; a study of an isolated group. 122p il map $1.50 Univ. of Pa. press [7s Oxford]

309.1 Tangier island, Virginia 40-4251

Tangier Island is located in Chesapeake Bay, about six miles below the Maryland-Virginia boundary, and has a population of about eleven hundred. This study presents "the essential facts concerning the ethnological and sociological elements pertaining to Tangier Island" and the ways in which it has been affected by change down to 1932. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by C. A. Barker
Am Hist R 46:483 Ja '41 170w

"Very readable and well-organized little book." Horace Miner + Am J Soc 46:264 S '40 280w

"[The author] has done a good job, especially in view of the facts that he was a stranger to the community, that he obviously tried to protect the townsfolk by not revealing too much, and that he presented his analysis in so short a space. Tangier community is highly integrated, strongly resistant to outside influences that conflict with fundamentalist Methodism, and woven around fishing, oystering, and crabbing—primarily the latter." Albert Blumenthal

HALL, S. W.—Continued
+ Am Soc R 5:981 D '40 80w

"A moderately informative and illuminating description of life on Tangier Island." F. N. House
+ Ann Am Acad 209:249 My '40 300w

Reviewed by L. M. Brooks
Social Forces 19:287 D '40 280w

HALLGREN, MAURITZ ALFRED. All about stamps; their history and the art of collecting them. 373p il map $3 Knopf

383 Postage stamps (W) 40-7646

This volume is in two parts. The first, dealing chiefly with the history and character of postage stamps, contains chapters on Rowland Hill; The first postage stamp; Early United States stamps; The postage stamp as a work of art. The contents of part two are: The rise of the collector; Collections of every kind; Famous collectors; Stamps of great price; The philatelic market; Governments as stamp merchants; Fakes and frauds; A guide to philatelic literature. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 36:376 Je 1 '40

"It is not surprising that most of the 100,000 books and periodicals written on the subject of postage stamps and stamp collecting which the Collectors Club has in its library are somewhat dry and uninteresting. They were written by students who were or are primarily research experts and not journalists. But now Mauritz Hallgren has taken that subject and vivified it so well that it's as good reading as a novel. . . In short, 'All About Stamps' is an excellent reference work for the advanced collector and an entertaining, informative story for the person who thinks of stamps as only a source of lingual distaste." E. A. Kehr
+ Books p16 My 26 '40 420w

"The publisher's statement that 'no such book as this' has ever appeared in America, until now, is literally the truth. Veteran philatelists, both collectors and dealers, who have read Mr. Hallgren's volume are generally in agreement that here is the most all-inclusive work that has yet been written regarding their hobby." K. B. Stiles
+ N Y Times p19 My 12 '40 950w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '40 1450w

HALLIBURTON, RICHARD. Richard Halliburton; his story of his life's adventure; as told in letters to his mother and father. 433p il map $3.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Adventure and adventurers. Voyages and travels (W) 40-10950

A selection of letters written by Richard Halliburton to his father and mother and covering the years from about 1912 to 1939, school days at Lawrenceville and Princeton, and then the years of wandering over the whole globe to the final last letter written just before the Sea Dragon set sail from Hongkong.

Booklist 36:428 Jl 15 '40

"Those who enjoyed his first best-seller, 'The Royal Road to Romance,' and his subsequent books of adventure will feel they know his fundamental philosophy even better after reading this. For the adventurer-writer emerges here very frankly a showman. Richard Halliburton's philosophy was simple. Life without excitement wasn't worth living. Whoever looks for something more profound will be disappointed." W. G. Martin
Books p4 Je 30 '40 1100w

"No Satirist would have dared to invent Richard Halliburton, and his adventures were a little too monotonously exciting for even a comic-strip artist. Yet he was real—at first a type, then a caricature of the type, and immensely successful in both roles. . . It is a curious and sometimes pitifully revealing story that is told. . . Somewhere the normal boy turned a stunt man." Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 Jl 2 '40 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

"Richard writes in great detail with all the enthusiasm and spontaneity that readers of the Royal Road to Romance expect. And yet back of the world recognition accorded him was a tremendous amount of hard work." A. M. Colt
+ Library J 65:541 Je 15 '40 200w

"There are many things I like about this book. There is the youth of it from beginning to end. There are confidence and romance and loyalty and, what many people had not previously suspected, a sense of humor. . . In this book, if in no other, the Halliburton legend has been established. During the last twenty years there has been no one who has made a better known name for himself in travel literature. And this last book is his best." E. F. Allen
+ N Y Times p4 Je 30 '40 1000w

Reviewed by Linton Wells
Sat R of Lit 22:14 Je 29 '40 480w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 7 '40 490w

"It is as easy to laugh off Richard Halliburton as it ever was; and this book could easily be regarded merely as one last bid to the fans. But as a record of an eager human life, and of the relations of that life to its parents and its planet, it is a touching tale."
Time 36:69 Jl 8 '40 420w

HALLIDAY, BRETT. The private practice of Michael Shayne. 250p $2 Holt

40-4861

Detective story.

"You get an exciting view of a certain Southern city in its less virtuous aspects, and if you can shudder at Mike's brushes with the underworld, so much the better. This is something of a round-house item and must be taken in the right spirit." Will Cuppy
Books p14 F 25 '40 80w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 F 10 '40 40w

"The story here recorded is packed with thrills, quick thinking and quicker action." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p26 F 11 '40 100w

"Seamy side of Florida life vividly depicted, with chief character dealing, and receiving mighty wallops on all sides. Tough-guy epic."
Sat R of Lit 21:18 F 10 '40 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '40 190w

HALLIDAY, BRETT. The uncomplaining corpses. 274p $2 Holt

40-13045

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p9 Ag 18 '40 100w

"This is a fast, exciting story, up to its predecessors but not surpassing them." Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 17 '40 80w

"Michael Shayne gets results, but he is no shining example to hold up to the youth of our land. Perhaps we are old-fashioned, but we do admit to a preference for detectives who play the game according to the rules." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 Ag 25 '40 220w

"Pretty scurvy lot of characters, considerable slugging, rough language, and solution that is not quite unexpected. Torrid."
Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 31 '40 40w

"With the police unintentionally balking his efforts, his pretty wife trying to help him but only succeeding in getting him into more difficulties and the criminal element laying lethal traps for him at every turn, Shayne has a lively time of it before he finally brings the murderer to justice."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '40 240w

HALPER, ALBERT. Sons of the fathers. 431p $2.50 Harper
40-33363

Saul Bergman, a Jewish grocer, came to the United States from Russia to avoid conscription. In America he settled in Chicago, there to raise his large family in peace, as he thought. The advent of the first World war, and the calling of his two oldest sons to the colors ended his dream.

Reviewed by Milton Rugoff
Books p4 N 17 '40 1000w

Reviewed by Griffin Barry
New Repub 104:123 Ja 27 '41 650w

"Albert Halper's new novel is loaded with controversial dynamite. Honestly, sincerely and with an abundance of homely detail it tells the story of what happened to 'a little man' and his family during the last war. . . One can respect Mr. Halper's convictions and his integrity as a writer without sharing his conclusions. Like the good craftsman that he is, he has worked within the framework he has established: this is a novel of 1917, and not a novel of 1940. The picture he paints is warm, intimate and accurate." Harold Strauss
+ N Y Times p5 O 20 '40 900w

'Mr. Halper has written better books than this and, let us hope,' will write better ones in the future. It has a nerveless, immature quality, and the author's prose, never particularly memorable, is more slipshod and pedestrian than ever." Clifton Fadiman
— New Yorker 16:106 O 19 '40 100w

"I have read all of Albert Halper's books except 'The Chute' which I am still reading as I write this review. In all of his books, I find the same careless and slipshod manner of writing. He is a writer without style. . . [He] has one talent. He can tell a story about people whom he conventionalizes and stereotypes. From the point of view of story, his books are well constructed. However, his stories do not hold when one examines the characters closely and analyzes the constituent parts of his plots." J. T. Farrell
— + Sat R of Lit 23:12 N 2 '40 1000w

"The narrative is loosely organized and seems to be following a chronological outline. As a record of how an immigrant's family grew up in one of the poorer sections of Chicago during the first part of the present century the book has a certain sociological value; but from the standpoint of style, significance, and emotional power the work gains no very high rating." R. J. C.
— + Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '41 430w

HALSEY, ABIGAIL FITHIAN. In old Southampton; with a foreword by Nicholas Murray Butler. 144p il $2.50; pa $1 Columbia univ. press [pa 5s Oxford]

974.725 Southampton, Long Island 40-5233

Account of the settlement and early conditions in Southampton from about 1640 to 1776.

Reviewed by I. M. Calder
Am Hist R 46:481 Ja '41 170w

"A delightful story and description. . . It should have an interest and charm for many readers, both in this country and in England." Cecil Robinson
+ Crozer Q 17:317 O '40 70w

"A pleasant little book." E. N. Jenckes
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 9 '40 1050w

HALSTED, WINIFRED. Jam for breakfast. 263p $2 Kinsey 40-7593

A summer's romance, with a Connecticut farm as background. Sue Nicholas and her husband made their living by selling broilers and antiques. Sue's friend Eliza went to visit while she was recovering from a romance without a happy ending, and found herself embarked on a happier one.

Booklist 36:412 Jl 1 '40

"Like the same author's 'Marriage Is So Final,' this is a blithe exposition of the eternal skirmish. It can't boast much plot, but the dialogue is nimble and the moral free from moralizing." Lisle Bell
+ — Books p19 My 5 '40 250w

"Clever phrasing, wise-cracking, and original character drawing."
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 4 '40 40w

" 'Jam for Breakfast' is a choice item for any appetizing menu of light fiction. It is gay and funny, continually diverting. Its story . . . is told in an engaging style that sparkles with teasing and half-complete literary and non-literary allusions. Its conversations are the natural talk of intelligent, eccentric, rather balmy and pleasant people." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p20 Ap 28 '40 290w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '40 160w

HAMBIDGE, GOVE. New aims in education. (Whittlesey house publication) 226p $2 McGraw

370.1 Education—Aims and objectives. Education—Pennsylvania (W) 40-8048

In the form of letters written by a father to his college-age son, this book discusses certain criticisms now being leveled at the American educational system and advocates individual rather than mass education. The work is based on ten years' study under the Carnegie Foundation in the schools and colleges of Pennsylvania.

"Despite its paradoxical reasoning, the book contains much good advice to students, and presents a point of view toward college life that would be of genuine value to parents, teachers, and guidance counselors." F. J. Brown
+ — Ann Am Acad 212:272 N '40 650w
Booklist 36:394 Je 15 '40

Reviewed by E. H. Miner
Boston Transcript p5 Je 8 '40 400w
N Y Times p18 Je 2 '40 460w

HAMBLEDON, PHYLLIS. No silver bells. 314p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Low] 40-12032

A Scottish spinster in her forties, in a long letter to the man she feels she cannot marry, relates the story of her life—her love for the young Englishman who left her, her part in the upbringing of Petal Forbes, and her successful career as a landscape gardener. The scene of much of the story is the island of Mull, off the coast of Scotland.

Booklist 37:68 O 15 '40

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p8 Jl 21 '40 450w

"The core of the novel is an extremely interesting study of a mature woman with a complex and strong character. It is the deft and subtle unfolding of this peculiarly one-sided personality that makes the novel decidedly outstanding and closer to life than is usual in light fiction."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '40 100w

"The relationships of the various characters to one another are denoted with a clearness which does not lack subtlety, the pen-pictures of the Highlands are drawn with loving care, and though toward the close one feels that

HAMBLEDON, PHYLLIS—Continued
the author has arranged emotions to suit herself, a trifle too obviously, the novel is interesting and its theme one not often encountered." L. M. Field
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 14 '40 750w

"Smooth summer fiction, and the gardens sound very fine."
+ New Yorker 16:66 Jl 13 '40 50w

"It is queer to read a tale like this today, and to see that the same modest charm and the same sense of chaste gentility may still be brought to life out of the eighteenth century formula. Miss Hambledon has made her little Scotch governess, who turns at last into a sadly wise and eloquently literate lady of the heath, a sincere and credible person. If we will forbear to apply any modern measure to either herself or her tale, we shall find both to be highly appealing." N. L. R.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 Jl 13 '40 150w

"Christine's story, unfolded against the rough beauty of the Scottish mountains and lochs, has a strangely moving quality."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 8 '40 390w
Wis Lib Bul 36:137 O '40

HAMBRO, CARL JOACHIM. I saw it happen in Norway. 219p il $2.50 Appleton-Century 940.54 European war, 1939—Norway. Norway—Politics and government
(W) 40-33025

Story of the invasion of Norway by the Germans, written from first-hand observation by the President of the Norwegian parliament. Index.

"There's something more in the happenings in Norway than Mr. Hambro recounts, though his book, even with its limitations (and they are increased by the fact that Mr. Hambro didn't stay long in invaded Norway), is testimony of historical value."
Atlantic N '40 220w
Booklist 37:114 N 15 '40
Bookmark 2:7 Ja '41

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Books p5 O 27 '40 1100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '40

"This book ought to be important to any reader who wants a first-hand report of an eye-witness to the battle of nations and ideals and ideologies that is going on all over the world today." Sigrid Undset
+ Current Hist & Forum 52:1 N 26 '40 500w
Manchester Guardian p8 D 27 '40 250w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 151:304 O 5 '40 700w

"Mr. Hambro is too charitable to tell us anything of the Allied expeditionary forces and the reasons for their failure; that pitiful story will have to wait until after the war. But as far as Norway is concerned, he has made his case. His book shows that Norway can hold its head high." Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
+ N Y Times p9 O 27 '40 850w
New Yorker 16:78 O 5 '40 50w

Reviewed by Stuart Lillico
Sat R of Lit 23:7 D 21 '40 320w

Reviewed by T. K. Derry
Spec 166:15 Ja 3 '41 900w

"A simple straightforward, courageous account."
+ Time 36:82 O 7 '40 260w

"His book does not profess to be a considered history of the invasion; nor does it present any final or considered judgment on past or future Norwegian policy. It is a simple, straightforward narrative of the events of those dramatic days as witnessed by, or reported to, Mr. Hambro. As such the story is readable, in places even stirring, and well calculated to arouse both the indignation and sympathy of the reader."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p638 D 21 '40 600w

HAMBRO (häm'brō)

HAMBURGER, ESTELLE. It's a woman's business. 300p il $2.50 Vanguard [10s 6d Gollancz]
B or 92 Advertising (W) 39-27910

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

"A highly diverting story." Rose Feld
+ Books p21 Ap 14 '40 650w
J Home Econ 32:255 Ap '40 120w

"Miss Estelle Hamburger's autobiography is not my cup of tea. The history and development of fashion advertising, with which it is mainly concerned, does not seem to me of much consequence. . . This 'success story' proves that at advertising the Americans have us beat." Christopher St John
New Statesman & Nation 19:600 My 4 '40 90w

"Many passages dealing with feminine fashions and commercial uplift ('at these sessions I felt the pulse-beat of the store') may profitably be skipped by the male reader, but the book has a certain fascination. This is due perhaps to the general air of extravagance which surrounds these gigantic emporia." Rupert Hart-Davis
Spec 164:494 Ap 5 '40 80w

"The action of the book never departs from the world of fashion, except for the brief mention of a somewhat summary courtship, marriage, and birth of twin sons. There is plenty of 'human' material in it, however—tales of personal feuds and rivalries, policy and price battles, and it is gemmed with pen-pictures of opulent employers, smart fashion stylists, suspicious buyers, and sullen antagonistic department heads, that carry in them perhaps more than the author realizes. There is a frankness throughout that is attractive, not least in the apologia pro vita sua which she prepares to present to her sons when they ask her why she, their mother, must 'go out to business.'"
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p186 Ap 13 '40 470w

HAMILTON, EDWIN TIMOTHY. Home carpentry; il. by G. Ruth Taylor and Joseph Monaghan; plans by Frank Monaghan. 466p $3.50 Dodd
694 Carpentry (W) 40-27444

Following a series of chapters dealing with tools and their use, painting and finishing, the bulk of the book is devoted to sections giving plans and step-by-step instructions for making more than one hundred pieces of household furniture and furnishings from a coal-bin to a bedside reading table. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 36:361 My 15 '40

"The directions are so good because the author is not afraid of saying the same thing as often as it is necessary to say it—and that, in the case of carpentry for amateurs, is more times than once." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 Je 23 '40 330w

"Junior and senior high school boys and their fathers as well will find every one of the four hundred and fifty odd pages both stimulating and practical." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 65:456 My 15 '40 120w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:32 Jl '40

HAMILTON, GORDON. Theory and practice of social case work. (N.Y. school of social work. Publications) 388p $3 Columbia univ. press
361.8 Social work 40-7948

"This book analyzes and reconciles current theory and practice, explains recent consolidation and synthesis, and shows how case work is being refocused in terms of a functional division of labor." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"While this makes no claim to being the final or the authoritative text on social case work, it is a notable contribution to the all too few texts we have on that subject. . . Any criticism of the work would probably center on the choice of illustrative case material and its usage. In contrast with the clarity of the writer's argument, the extracts from case records seem not quite pertinent. They are sometimes obscure and at other times they illustrate esoteric practice of which the text gives no clue. . . The book does not take its place in any particular 'school' of social case work. It is eclectic in method and catholic in its acceptances, and is a satisfactory guide for anyone who wants to know what is this thing called social case work." F. J. Bruno

+ — Ann Am Acad 211:240 S '40 460w

Reviewed by W. R. McNutt
Crozer Q 18:80 Ja '41 110w

Reviewed by I. K. Carter
Social Forces 19:135 O '40 430w

"For the interested lay person, Miss Hamilton's book adds materially to the understanding of social case work as one method in the vast program for social welfare. For the student at any stage of experience the logical and orderly presentation will do much to integrate theory with practice and the various concepts and processes with one another." Jeanette Regensburg

+ Survey 76:278 S '40 460w

HAMILTON, HARRY. Watch us grow. 306p $2 Bobbs
40-4191

The scene is the little town of Aleta in Arkansas. The town's leading citizens, the Moreheads, had based their rise to fortune on sharp practice. Their downfall, which brought with it the beginning of a new Aleta, was due to a combination of the Mississippi river on a rampage, and dauntless Mrs Tiller, one of the colony of squatters on the land behind the levee.

"It is a piece of Americana of unusual interest, effectively dramatized." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 F 18 '40 400w

" 'Watch Us Grow' is marked by fine story-telling. You simply have to go on reading to see what happens next, and plenty does. . . The best character drawing in the book is that of the town itself. The people are most interesting for the part they play in the life of Aleta. And it is for jolly good story-telling that 'Watch Us Grow' is chiefly to be recommended." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p26 F 18 '40 400w

HAMILTON, WILLIAM JOHN. American mammals; their lives, habits, and economic relations. 434p il $3.75 McGraw 599 Mammals 40-27054

Includes in a single volume the habits and characteristics of "all the mammal families of North America, from Panama to the Arctic Barrens." The author, who is an instructor in invertebrate zoology in Cornell University, begins with a short account of mesozoic life. Bibliographies at ends of chapters. Index.

Booklist 36:209 F 1 '40

"The book is respectably written and well illustrated with numerous drawings and photographs, most of them original; and many items derived from the author's own research are included. There are extended bibliographies and a good index." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p17 Ap 28 '40 450w

"This book should be regarded as a reference text, of interest to the layman as well as the professional zoologist."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 Mr '40 290w

HAMLIN, TALBOT FAULKNER. Architecture through the ages. 680p il $6 Putnam
720.9 Architecture—History (W) 40-27546

"This book for the general reader as well as the artist and designer is a history of architectural development based on the conception that buildings are not isolated objects of set, definite styles which existed arbitrarily at different times, but rather the inevitable results of characteristic ways of living, governing, worshiping, and doing business. It shows that, just as civilization grows and changes, so does architecture grow and change, sensitive to every least variation of popular needs or popular ideals." (Publisher's note) Beginning with primitive architecture the study is brought down to the architecture of the present. The volume is copiously illustrated. Index.

Booklist 36:409 Jl 1 '40
Bookmark 2:5 Ja '41

"This book must be acclaimed as the most comprehensive, authoritative, and interesting one-volume history of architecture in English. Mr. Hamlin writes from a wide knowledge of recent archeological and technical discoveries, as well as traditional history, and the material he has selected covers an amazingly wide range. . . Lacking are the customary paraphernalia of textbooks, notably tables of dates and bibliography; those aids should be added in a second edition. There is an entirely adequate index . . . and the illustrations are for the most part more than satisfactory." W. R. Agard

+ Books p8 Je 9 '40 850w

"Talbot Hamlin in this book combines scholarship with clarity of presentation to make excellent reading for professional or layman." C. W. E. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 14 '40 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '40

"This is a splendid introduction to a rather complex subject. The author combines a number of qualifications that are rarely found together in one person. Hamlin had had rich creative experience as an architect, has taught history of architecture at Columbia University for many years, is head of the unsurpassed Avery Library of Architecture at the same university, and has written some stimulating books on various aspects of his profession, the latest of them dealing with European architectural libraries. . . Hamlin's work can be highly recommended for public and college libraries. It will be an asset also for modern high school libraries, since this method of presenting the history of architecture will open up new avenues of thought for young people." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 65:351 Ap 15 '40 270w

"The nonprofessional reader might have gotten a more vividly incised impression of architecture through the ages if the author had woven through his text more dates, setting up a chronological armature that could be seen occasionally instead of being only sensed. The addition, too, of a chart or diagram tracing the major directions of architectural influence would have been a valuable aid. The book is, none the less, an important contribution on a subject that, though constantly affecting every living person, is usually a blind spot in even broadly informed minds. It cannot help but excite in the reader a keener understanding of contemporary buildings and of the structures that lend their tourist-drawing charm to foreign cities." Frank Caspers

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 4 '40 1300w

"Talbot Hamlin has here written the best record we have of the art of building. . . Except in one respect, it is very near an ideal history of a major art. . . The one virtue lacking in this book is an infectious enthusiasm for architecture as a pleasure-giving art. Mr. Hamlin practically never pauses to convey the sense of beauty of a great historic building, as a created evocative entity." Sheldon Cheney

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:14 Ag 24 '40 900w

HAMMAND, ESTHER BARSTOW. Road to Endor; il. by E. M. Simon. 434p $2.75 Farrar

Parris, Samuel—Fiction 40-32295

The scenes are "London, Barbados, and Massachusetts in the seventeenth century. The Plague, the Great Fire, voodooism, and the Salem witchcraft trials enliven the plot. The chief character, after a few years as a merchant in the West Indies, becomes a minister in Salem and enters fanatically into the pursuit and eradication of witches." New Yorker

Booklist 37:175 Ja 1 '41

"The story is plausible. Miss Hammand writes with purpose, sincerity, and a good command of English. But she simply lacks any sense of how people act and talk and think, any sense of movement more devious than that of the assembly belt on which this story was put together." R. H. Rovere

— + Books p14 O 13 '40 500w

"The historical background, with its scenes of life in England, Barbados and New England evidencing scholarly research and descriptive skill, is properly subordinated to the characterization. Wisely, I think, the author has confined archaisms to quoted letters. Only occasionally does the modernized dialogue jar as when an English publisher visiting Boston in 1686 to dispose of a stock of books speaks of 'our London group of young intellectuals,' and Samuel refers to Cotton Mather as 'C. M.' But these are very minor flaws in a colorful and dramatic novel." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p7 O 13 '40 650w

"A lively tale, with the historical background subdued to create merely a colorful setting for the development of character."

+ New Yorker 16:109 O 19 '40 70w

"It would take a mighty novel indeed to make good use of this rich store of American history, and 'The Road to Endor' is not a mighty novel. It is an ambitious one, which is rather embarrassed by the riches it embraces. Mrs. Hammond mentions more material than she can develop, and falls back finally upon her hero, Samuel Parris, who is dwarfed by his looming background. If Mrs. Hammond had cut off one corner of her picture and labored there, she would have had color and character enough to make her book with." N. L. R.

— + Sat R of Lit 23:22 D 21 '40 300w

HAMMETT, LOUIS PLACK. Physical organic chemistry; reaction rates, equilibria, and mechanisms. 404p $4 McGraw

547 Chemistry, Organic. Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 40-8903

"Dealing with the borderline field between physical chemistry and organic chemistry, this book presents the results of the application of physical chemical methods to the problem of equilibrium, the rate, and the reactions of organic chemistry; that is, to the prediction of the direction and the yield of the organic chemist's procedures. Some topics of special importance are: a simplified presentation of valence theory in the light of the results of quantum mechanics; the proton transfer theory of acids and bases and the Bronsted theory of catalysis; the statistical mechanics of equilibrium and reaction rate in organic chemistry." (Publisher's note) The author is professor of chemistry at Columbia university. Index.

"Courses in physical organic chemistry are now offered in an increasing number of chemistry departments. Of the very few books in the field, this one is the first which can be unqualifiedly recommended as a text for a course dealing with the mechanisms of organic reactions. As a physical chemist whose researches on rates, equilibria, and mechanisms of reactions in solution have been of basic importance to theoretical organic chemistry, Professor Hammett is uniquely qualified to write this book." P. D. Bartlett

+ Am Chem Soc J 62:1882 Jl '40 550w

Chem & Met Eng 47:445 Je '40 110w

HAMSUN, KNUT. Look back on happiness; tr. from the Norwegian by Paula Wiking. 276p $2.50 Coward-McCann

40-7240

"The scenes of Knut Hamsun's latest book are laid amid the wild grandeur of the Norwegian mountain regions. The story is told in the first person as the onlooker watches the lives and progress of the affairs of those with whom he comes in contact in the remote 'fjelds.'" Library J

"Both arrogant and humble in its tone, filled with tempestuous conflicts portrayed in icy language, in these pages Hamsun's hatred of humanity vying with his passion to save us, and his insight stumbling over his prejudices, 'Look Back on Happiness' is a fascinating study in the follies of maturity. . . Though 'Look Back on Happiness' is a less solid work, and not comparable again to 'Hunger,' it may be closer to the truth of Hamsun himself. For him there will be no objectivity, nor balance, nor final peace. The young rebel is the ancient Ishmaelite. The answer of the grave will also be inadequate, his soul immortally indignant, his perturbed spirit mocking at that last illusion of death." Maxwell Geismar

+ Books p6 Ap 7 '40 900w

Reviewed by E. S. Fainsod

Boston Transcript p2 My 4 '40 280w

" 'Look Back on Happiness' is then a curious mixture of lyricism and futility. Of wisdom there is little, for the author's conception of old age is a negative, sterile one. Youth and vigor appear to circumscribe his only concept of happiness. For old age there is only the the past. Hamsun's earthiness is losing its vigor and his old protagonist seems in the end to be like a wounded animal seeking only to return to its cave to die." Edward Skillin, Jr.

Commonweal 31:556 Ap 19 '40 600w

"This book will in no way be a popular novel but will appeal strongly to adults interested in the natural backgrounds and the feeling of being close to the earth that Hamsun's Growth of the Soil and Hunger give. Every public library will need a copy of this book since it represents some of the best writing of present-day Scandinavia." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 65:300 Ap 1 '40 110w

Nation 150:634 My 18 '40 90w

"Nazi-Nordic moonshine at its dullest."

— New Repub 102:682 My 20 '40 50w

" 'Look Back on Happiness' may not be the novel on which Hamsun's unquestionable fame will rest. But it is one of his finest." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 7 '40 1300w

"Interesting chiefly as proof of the subsidence of a great talent, it is a book that will puzzle, if not disappoint, American lovers of an earlier, saner Hamsun. It should find its proper audience among those odd New Primitives who see unique virtues in peasants, continuous child-bearing, forests, and ignorance. . . Indeed, the whole book has a curious Trader Horn quality, as if its author were unable any longer to organize his impressions and ideas and were now content merely to drift along, hoping to achieve by his very randomness a certain effect of sincerity and originality." Clifton Fadiman

— + New Yorker 16:96 Ap 13 '40 850w

"This book was written to shock. And it does. It throws a black shadow across the reader's path. The book contains too much that is negative to make it great—in spite of the fine artistry with which it is written. Hamsun was greater in 'Growth of the Soil' when he spoke in more positive terms." Gosta Larsson

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ap 6 '40 500w

HAMSUN (ham'sŭn)

Time 35:100 Ap 15 '40 370w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 29:xii summer '40 160w

HANCOCK, LUCY AGNES. Meet the Warrens. 279p $2 Macrae Smith co.

40-32296

The affairs of a middle-class American family provide the background. A time of financial worry brings them all nearer together while they make the necessary readjustments.

"As a reflection of day-by-day living, with its light and dark moments, 'Meet the Warrens' should please the customers." Lisle Bell

Books p17 S 22 '40 110w

"Babies, picnics, work, fun and folly of modest proportions are combined to fabricate a story which any mother might safely offer to her daughter." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p20 S 29 '40 140w

HANCOCK, LUCY AGNES. North Side nurse. 285p $2 Macrae Smith co.

40-4500

Combination of love and mystery story in which the chief characters are a public health nurse on a holiday, and Peter, a widower with a crippled little daughter.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 F 11 '40 60w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 23 '40 100w

"The love and mystery muddle makes a pleasantly diverting story for pastime reading." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 F 11 '40 170w

Wis Lib Bul 36:68 Ap '40

HANDLER, BEULAH. English the American way; for German-speaking adults. 190p il map $1.50; pa $1 Barnes & Noble

420 English language—Study and teaching (W) 40-27080

"A unique manual designed to aid German adults in acquiring mastery of English. Intended primarily for classroom use, it will doubtless prove of great help for private study also." Christian Century

Booklist 36:232 F 15 '40

Christian Century 57:83 Ja 17 '40 30w

HANEY, LEWIS HENRY. Value and distribution; some leading principles of economic science. 734p $4 (20s) Appleton-Century

330.1 Economics. Value 39-23548

Study of the subject of theoretical equilibrium economics. "The first part (four chapters) provides background for the explanation of the determination of economic value. The subjects of the four introductory chapters are: a general critique of economic theory; the basic assumptions of economic science; the genesis and general nature of value; and the nature, cause, and final definition of economic value. The determination of economic value (four chapters) may be thought of as comprising the second division of the book. These chapters include a discussion of monopolistic competition and the value of money. Monopolistic competition is developed in terms of the 'Theory of Railway Rates.' The third part of the book deals with distribution. Chapter 9 presents the meanings which have been assigned to the concept of distribution, and the relation of distribution to economic life. Chapters 10 to 13 deal with wages, interest, profits and rent." (Am Econ R) The author is professor of economics at New York university. Index.

"Perhaps it is still too early to expect a concise presentation of the problem of economic value, of the place of the static equilibrium approach to the problem, and in addition a clear statement of both the advantages and limitations of equilibrium theory. The importance of equilibrium theory is not diminished, but rather increased, by a clear statement of the limitations of such theory from the standpoint of providing an accurate analytical description of the determination of economic values in the world of reality." R. T. Bowman

+ Am Econ R 30:355 Je '40 650w

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 20 '40 130w

"Dr. Haney is to be congratulated on the publication of a very scholarly synthesis."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p174 Ap 6 '40 100w

HANFORD, MRS HELEN ELLWANGER. Parents can learn; with a foreword by Clara Savage Littledale. 263p $1.75 Holt

649.1 Children—Management 40-31132

Advice for parents from the day when mother and child are brought home from the hospital, thru the school and adolescent period, up to the time of marriage. " 'Parents Can Learn' isn't a 'how-to-do' book. The reader who expects hard and fast rules for coping with every problem or incident will be disappointed. Mrs Hanford requires of her reader intelligent imagination in applying the principles laid down here to questions that arise in the home." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

"A book which any woman in any one of the Seven Ages from expectant mother to grandmother of many can read with pleasure and profit."

+ Atlantic N '40 220w

Bookmark 2:3 Ja '41

"A number of the major problems of family life are covered in refreshing, even zestful, fashion. There is a chapter on an unusual subject, the joys of a second chance at motherhood, for the woman in her forties. Mrs. Hanford has taken psychology in her stride, it is there as the foundation for her remarks, but what we see is the structure fashioned by her own experience and observation. She has included one of the most persuasive accounts of a nursery school that has been written. 'Parents Can Learn' should be helpful, and never disturbing, to any number of parents." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p14 D 29 '40 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

"This is a fairly small book. But its knowledge is broad and deep and its humanity is rich and generous. Its usefulness should be very great."

+ N Y Times p27 S 29 '40 380w

"Common sense is the keynote of this book as opposed to bookish child psychology. The author, herself the mother of four, in a charming and witty style, and with the use of many anecdotes, considers the many problems that are usually faced in the management of a family." S. C.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 D 28 '40 130w

"The definite problems taken for study are . . . presented with the gay wit and humor of a woman who has a keen appreciation of human nature and an understanding of family life."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 14 '40 220w

HANKS, STEDMAN SHUMWAY. Aviation gets down to earth; the growing need for public landing fields. 121p map $2 Aviation information service, 80 Boylston st, Boston

629.136 Airports 40-9086

Study of ground facilities for aircraft. It was largely thru the author's efforts "that the Highway Bill for the 1941 fiscal year provides for Federal advisory aid to States which propose to build 'flight strips.' . . A 'flight strip' is defined as 'an area not less than 200 feet in width and not less than 1,800 feet in length, with clear approaches, located in a highway right of way or adjacent to a public highway, on public land, developed with State and or county funds (including Federal aid), appropriated to the State Highway Department.' " (N Y Times) Index.

HANKS, S. S.—Continued

Booklist 36:395 Je 15 '40
N Y New Tech Bks 25:43 O '40
Reviewed by J. H. Crider
N Y Times p5 Ag 4 '40 600w

HANSEN, HENRY, ed. See O. Henry memorial award. Prize stories of 1940

HANSEN, MARCUS LEE. Atlantic migration, 1607-1860; a history of the continuing settlement of the United States; ed. with a foreword by Arthur M. Schlesinger. 391p il $3.50 Harvard univ. press

325.73 U.S.—Emigration and immigration. Emigration and immigration 40-6920

"It was the intention of the late professor of history at the University of Illinois to tell the whole epic story of the greatest migration in the history of mankind. The present volume, edited by Professor Arthur M. Schlesinger and complete in itself, deals with the movement from 1607 down to the eve of the Civil War. Concentrating attention upon the European scene, the author vividly describes the various conditions in the Old World which made people dissatisfied with their lot—the innovations in agriculture and landholding, the rise of industrialism, natural disasters, political oppression, religious discrimination, the high-pressure activities of emigrant agents. Emphasizing particularly the Celtic migration which began in 1830 and continued until 1860, he explains why the vision of America as a land of opportunity sometimes burned brightly and sometimes dimly, quickening or retarding the oversea movement. The work contains nine illustrations, an index, and sixty pages of documentation." Commonweal

Reviewed by Conrad Taeuber
Am Soc R 5:983 D '40 100w

"The author draws upon a vast reservoir of documentary material little used, and presumably little known, by most of the American writers on immigration. The material is handled so sympathetically that the high scholarship of the work does not preclude a powerful human appeal." H. P. Fairchild
+ Ann Am Acad 213:210 Ja '41 260w
Booklist 36:360 My 15 '40
Reviewed by H. S. Commager
Books p23 My 5 '40 1400w
Reviewed by H. M. Jones
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 6 '40 1200w
Reviewed by G. D. Glazebrook
Canadian Hist R 21:416 D '40 500w

"The work is a masterpiece of historical scholarship." J. J. O'Connor
+ Commonweal 32:26 Ap 26 '40 280w

"Wide research is concealed behind an admirably clear and interesting narrative."
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 26 '40 130w
Reviewed by P. G. Walker
New Statesman & Nation 20:384 O 19 '40 700w

"Professor Hansen writes without prejudice, and he has told an interesting and a convincing story which is backed by more than sixty pages of documentation in a half dozen languages." Lloyd Eshleman
+ N Y Times p9 Ap 21 '40 1100w
Pratt p5 autumn '40
Social Studies 31:328 N '40 200w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 7 '40 600w

"This is a valuable study of the European background of American immigration. . . For all its great merits, the book has some serious faults. The late Professor Hansen was prone to introduce elaborate and excessively profound theories of historical causation. Celtic land tenures, not only in Ireland, Wales and Scotland, but in Western Germany, are called in to explain nineteenth-century facts. This is to move into the historical undergrowth of Dopsch, Schumacher, and the others and is surely superfluous?"
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p475 S 14 '40 180w
Wis Lib Bul 36:95 My '40

HANSEN, MARCUS LEE. The immigrant in American history; ed. with a foreword by Arthur M. Schlesinger. 230p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

325.73 U.S.—Emigration and immigration. Emigration and immigration. U.S.—Foreign population 40-35768

"In two recent books, 'The Atlantic Migration, 1607-1860,' and 'The Mingling of the Canadian and American Peoples,' both published posthumously and edited by Professor Schlesinger, Hansen explored specific aspects of the immigration theme. However, such inquiries were for him a means to a more significant end: a better knowledge of the historical role of the immigrant in American life. In this book of nine essays Professor Hansen developed his larger views on the subject of immigration." N Y Times

Booklist 37:236 F 1 '41
Reviewed by H. S. Commager
Books p5 Ja 5 '41 1150w

"The student in search of a treatise dealing with minute phases of nineteenth-century immigration and bristling with footnotes will probably be disappointed with this small volume. Nevertheless, contained within its covers is a wealth of suggestion for scholarly research as well as a breadth of viewpoint and human understanding which future historians would do well to imitate. The general reader cannot fail to be impressed with the pleasant and informal manner in which much informative material is presented." E. N. Saveth
+ N Y Times p9 Ja 19 '41 1100w

"In its general tenor, the book deserves to rank among the most thought-provoking and stimulating explorations of American history to appear recently. About the only real regret the reader can have, after finishing it, is that the author died (at 45) before he could go more deeply into his subject than his three books of this year allowed." Donald Derby
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 12 '41 1050w

HANSEN, MARCUS LEE. The mingling of the Canadian and American peoples; v 1; Historical; completed and prepared for publication by John Bartlet Brebner. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of economics and history. Relations of Canada and the United States) 274p maps $3 Yale univ. press

325.2 Canada—Emigration and immigration. U.S.—Emigration and immigration. Canada—Relations (general) with the U.S. U.S.—Relations (general) with Canada 40-27389

History of continuous exchange of population between the United States and Canada since 1700, with a study of the economic and social factors which caused the migration, and its results. Index.

Reviewed by Conrad Taeuber
Am Soc R 5:983 D '40 100w
Reviewed by Frank Lorimer
Ann Am Acad 211:220 S '40 1150w
Booklist 36:338 My 1 '40

"Dr. Hansen's book is severely factual, but it is so luminously written that its larger implications can easily be read between the lines." Allan Nevins
+ Books p4 Jl 7 '40 1100w
Reviewed by F. H. Underhill
Canadian Forum 20:187 S '40 490w

"The meaning, in human terms, of this mingling of peoples will be appreciated from a series of particular cases, skilfully woven into the pattern of a book which, both for scholarship and understanding, will be a notable contribution to the history of this continent. It tells of a story which is still unfolding, and explains much of the important contemporary development in the relations between the two countries." G. D. Glazebrook

+ Canadian Hist R 21:417 D '40 600w

Christian Century 57:418 Mr 27 '40 100w

"This book is history, well documented and interestingly written, dealing with many hitherto unknown details of a subject whose main features are generally known in America. It is timelier than its late author could have foreseen, since it appears at a moment when world events seem destined to link the futures of Canada and the United States even more closely than the ties of the past have done." V. C. Finch

+ Geog R 30:692 O '40 1350w

Reviewed by J. S. Southron

N Y Times p9 Je 2 '40 1100w

"This is a most valuable contribution to the economic and social history of North America and a striking demonstration of the power of economic and social forces to impose their own pattern on political structures."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p415 Ag 24 '40 250w

HARBIN, ELVIN OSCAR. The fun encyclopedia. 1008p $2.75 Cokesbury press

793 Amusements. Entertaining. Games (W) 40-27572

"A comprehensive, all-purpose, entertainment plan-book for the home, club, school, church, and playground." (Subtitle) "Suggestions are offered for home recreation, for clubrooms, for hobbies, for banquets, for sports, for picnics, for outings, for camps, for campfires, for hikes, for indoor and outdoor games, for parties, for music and musical games, for dramatics, and for puppetry. There are stories, stunts, tricks, writing contests, quizzes, nature games, party plans, and suggestions for almost every conceivable kind of recreation." (Pref) Bibliography. Indexes.

Booklist 36:427 Jl 15 '40

"It is safe to say that, of its kind, this book is the best buy on the market."

+ Christian Century 57:1056 Ag 28 '40 40w

HARDING, MRS BERTITA (LEONARZ). Hungarian rhapsody; the portrait of an actress. 344p il $3 Bobbs

B or 92 Fehér de Vernet, Camille (W) 40-32479

Biography of a once-famous Hungarian actress, Camille Fehér de Vernet, godmother of the author. After some years on the stage in various of the European capitals, Camille finally gave up her career in order to devote herself to her brilliant half-brother. She is now an old woman in her seventies, living in California, with her memories of the great of other days: Liszt, Wagner, Duse, and Bernhardt.

Booklist 37:115 N 15 '40

"Bertita Harding's portrait has warmth, charm and the ring of authenticity. Through her you see a woman who was gay, loving, simple and incredibly loyal and courageous. Much of the charm comes from the bright, tragic and humorous scenes of life in the provinces and capitals and the passing pictures of celebrities. . . 'Hungarian Rhapsody' is a memorably romantic story, as touching as it is colorful." Mary Ross

+ Books p4 S 15 '40 1150w

"Her story holds the reader's attention as if it were a novel. It has the much greater fascination of not being that. Among human stories of today it is—and here is its most poignant force and suggestiveness—not even unique." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 S 15 '40 1550w

"It is not a rhapsody; the title misleads. The tone throughout is one of simplicity and balance, tender rather than rhapsodic. . . Whatever of rhapsody there is in her story dwelt in the courts and salons through which Camille moved like a stranger, giving warmth but receiving none. Hers is an interesting history, of an actress who neglected willingly or not, the other arts of living." N. L. R.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 S 21 '40 240w

HARDY, CHARLES OSCAR. Wartime control of prices. 216p $1 Brookings

338.5 Prices. War—Economic aspects. European war, 1914-1918—Economic aspects 40-32594

"Part I is a study of the problems involved in wartime control of prices, the possibilities for future control, and the methods to be used. Part II reviews and appraises the experiences of the United States in price control during the first World war." Booklist

Booklist 37:168 Ja 1 '41

Management R 29:386 O '40 240w

HARDY, EDWARD ROCHIE. Militant in earth; twenty centuries of the spread of Christianity. 255p maps $3 Oxford

270 Church history 40-34186

"Recent historical studies are making clear the significance of Christianity as an influence on the culture of the world. . . Like Latourette's books, this study by Dr. Hardy traces both ideas and numerical developments, and the chief difference lies in perspective and selection. It is a survey, and yet the impact of the simple facts of history opens the doors of interpretation and appreciation. We read of the naturalization of Christianity, of the two swords, of friars, fighters, and explorers, of gold and Christians, and of the age of individuals. This thoroughly objective study leads to the relatively impartial conclusions of the author." Churchman

"In the opinion of the present reviewer, [the author's] task is well conceived and well done—exceptionally well done. It is no easy undertaking to review in 235 pages of actual text the history of two thousand years, and to preserve that balance of generalized interpretation, discriminating selection and detailed description which substantiates the generalizations and at the same time makes them meaningful to the reader. . . And this brings us to our one adverse criticism. It seems unfortunate that a book which reveals such deep insight into the complex nature of the underlying processes should bear the title 'Militant in Earth.'" A. G. Baker

+ Christian Century 58:21 Ja 1 '41 900w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 154:17 D 15 '40 270w

HARDY, EDWARD ROCHIE, and PITTENGER, WILLIAM NORMAN, eds. This holy fellowship; the ancient faith in the modern parish. 228p $2.50 Morehouse

250 Pastoral work 39-32737

"The 14 essays in this notable volume are by writers connected with the General Theological seminary, either now or recently. The book is a memorial to the late Frank Stanton Burns Gavin, for 15 years professor of ecclesiastical history in the seminary. Several of the essayists were his pupils, others were his colleagues, all were his friends. . . Various aspects of the Christian faith, worship and life, are viewed in the light of contemporary life and discussed." Living Church

"Each reader will find some of these essays of greater value than others, and perhaps some will not agree with everything that they set forth, but everyone will find them helpful." W. L. Caswell + Churchman 154:17 F 1 '40 210w

HARDY, E. R., and PITTENGER, W. N., eds. —Continued
Reviewed by Elizabeth McCracken
Living Church 101:6 D 6 '39 180w

HARDY, THOMAS. Selected poems; ed. with an introd. by G. M. Young. 204p $1.35 (5s) Macmillan 821

In his Introduction Mr Young writes: "In making my selection I have been guided by the wish to present, as truly as is possible within small compass, the poetic personality of the writer, and I have arranged it in conformity with the three aspects in which that personality most naturally presents itself to the reader." The selections are grouped as follows: Poems of place and incident; Poems of memory and reflection; From "the dynasts". Index.

Reviewed by John Holmes
Boston Transcript p11 O 14 '40 60w
Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 14 '40 230w
Reviewed by William Empson
New Statesman & Nation 20:263 S 14 '40 850w
Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 16:63 D 28 '40 60w

"The Selection (which includes most of the best known anthology poems) contains a fair number that are unfamiliar even to such a faithful reader of the Collected Poems as myself. Again and again one is startled by their originality of observation and verbal expressiveness. Hardy's musefulness has a richly personal quality seldom found in condensed forms of verse-writing. And where his poems move awkwardly it is usually because he tried to put too much meaning into them. . . I have only one fault to find with Mr. Young's Introduction, which is written from the moderating mind of an eminent historian and man of letters. He omits to mention that Hardy was a seer. . . [However] Mr. Young has done him loyal service, thereby earning the deep gratitude of his admirers." Siegfried Sassoon
+ Spec 165:247 S 6 '40 550w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '40 650w

"More than one hundred and fifty poems out of Hardy's six or seven hundred, chosen by Mr. G. M. Young, with more than twenty pages of Introduction by Mr. Young on Hardy in general and his verse in particular—here is a five shillings' worth that no wise reader of Hardy, veteran or tiro, is going to miss."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p412 Ag 24 '40 1150w

HARE, MARTIN, pseud. See Girling, Z.

HARKNESS, GEORGIA ELMA. Faith by which the church lives. 161p $1.50 Abingdon
261 Christianity 40-27489

"An exposition of the fundamental faith, quite aside from creed, that vitalizes the Christian church. . . Based on lectures delivered at DePauw university." Booklist

Booklist 36:375 Je 1 '40
Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Books p18 S 15 '40 190w
Reviewed by A. L. Murray
Churchman 154:20 Jl 1 '40 130w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '40
Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 17:300 O '40 210w

"A theologian who comes from a Catholic background or who has a semi-Barthian point of view could not accept this book as representing his own statement of the ecumenical message, but he could not fail to recognize that it contains a Christian message and that it says from one point of view what Christians at Oxford and Madras attempted to say together. What I am trying to suggest is that Miss Harkness gives us neither a patched-up form of liberalism nor a surrender to Catholicism or semi-Barthianism, but a fresh start in thinking that grows out of fresh experiences within the life of the Christian church. The book is a comprehensive statement of conclusions that are explained and illustrated rather than a theological argument for the positions held. This reviewer finds himself in such complete agreement with the book that his chief concern is not to offer criticisms but to point out the book's character in the hope that readers will take it for what it is intended to be and see through it to the new mind of the church that is in the process of formation." J. C. Bennett
+ J Religion 21:104 Ja '41 290w

HARLOW, ALVIN FAY. Paper chase; the amenities of stamp collecting. 353p $2.75 Holt
383 Postage stamps (W) 40-27390

Account of the whole field of stamp collecting, from the French forerunners of the seventeenth century, thru the Mulready letter sheets and Rowland Hill's Penny black, to the modern times of "made for the collectors" issues. Copiously illustrated. Index.

Booklist 36:338 My 1 '40

"Mr. Harlow's information is so well written and so generally accurate that one is willing to overlook the few dozen technical slips which any writer who has not had many years of actual philatelic experience himself is bound to make. . . In short, 'Paper Chase' is a book that will undoubtedly have thousands of non-collectors chasing after bits of paper that may be worth anywhere from a cent to $15,000." E. A. Kehr
+ Books p20 Ap 21 '40 440w
Reviewed by James van Zandt
Churchman 154:20 Ag '40 110w

"Alvin Harlow's amazingly comprehensive study of the stamp-collecting phenomenon is also amazingly fascinating reading. It is not only that he traces the development of the hobby as such, though he does that with crisp interest. It is not only that he opens a treasure-box of anecdote in regard to odd finds and famous collections and fantastic prices, though he does that very satisfactorily, and humorously, too. It is, especially, that in showing us this 'paper chase' as a whole he has disclosed such wide ramifications, huge proportions, strange rackets—in short, such vastness and variety in what once was a child's pastime."
+ N Y Times p3 Ap 7 '40 600w

" 'Paper Chase' is excellent background material for beginning stamp collectors to draw on. Numerous practical 'lessons' are suggested through discussions on how philatelists succeed and fail. This cavalcade of postage stamps is well illustrated and indexed." C. B. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 21 '40 1100w
Wis Lib Bul 36:95 My '40

HARMES, EARL. Furniture for the amateur craftsman. 79p il $2.25 Bruce pub.
684 Furniture. Cabinet work (W) 40-4744

Drawings and simple instructions for the making of over twenty pieces of modern furniture, ranging from a tray to a bed and an elaborately carved chest. The book was prepared for the school or home craftsman, by the director of industrial arts, junior and senior high school, Shorewood, Wisconsin. Photographs of finished pieces. Index.

Booklist 36:302 Ap 1 '40
N Y New Tech Bks 25:7 Ja '40
Wis Lib Bul 36:64 Ap '40

HARMON, SETH, and SHUMWAY, HARRY IRVING. Sons of the Admiral; il. by Paul Quinn. 373p $2 Page

Columbus, Christopher—Juvenile literature 40-10328

Story of Christopher Columbus, told from the viewpoint of his young sons, Diego and Fernando. For young readers from twelve to fourteen.

"The style in which this is presented is uninspired, but the material itself is inspiring. . . It is an old story, but from this family point of view it seems new. The friendship of the boys, so different from each other, is stressed as much as their firm belief in their father." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 Je 30 '40 310w

Reviewed by E. M. Wedrow
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 10 '40 250w
Cath World 152:378 D '40 60w

"A good entertaining, human picture. . . The book leaves us with a vivid impression of how the old world reacted to the various voyages of Columbus. Worth while, evidently authentic, though often written in a rather stilted manner. Very well illustrated." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 65:596 Jl '40 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 65:857 O 15 '40 20w

HAROUTUNIAN, JOSEPH. Wisdom and folly in religion; a study in chastened Protestantism. 174p $2 Scribner

284 Christianity. Protestantism 40-34639

This book embodies a criticism of modern Protestantism and argues for a return to Calvinistic teachings. Born and raised in Turkey the author finished his education in America. He has been a professor of biblical history at Wellesley and is now associate professor of systematic theology at Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Chicago.

"In personal conversation the author explained to the reviewer some of his reasons for writing this book. He said that his idea was to show the truth in evangelical Christianity and to put teeth in contemporary Protestantism. He was willing to admit that it was written with his blood. One can easily understand this after reading the book. Its style is hurried and journalistic, thunderous and tumultuous. Biting sarcasm and fighting satire make it almost impossible to lay down the book once it has been started. No words are minced. The author knows what he believes; he is confident that his analyses are correct; and he leaves the impression that he would gladly go to the stake for the things he holds to be eternally true." A. H. Behrenberg
+ — Christian Century 58:22 Ja 1 '41 850w

"The book is on the philosophical side, but there is also concreteness. One regrets the cynical attitude of the writer toward the foolishness which he sees in Protestant preaching and teaching, which will doubtless repel rather than attract readers. However, the book is well worth reading, containing as it does considerable mental pabulum for our day." Clifton Macon
+ — Churchman 154:17 D 15 '40 160w

HARPER, LAWRENCE AVERELL. The English navigation laws; a seventeenth-century experiment in social engineering. 503p $3.75 Columbia univ. press [24s Oxford]

347.7 Maritime law. Great Britain—Commerce. Shipping—Great Britain 40-244

Study of the administration and enforcement of the English navigation laws of the seventeenth century, and a critical discussion of their effects upon trade and shipping. Bibliography. Table of statutes cited. Index.

"The author has performed a herculean task in studying the laws and their amendments. He has gone far in delving into the administration of the laws. He has made known his general and particular conclusions. He has been frank in stating exceptions and conflicting evidence. The combination of historical methodology and general social science awareness has been scholarly and valuable. Still, the major question of the precise effectiveness of the Navigation acts remains in doubt." N. S. B. Gras
+ — Am Econ R 30:594 S '40 600w

Reviewed by W. H. Wickwar
Am Pol Sci R 34:615 Je '40 130w

Reviewed by E. R. Johnson
Ann Am Acad 210:163 Jl '40 400w

"Despite the somewhat pretentious sub-title, Mr. Harper had made an exceedingly valuable contribution to our knowledge of seventeenth-century mercantilism, but he has written—apparently what he was seeking to avoid—good, old-fashioned history." G. S. Graham
+ — Canadian Hist R 21:71 Mr '40 1250w

"Mr. Harper has done the job supremely well. The book is a mine of thoroughly documented information, and is unusually readable." P. W. T.
+ Harvard Law R 53:1223 My '40 160w

Reviewed by E. F. Heckscher
J Pol Econ 48:894 D '40 2400w

"Whether or not one agrees with Mr. Harper's conclusions . . . the value of the book is unquestionable. The general student of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the student of administrative method, the student of international relations, will all find it worth while. It is an excellent example of what can be done by thorough exposition of an apparently narrow topic." Elliott Perkins
+ New Eng Q 13:735 D '40 1000w

HARPER, ROBERT S. Trumpet in the wilderness. 346p map $2.50 Mill 40-33105

Historical novel of the War of 1812. Jubal Johnson, a young Dartmouth graduate, left the girl he loved in Philadelphia and went west to make a fortune. In Ohio he started work on a newspaper, but presently he found himself involved in the war. The battle of Lake Erie is the high point of the story.

Booklist 37:175 Ja 1 '41

"The author displays a nice sense of balance between romance and research."
+ Books p10 O 20 '40 120w
Christian Century 57:1314 O 23 '40 20w

"The description of the battle is a stirring and almost unbearably vivid conclusion to a book which is more distinguished for its intention than its effect. There is so much excellent historical detail here, so many colorful bits to pique the imagination that one wishes regretfully it were a better novel, but Jubal himself is so little of a personality, the love affairs which motivate him are so pallid, that the whole is never integrated into any human significance." E. L. Buell
— + N Y Times p28 N 17 '40 450w

HARPOLE, JAMES, pseud. Behind the surgeon's mask. 308p $2.75 Stokes [8s 6d Cassell]

610.9 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Medicine—History (W) 40-30342

Twenty-one new tales of surgical cases, by the author of Leaves from a Surgeon's Case-Book (Book Review Digest, 1938). Mr. Harpole, reputed to be a Harley Street specialist writing under a pseudonym, describes the cases in anecdotal form for the layman.

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette
Books p16 Ag 4 '40 750w

"The stories take the lay reader behind the scenes and, so far as is humanly possible, let him look from the surgeon's point of view.

HARPOLE, JAMES—Continued
They are all good stories, neither technical nor over-dramatized. Decidedly the best are 'His Son' and the 'Eleventh Hour.' Incidentally, any layman who fancies he favors euthanasia should read 'Right to Kill.' "
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 10 '40 210w
New Repub 103:362 S 9 '40 40w

"The Harley Street surgeon who here draws on his experience under a penname has an impressive and indeed remarkable skill in combining human interest with undisguised technical minutiae; and the result is a series of books that have a genuinely gripping quality."
+ N Y Times p16 D 15 '40 900w

"Tiptop storytelling. You can breeze through it without a qualm, too."
+ New Yorker 16:68 Jl 27 '40 40w

"Doctors may cavil at the almost one hundred percent record of cures, readers who like theirs straight may find the mixture of science and sentiment more irritating than stimulating. But 'Behind the Surgeon's Mask' was not written for these. It was written for the far larger public that loves a good yarn, and also loves to 'keep informed,' the public that cares not a tittle whether the medical profession calls itself art or science so long as it becomes a better and better stage director in the drama of life and death." M. S. Ulrich, M.D.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:16 Jl 27 '40 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p383 Ag 10 '40 60w

HARRIMAN, JOHN. Winter term. 373p $2.50 Howell, Soskin
(W) 40-5223

Story of the cruelties, pathos and humor of life in an American boys' school, as seen thru the eyes of both the boys and the teachers.

Booklist 36:325 Ap 15 '40

" 'Winter Term' will rouse storms of approval from those who have suffered from the system, equally loud storms of disapproval from loyal Old Boys, and horror and shocked surprise from idealistic mothers. It is an excellent, if slightly bitter, picture of life in one of our would-be Etons." Rosemary Benét
+ Books p2 Mr 17 '40 900w

"The blurb suggests that the book is 'Anti-Mr. Chips.' Mr. Harriman lacks the technical skill that made Mr. Hilton's story plausible, but he writes with sincerity and without sentimentality. A graduate of St. Marks, he poses pertinent questions on the process and product of the select private school." E. S. F.
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 30 '40 230w

"It's a first novel, but an achievement rather than a promise, an adult book about youth that is intensely readable and right." Carlton Brown
+ New Repub 102:447 Ap 1 '40 500w

"Here is a first novel of exceptional merit, holding one's interest both as social criticism and by its fidelity to a realistic, unsentimental view of school life. The faculty members and the boys are speaking likenesses, if little likable; and there is Betty Grafton, the headmaster's penniless niece, as charming and romantic a young working woman as ever emerged from the hallowed precincts of Back Bay." Drake de Kay
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 17 '40 550w

"It is not known what school, if any, Mr. Harriman had in mind; he himself went to St. Mark's. But he has told a rattling good story and at the same time offers plenty for parents to think about."
+ New Yorker 16:106 Mr 16 '40 70w

"Mr. Harriman does not exaggerate the picture. He has a remarkable grasp of boy nature, how boys think and how they feel. . . He has written one of the best stories of American schoolboy life, with an entirely adult approach, that I, for one, have ever read." W. R. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 21:8 Ap 6 '40 400w
Time 35:96 Mr 18 '40 370w

HARRIS, MRS BERNICE KELLY. Folk plays of eastern Carolina; ed. with an introd. by Frederick H. Koch. (Carolina playmakers ser) 294p il $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press
812 Folk drama 40-27081

Seven one act plays, most of them comedies, about the country folk of eastern North Carolina. All have been produced by the Carolina Playmakers at Chapel Hill. Contains a selected bibliography on the Carolina playmakers; a list of their productions and tours; and a glossary of colloquial expressions.

Booklist 36:235 F 15 '40
Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p11 F 18 '40 140w

"As one who has remained unconvinced by most folk drama, I am compelled to admit that Mrs. Harris has won me over by her humor, her wisdom, her refusal to sentimentalize or falsify. The language is real and salty. Nothing in her plots seems made up first with dramatis personae added afterwards. On the contrary, what happens to her people happens because they are what they are." Ann Springer
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 27 '40 240w

HARRIS, DAVID. Britain and the Bulgarian horrors of 1876. 437p $3 Univ. of Chicago press [18s Cambridge]
949.7 Bulgarian massacres, 1876-1877. Eastern question (Balkan). Great Britain—Foreign policy. Public opinion—Great Britain 40-4801

"A detailed study of the reaction of the British government and people to the well-known Turkish atrocities. The successive chapters tell the story of the development of Bulgarian nationality, of the hesitancy of the British agents and leaders at home and in Turkey to believe the stories emanating from Bulgaria, the slow awakening of the British public to a realization of what had happened, the government's defense of its policy, and the final transfer of public attention from the Bulgarian horrors to the supposed threat of Russia to traditional British interests." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

"The author has performed the task which he set for himself in a most competent manner." C. P. Higby
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:616 Je '40 110w
New Repub 102:320 Mr 4 '40 30w

HARRIS, ENRIQUETA. The Prado; treasure house of the Spanish royal collections. 136p il $4.50 (12s 6d) Studio
708 Madrid. Museo nacional de pintura y escultura 40-32244

Study of the art collections of the Spanish kings from the fifteenth to the nineteenth centuries. The Prado collection contains, besides Spanish paintings, masterpieces of Italian, French, and Flemish art, all of which are discussed in the present volume. Examples of the collections of several of the Spanish monarchs are included, an index of painters and paintings, and an index of references.

"Like the other Studio books, the illustrations form an important part; (there are 88 in all), none of which however, do the slightest justice to a superb group of masterpieces. The story is better. It is an interesting one in itself, and we were grateful to Miss Harris for not (in spite of a doctor's degree) peppering it with footnotes, which perhaps make worthier, but less easy reading. Possibly a bibliography might have been in order, and we might have wished for a tabulated list of at least the important pictures acquired by each monarch, yet those are minor considerations in the face of the fact that the idea is an interesting one and the author carries it out well as far as she goes." E. M. Bowser
+ — Boston Transcript p5 S 7 '40 700w

"The book is packed with information, leaving sensibility and judgment to be read between the lines."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p343 Jl 13 '40 340w

HARRIS, MRS FLORENCE LA GANKE. Pies a-plenty. 207p il $1.75 Barrows
641.5 Pastry 40-14825

"Recipes for pies and pie crusts of many kinds, from various parts of the United States. Advice is included on utensils, ingredients, manipulation and baking. By the author of Flavor's the Thing [Book Review Digest, 1939]." Booklist

Booklist 37:31 O 1 '40
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '40

HARRIS, HERBERT. Labor's civil war. 304p $2.50 Knopf 331.88 American federation of labor. Congress of industrial organization. Trade unions (W) 40-30086

A survey of American labor today, stressing particularly the unfortunate feud between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organization. Index.

Booklist 37:29 O 1 '40
Bookmark p23 N '40
Reviewed by R. R. R. Brooks
Books p12 S 8 '40 550w
Christian Science Monitor p12 S 14 '40 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '40

"Herbert Harris is well versed in his subject, and has produced a clearly-written, well-integrated volume on one of the most important phases of our national life." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 65:651 Ag '40 150w

"Mr. Harris tells his story and argues his points with all the knowledge of American labor he showed in his earlier and fuller history of the labor movement. There might be fewer purple passages, fewer attempts at sprightliness, but no reader will complain about the wealth of illustration that brightens the pages." Francis Brown
+ N Y Times p12 Ag 18 '40 1000w

"Mr Harris's ungloved accounts may reasonably cause some distaste in a large section of the reading public. Others may think it the right medium for the subject being discussed. The language is not always of the garden-party variety, but a civil war in labor isn't either." A. F. L.
Springf'd Republican p10 S 17 '40 550w
Reviewed by S. H. Slichter
Yale R n s 30:198 autumn '40 350w

HARRIS, MRS LEILA (GOTT), and HARRIS, WALTER KILROY. Blackfellow Bundi, a native Australian boy; pictured by Kurt Wiese. 63p $1.50 Whitman, A.
Children in Australia 39-30375

In the time of famine a little black Australian boy was taken to a large sheep station. There Bundi had a hard period of readjustment, but after several attempts to find his own people the boy returned to the station, bringing with him a baby kangaroo as a pet for his white friends.

Booklist 36:308 Ap 1 '40
Reviewed by R. W. Stewart
Library J 65:123 F 1 '40 130w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 17 '39 80w

HARRISON, C. WILLIAM. Boothill trail. 256p $2 Phoenix
Western story.

"Unless we err, this should strike most Western addicts right between the eyes. . . Violence is the word for this unrestrained and highly readable opus." Will Cuppy
Books p10 Jl 7 '40 140w
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '40 20w
Reviewed by G. W. Harris
N Y Times p18 Ag 11 '40 210w

HARRISON, PAUL WILBERFORCE. Doctor in Arabia. 303p il map $3 Day
275.35 Missions, Medical. Oman 40-30585

Reminiscences of a medical missionary who has spent thirty years at Muscat, Arabia, where he has a hospital.

Booklist 37:111 N 15 '40

"This is a very human book, written from the point of view of a modest, energetic, realistic humanity, by a man who can pass on his own understanding in clear words." H. M. Shaw
+ Books p20 S 29 '40 700w

"A modest but thrilling account."
+ Christian Century 57:1179 S 25 '40 80w
Reviewed by H. J. Simpson
Churchman 154:17 O 1 '40 70w
Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay
Library J 65:761 S 15 '40 290w

"His book is capacious in material, briskly readable in style. In the true sense of an often-abused word, it is an inspiring record; and an intensely interesting one. It shows us a great work, and it brings a faraway people to life, against the background of their burning hills." K. W.
+ N Y Times p20 N 24 '40 700w

"Pleasantly humorous reminiscences."
+ New Yorker 16:83 S 21 '40 30w

HARRISON, SIDNEY. Music for the multitude; with an introduction by Sir Robert Mayer. 383p il $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Joseph, M]
780 Music (W) 40-7693

"The history and theory of music, development of systems of notation and styles, instruments and orchestration, the lives of great musicians, the relation of the evolution of music to cultural and economic history, and the condition and prospects of music in our times—all this makes a rather copious body of material for one book of moderate size. Yet all these topics are touched, and on most of them a good deal is said, perhaps as much as the reader without technical training cares to have." (Christian Century) Index.

Booklist 36:379 Je 1 '40

"The book is written in a pleasing style, always with regard for the limited background of musical training among the 'multitude' to which it is addressed."
+ Christian Century 57:515 Ap 17 '40 110w
New Repub 103:198 Ag 5 '40 60w

"Mr. Harrison's writing is not abstruse or recondite. He must deal in brush strokes, covering tremendous issues in a paragraph or a sentence. But he does no violence to the facts, even if some generalities can bear more detailed treatment. However, this book is designed for the many, particularly for those people who have lately become interested in music. For them it should be as effective a guide as the written word can ever be, with the inevitable reservation that there is no substitute for constant listening." Howard Taubman
+ N Y Times p2 Ap 21 '40 700w

"The latest addition to the flood of new books on music is an almost perfect answer to a very real need. . . The whole subject becomes alive and interesting even to the rank novice. Mr. Harrison's book is to my mind by all odds the most readable and most truly alive

HARRISON, SIDNEY—Continued
work of its kind that has yet come off the press." David Hall

+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 My 25 '40 220w

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 8 '40 250w

"A lively and often colloquial style of writing and a nimble mind to pick a comparison that will elucidate some technical obscurity enable Mr. Harrison to fulfill the promise of his title. The history is inevitably compressed and Mr. Harrison does not allow himself much scope for criticism of composers' music, but he relates the story of music's development to social and political history and deals briskly with aesthetic problems, daring to devote a chapter to the mysterious act of composition and not despising recent developments like jazz."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p735 D 16 '39 230w

HARRY, RALPH G. Modern cosmeticology; the principles and practices of modern cosmetics. 288p il $5 Chemical pub. co.

646.7 Cosmetics 40-12277

"Intended to provide authoritative information concerning the manufacture of modern cosmetics and toilet preparations, as well as a sound knowledge of the dermatological principles underlying the practice of cosmetics. Briefly describes the histology, together with actual photomicrographs illustrating the structure of the skin, hair and nails. Also explains the effectiveness of vitamin and hormone preparations. The author is a consulting chemist, a Fellow of the Institute of Chemistry and a Fellow of the Royal Microscopical Society." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Reviewed by F. E. Wall

Chem & Chem Eng N 18:866 O 10 '40 350w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:33 Jl '40

HARSANYI, ZSOLT. The star-gazer; tr. from the Hungarian by Paul Tabor. 572p $2.75 Putnam [8s 6d Routledge]

Galilei, Galileo—Fiction (W) 39-15266

Historical novel which retells the story of Galileo.

"This is a powerful and valuable book, honest in design and workmanship. An excellent translation from the Hungarian by Paul Tabor."

+ Atlantic Mr '40 130w

Booklist 36:264 Mr 1 '40

"Mr. Harsanyi is always vivid and persuasive. And if this is not great literature it is still one of the permanently true stories, valid by the whole experience of humanity. It is told in lively fashion, and its perennial appeal remains unimpaired." Isabel Paterson

+ Books p1 F 4 '40 2350w

Reviewed by L. R. Lind

Boston Transcript p1 F 3 '40 600w

"The Star-Gazer . . . should easily rank with the immortal books in this genre for it combines literary skill with a fine sense of proportion in the observation and interpretation of historical data and delights the reader with its magnificant manipulation of plot, its sensitive description of scene and event, and its superb handling of characters." K. M. Chworowsky

+ Christian Century 57:577 My 1 '40 1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '40

Reviewed by H. P. Bolman

Library J 65:117 F 1 '40 110w

"Galileo steps a real man from these crowded pages." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 17 '39 330w

"An historical novel as moving and impressive as any I have read since Feuchtwanger's Ugly Duchess. . . The Star Gazer is not by any means a great book, and for all the author's erudition he does not give the taste and smell of the past that one feels in the work of Feuchtwanger. But he writes with insight and craftsmanship and, unlike most biographers of the great, makes us feel as well as know that his subject really was a genius." John Mair

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:504 Ap 1 '39 450w

"Seldom does there come to the reviewer's desk a novel which for vitality, interest, richness of color and breadth of scope is in any degree comparable with Zsolt de Harsanyi's remarkable study of Galileo, 'The Star-Gazer.' . . The book is a very long one, but because its length is a matter of necessity and not of padding, it is interesting from beginning to end, a glowing, clearly drawn and richly detailed picture of one of the world's most important periods, and at its center the weak and strong, suffering and exulting humanity of one of the world's greatest men, Galileo Galilei, 'The Star-Gazer.'" L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p1 F 4 '40 900w

"It's a reasonably interesting, carefully written story. . . The scholarship is dexterously disguised, the background solidly blocked in, the book has movement—there's nothing much wrong with it, in fact, except that it does not, because it cannot, isolate for you the genius of Galileo." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:68 F 3 '40 480w

"The author, a well-known Hungarian novelist and biographer, has made a masterful synthesis of familiar material; his translator has delivered the book in excellent style of English." R. M. Sutton

+ R of Scientific Instruments 11:143 Ap '40 380w

"Readers should be warned that 'The Star-Gazer' is not draped in veils of pious mysticism or spangled with jewels from Madame Tussaud's, that it is neither pompous nor pretentious, that the only excitement in it derives legitimately from its subject, and that its unassuming view of life is more profound than it seems instead of seeming more profund than it is." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 21:5 F 3 '40 550w

"A great deal of credit is due to Paul Tabor for his excellent translation of 'The Star-Gazer.' The language flows smoothly and easily, with none of the abruptness that sometimes marks such efforts. The book is a long one, but not too long for the story of a great man who lived amid the gorgeous color, the indescribable squalor, the bravery and the cruelty that was Italy of 300 to 350 years ago."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 18 '40 700w

Time 35:79 F 12 '40 430w

Times [London] Lit Sup p221 Ap 15 '39 210w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 29:xii spring '40 250w

HARSANYI, ZSOLT. Through a woman's eyes; tr. by Willa and Edwin Muir. 460p $2.50 Putnam

40-30885

This new novel by the author of The Star-Gazer is not another historical work but a character study of a woman of modern times. The heroine is the daughter of an aristocratic Hungarian family and the course of the story runs from 1903 to the late 1930s. At seventeen Magdalena has her first love affair which ends unhappily and results in her marriage to another man. After she becomes a widow two more men enter her life but in the end she realizes she is made for solitude.

Reviewed by John Patton

Books p6 S 15 '40 850w

New Repub 103:702 N 18 '40 30w

"Those who read and admired 'The Star-Gazer' will find 'Through a Woman's Eyes' richly rewarding, while others, who perhaps found the first book difficult reading, may prefer this one, whose characters and events are of a more familiar type; many women will see their own experiences, emotional if not factual, reflected in Magdalena's. Taken together, the two novels show a breadth and variety of ability, a sympathy and keenness of perception which entitle Zsolt de Harsanyi to high rank among contemporary writers. He understands and can present people—which, after all, is the novelist's most important business." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p6 S 22 '40 1100w
New Yorker 16:81 S 21 '40 60w

HARSHBARGER, HUGH PRESSLY. Practical signs and posterwork for beginners. 80p il $1 McKnight

741 Sign painting. Posters 40-4013

Directions for successful poster making, from materials used to layout and color combinations. "His suggestions are the kind that one needs but seldom finds." (Library J) Illustrations are from actual work of high school pupils and teachers. The author is a teacher of practical arts in Illinois schools. Index.

Booklist 36:341 My 1 '40

"His chapter on school activities is very helpful. He lists various school activities that could be helped by a good sign department. He even, marvel of marvels, suggests how to post signs so that walls are not damaged by them. He suggests what to charge for making signs, and tells where materials can be purchased. And, something that brings joy to a librarian's heart, the little book has a good index. In fact, it seems to me Mr. Harshbarger has thought of everything, and one feels that he has gone through it all himself and has not forgotten what a beginner wants to know and is sometimes too shy to ask." Phyllis Fenner
+ Library J 65:248 Mr 15 '40 460w

HART, HORNELL NORRIS. Chart for happiness. 198p $2 Macmillan

171.4 Happiness. Psychology, Applied 40-36193

"Presents and explains . . . the Euphorimeter, produced by the researches of various social scientists in various universities and colleges. This new instrument is to measure . . . happiness." (Pref) Annotated bibliography. Index.

"There are in this book illuminating stories of personal experience with sad and happy people. However, the elaborate and deadly serious mechanical stuff seems to me just so much sheer nonsense. The kind of thing that professors invent to take up their time and students pore over to get a Ph.D. degree!" J. H. Holmes
+ — Books p8 Ja 19 '41 400w

" 'Chart for Happiness' is not merely another sociological treatise, but a challenging study into the causes of maladjustments. . . The conclusions arrived at have the weight of authority to support them. For the work represents the findings of many noted scholars in the broad field of the social sciences." L. L. Martinson
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 4 '41 80w

"One approaches this book with scepticism, especially when he reads that a new instrument—the Euphorimeter—has been devised from the experiments of several scientists for measuring happiness. It all sounds like a drop-a-penny and-get-your-fortune machine. But reading further one's fears are allayed, and it may well be that very real progress has been made in diagnosing the cause of human maladjustments." J. H. Titus
+ Churchman 155:19 Ja 1 '41 270w
J Home Econ 33:115 F '41 110w

HART, JAMES. An introduction to administrative law; with selected cases. 621p $5 Crofts

350 Administrative law 40-10383

"This volume is designed to present a general introduction to American administrative law that is reasonably abreast of recent important developments in this field and suitable for use as a supplementary text in courses on public administration. It is hoped also that the book will prove serviceable as the text in a quarter or semester course on administrative law as such, and as the basis of a year's course on this subject. . . In presenting the material, the author has found it wise to combine the textbook and casebook methods by attempting to weave comment and cases into an integrated whole." (Pref) The author is professor of political science and lecturer in administrative law, University of Virginia. Bibliography. Index.

"A book such as Professor Hart's has to meet two tests: it must satisfy the technical standards of the lawyer, and it must prove itself a stimulating device for instruction. On the one score, the work has been done with entire competence. On the other, this collection of materials seems certain to be a boon to the teaching of administrative law in departments of political science." Charles Fairman
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1010 O '40 850w

"While the author is correct in labeling his work an introduction, this should not be taken too literally. It is neither elementary nor light, but it is also not heavy in the sense of being abstruse and scholastically obscure. The material is well organized and is clearly set forth, but the substantial nature of the subject compels fullness even in an introductory volume." J. M. Pfiffner
+ Ann Am Acad 213:235 Ja '41 420w

Reviewed by B. P. McAllister
Yale Law J 50:186 N '40 700w

HARTE, BRET. Stories of the old West; selected by Wilhelmina Harper and Aimée M. Peters; il. by Paul Brown. 322p $2 Houghton

(W) 40-34192

Contents: The Luck of Roaring Camp; The outcasts of Poker Flat; Tennessee's partner; How Santa Claus came to Simpson's bar; High-water mark; M'liss; An ingenue of the Sierras; A ward of Colonel Starbottle's; Miggles; A knight-errant of the foothills; Dick Boyle's business card; Plain language from truthful James.

Booklist 37:218 Ja 15 '41

"Will be a welcome addition to Young People's shelves. Ages thirteen or fourteen and up." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 65:928 N 1 '40 80w

"The volume is attractively designed and Paul Brown's line illustrations add much to its charm. They are honest, subtle evocations of Harte's characters and they harmonize successfully with the type page." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p39 D 8 '40 360w

HARTLEY, WILLIAM H. Selected films for American history and problems. 275p $2.25 Teachers college

371.335 Moving pictures in education. U.S.—History—Study and teaching. Social sciences—Study and teaching 40-14062

"A handbook for use in American history, problems of democracy, civics, geography, and fusion courses. Part I gives directions for obtaining, evaluating, and utilizing educational films. Part II comprises an annotated catalogue of the most useful films for illustrating various aspects of American civilization." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 37:168 Ja 1 '41
School & Society 52:80 Ag 3 '40 30w

"This book should be very valuable in making possible a broader and deeper interpretation of the social studies program and should reflect positively on the parade of human progress." W. W. Whittinghill
+ Social Educ 4:447 O '40 550w

HARTMAN, GERTRUDE. The making of a democracy. 263p il $1.96; teachers' guide 25c Day

973 U.S.—History. Democracy. U.S.—Politics and government (W) 40-8115

Study of the development of democratic ideals and principles, written for junior high school age. Part one is a survey of English history from feudal times thru the seventeenth century. Part two is a sketch of American history and political ideas from colonial days to the drafting of the Constitution. Index.

Booklist 37:18 S '40

"Concreteness is a quality which always appeals to the young, and Miss Hartman's clear, well-written text, made vivid by the introduction of many historic personalities by quotations from contemporary sources, will not only enable boys and girls to follow the course of historical events but will give them a valuable perspective. . . The book will be of interest to boys and girls and genuinely helpful to teachers." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 Je 30 '40 320w

Reviewed by David Sneddin
School & Society 52:593 D 7 '40 80w

Reviewed by H. L. Parrish
Social Studies 31:376 D '40 250w

HARTMAN, ROBERT JAMES. Colloid chemistry [under the editorship of Herman T. Briscoe]. 556p il $4.75 Houghton

541.3452 Colloids 39-31898

"Dr. Hartman, who is Assistant Professor of Chemistry in Indiana University, sets forth in this sizable volume the fundamentals of colloid phenomena for students of advanced chemistry and for students of such allied subjects as physics, geology, medicine, and the biological sciences. Theory is adequately covered and a sufficient number of practical applications are included to impress the reader with their social implications. There are nearly 200 illustrations, plentiful footnote citations, a list of reference books, and complete author and subject indexes." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

"The book is very attractively printed. The cuts include 40 excellent reproductions of photographs. The subject matter is well outlined by the generous use of section and paragraph headings. Throughout the book, distinctive terms appear in black face type. The interested instructor will be impressed by the good physical make-up of the book, but he will want to read it carefully to determine whether the choice and treatment of the subject matter are sufficiently critical to serve his purposes as a textbook for advanced undergraduate and graduate students." H. B. Weiser

+ Am Chem Soc J 62:1314 My '40 750w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:4 Ja '40

HARTNACK, HUGO. 202 common household pests of North America. 320p il $3.75 Hartnack pub. co, 608 S. Dearborn st, Chicago

648.7 Household pests (W) 39-14100

Descriptions of anatomy, life habits, and methods of control of household insect and animal pests. The work has been based on American, Canadian, English, German, and other European publications. Illustrated with pen and ink drawings.

"The author's style of presentation is variable and at times intriguing. . . He has followed German workers on insect classification and some of his arrangement is, therefore, not in line with that of American authorities. The illustrations, including comic cartoons, are numerous and in most cases good. They have been drawn from various sources mostly without the usual acknowledgement. . . Less space might have been devoted to a number of these pests which are really of little importance in the home, while more space should have been devoted to the more important ones." L. D. Haseman

+ — Am J Pub Health 30:298 Mr '40 480w

Booklist 35:375 Jl 15 '39

HARTNEY, HAROLD EVANS. Up and at 'em. 333p il $2.50 Stackpole sons

940.44973 European war, 1914-1918—Aerial operations. U.S. Army. A.E.F. 1917-1920. Air service. First pursuit group 40-7613

In his Introduction the author says: "This book will be, like ancient Gaul, divided into three parts all more or less overlapping. It will be a collection of personal memories gained from my services with the Canadian, British and American armies during the greatest of all wars to date. It will be, although in fragmentary manner, the first printed history of America's outstanding war-time aviation unit, the First Pursuit Group. . . And, finally, it will be an outline of some of the things I foresee in the coming war for America, based on my own experience and observation."

"Lieut. Col. Hartney has made a timely and noteworthy addition to the bibliography of the first war in the air. . . The book has a number of minor defects. The organization of the material could be improved in places where a digression or the insertion of statistical data only breaks the flow of the narrative. The spelling of French words and place-names is sometimes unorthodox." F. H. Hitchins

+ — N Y Times p19 Ap 21 '40 1250w

"This is a fine book. It is about fighting in the air in the last war, but it might be about fighting in the air in this war." L. H. Nason

+ Sat R of Lit 22:19 Jl 6 '40 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p311 Je 29 '40 300w

HARTRICK, ARCHIBALD STANDISH. A painter's pilgrimage through fifty years. 252p il $3.75 Macmillan [15s Cambridge]

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. [40-7443]

"The autobiography of an artist. . . Paris and Van Gogh, Pont-Aven and Gauguin, Julian's academy in the eighties, Glasgow and the 'Glasgow School,' London and the 'Graphic' and 'Daily Graphic,' Phil May, Joseph Pennell and Whistler, the first beginnings of the New English Art Club and the Chelsea Arts Club are all described in the quiet, ruminative way of a man leaning back in a comfortable chair and remembering a well-spent life. And, in parenthesis, Mr. Hartrick has a good many sane and tolerant things to say about paintings as well as painters." Manchester Guardian

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch
Books p20 Mr 31 '40 900w

"Some of the book may seem small beer to American readers, though a great deal of interesting light is thrown on art movements and journalist life in London from 1890 to 1910. But in compensation there are many entertaining sidelights on the great figures in the art world of the last 50 years, notably Gauguin, van Gogh, Toulouse-Lautrec and Whistler." W. G. C.

+ — Boston Transcript p7 My 11 '40 180w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 24 '39 100w

New Statesman & Nation 18:937 D 23 '39 340w

"Mr. Hartrick is so modest about his own capabilities as a writer, and keeps himself so much in the background, that the opening pages run the risk of seeming to convey a warning that he has nothing much to say. Only later does it become apparent that this somewhat humdrum beginning provides an admirable foundation for presenting the celebrities in the proportion that they bear to their contemporaries, a view of famous men that is always of interest, but which memoirs rarely succeed in offering in a convincing manner."

+ Spec 163:710 N 17 '39 500w

"Those who are familiar with the work of Mr. A. S. Hartrick as painter, illustrator and lithographer will open this account of his 'pilgrimage' with keen interest and they will not be disappointed, for it reflects the same qualities that have gained for him a firm, if not very wide, reputation as an artist. Most of all it reflects his modesty and his gift of effective understatement."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p651 N 11 '39 700w

HARVARD UNIVERSITY. Botanical museum. Ware collection. Glass flowers. See Kredel, F., il

HARVARD UNIVERSITY. Graduate school of public administration. Public policy, 1940; a yearbook of the School; ed. by Carl Joachim Friedrich and Edward Sagendorph Mason. 391p $3.50 Harvard univ. press [20s Oxford]

305 Social sciences—Yearbooks. Political science—Yearbooks (40-4041)

"This is the first of what is hoped will become an annual volume in the field of public policy to be issued by the Harvard Graduate School of Public Administration. The regulation and control of industrial organization is the major theme of this first volume. It is written entirely by men associated with the School of Public Administration." Commonweal

Reviewed by L. D. White
Am J Soc 46:412 N '40 300w

"It is to be hoped that this valuable introductory experimental volume from the Harvard Graduate School of Public Administration is but a forerunner of good things to come annually from the pens of its faculty and fellows." E. A. Cottrell

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:572 Je '40 850w

Reviewed by W. J. Ronan
Ann Am Acad 209:213 My '40 460w

Reviewed by B. P. McAllister
Columbia Law R 40:1292 N '40 2200w

Commonweal 31:417 Mr 1 '40 130w

Reviewed by E. E. Witte
J Pol Econ 48:614 Ag '40 900w

"In the future it is to be hoped that the editors will recognize their responsibility for public enlightenment. The high quality of this first volume, however, will justify the continuation of the yearbook even if only specialists will read it." J. D. W. Norton

+ — New Repub 103:36 Jl 1 '40 600w

HARVEY, EDMUND NEWTON. Living light. 328p il $4 Princeton univ. press

591.144 Luminescence. Phosphorescence 40-27547

"Twenty-five years have passed since the author first started investigation of living light and twenty years since the publication of The Nature of Animal Light. From 1920 on, much progress has been made in our knowledge of light emission by living things—bioluminescence. 'Living light' includes this new work but is much more than a second edition of the older book. New chapters dealing with the morphology and physiology of light production in various groups of luminous animals have been introduced and other aspects completely rewritten to include the recent experiments. Special attention is devoted to various types of non-living luminescence. The historical approach has been adopted and each chapter will be found complete in itself, presenting the subject matter of interest to biologist, chemist or physicist." (Introd) Bibliography. Author index. Subject index.

Booklist 36:408 Jl 1 '40

Books p39 N 10 '40 500w

Reviewed by John Trump
Boston Transcript p1 Je 1 '40 330w

"No brief review could do justice to this unusual book. No one who is interested in light production can afford to neglect it. It not only covers the scientific work of countless others who have been fascinated by living light, but also digests the valuable research work of the author, who has devoted many years to research in the subject. . . The book has a remarkable chronological bibliography, is well illustrated, and thoroughly indexed." W. R. Whitney

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:513 Je 10 '40 260w

Reviewed by H. G. Garbedian
N Y Times p9 F 2 '41 440w

"This book is well illustrated with both photographs and drawings, and contains numerous references to published work on this subject. Many quotations are included which makes the book interesting and easy to read." W. E. Forsythe

+ R of Scientific Instruments 2:329 O '40 700w

"Though it was obviously not written in the familiar vein of 'popular science,' so interesting is the subject matter and so straightforward the descriptive treatment that the layman will find the book as absorbing as the student will find it useful." G. R. Harrison

+ Sat R of Lit 22:12 Je 29 '40 370w

"There is an extensive bibliography and a large number of wisely chosen illustrations. All in all, this is a thoroughly scholarly treatise, not unduly burdened with technical terms, covering a rather specialized field that happens to attract fairly general attention."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 My '40 380w

HARWOOD, SUMNER. How to work with people; scientific methods of securing co-operation. 197p $2.50 Cambridge analytical services, 1278 Massachusetts av, Cambridge, Mass.

174 Psychology, Applied. Social psychology 40-10152

"The chief value of this book lies in its approach to personnel problems. The usual treatise on personnel work is written for the administrator and tries to present the problem of personnel as a problem concerned with the establishment of managerial control over workers in a co-operative enterprise. The author of this volume approaches personnel work as a study in co-operation. This makes it possible to examine the phenomena of control from the broader standpoint of social relations. In addition, the author writes for the layman rather than for the specialist. His language is nontechnical; his illustrations are simplified; his bibliography is selective rather than exhaustive; and his attitude is expository rather than inquiring." (Library Q) Selected bibliography.

Reviewed by W. L. Halverson
Am J Pub Health 31:97 Ja '41 160w

Booklist 36:408 Jl 1 '40

"An excellent study in co-operation and well adapted for the use of those engaged in the duties of church and school." Gordon Poteat

+ Crozer Q 17:317 O '40 30w

Reviewed by S. M. Strong
Ethics 51:122 O '40 320w

"Although the book will prove valuable as an introduction to the study of co-operation and personnel work for those who are not already familiar with the field, it is not an important book. It has some evidence of lack of thoroughness in preparation . . . and there is no index. This last omission is mitigated to some extent by the inclusion of section headings under the chapter headings in the Table of Contents and by the fact that the book is evidently intended for reading rather than for reference." Paul Howard

+ — Library Q 10:617 O '40 330w

Social Studies 31:333 N '40 10w

HARWOOD, SUMNER—Continued

" 'How to Work With People' has been written for general reading, though the information contained will appeal more to business and professional men. The sociology of group action is brought up to date; the classification and terminology are logically consistent; the results are clear and constructive."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 28 '41 280w

HASTINGS, MRS SUE (COUCH), and RUTHENBURG, DORCAS. How to produce puppet plays; drawings by Harriet Z. Babcock. 134p $1.75 Harper

791.5 Puppet plays (W) 40-7772

"Brief directions for making puppets, costumes and scenery, for building a stage, and for producing the puppet play. Other chapters on publicity, the marionette theater, the touring company. Line drawings." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:379 Je 1 '40

School Arts 40:3a N '40 130w

Theatre Arts 24:764 O '40 10w

Wis Lib Bul 36:135 O '40

HATCHER, HARLAN HENTHORNE. Buckeye country: a pageant of Ohio. 325p il map $3.75 Kinsey

977.1 Ohio—History. Ohio—Description and travel (W) 40-31245

The story of Ohio from colonial times to the present, arranged for the most part topically so that there are chapters on: Settlements and villages; The river called the Beautiful; The national pike; Floods; Johnny Appleseed; Blennerhasset's island; Ohio's taste in houses; A commonwealth of colleges; Among Ohio writers; Ohio men in the White House, etc. The author was director of the Federal Writers' Project in Ohio and edited the Ohio Guide in the American Guide Series. He is a Professor of English at the Ohio State University. Bibliography. Index.

" 'The Buckeye Country' is a vastly entertaining book which should be read by every American, especially at this time, and it is one of singular fascination for every one who has even the remotest connection with the Buckeye country itself." Louis Bromfield

+ Books p4 S 29 '40 1350w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 S 25 '40 110w

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 12 '40 650w

"It is a mellow book, written as Ohioans talk, in long, leisurely sentences, spiced with pithy expressions and a humor which does not conceal the deep pride and affection in which it is written." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 O 20 '40 750w

New Yorker 16:79 S 28 '40 40w

"The average American will capture from this book a fresh understanding of Ohio as a unit of American civilization, past and present. The author may be facetious at times, but he has a grasp of essentials. And his whimsicality increases the reader's pleasure oftener than creating a fresh burden for him." E. N. Jenckes

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 28 '40 1100w

HATCHER, WILLIAM HOOKER. An introduction to chemical science. 423p il $3 Wiley [18s Chapman]

540 Chemistry 40-3753

"The material presented in this book has been accumulated over a period of years during the establishment of a course in chemistry designed for students of branches of learning other than the sciences. Since the interests of such students have been economic, historical, literary, philosophical and sociological rather than scientific, the course of instruction has been designed to present to them the historical, scientific and economic progress of chemistry up to the present time. . . Thus the contents have been prepared and arranged to appeal to as many categories of student interest as possible, and the treatment has of necessity catered to those whose previous training in any branch of science has been slight or even non-existent." (Pref) Index.

"Although unsatisfactory for students who have any real interest in science or need for the fundamentals of chemistry as prerequisite for other courses, the book will be useful in stimulating the interest of the non-scientific student who wishes to learn what chemistry is about. It seems to be best suited to a course given without laboratory work where experiments are given as lecture demonstrations." C. R. Conard

+ — Am Chem Soc J 62:2253 Ag '40 130w

Booklist 36:302 Ap 1 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:20 Ap '40

HAUCK, MRS LOUISE (PLATT) (PETER ASH, LOUISE LANDON, pseuds). Beloved Buff. 290p $2 Penn

40-7241

Buff had three beautiful fair-haired sisters and an equally beautiful fair-haired mother, so it was not to be wondered at that the dark-haired Buff felt a little out of things. But when her only brother needed someone to straighten out his marital tangle it was Buff who went to California, and shouldered responsibilities, and found her place at last.

"Louise Platt Hauck has produced a smooth variation of the ugly duckling perennial." Lisle Bell

+ Books p17 Ap 14 '40 170w

"A pleasant little novel."

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 20 '40 70w

"The ending is not a tremendous surprise, but it is suitably entertaining, like the book itself." C. D.

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 14 '40 110w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 28 '40 160w

HAUN, MILDRED. The hawk's done gone. 290p $2.50 Bobbs

40-32617

Short stories of the eastern Tennessee mountain country, all but one of them told by Granny Mary Dorthula Kanipe, midwife and wise woman. The sketches are about members of Granny's family, and in them she recaptures the life of these Elizabethan Americans, with their superstitions, clannishness, and independence.

"We are apt to believe that no region of this country, no group of its people, remains unexplored by writers. Yet here is a new writer, with a quiet talent for translating folk speech into beautifully cadenced prose, who introduces us to those dwellers in the remote Smokies in Tennessee."

+ Atlantic D '40 110w

Booklist 37:116 N 15 '40

"Mildred Haun explores an undiscovered region and utilizes fresh material for fiction in her stories about the John Sevier country of east Tennessee in 'The Hawk's Done Gone.' Her knowledge of the section is obvious, her language genuinely and therefore not unpleasantly colloquial, her narrative ability worth watching." Lawrence Olson

+ Books p18 O 27 '40 600w

"These are stories, strongly imaginative and excellently told, by a talented new writer who uses material rich enough for ballads in that appropriate setting where balladry has made a last stand." Robert Van Gelder

+ N Y Times p6 O 27 '40 650w

"Humorous, full-flavored, and authentic. . . A human, readable book."

+ New Yorker 16:109 O 19 '40 40w

HAUSER, ERNEST OTTO. Shanghai: city for sale. 323p map $3 Harcourt

951.1 Shanghai 40-6570

Records the history of the world's fifth largest city, founded by British and Americans in 1843. It covers the century in detail, and is based upon research and first-hand acquaintance. Index.

Reviewed by W. C. Johnstone
Am Pol Sci R 34:1028 O '40 220w

Booklist 36:380 Je 1 '40

"Though nearly every writing man who has lived in the East must have contemplated it at some time as a job worth doing, I do not believe that any one has hitherto attempted to tell Shanghai's whole dramatic story in popular, readable style between one pair of boards. This is what Mr. Ernest O. Hauser has undertaken to do. While I think he has had a very good try at it and has, in a dozen or more passages, given accurate and vivid pictures of Shanghai life at different periods, I have reluctantly come to the conclusion that the job still has to be done, and that ten years from now Mr. Hauser will himself agree with me." Rodney Gilbert

— + Books p14 Mr 24 '40 1250w

"Despite its somewhat overlurid title, Mr. Hauser has written a balanced and revealing history of the rise and fall of the Chinese port where white economic imperialism came to fullest flower."

Christian Century 57:581 My 1 '40 200w

Reviewed by J. F. Davidson
Churchman 154:16 Ap 1 '40 230w

Reviewed by J. J. Considine
Commonweal 31:478 Mr 22 '40 130w

Foreign Affairs 18:763 Jl '40 20w

Reviewed by E. G. Mears
Geog R 31:167 Ja '41 360w

"A dramatic, and readable book, Shanghai, City for Sale is a record rich in human interest and a valuable treatise for anyone even remotely interested in China and the white man's selfish 'sacrifices' in the interests of the Chinese commercial market."

+ Living Age 358:393 Je '40 650w

"Entertaining as well as informative."

+ Nation 150:401 Mr 23 '40 70w

Reviewed by Hessell Tiltman
New Repub 102:541 Ap 22 '40 650w

"From time to time there appears a book which is likely to be the best that will ever be written on a given subject. The description of life in Spain by George Borrow, and of Arabia by Doughty and Lawrence, cannot be superseded. This is the quality of the book that Mr. Hauser has written about Shanghai." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 31 '40 2000w

New Yorker 16:108 Mr 16 '40 40w

"Nine of the 15 chapters deal with events after 1920, and this is the best part of the book. The first six chapters, in which the author traces the history of the city, show evidence of hasty writing and are full of factual errors and questionable interpretations. . . As it stands, this book adds nothing new to the history of Shanghai, nor does it tell the whole story." W. C. Johnstone

— + Pacific Affairs 13:365 S '40 370w

Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ap 13 '40 500w

"Here is good reading and material for many a good controversy, though sometimes it is difficult to distinguish ironic understatement from parenthetical criticism. One cannot always agree with Mr. Hauser, but he should be congratulated on giving the world the story of Shanghai at the psychological moment and on having done it so well." Ida Pruitt

+ — Survey G 29:298 My '40 550w

Wis Lib Bul 36:66 Ap '40

HAVEN, VIOLET SWEET. Many ports of call. 250p il $3 Longmans

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Voyages and travels 40-29431

The experiences of an American girl from the state of Idaho. After college and a year spent in teaching near Pullman, Washington, she went to the Hawaiian Islands and took another teaching position. At the end of two years she went to Tokyo to teach in the American school there. Later she was fashion editor of the Japan Times and Mail. In 1939 she was one of the thirty journalists on the transatlantic preview press flight from New York to Paris.

Booklist 37:240 F 1 '41

Books p24 N 24 '40 320w

"The author's journalistic style and bits of humor make entertaining reading for lighter moods." G. E. Brown

+ Library J 65:873 O 15 '40 220w

"Determination is the keynote always of this audacious life story; and its audacity lies in the far-flung unsuitability of ambitions which were successfully attained. A pioneer story, this, of a new kind."

+ N Y Times p14 N 24 '40 400w

HAVIGHURST, WALTER. The winds of spring. 323p $2.50 Macmillan

(W) 40-27325

A story of pioneer days in Wisconsin from the early 1840s to about 1870. The hero of the tale is not the ordinary pioneer who builds a home or a fortune in the wilderness, but an aristocrat and a scholar who after thirty years still lives in a log cabin—and is called by Agassiz "the best field ornithologist in America" and commands the respect and admiration of others materially successful.

Booklist 36:325 Ap 15 '40

"It's a fresh and credible tale of American pioneering, a welcome addition to a growing body of literature for its reminder that pioneers were of all kinds, and that even unto the farthest frontier intellectual fibre was neither unknown nor wholly unappreciated." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p7 Ap 7 '40 700w

Christian Century 57:515 Ap 17 '40 80w

"The satisfaction a reviewer experiences in helping to spread the news that an author has written a good book is exceeded only by the pleasure found in announcing that the same author has written a new book that is even better. Thus, the praise which may justifiably be extended to Walter Havighurst for 'The Winds of Spring' includes an extra measure of acclaim for the great improvement it shows over his earlier book 'The Quiet Shore.' " M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 20 '40 600w

"Mr. Havighurst writes a clear, competent, undistinguished prose, without mutation of any sort to fit changing subject matter." Harry Sylvester

+ Commonweal 31:557 Ap 19 '40 270w

"The whirr of birds' wings in fresh, clean air gives zest to pages pleasantly unburdened with historical trappings."

+ Nation 150:577 My 4 '40 50w

"Credible and appealing."

+ New Repub 102:585 Ap 29 '40 60w

"As a pioneer story, the book is interesting. As the chronicle of a bird man with a paradise of new material for study on the one hand, and on the other the dire necessity for hard and unremitting labor, it is engrossing. Contrasting Jan's career with that of Peter Lund, the author puts in the mind of one of his characters the conclusion that never again would America be so prodigal to the one type and so meager to the other; never again would she offer 'so great a reward for energy and dogged

HAVIGHURST, WALTER—Continued
will, or so little for imagination and devotion to truth.' This scientist's angle on the pioneer problem is a novel slant, a refreshing change from the hail-the-conquering-hero type of pioneer tale." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 7 '40 700w

"A distinguished tale of a man's passion and integrity."
+ New Yorker 16:90 Ap 6 '40 100w

"This story, in which the comparative values of success and failure are delicately studied, balanced, and revealed, captures the reader by degrees, at first attracting him by simple charm, finally impressing him by its thoughtful strength and by a beauty that promises to be enduring." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 21:16 Ap 13 '40 750w
Wis Lib Bul 36:100 My '40

HAWKES, CLARENCE. Holiday hopes. 95p $1.25 Christopher 811 39-31752

"The poems in this volume cover the observance of most of the holidays. All are written from a deeply spiritual nature. The poet affirms his faith with cheerful belief in the eternal values." Christian Science Monitor

"Mr. Hawkes might be described aptly as a poet of the people. His verse is simple and straightforward and he depends upon traditional poetic devices to convey his message. These simple lyrics reveal the courage and faith of a man whose conquest over blindness has taken the form of a productive poetic achievement. Seeing beauty and hope about him with his inner eye, he has labored to make these qualities visible in his verse."
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 13 '40 170w

"Spiritual refreshment in fluent verse." E. G. E.
Springf'd Republican p7e D 3 '39 110w

HAWKES, CLARENCE. My country; the America I knew. 230p il $2 Chapman & Grimes
B or 92 41-2240

Autobiographical essays, letters, and reminiscences by the American poet, naturalist, and story-teller, who for over fifty years has carried on in spite of the severe handicap of blindness. Includes some of his poems, and tributes paid him for his perserverance and his inspirational writing.

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 18 '41 70w

"Mr. Hawkes has collected much material in this volume, mainly valuable as reminiscence of former times and customs. His firm determination to carry on under a handicap commonly regarded as completely obstructive to a successful life will cheer many who are similarly situated. The evidence is abundant that this spirit was recognized and acknowledged by many persons of prominence." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 4 '41 650w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 360w

HAWKINS, GAYNELL. Education for social understanding; programs of case work and group work agencies. 207p $1.25 Am. assn. for adult educ.
361.8 Social work. Group work. Education of adults. Charity organization 40-27717

"A personalized analysis of the role of social work in educating the public in its program of social amelioration, this book very quickly goes to the heart of the social work field with pointed remarks directed primarily against social case workers for their glorification of techniques into a 'profession' with the consequent weakening of their total objective. . . Some of the problem situations which are discussed in this brief study include: the competitive situation between the Chest and the Labor movement in Flint, Mich.; the community organization in St. Louis . . . the philosophic position of case work, of group work, and of social action; public interpretation, particularly by Community Chests . . . the educational duty of social work to its corps of volunteers; education at 'the conference'; education for social action; unions among social workers; and adult education in the group agencies." (Survey) Index.

Booklist 37:71 O 15 '40
J Home Econ 33:44 Ja '41 120w

"The book is not a statistical or comprehensive study of the complete field; it is rather a personal challenge and an inquiry from an adult educator who looks at social work and is concerned with an apparent forgetfulness on the part of this field, a glorification of the means, and a loss of emphasis upon the initial élan vital which animated the founding fathers of 'charity work.'" W. H. Riback
Survey 76:340 N '40 320w

HAWKINS, JOHN, and HAWKINS, WARD. We will meet again. 283p $2 Dial press 40-31522

"Death of corrupt deputy sheriff blamed on mouthpiece who socked him. Lawyer goes to jail but inflexible copper rights wrongs." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p10 S 1 '40 90w

"An interesting story, not a mystery, yet well worth reading." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p8 Ag 31 '40 90w

"Prison scenes—presumably in San Quentin—are best part of story. Rest of it follows familiar lines of gangster-politico opera. Adequate thriller."
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 31 '40 50w

HAWKINS, SHEILA. Pepitó [il. in color by the author]. 86p $1.75 Harper [7s 6d Hamilton, H] 40-27391

Picture-story book about little Spanish Pepito, his donkey Don Diego, and his friend Conchita, whom he met in the gipsy caravan and rescued.

Booklist 36:347 My 1 '40

"A big book for little folks, bright and gay, you would not know from it that war had ever touched Spain. That is as it should be in a little child's country, which these large, lively drawings show in black, white and Spanish red." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Ap 7 '40 240w

"It is all very light-minded and nonsensical and the author's humorous invention is nowhere more evident than in her excellent drawings full of comic details to catch and hold young eyes. In fact, they are so good that one wishes they had been given much better color reproduction." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Mr 17 '40 230w
New Yorker 16:96 My 18 '40 40w
Times [London] Lit Sup sup xxv N 5 '38 50w
Wis Lib Bul 36:151 N '40

HAWLEY, ESTELLE ELIZABETH, and MAST, MRS ESTHER ELLEN (MAURER). The fundamentals of nutrition; incl. table of 100-calorie portions; with a foreword by John R. Murlin. 477p $5 Thomas, C.C.
612.39 Nutrition. Diet. Diet in disease. Food 40-33465

"This comprehensive volume is written by a group of special authorities in the department of vital economics at the University of Rochester, and is, according to Dr. John Murlin, who wrote the foreword, the direct outgrowth of Dr. Hawley's experience in imparting the fundamentals of nutrition to students in the University's medical school. . . The book is divided into five sections, dealing respectively with metabolism, fundamentals of nutrition, diet therapy, diet planning, and, in the appendix, with miscellaneous information of great practical value." Scientific Bk Club R

J Home Econ 32:696 D '40 170w

"Should enlist the interest not only of the medical profession but of all those whose function is to provide the proper nourishment for various types of people."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:4 S '40 210w

HAWLEY, GERTRUDE. An anatomical analysis of sports. 191p il $3 Barnes, A. S.

371.74 Physical education and training. Sports 40-10955

"A new approach to successful mastery of the various sports, through an analysis of the muscular action and control involved. Would be useful to teachers and of interest to any amateur ambitious to perfect his form in golf, swimming, baseball, tennis, horseback riding or in any one of several other sports." (Wis Lib Bul) Bibliography. Index.

"Special teachers in physical education and teachers and coaches of sports might well study the content of this text." C. H. Keene
+ Am J Pub Health 31:97 Ja '41 120w
Christian Century 57:770 Je 12 '40 30w
Wis Lib Bul 36:135 O '40

HAWTHORNE, HILDEGARDE (MRS J. M. OSKISON). Concord's happy rebel: Henry David Thoreau; il. by W. Merritt Berger. 191p $2 Longmans

B or 92 Thoreau, Henry David (W) 40-27805

A biography of Thoreau for older girls and boys.

Booklist 37:158 D 15 '40

"Hildegarde Hawthorne has had access, all her life, to sources from which authentic atmosphere can be drawn, and she has drawn upon them for a book to be read with ease by young adults with advantage to such of them as also think." M. L. Becker
+ Books p16 N 10 '40 240w

"Hildegarde Hawthorne only manages to make out of the naturalist's simple existence a very confused medley of his contemporaries." E. V. W.
— Cath World 152:382 D '40 40w

"This smoothly written account of Thoreau's life and personality, with its especially felicitous title, brings him back to life delightfully."
+ Christian Century 57:1282 O 16 '40 60w

"Well-written and interesting."
+ Churchman 154:34 D 1 '40 10w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 65:856 O 15 '40 30w

"Although there is no doubt of the authenticity of the material, the information is not always happily integrated, nor is the book always as carefully written as its predecessors. The book is similar in format to Miss Hawthorne's other biographies." H. Y. Long
+ — Library J 65:928 N 1 '40 190w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Nation 151:456 N 9 '40 10w

"School libraries will want to add this to their collections with the other three biographies by Miss Hawthorne, and teachers of English will find it helpful in presenting American literature. The drawings by W. Merritt Berger have much charm and catch the atmosphere of the period and the New England scene." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 25 '41 250w
Social Studies 31:380 D '40 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 50w

HAWTHORNE, HILDEGARDE (MRS J. M. OSKISON). No road too long; il. by James MacDonald. 261p $2 Longmans

Frémont, John Charles—Fiction (W) 40-6902

Young Jonathan Greenfall set out with a scientific party as a member of Frémont's third expedition in 1845. He was a crack shot, familiar with the Delaware language, and a woodsman of no mean degree, all of which helped him in the course of his work on the topographical survey along the great Salt Lake region and the road to California and Oregon. Grades eight to twelve.

Booklist 36:385 Je 1 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p14 My 5 '40 410w
Cath World 152:378 D '40 40w

"Miss Hawthorne has written with fine characterization of men engaged in making history for California." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:168 My '40 120w

"The picture of Frémont is a more heroic and sympathetic one than history presents. The author is a careful scholar and sometimes facts predominate rather than the plot. Miss Hawthorne has made a better book of this than ordinarily with her stories and it is comparable with her biographies. . . This is a book which should appeal to hero loving boys and some girls between the ages of ten to twelve." J. F. Carter
+ Library J 65:455 My 15 '40 250w

"This is not a stirring narrative with a suggestion of the epic, such as Julia Davis made out of the Lewis and Clark Expedition in her 'No Other White Men.' The first part does convey a fine sense of the rich abundance and wonder of the unexplored West, but with the arrival of the party in California the story breaks abruptly into almost straight history, only feebly sustained by characterization and individual action." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p10 Jl 7 '40 440w

"The adventures of the journey are exciting and informative, but the action which takes place in California should prove less easy to follow, because it is difficult to adapt the complex events of the capture of the State to the narrative technique. The book's value as history is thus limited because of the resultant obscurity, but it is nevertheless an appealing story of adventure, with stirring action, humorous incidents, and characters of a rough nobility and honor who might well serve as examples to the younger generation." M. L. Pfaelzer
+ — Social Studies 32:46 Ja '41 160w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 130w
Wis Lib Bul 36:139 O '40

HAYCOX, ERNEST. Saddle and ride. 291p $2 Little 40-7594

Western story.

Booklist 36:384 Je 1 '40

"Ernest Haycox would belong on any short list of superior Western writers. He has sterling merits as a drawer of open-space scene and character, and his soberness and restraint make his works much more impressive than most; for that matter, a few more light and airy passages might help—but we can't have everything." Will Cuppy
+ Books p17 Ap 21 '40 210w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '40 30w

"It's a carefully detailed, complicated, slow paced, almost dragging story that yet moves steadily, relentlessly forward with a certain grim power that grips and holds the reader's interest." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p26 Ap 14 '40 200w

HAYCRAFT, HOWARD, ed. The boys' second book of great detective stories. 352p $2.50 Harper
(W) 40-7099

Companion volume to The Boys' Book of Great Detective Stories (Book Review Digest, 1938). This volume contains fourteen detective stories published during the last twenty-five years. Contents: The inoffensive captain, by E. C. Bentley; The game played in the dark, by Ernest Bramah; Detective Barney, by Harvey O'Higgins; The magician of Cannon street, by J. S. Fletcher; The million dollar bond robbery, by Agatha Christie; The young doctor, by H. C. Bailey; Thirteen lead soldiers, by H. C. McNeile ('Sapper'); The door key, by F. I. Anderson; The adventurous exploit of the cave of Ali Baba, by Dorothy Sayers; In a telephone cabinet, by G. D. H. and M. I. Cole; Common stock, by O. R. Cohen; The vanishing diamond, by John Rhode; The avenging chance, by Anthony Berkeley; The shadow man, by Edgar Wallace. For upper grade readers.

Booklist 36:369 My 15 '40

"The editorial work has been almost entirely confined to good selection and does not give the volume a moral look by much comment. A page of preface and rather less to bring on each author; that is all a boy wants, but he gets what he wants with it here." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 My 19 '40 300w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 My 12 '40 280w

HAYES, MRS FLORENCE (SOOY). Arctic gateway. 132p il map $1; pa 50c Missionary educ. movement
277.98 Missions—Alaska. Alaska 40-13562

A brief study of Alaska: its people, history, and social and religious development. The book is the result of a trip made in 1939, when the author traveled thru Alaska with a party sent to study the mission work of the Presbyterian church there.

Booklist 37:33 O 1 '40
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '40 50w
Christian Century 57:879 Jl 10 '40 20w

HAYES, NELSON. Dildo Cay. 329p $2.50 Houghton
(W) 40-27082

The setting of the story is a small island somewhere off Jamaica. Dildo Cay is owned by the Ainsworths who have lived there as kings for two hundred years—the only white family among two hundred blacks, and the island's salt mines have provided the family with a good revenue. The drama of the story develops when young Adrian Ainsworth hires a manager for the salt works from Bermuda, and the manager brings his daughter with him.

"If the novel limps at times, it is still an honestly told story with whole chapters of excellent, vivid description."
+ — Atlantic Ap '40 140w
Booklist 36:238 F 15 '40

"The clear distinction of 'Dildo Cay' lies neither in its events nor its characters, nor in its powerful love-story, but in its scene and atmosphere. Nelson Hayes evokes the strangeness and the speed of this surf-beaten reef where no tree could grow, where even fishing becomes a sport of savagery. Dildo Cay's grim isolation may haunt us, but we understand Adrian's love for it." Katherine Woods
+ Books p4 F 18 '40 600w

"If the ending is not wholly persuasive, it is at least plausible and detracts very little from the integrity of an entertaining and lively tale." E. B. Schriftgeisser
+ — Boston Transcript p11 Mr 1 '40 390w

"Some of the characters are striking, the detail is strange and good—the book has a nice effortless way with things you never knew till now. . . A first novel; not a triumph but an original." O. F.
+ New Repub 102:353 Mr 11 '40 270w

"It seems to me, that 'Dildo Cay' is a really good first novel. Once one has surmounted its initial drawbacks—all that theatrical, romantic nonsense about the Ainsworths and their wives—Mr. Hayes has something to offer. In the first place, his setting is admirable—fresh, exotic, giving one the very feeling of wild Atlantic wastes. In the second place his delineation of character is subtle and acute. Finally, though melodrama plays a considerable part in his story, he has disciplined and subdued it by concise, sharp handling." E. H. Walton
+ N Y Times p7 F 18 '40 1000w

"You'll like this book."
+ New Yorker 16:81 F 17 '40 90w

"From its first line, 'Dildo Cay' carries the promise of a thriller, but the promise is never fulfilled. It is as if the author of this first novel, afraid of his situations and never quite believing in them himself, had taken refuge from their implications in easy descriptions of wind and surf, and in mere talk among the characters. . . The dialogue, which fills a good part of the book, gives an impression of strength because the characters tend to be unnecessarily rude to one another, but its sense is often hard to find." L. J. H., Jr.
— Sat R of Lit 21:21 F 17 '40 320w

"There is fine descriptive writing, but neither the island nor the people ever stand out very distinctly."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e F 18 '40 330w
Time 35:87 Ap 8 '40 100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p313 Je 29 '40 210w
Wis Lib Bul 36:49 Mr '40

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 29:xii spring '40 30w

HAYWOOD, CAROLYN. Two and two are four; il. by [the author]. 171p $2 Harcourt
(W) 40-27326

The joyous experiences of four small children on a farm in the summer. The first two of the title were Timothy, aged six, and his sister Babs, four; the other two were the Perkins twins, and together they made four.

Booklist 36:330 Ap 15 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Ap 7 '40 330w

"The little girls who loved Carolyn Haywood's earlier book, 'B Is for Betsy' will welcome another rather lengthy story, and this time they will be able to share their enjoyment with their brothers, because this story is for both boys and girls." Bess Cook
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 6 '40 110w

"Miss Haywood is one of those 'grownups' who understand boys and girls and what they like, and her pictures in black and white help us know these good friends better and are a lovely part of this delightful story of family doings, country life, and vacation fun." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 29 '40 420w

Reviewed by R. W. Stewart
Library J 65:354 Ap 15 '40 110w

"While the story deals with simple, everyday things, it does so with zest and imagination. Teddy and Babs are real, even to the spirit of mischief that now and then takes possession of them. The author knows and enjoys children and writes of them with humor and understanding." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p21 My 19 '40 190w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '40 60w

HAZARD, JOHN NEWBOLD. Soviet housing law. 178p $2.50 Yale univ. press [14s 6d Oxford]

331.833 Housing—Russia. Russia—Social conditions 39-33114

"Mr. Hazard has had the opportunity of attending the Soviet Academy of Law in Moscow for three years, and his study is based, not only on a thorough and apt perusal of all relevant legal sources, such as statutes, case reports, and trial proceedings, but also on first-hand observation. The author starts with a broad analysis of the changes in the field of housing that are directly traceable to the Russian Revolution and the new system of property relations. He then proceeds with a detailed discussion of the more technical issues of law and administration. The acquisition of the right to occupy dwelling space, the duty to pay rent, the rights and duties of lessor and lessee, the exchange of dwelling space, etc., are some of the issues dealt with. In the last chapter the author discusses the broader implications of Soviet housing as 'one of the tools by which a new society is to be fashioned', and this chapter will be of particular interest to political scientists." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by T. A. Taracouzio
Am J Soc 45:943 My '40 600w

"In an appendix, the texts of several official documents relating to state, local, and coöperative housing are reproduced in full, and they give a valuable insight into the administrative machinery that manages and supervises Soviet housing." William Ebenstein
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:168 F '40 210w

"Mr. Hazard's short work is a model of concise and restrained writing. He does not hammer his points, but lets the facts speak for themselves." C. S. Ascher
+ Ann Am Acad 208:232 Mr '40 550w
Foreign Affairs 18:575 Ap '40 20w

"The whole thing is fascinating reading. But to one who loves the privacy of his room and bath, the amenities of his dining-room and the comfort of his arm chair before an open fire, it presents a very, very grim picture. I choose to stay here. And so, incidentally, does Mr. Hazard." W. B. Leach
+ Harvard Law R 53:360 D '39 650w

Reviewed by P. E. Mosely
Pacific Affairs 13:352 S '40 800w

"While the preface suggests the interest in public housing in the United States as a cause for undertaking this study, the execution contributes but little to the further understanding of problems shortly to be faced by public housing authorities in this country. It would seem that greater attention to the legal standards of fitness, and to problems of administration would have materially enhanced its merit. What the author has done, has been done extremely well; what he has contributed to the fuller understanding of public housing problems in this country is questionable." W. J. Barron
+ — Yale Law J 49:1146 Ap '40 650w

H'DOUBLER, MARGARET NEWELL. Dance; a creative art experience; with dance sketches by Wayne Lm. Claxton. 200p $2.50 Crofts

793.3 Dancing 40-11519

Discussion of the theory of the dance, first as a creative art—a medium of expression, and secondly as entertainment. The place of the dance in our educational system is also considered by the author, who is instructor in dancing at the University of Wisconsin. Bibliography.

Booklist 37:32 O 1 '40

"A thoughtful and discerning book."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 19 '40 360w

"Despite its many shrewd and sensitively stated aphorisms, Dance: A Creative Art Experience is not a manual for the making of dance, or even a set of rites for initiating the layman into the 'mysteries' of art production. To take and use it as such is to delude the artisan, to discourage the genuine artist, and to spoil the potential consumer of art. It is instead a breviary of devotion to one conception of the good life. As such, it can be warmly commended." + Theatre Arts 24:762 O '40 550w
Wis Lib Bul 36:135 O '40

HEALY, EUGENE P. Mr Sandeman loses his life. 264p $2 Holt 40-8421

Detective story.

"This lively yarn is for those who prefer the seamier side of the American scene, a tough-minded outlook, plenty of underworld flavor, lots of police detail, and a dash of true love. . . Swift, amusing, meaty, baffling." Will Cuppy
+ Books p12 My 19 '40 160w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 My 25 '40 70w

"The story has a good mystery plot, but the author might better have omitted some of the wise-cracking with which he attempts to brighten the pages of his book." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p17 My 26 '40 170w

"Interesting yarn of underworld villainy, and well constructed plot, but Craine's merry pranks may give persnickety readers neck-pains. So-so."
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:26 My 25 '40 40w

"The story is told in a good humored style, with a dash of romance thrown in."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '40 190w

HEALY, KENT TENNEY. The economics of transportation in America; the dynamic forces in development, organization, functioning and regulation. 575p il $4 Ronald

385 Transportation—U.S. Railroads—U.S. 40-9066

"The history, organization, functioning, and regulation of the various types of transportation agencies are surveyed and analyzed. That about two-thirds of the book should be devoted to a discussion of conditions and problems found in the railroad field is not unnatural, because the railroad is still the principal means of commercial transportation; furthermore, practically all of the pricing and regulatory policies applied in the field of transportation have been developed in connection with governmental control and supervision of the railroad industry. Professor Healy . . . is not content with a description of transportation types and agencies and the extent of their operations, but attempts to uncover and appraise the underlying causes and motives in connection with the functioning of these services." Am Pol Sci R

"Though the author does not so state, it may be presumed that this book is designed largely as a text for college courses in transportation. For this purpose it will doubtless receive considerable recognition, if not as a basic text, at least as one of several references. In the opinion of the reviewer, however, the book suffers for textual use from an inherent weakness imposed by the viewpoint adopted—namely, the absence of thorough, critical consideration of leading problems of transportation. Such consideration is vital to the stimulation of interest, reasoning power, judiciousness, and understanding on the part of students. These matters should not be left solely to the instructor. A less serious drawback is the omission of the usual convenient references at the end of chapters." T. C. Bigham
Am Econ R 30:611 S '40 950w

Reviewed by H. R. Trumbower
Am Pol Sci R 34:814 Ag '40 390w

"This is a scholarly work, dealing as its subtitle states, with the dynamic forces in the development, functioning, and government regulation of the several agencies of transportation. . . It was somewhat disappointing to find that the author was not able to throw much light upon the controversial question as to what share of the costs of motor truck freight transportation is borne by the public. However, the reader should presumably not expect the impossible of an author. As regards the total costs of transportation upon rivers and canals, the author might safely have gone somewhat farther than he did without treading upon uncertain ground." E. R. Johnson

HEALY, K. T.—Continued
+ — Ann Am Acad 212:260 N '40 450w
Eng N 125:63 Ag 29 '40 220w

HEARD, GERALD. The creed of Christ; an interpretation of the Lord's prayer. 169p $2 Harper 226.9 Lord's prayer 40-33860

"Mr. Heard here treats the Lord's Prayer as 'the seminal nucleus of a true religion.' It points to eternity as the seat of ultimate reality, and finds eternity not in remote reaches of time or space but in the Living Now." Christian Century

---

Christian Century 57:1452 N 20 '40 50w

"Heard is one of the small and scattered number of men who, knowing the extensive field of modern knowledge in its essentials, are able to think in cosmic terms. He writes with authority in the fields of history (he lectured for Oxford on that subject), mathematics, biology, anthropology (he received the Hertz prize), psychology and philosophy. He is well equipped to move in the whole field of modern thought." Graham Hunter
+ Christian Century 57:1616 D 25 '40 800w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson
Churchman 154:17 D 15 '40 90w

"It is a bewildering book because we have not made ourselves at home in the altitudes to which it leads us; but it is not obscure or ponderous, though it delves deep. To many it will reveal an apprehension of the nature of being, hidden in the mind of Jesus, which will astonish the shallow-minded who think he was little more than a maker of clever moral maxims. Gerald Heard, by somewhat devious routes has found Him the Word made flesh, the emergence into time of the essence of eternity. To those who are interested in this colossal fact, this book will be both good company and wise counsel in reaching and laying hold upon it." E. M. Poteat
+ J Religion 21:105 Ja '41 550w

HEATH, ELIZABETH ALDEN., pseud. See Holton, E. A.

HEATH, S. BURTON. Yankee reporter. 391p $3 Funk, W.
B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 41-636

"Here is the life story of one of the ablest newspaper reporters ever heard of. . . Mr. Heath, who for some years has been on the staff of 'The New York World-Telegram,' last year won the Pulitzer prize for reporting because of his work in exposing the fantastic corruption of Judge Martin T. Manton. . . Before his exposure of Manton, however, Mr. Heath had accomplished a good deal on the side of righteousness. . . He is without doubt the most competent of the modern muckrakers —in the best sense of that fine old epithet. In this book he tells who he is and how he has done his work." Books

---

"A good book—absorbing as a story, revealing and useful in what it tells of the place of a newspaper and a newspaper man, in a motley and sometimes pretty sordid world." Stanley Walker
+ Books p12 O 27 '40 650w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 18 '41 200w
Current Hist & Forum 52:4 N 26 '40 150w

"Mr. Heath has some pretty positive opinions about persons and issues, and sometimes breaks into his narrative in order to preach. He has a healthy but not inflated appreciation of the value of his own work. He lacks, or fails to express in this book, a philosophy which would explain why corrupt public officials do the things they do. . . A good reporter he certainly is, and a useful one. One believes him, and is glad for American journalism, when he says that no advertiser or other individual who conceived his interests threatened has ever been allowed to tie a string to S. Burton Heath." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p23 Ja 26 '41 850w

"One fault of this volume is its sloppiness in style and expression. It sounds too much as if it had been pounded out on the typewriter between editions. Its author's extraordinary, perhaps unequalled, reportorial achievements deserve a better setting." O. G. Villard
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:16 Ja 11 '41 700w

"For an encouraging life story, for [the author's] exposition of research methods in journalism, for his emphasis on accuracy and service, we are grateful to a good reporter. Read it, and you will be better prepared to support the kind of journalism that puts a Manton off the bench, or helps create savings bank life insurance." Leon Whipple
+ Survey G 29:621 D '40 550w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET. Fugitive from murder. 277p $2 Doubleday 40-30400

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p23 S 29 '40 130w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '40 90w

"There is some grisly humor which is not without the sting of satire. And we like Detective Shannon. This story does not approach the top-flight mysteries, but it keeps well above the ground." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p33 O 20 '40 240w

"Fine nightcap for the bloodthirsty."
New Yorker 16:80 S 28 '40 30w

"Except for feeling that no such 'socialites' as author describes ever existed, this has everything it takes to thrill and mystify. Ring-tail roarer."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 O 5 '40 40w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET. Subscription to murder. 275p $2 Doubleday 40-5630

Detective story.

"A middling mixture." Will Cuppy
Books p12 F 18 '40 100w

"I am slightly tired of Desmond Shannon. He's too tough, he kills too many people solving a case, and his enigmatic past is more annoying than fascinating." Marian Wiggin
— Boston Transcript p3 F 24 '40 40w

"If Shannon keeps this pace up, the underworld will soon be underground. According to the latest reports, Shannon is still alive and ready to dish out more thrills for [the author's] next book." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p23 F 18 '40 110w

"Ten corpses, two skull fractures, numerous other injuries—record for year. Two nasty rackets basis of breathlessly exciting yarn. Gorygeous."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 F 17 '40 40w

HECHLER, KENNETH WILLIAM. Insurgency; personalities and politics of the Taft era. 252p $3 Columbia univ. press

973.912 U.S.—Politics and government. Republican party 40-33640

Studies of political progressivism in the United States during the period between the close of the Spanish-American war and the entrance of the United States into the World war. Partial contents: What does insurgency mean? Historical, geographical and economic roots; The decline and fall of "Uncle Joe" Cannon's empire; Taxation and misrepresentation; That natural resources and private savings be conserved; Railroads on trial. The author is lecturer in government at Barnard college and Columbia university. Bibliography. Index.

"The chief value of Dr. Hechler's study lies in the information it presents on the course and results of congressional insurgency. It is, however, limited in scope and imagination and fails to probe into many key problems. There is little attempt to study the local and state party situation in relation to the national scene; the relationship of the progressives to the labor movement is not considered; nor is the problem of state and sectional variations in the progressive movement investigated in terms of different kinds of agricultural specialization. Dr. Hechler does make good use of little-examined collections of manuscript sources, throws light on the later history of the insurgent leaders, and correctly emphasizes the link between them and the New Deal objectives." Henry David

+ — New Repub 104:125 Ja 27 '41 500w

Social Studies 31:380 D '40 20w

HECK, ARCH OLIVER. The education of exceptional children; its challenge to teachers, parents, and laymen. 536p il $3.75 McGraw

371.9 Education of children. Children, Abnormal and backward 40-12798

"This work undertakes to do five things: (1) to set the challenge which educators face in properly caring for and educating exceptional children; (2) to develop basic principles for guidance in the education of exceptional children; (3) to set forth practical problems encountered in caring for and educating these children; (4) to report how various cities and states are actually handling these problems; (5) to outline the responsibilities that parents, teachers, principals, superintendents and laymen must assume if mental, physical and social handicaps are to be prevented." (School & Society) Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

"The book is perhaps more comprehensive and thorough than any previously written book treating the field of special education. The contents indicate that the author is thoroughly conversant with the facts, materials, and techniques of educating the exceptional child. Some readers may object to the monotony which results from organizing numerous chapters so that all begin with a definition of terms, followed by guiding principles, history, and prevailing practices. Some persons may also find the organization of the book too detailed by overuse of bold-type headings and sub-headings. Other readers, however, may not object to these characteristics but may consider them meritorious rather than distracting." E. C. Bolmeier

+ El School J 41:153 O '40 800w

School & Society 51:752 Je 15 '40 90w

HECKERT, JOSIAH BROOKS. Analysis and control of distribution costs, for sales executives and accountants. 420p il $5 Ronald

657 Cost accounting. Marketing 40-4771

"Analysis occupies the first half of the book, successive chapters being devoted to analyses by territories, by commodities, by channels of distribution, by methods of sale, by customers, by size of orders, and by organization and operating divisions. The scheme followed is the so-called 'functional' method, made familiar to students of the subject by the writings of Howard C. Greer and other pioneers in the field. Control depends on analysis, and the author shows in the second half of the book how analyses previously made fit into control devices over all classes of distribution costs. . . The last chapter is concerned with the relation of cost analysis to price-policy legislation." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by W. P. Fiske

Am Econ R 30:875 D '40 90w

"The reviewer finds much to admire and little to complain about. The book is not recommended for its reading qualities, however. Although apparently directed at the trade, rather than to the academic market, its style and format are textbookish in the extreme, bristling with subheads and adorned by list after list of enumerated factors, points to be kept in mind, steps of procedure, and so forth. These features are doubtless a virtue in a book which is intended as a manual for practical use, but they destroy continuity of thought and any readability which might otherwise exist. As a possible college text the book is hampered by absence of problem material." H. F. Taggart

+ — Ann Am Acad 209:218 My '40 500w

Management R 29:119 Mr '40 50w

HEDGES, JAMES BLAINE. Building the Canadian West. 422p maps $4 Macmillan

971.2 Northwest, Canadian. Canadian Pacific railway. Railroad land grants 39-24392

This study of the land and colonization policies of the Canadian Pacific railway is an "outgrowth of the author's earlier studies of the influence of the railway upon the settlement of the Northwestern States of the United States. . . The term 'Canadian West' is here used to denominate the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta in which the Dominion subsidy lands of the Canadian Pacific were located." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by L. F. Gates

Am Hist R 45:936 Jl '40 550w

"Mr. Hedges has written a definitive history of an important and characteristic phase of a great epoch not merely in the history of North America but in the history of the world." W. A. Mackintosh

+ Ann Am Acad 208:216 Mr '40 220w

Reviewed by H. A. Innis

Canadian Hist R 21:60 Mr '40 5100w

"Even though apparently written and circulated to promote good will toward the Canadian Pacific, this is honest history based on scholarly research."

+ Christian Century 57:1251 O 9 '40 150w

"Professor Hedges gathered his material largely from public documents and newspaper files, and his book is distinguished by minutely detailed and carefully marshaled information, by shrewd analysis and judicious appraisal. It will, no doubt, constitute the last word on the subject." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 D 15 '39 650w

"Professor Hedges' book is a full account, in some parts very specialized, of the land settlement schemes and policies of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The reader acquainted with the writings of W. A. Mackintosh, especially his contributions to the volumes on Limits of Land Settlement and Prairie Settlement, will find it very instructive. We see the value of the book in the nature of its subject. . . It will attract students both of agriculture and of population." Nicholas Mirkowich

+ Pacific Affairs 13:490 D '40 360w

Reviewed by A. R. M. Lower

Pol Sci Q 55:463 S '40 650w

HEDIN, SVEN ANDERS. Chiang Kai-shek, marshal of China; tr. from the Swedish by Bernard Norbelie. 290p il map $3 Day

B or 92 Chiang Kai-shek. China—History (W) 40-35229

A portrait of China's leader set against a background of recent Chinese history and illuminated by the author's long years of intimate contact with, and love for, China and Chinese ways. Index.

Booklist 37:173 Ja 1 '41

"I am afraid it must be said that Hedin has done rather better with Tibet and the Gobi in Mongolia than with Chiang Kai-shek. For this I do not think Hedin is altogether to blame. Those who have known Chiang Kai-shek far better than Hedin could know him could not have done a much better biography." Nathaniel Peffer

Books p2 D 15 '40 450w

"It is something of a surprise and a pleasure to find a book on political history by an eminent scientist and explorer. Being a man with great human interests, as well as a scientist, Dr. Sven Hedin seems fascinated by the remarkable personality and achievements of Chiang Kai-Shek, and the writing of the present volume seems to be a natural overflow of his feelings and observations and contacts in Asia extended over forty years." Lin Yutang

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:1 D 24 '40 550w

Reviewed by Géza Schütz

Library J 65:921 N 1 '40 220w

"It is unfortunate that one who has seen and loved China as Sven Hedin undoubtedly has should have understood so little of the hidden events of these historic years. Despite this handicap he has written a book which no student of China can afford to ignore." M. S. Stewart

+ — Nation 151:576 D 7 '40 550w

"The value of Sven Hedin's work here is in his clear emphasis on two sides of the Chinese shield: unification and resistance. Many personal recollections give fresh color to his story. . . But he tells the student of affairs nothing new. The book is ineptly translated and not without its imperfections. Yet the greatness of its material cuts through such flaws and errancies, and stands firm. This is a record to be followed with interest and understanding: 'popular,' thus, in the important sense of that word." Katherine Woods

+ — N Y Times p5 D 15 '40 1250w

New Yorker 16:90 N 30 '40 50w

"It is unfortunate that Dr. Hedin chose to put his greatest emphasis on Sino-Japanese relations and Generalissimo Chiang's background —subjects to which he has contributed comparatively little that is new. In spite of this shortcoming, however, the thoughtful student will find in this volume a great deal that is worth serious consideration, a characteristic of every one of Dr. Sven Hedin's excellent books in the past." Stuart Lillico

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:7 Ja 4 '41 500w

Reviewed by L. C. Rich

Springf'd Republican p7e D 29 '40 1300w

HEDIN, SVEN ANDERS. The wandering lake; tr. from the Swedish by F. H. Lyon. 291p il maps $3.75 Dutton [18s 6d Routledge]

915.16 East Turkestan. Lop-Nor (lake) 40-27392

Sven Hedin's latest volume of explorations in Central Asia provides the solution of the complex geological puzzle of the wandering lake Lop-Nor. He found that the lake had returned to the old bed it had occupied 1600 years ago, thus verifying in his own lifetime the prophecy he had made on an earlier expedition. Index.

Booklist 36:342 My 1 '40

"While the Old Master is always so inclined to crow over this, that and the other thing . . . that it is sometimes tiresome, no one can read this book without letting out a crow or so in sympathy with him. . . The story is up to his best level, which is saying a lot. He thrills to the unique experience of seeing a territory, that had been as dead as the salt desert in Utah for 1,600 years, coming to life and inviting human occupation again." Rodney Gilbert

+ Books p7 Ap 14 '40 1800w

"All this makes fascinating reading—the patient planning, the lure of the desert, the thrill of discovery—in all of which the author gives generous credit to his helpers and co-workers. To those who, for a generation, have followed Sven Hedin on his adventurous journeys into the Great Desert of central Asia, this well-told account of his latest exploit, with its important geographic and other scientific results, seems like a dream come true." G. M. Allen

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '40 430w

Reviewed by H. G. Thomas

Forum 103:330 Je '40 500w

"A significant addition to the story of Central Asia." R. M. R. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 13 '40 220w

"The story is told with the meticulous attention to detail to be expected from the author, and includes a graphic picture of the lake—a remarkable body of water both in size and character."

+ Nature 145:812 My 25 '40 290w

New Repub 102:618 My 6 '40 70w

Reviewed by Beryl de Zoete

New Statesman & Nation 19:316 Mr 9 '40 480w

"Dr. Hedin's straightforward reporting is touched with a quality of poetic appreciation, and his sketches and photographs add their share of information and interest to a rarely interesting book."

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 14 '40 900w

New Yorker 16:99 Ap 13 '40 30w

Pacific Affairs 13:496 D '40 750w

"Dr. Hedin's solution to the problem of the wandering lake will form an interesting chapter of detection for the scientist, but the lay reader may find the maps uninspiring, the sketches and photographs of too special an interest, and the story on the whole disappointing after the rampant wonders he has been led to expect from Dr. Hedin's pen." H. D.

Sat R of Lit 22:21 Ag 17 '40 270w

Scientific Bk Club R 11:4 Ap '40 480w

Reviewed by Peter Fleming

Spec 164:492 Ap 5 '40 130w

Springf'd Republican p14 Ap 19 '40 430w

Time 35:94 My 20 '40 130w

"Unfolds a geographical mystery story of extraordinary fascination. The plot has been developing for several millenia."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p48 Ja 27 '40 700w

Wis Lib Bul 36:136 O '40

HEIMSATH, CHARLES HERMAN. Sermons on the inner life. 168p $1.50 Cokesbury press

252 Sermons 40-4800

Collection of sermons by the pastor of the First Baptist Church of Evanston, Illinois.

"Dr. Heimsath's own thinking has such clarity and sincerity that sometimes his richness of quotations, valuable and arresting in themselves, comes as a sort of interruption in the steady movement of his sermon to its goal. There are often times in sermons when it is true that 'two is company'—the preacher and hearer—while 'three is a crowd,' whether the third be Aristotle or Saint Augustine or Thornton Wilder. Yet the reader, in distinction from the hearer, is grateful for the variety of illustration, for Dr. Heimsath has a keen eye for the thing that is alive and vivid and that really throws light on a theme." H. E. Luccock

HEDIN (hā'dēn)

+ Christian Century 57:448 Ap 3 '40 380w

Reviewed by Gordon Poteat
Crozer Q 17:241 Jl '40 30w

HEINDEL, RICHARD HEATHCOTE. The American impact on Great Britain, 1898-1914; a study of the United States in world history. 439p $4 Univ. of Pa. press

327.73 U.S.—Relations (general) with Great Britain. Great Britain—Relations (general) with the U.S. U.S.—Civilization. Great Britain—Civilization 40-31371

"This volume, one of a projected series The United States in World History, was designed to be a brief part of the story of American influence on the Old World, a contribution through national history to the study of international history, and a supplement to the familiar diplomatic chronicle. The pages should contribute to many aspects of British and American personalities, and to domestic history, and add to the history of such subjects as technics, science, education, medicine, and the law. It is probably one of the first efforts on a broad scale to see how one nation gets its ideas about another, and what use one nation makes of another's experience." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by Bruno Lasker
Living Age 359:387 D '40 800w

"Mr. Heindel has attempted a new, difficult, and fruitful kind of history. . . It is a difficult subject to organize clearly and convincingly, and bring to a neat conclusion. Mr. Heindel is too careful a scholar to attempt flashy generalizations, but he does generalize, thoughtfully and suggestively, especially in his 'Epilogue.' The chief value of his book, however, lies in the variety and richness of the materials he has assembled from widely scattered but always pertinent sources." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 23:16 N 9 '40 450w
School & Society 52:240 S 21 '40 10w
Social Studies 31:336 N '40 30w

HEISS, ELWOOD DAVID; OBOURN, ELLSWORTH SCOTT, and HOFFMAN, CHARLES WESLEY. Modern methods and materials for teaching science. 351p il $2.50 Macmillan

507 Science—Study and teaching 40-3750

"This book is based on the assumption that the beginning teacher of science is more likely to succeed in his work if, in addition to a sound knowledge of his subject, he possesses a philosophy and psychology of science teaching, an understanding of the major goals of science teaching and of scientific methods and attitudes, the ability to use modern techniques, and a comprehensive knowledge of the materials and devices for the teaching of science. Numerous bibliographies are given as well as lesson plans, charts, tables, etc. A valuable aid is the list of sources for 16 mm. science films suitable for teaching purposes." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 25:26 Ap '40

"Useful chiefly to the teacher at the secondary level, this book will nevertheless be of interest to many teaching in colleges, because of the good list of sources of pictures, models, charts, posters, films, books and periodicals. This portion is a carefully checked and intelligently chosen list covering the sciences, and should be of considerable value to teachers who have not prepared their own lists. . . This book may be regarded as a sincere attempt to classify the needs of the secondary-school teacher and to present a handbook covering in an elementary fashion these needs." Selby Skinner

+ R of Scientific Instruments 2:342 O '40 260w

HELLEU, ARSENE. Jeanne Jugan, foundress of the Little sisters of the poor; tr. by Mary Agatha Gray. 174p il $2 Herder

B or 92 Jugan, Jeanne. Little sisters of the poor 40-6765

"Jeanne Jugan [was the] Breton foundress of the Little Sisters of the Poor who devote their lives to the care of indigent old people. . . This is not a snappy, modern biography. Based largely on the recollections of Little Sisters of the Poor who knew Jeanne, it is rather old fashioned, its style suitable to its subject. Ere one lays it aside, one understands why the great work which had its beginnings when a poor servant girl, daughter of a fisherman of Brittany, took an old widow, blind and destitute, to live with her, has spread throughout the world." Commonweal

Reviewed by D. M. O'Connell
America 63:273 Je 15 '40 500w

Reviewed by J. A. Toomey
America sup 5 N 30 '40 110w

Reviewed by Daisy Moseley
Commonweal 31:556 Ap 19 '40 550w

HELLMAN, GEORGE SIDNEY. Benjamin N. Cardozo; American judge. (Whittlesey house publication) 339p il $3.50 McGraw

B or 92 Cardozo, Benjamin Nathan (W) 40-27327

In this biography of Judge Cardozo, who died in 1938, "Mr. Hellman has attempted to deal only incidentally with the professional and public career of the distinguished lawyer and the able judge who is his subject. He has been concerned primarily to present the personality of the man. About that personality there were such extraordinarily appealing qualities that no one who knew and worked with him, excepting only one relentlessly ill-mannered misanthrope, escaped the influence of his charm." (Books) Index.

"The book brings together a great deal of personal information ranging over the entire period from Cardozo's birth until his death. The materials are woven together with the skill of a literary artist. No footnotes or bibliography are included, however, and some of the sources are indicated only in the most general way. . . The sentimentality of the book makes its appearance, however, not in quotations from Cardozo, but in the language of the author himself and in the selected quotations from other persons which he sees fit to use. It is possible that another writer with access to the same significant materials could write a more valuable book with less offense to the sensibilities of his analytical readers." C. B. Swisher

+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:792 Ag '40 480w

"Mr. Hellman introduces a distinguished fellow-Jew in terms which the well-disposed Gentile finds embarrassing. Mr. Hellman disables himself at the outset by attempting a biography. . . Hence Mr. Hellman has to magnify and sentimentalize a number of purely commonplace matters, and this unavoidably gives his work an unpleasant air of fulsomeness. Then, his persistent stress on Justice Cardozo's Americanism, which no one in his right mind would ever dream of questioning, is so gratuitous that it affects a reader disagreeably."

— Atlantic Je '40 300w
Booklist 36:343 My 1 '40

"The biographer who endeavors to . . . bring an elusive personality to life for those who never knew it, has set himself a task which is almost hopelessly difficult. Unfortunately Mr. Hellman has tried too hard. The reader can share Mr. Hellman's admiration for Cardozo and yet find the tone of reverent devotion, after some three hundred pages, unpleasantly cloying. . . Although Mr. Hellman's sentimental emphasis and style have thus given the volume the tone of a biography written for family and intimate friends, there are included occasional matters of general interest." M. DeW. Howe

+ — Books p14 Mr 31 '40 600w

HELLMAN, G. S.—Continued
Reviewed by Philip Nichols
Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '40 800w

"This is by no means a definitive and critical study of Benjamin N. Cardozo and contributes little to our understanding of him. It does contain interesting biographical details about Cardozo's early life, and the anecdotes related by people who knew him do confirm our conviction that he is one of America's great men. . . But we knew all this before. What we need is not an adulatory but a critical biography; one that will critically evaluate the man and his work. But I ought not complain that Mr. Hellman did not write the book I think necessary, and I thank him for what he has done." J. C.
+ — Commonweal 31:516 Ap 5 '40 260w

"The lawyer will find little in this book to satisfy his curiosity about Mr. Justice Cardozo, and the layman will find only an artificial personality episodically portrayed. For here is no biography in any proper sense of the word, but simply a hastily compiled collection of anecdotes from the Justice's life, interspersed with excerpts from his writings and from the writings and statements of others about him. What emerges from this compilation is an unreal and unrecognizable saint, for the human qualities of the man, which constituted his true saintliness, are lost. . . Having said this much, it should be generously acknowledged that the author has rendered valuable service in pulling together some of the Justice's writings not otherwise easily available." Joseph Rauh, Jr.
— + Harvard Law R 53:1404 Je '40 950w

"Written by a personal friend of long standing, with access to family archives and letters, the book is patently a labor of love. Yet despite the natural tendency of sentiment to crowd to the front in the treatment of this subject, a commendable restraint and objectivity marks Mr. Hellman's approach. The book has balance, disciplined writing, a style effective for its simple clarity. It is a notable biography." J. P. Pollard
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 14 '40 1900w

"Soundly written."
+ New Yorker 16:91 Ap 6 '40 40w

"What we have here is not a complete, definitive biography, but a loving memorial to a great American. Some day the whole story will be written; among other things, it will trace this man's life through each court term, giving us detailed account of the Albany and Washington years. Such a book, if skillfully done, might well have the stature of Sandburg's Lincoln, for here, I think is a companion figure. Meanwhile, Mr. Hellman's affectionate and wholly readable book must go, not only into the lawyer's library, but into the civilized layman's." J. R. Parker
+ Sat R of Lit 21:13 Ap 13 '40 1350w

"The present volume helps in some degree to recapture a personality so great, a mind so clear and so kindly in its judgments that the reader, like those who had the great privilege of friendship with Cardozo, cannot fail to be touched and humbled in the knowledge that the times could produce so rare a spirit." J. P. Clark
+ Survey G 29:520 O '40 320w

HELSETH, HENRY EDWARD. The yellow angels. 215p $2 Harper

40-30886

Barney made the mistake of borrowing a car to take his sweetheart riding in. There was an accident; the car had been stolen, and Barney found himself in prison. Barney's experiences during his months in prison made a different, harder person of him. The title refers to the wearers of yellow chevrons for breaking prison regulations—making Barney one of the "yellow angel" inmates.

"Mr. Helseth's novel is a harsh and realistic picture of life behind bars. It deals dramatically with the eternal feud between prisoners and guards, with the brutality and the animal cunning of caged men. It is exciting but depressing reading."
Books p8 S 15 '40 190w

"A prison story written with the laudable intent of helping the misguided and forgotten is more palatable than the usual lurid stuff, but it is, even so, a pretty stiff dose for the average reader." M. Clark
Boston Transcript p2 S 21 '40 200w

"Plenty of violence and ugliness here, moving at a good clip."
New Repub 103:458 S 30 '40 50w

"If you want a fierce, graphic novel of life in a prison and can stand the suspense, read Mr. Helseth's book. It is written furiously and well. The prisoners are individuals. The guards and the authorities have definite characters. There is a love story, felt all the way through, but appearing on the surface only in sad snatches, because the whole book is inside the prison. If you begin it, you are almost bound to finish it in spite of the violence and brutality." C. D.
+ N Y Times p26 S 22 '40 270w

"It isn't much fun, says Mr. Helseth, to be in prison in mid-summer. . . He tells it in lively prose, with plenty of drama and a happy ending for his main character."
+ New Yorker 16:69 S 7 '40 70w

"Rather roughly hewn, and occasionally bathetic, but effectively thrilling yarn of life as possibly endured in some U. S. prisons. Thriller."
Sat R of Lit 22:28 O 19 '40 40w

HEMINGWAY, ERNEST. For whom the bell tolls. 471p $2.75 Scribner

(W) 40-27732

"The frame of the story is a minor incident in the horror that was the war in Spain. Robert Jordan is a young American in the Loyalist ranks who has been detailed to the blowing up of a bridge. . . His mission carried him into hill country where he must seek the aid of guerrilla bands. Jordan destroys the bridge, but while he is escaping with his companions his horse is knocked from under him by an exploding shell, and we leave him lying on the hillside, his leg crushed by the animal's fall. He sends his companions on and waits, with a submachine gun beside him, for the enemy's approach. Those who leave him are, with Jordan, the main figures in the story. Among them is the girl Maria, whom Jordan, in the four-day span of the story's action, has met and loved." N Y Times

---

"Ernest Hemingway is an artist, and his new novel is a rare and beautiful piece of work. It contains all the strength and brutality, the 'blood and guts' of all the previous Hemingway books (and more skillfully rendered profanity and obscenity than any of them); and it is written with a degree of delicacy which proves that this fine writer, unlike some other fine American writers, is capable of self-criticism and self-development." R. E. Sherwood
+ Atlantic N '40 800w
Booklist 37:90 N 1 '40
Bookmark 2:12 Ja '41

"The Communists who are content to be soldiers and generals are one thing; but for the political commissars Hemingway has discovered a lusty contempt. And this contempt has enabled him to write a true essay on the virtues of a real belief in liberty, equality and fraternity. 'For Whom the Bell Tolls' has the bracing quality of brandy." John Chamberlain
+ Books p1 O 20 '40 1800w

"As a story this book offers not pleasure but mounting pain; as literature it lacks the reserve that steadies genius and that lack not only dims its brilliance but makes it dangerous in its influence." E. VR. W.
Cath World 152:502 Ja '41 700w

"As a conservative estimate, one million dollars will be spent by American readers for this book. They will get for their money 34 pages of permanent value. These 34 pages tell of a massacre happening in a little Spanish town in the early days of the Civil War. . . Mr. Hemingway: please publish the massacre scene separately, and then forget 'For Whom the Bell Tolls'; please leave stories of the Spanish Civil War to Malraux; above all please tell us more stories to show that only the brave enjoy an existence fit to be had. We do not demand of you that you show us the way to peace and order. If we had them, could the land of Hemingway survive? Hemingwegians are not adapted to a stable, moral, peaceful world." J. N. Vaughan
Commonweal 33:210 D 13 '40 600w

"The scenes are remarkably vivid and characters are life-like and remain in one's memory. The style is direct and staccato like that of Hemingway's earlier novels. Adults who read the author's Farewell to Arms will want to read this. Because of its frankness in treating certain incidents, it is not for adolescents." A. T. Davidson
+ — Library J 65:923 N 1 '40 90w

"It is a long book; it has obviously been written with care and love; it is in a straight line from 'A Farewell to Arms' and superior to it; and happily it not only removes the bad taste left in the mouth by 'The Fifth Column' but sets a new standard for Hemingway in characterization, dialogue, suspense, and compassion for the human being faced with death. . . The novel which embodies the deeper social meanings of the Spanish war has yet to be written, and I doubt that Hemingway will write it, but he has given us as moving and vivid a story of a group of human beings involved in that war as we are likely to have." Margaret Marshall
+ — Nation 151:395 O 26 '40 1150w

Discussion by Margaret Marshall
Nation 151:609 D 14 '40 440w

"This new novel of Hemingway will come as a relief to those who didn't like 'Green Hills of Africa,' 'To Have and Have Not,' and 'The Fifth Column.' The big game hunter, the waterside superman, the Hotel Florida Stalinist, with their constrained and fevered attitudes, have evaporated like the fantasies of alcohol. Hemingway the artist is with us again; and it is like having an old friend back." Edmund Wilson
+ New Repub 103:591 O 28 '40 1700w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 104:89 Ja 20 '41 1200w

"This is the best book Ernest Hemingway has written, the fullest, the deepest, the truest. It will, I think, be one of the major novels in American literature. . . I know of no love scenes in American fiction and few in any other to compare with those of 'For Whom the Bell Tolls' in depth and sincerity of feeling. They are unerringly right, and as much beyond those of 'A Farewell to Arms' as the latter were beyond the casual couplings of 'The Sun Also Rises.' . . 'For Whom the Bell Tolls' is the book of a man who knows what life is about, and who can convey his knowledge. Hemingway has found bigger game than the kudu and the lion. The hunter is home from the hill." J. D. Adams
+ N Y Times p1 O 20 '40 1100w

"This book is not merely an advance on 'A Farewell to Arms.' It touches a deeper level than any sounded in the author's other books. It expresses and releases the adult Hemingway, whose voice was first heard in the groping 'To Have and Have Not.' It is by a better man, a man in whom works the principle of growth, so rare among American writers." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 16:82 O 26 '40 1650w

"'For Whom the Bell Tolls' is not a stunt and is not merely sentimental. It is on the contrary, the finest and richest novel which Mr. Hemingway has written, it is one of the finest and richest novels of the year, and it is probably one of the finest and richest novels of the last decade. Gone now are the brittle surface, the clever concision of the early books. Gone is the self-conscious 'little Hemingway' of 'Death in the Afternoon.' Gone is the Hemingway manner. Manner has been replaced by style, and the mere author has died out in the artist." H. M. Jones
+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 O 26 '40 1650w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '40 750w

"However he may fancy himself as a leftist sympathizer, as a great and sensitive artist Ernest Hemingway is well over the Red rash. The bell in this book tolls for all mankind."
Time 36:94 O 21 '40 1050w

"Here is a book which people are going to be reading a long time from now, so long a time perhaps that the book may eventually be preceded by an introduction, recalling, to a generation that will certainly remember the greater drama, how this hideous Spanish curtain-raiser came about, and who fought in it, and where, and why. It is Mr. Hemingway's best novel, and one of the best novels about that carrion angel, man, which any American has written. I hope I shall forget certain parts of it as soon as possible, though it might be more useful, during the days that seem to lie ahead of us, to bear them in mind in moments of crisis." Robert Littell
+ Yale R n s 30:vi winter '41 650w

HEMMINGHAUS, EDGAR HUGO. Mark Twain in Germany. 170p $2.25 Columbia univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

817 Clemens, Samuel Langhorne (Mark Twain, pseud) 40-30032

Study of the extent and importance of the works of Mark Twain in Germany, from the 1870s, when The Innocents Abroad was published in German, to the present. The book is divided into two sections: part one: prewar reception; part two: post-war reception. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Hemminghaus deserves praise for a scholarly and stimulating work, which makes the reader realize how much the leaven of Twain's humor is needed in German today." Cyril Clemens
+ Commonweal 31:417 Mr 1 '40 310w

Social Studies 31:191 Ap '40 140w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 28 '40 100w

HENDERSON, HAROLD GOULD, and LEDOUX, LOUIS VERNON. The surviving works of Sharaku [pub. for the Soc. for Japanese studies]. 337p il $3 Weyhe

761 Sharaku Toshusai 40-1365

"During this winter the Japanese artist, Sharaku is being presented as completely as possible in exhibitions at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, the Art Institute of Chicago, and the Museum of Modern Art, New York. This catalogue, compiled painstakingly by Harold G. Henderson and Louis V. Ledoux, provides all known information on the author of the prints, reproducing every print, relating the narrative which they illustrate, describing the characters they portray." (Christian Science Monitor) "Sharaku was a professional performer of the classical No Dance in the entourage of the Daimyo of Awa—and during ten dizzying months produced 136 portraits of actors on the vulgar Yedo stage." (N Y Times)

"The layout of the book is of the same excellence that has distinguished other works printed by Petér Beilenson at the Walpole Printing Office. The whole is a happy combination of American scholarship, bookmaking and Japanese art at its best and more than justifies the efforts of the several learned societies which financed its publication." L. P. Roberts
+ Books p18 Ap 28 '40 500w

HENDERSON, H. G., and LEDOUX, L. V.—Continued

Reviewed by F. W. Coburn
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 410w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 20 '40 500w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist
Commonweal 33:149 N 29 '40 60w

"The book is done very thoroughly and conscientiously and is, in fact, a model of its kind." Ludwig Bachhofer
+ Library Q 10:306 Ap '40 1000w

"For lovers of Japanese prints, this is a fascinating book concerning one of the most mysterious of all artists. . . Most Western critics have considered the artist's satiric portraits of the popular theatrical idols of his time as classics. . . As a history of Japanese plays, actors and the roles they represented, this is an invaluable book." W. G. Matheson
+ Living Age 358:193 Ap '40 360w

"The reproductions are large in size and excellent in quality, and it is a delight to have the whole of this impressive body of work brought together at last. The authors make clear, for the first time, the amazing brevity of Sharaku's working period, and dispel the fantastic legends that he died in tragic poverty because of the dislike with which the contemporary public viewed his unflattering representations of the stage pets of the hour. They also identify the actors who are represented, give brief summaries of the plays and of the roles, and establish the exact chronological sequence of the prints rather convincingly. The book supplants all previous knowledge on the subject and is indispensable to any one who is interested in this great and puzzling genius." A. D. Ficke
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 21 '40 550w

"The book is printed to accompany an exhibition at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, the Art Institute of Chicago, the Museum of Modern Art in New York. But it will be equally interesting and perhaps more valuable to workers in the theatre who will have no opportunity to see these exhibitions."
+ Theatre Arts 24:150 F '40 400w

HENDERSON, LE GRAND (LE GRAND, pseud). Augustus goes south [written and il] by Le Grand. 128p $1.75 Bobbs
(W) 40-31722

The adventures of two ten-year-old pirates in the bayou district of Louisiana. They make an important discovery, are lost all night in the swamps, but return to their shanty-boat homes and glory.

Booklist 37:139 D 1 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p13 N 10 '40 200w
Cath World 152:376 D '40 50w

"[The tale] makes fresh and entertaining reading, full of flavor and sparkle in dialogue and character. Whether one has read the earlier book, or not, makes no difference, the humorous drawings and lively action are equally graphic." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 17:30 Ja '41 120w

"The local color is good, the plot not too impossible, and the contrast between the noisy family from Iowa and the quiet French villagers interesting characterization." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 65:926 N 1 '40 90w

"A good tale of unusual characters told with vigorous humor." E. W. Steele
+ New Repub 103:844 D 16 '40 40w

"The story is a genuine bit of Americana, describing a hitherto neglected region with its eerie background of swamps and marshes, its primitive way of life, but younger children will prize it chiefly because it is first and foremost a hearty laughter-filled tale of boys playing hard, bragging largely, and thoroughly enjoying themselves in the immemorial manner of boyhood." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 D 8 '40 240w

HENDERSON, SIR NEVILE MEYRICK. Failure of a mission, Berlin 1937-1939. 334p $3 Putnam

940.531 Europe—Politics. European war, 1939- —Diplomatic history. Germany—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—Germany
(W) 40-27393

The personal narrative of the events leading up to the present war, written by the British ambassador to Berlin during the years 1937 to 1939. "The sequence of events and the facts themselves are taken entirely from telegrams, dispatches, and letters written at the time, and are consequently, humanly speaking, strictly exact." (Prologue)

"The book is well-written and pleasantly chatty, with much space devoted to such matters as the condition of the Embassy premises in Berlin and Goering's shooting parties. The author is at his best in sketching the personalities of Hitler and his associates." O. J. Lissitzyn
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1019 O '40 950w

Reviewed by H. F. Armstrong
Atlantic Je '40 2400w
Booklist 36:342 My 1 '40
Bookmark p13 N '40

"For the general reader as well as the historian Sir Nevile's narrative holds interest for itself—not only in its shrewd additions to the portraiture of Hitler and his Nazi demi-gods, not only in its analysis of the processes and developments of Hitlerian policy, but in its picture (at times unconsciously illuminating) of Sir Nevile and of the policy which he was serving." Walter Millis
+ Books p1 Ap 21 '40 1550w

"Sir Nevile writes with more color in his ink than is usual with an Eton-bred professional diplomat. It was, probably, the journalistic success of his dispatches published in 'The British War Blue Book' which led him to sit down to write this more consecutive account of his mission. In the nature of things it is a partisan statement; Sir Nevile proudly insists that he was never anything but pro-British. . . He gives a convincing picture of a conscientious, if limited, British diplomat attempting the impossible. He wanted a compromise peace; Hitler didn't. And Hitler was the stronger man." Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 Ap 19 '40 1200w

"It would be hard to imagine a fairer statement of Sir Nevile Henderson's mission, even after years of peace, than this; or a book further removed from the Hun-baiting variety that flourished in the World War. . . Still, Henderson's objectivity is the result neither of softness nor of ignorance. . . Judgments of personalities furnish some of the most fascinating pages here." R. H. Phelps
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 20 '40 1200w
Cath World 151:498 Jl '40 320w

"Failure of a Mission takes its place betimes with the 'must' books of this war. The British Ambassador who went to Berlin in 1937 with specific authority from Neville Chamberlain to be 'indiscreet' if that would further the restoration of Anglo-German understanding, certainly laid firm foundations for Britain's moral case that it did everything possible along the thankless road of appeasement. No objective historian of the future can accuse Britain of war-mongering at that stage. Every opportunity was given Germany of acquiring its living space by peaceful negotiation. The documentation is in this book." E. D. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 19 '40 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '40

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery
Commonweal 32:83 My 17 '40 390w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 51:1 My '40 1750w

"Failure of a Mission is an important chapter of modern history. For Nevile Henderson is a cultivated man whose book, though nearly an official document, is, besides, excellent autobiography." Eleanor Van Alen
+ Current Hist & Forum 52:4 F 13 '41 230w

Foreign Affairs 18:750 Jl '40 120w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
Forum 103:327 Je '40 400w

"This volume does not give much more of historical value than was contained in the diplomat's confidential dispatches that were published in the Blue Book. But the tone is less formal, and here he does not hesitate to give his personal estimate of the Nazi 'cornered maniacs,' to employ Mr. Churchill's dramatic but not very topical label not permitted him in the Blue Book." Lamar Middleton
Living Age 358:391 Je '40 1050w

"Although the book throws little new light on recent Anglo-German relations, it presents clearly mind-processes which are in no way confined to England, to the English Prime Minister, or to his ambassador, and which explain Hitler's successes. In that respect the book is not only an important document of the times, but also a warning to the many democrats who still continue to indulge in wishful thinking about the nature of fascism and the scope of the threat which its success implies." Hans Kohn
+ Nation 150:515 Ap 20 '40 1350w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 102:580 Ap 29 '40 3000w

Reviewed by Tom Paine
New Statesman & Nation 19:536 Ap 20 '40 1000w

"Neville Chamberlain could have hoped for no more loyal defense of his policies than this long-awaited book of recollections by the last British Ambassador in Berlin. Official Blue Books, White Papers, speeches in the House of Commons, have helped to build up the British case in this war; but Sir Nevile Henderson's book supplies a wealth of personal sketches and intimate details which round out the picture. There has been no more crushing indictment of the folly of Nazi Germany than at least a part of this record by an Englishman who tried his best to be Germany's friend." Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
N Y Times p1 Ap 21 '40 2200w

"'Failure of a Mission' is written without any pretensions to style, but there are some extraordinary passages in it, nevertheless: the description of the Nazi Nuremberg rally of September, 1937; the portraits of Göring, Hess, and particularly Hitler; some new sidelights on the talks at Godesberg and Munich; and the sad last pages, full of tragic bewilderment and untouched, I think, by cynicism. Parts of it are simply British propaganda, but those parts are marked, so to speak, quite plainly and candidly. The propaganda itself is interesting enough. The remainder of the book is even more so and gives 'Failure of a Mission' an undisputed place among the more significant chronicles of contemporary history. It should be read." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 16:89 Ap 20 '40 650w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers
Sat R of Lit 21:5 Ap 20 '40 1150w

"This is not a book which aims at making sensational disclosures or substantially alters our point of view. But it will always be indispensable to the historian as the sincere and business-like record of an important eyewitness of this sinister tragedy." E. H. Carr
+ Spec 164:564 Ap 19 '40 750w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 5 '40 1500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p190 Ap 20 '40 1450w

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe
Yale R n s 29:808 summer '40 750w

HENDERSON, WILLIAM OTTO. The Zollverein. 375p maps $4.50 Macmillan [18s Cambridge]

337.0943 Zollverein [39-11016]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

"Dr. Henderson's thoughtful analysis of the career of the Zollverein is especially recommended to those who, in elaborating wishes for a new Europe, regard fiscal and economic techniques as important for their realization." L. H. Jenks
+ — Am Hist R 45:642 Ap '40 550w

"English students are in Mr. Henderson's debt for giving them the first complete documented account of the German Zollverein in their own language. In preparing his detailed account, Mr. Henderson has relied mainly on the vast German literature on the subject, which he has digested and presented in convenient form for the assimilation of his readers. But his is no mere work of vulgarization. He has carried out independent research in the archives of London and Vienna, and he has disinterred some facts which have escaped the vigilance of German investigators. Moreover, he has told his story against the background of modern German economic development, which gives it greater vividness and significance." A. Birnie + Eng Hist R 54:741 O '39 900w

Reviewed by P. W. Bidwell
J Pol Econ 48:130 F '40 850w

HENDRYX, JAMES BEARDSLEY. Hard rock man. 286p $2 Random house

40-32079

During the stampede to the Klondike for gold, Tom Carter, a young mining engineer and several others are shipwrecked on a northern island. Among them are an English remittance man, a gambler, a half breed, and the daughter of the biggest mining man in the territory. By the time they reach safety, guided by the girl, Tom has proved his right to be called a "sourdough."

Booklist 37:271 F 15 '41

"Swift, exciting, robust as they come." Will Cuppy
+ Books p25 O 6 '40 80w

"Again the veteran James B. Hendryx has turned out a topnotch adventure romance, altogether an excellent piece of work." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p30 O 20 '40 220w

HENIE, SONJA. Wings on my feet. 177p il $2 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Skating (W) 40-34670

This book by the popular Norwegian skater describes first her early career, beginning at the age of six when she acquired her first pair of skates. In the second half of the book she explains the fundamentals of figure skating, dancing on ice, and more difficult figures for professionals. Illustrated.

Booklist 37:152 D 15 '40

Books p13 N 24 '40 120w

"In her book Miss Henie recounts entertaining incidents in her early life with the same charm that characterizes her every movement on ice. . . The latter half of the book will be most appealing to prospective and regular figure skaters, both the beginner and expert." Frank Elkins
+ N Y Times p14 D 22 '40 400w

HENNEY, KEITH, and DUDLEY, BEVERLY, eds. Handbook of photography. (Whittlesey house publication) 871p il $7.50 (35s) McGraw

770 Photography—Handbooks, manuals, etc. (W) 39-33641

Comprehensive reference book on photography and its technical and scientific applications. Indexes.

HENNEY, K., and DUDLEY, B., eds.—Cont.

Booklist 36:195 Ja 15 '40

Pratt p17 autumn '40

"The reviewer recommends this book to every person who is doing serious work in photography of any sort. We must be grateful to the editors and to the publishing company for this handbook which is supplemented by their periodical, Photo Technique, in providing adult, intelligent treatment of photography for adult, intelligent readers." L. A. Turner

+ R of Scientific Instruments 11:148 Ap '40 500w

HENRIQUES, ROBERT DAVID QUIXANO. No arms, no armour. 373p $2.50 Farrar [8s 6d Nicholson]

(W) 39-29453

Autobiographical story of a young English army officer and of the way he grows into something more than a soldier, largely under the influence of two brother officers, the one a cynic, the other a saint.

Atlantic Mr '40 120w

Booklist 36:177 Ja 1 '40

Bookmark p12 Mr '40

"The story has the excitement of vivid incidents and strange scenes but—even greater—the excitement of individual growth and development, a phenomenon doubtless no rarer in the army than among adults elsewhere. . . It is not often that an author can portray growth with the insight, naturalness and lack of cant that distinguish this book. It is especially fitting that an All-Nations Prize should go to a novel that tells a story to which no nation or individual is alien." Mary Ross

+ Books p1 Ja 7 '40 1400w

"A novel of depth, perception and quality." B. M. O'R.

+ Cath World 151:115 Ap '40 500w

Churchman 154:17 F 1 '40 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '40

"In detail of battery life actuality is convincingly evoked, and if some of the talk of the lower commissioned ranks of the Army seems too good to be true it is always in keeping with essential character." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 7 '39 290w

"Major Henriques is not an especially polished writer, and some of his asides could well be dispensed with, but he has unquestionably lived his material, and his people have a three-dimensional solidity which thoroughly vitalizes the story." L. B. Salomon

+ Nation 150:48 Ja 13 '40 360w

New Repub 102:94 Ja 15 '40 50w

"There is no taking No Arms, No Armour as anything else than an extremely thoughtful book. . . The publishers are to be congratulated for bringing out this novel which with its sentimentality and muddle-headedness reveals the dilemma of a class as few novels written with more artifice have managed to do." Anthony West

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:764 N 25 '39 550w

"Let us say at once, and quite simply, that this is a fine, an altogether admirable novel. Perhaps, a few months hence, we shall be thinking of it as a great novel. It is not the style nor the dramatic power nor the characterizations that dare us to this conclusion; such qualities, relatively speaking, grow on bushes. Rather, it is its breadth and depth, its quality of thoughtfulness, its profound revelation of the human spirit in the interbellum world. We might even say, were we not afraid of harming a book that should be urged upon every one, that it is a metaphysical novel." Harold Strauss

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 7 '40 1200w

"How seriously you take 'No Arms, No Armour' depends to a large extent on how original or impressive you find its central proposition: to wit, the British Army is no place in which to cultivate the virtues either of the heart or the intellect. If this strikes you as it strikes Major Henriques' cherubic hero, Tubby Windrush, as a major revelation, the book may hold considerable interest. Otherwise, read it for some exciting Kipling-cum-Yeats-Brown passages, and let it go at that." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 15:60 Ja 6 '40 450w

"Major Henriques tells this story with a skill and vigor and a wealth of living detail that never permit the reader's interest to flag. . . The long conversations about life and its possible meanings are good, too, in the main; although they tend to repeat themselves. We are conscious all the while that we are reading a novel well worth reading. But when it is done, one feels a little cheated. Total satisfaction does not crown the minor satisfactions that we have experienced." B. R. Redman

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:7 Ja 13 '40 950w

"Mr. Henriques's sensitive and licentious soldiery are a fine lot of chaps, whose pastimes and philosophies it is pleasant to share. This comment is made in no spirit of patronage, for his accounts of their routine duties and their steeplechases, their quarrels, their kindness, their gallantry and boredom, if verbose, are good to read. The author warns us that this picture of Army life on Salisbury Plain and in the Sudan refers to 1928; the suggestion is that the leopard has changed a number of his spots and that some of the implications of his book may have ceased to be fair." John Marks

Spec 163:758 N 24 '39 160w

"No Arms, No Armour has the limited distinction of being the best novel about the British Army during the late peace (1928-30, precisely) that has yet appeared. Author Henriques, 34, is a major in the regular army. He writes with authority and irony of the military mind, with intimate affection of the quieter moments of routine."

+ Time 35:66 Ja 15 '40 450w

"This is a prize-winning novel and an exceptionally good one. First, it portrays with vigorous art something of the life and spirit of the British Army, or at least of a light artillery battery, at home and abroad. Next, it is a psychological study of the flowering of a mystical philosophy of life in a young subaltern outwardly indistinguishable from his fellows. The two themes are harmonized with excellent judgment. . . The weakness of the novel is that all the talk of the soul and the soul's vision is much too explicit; in fiction even more than elsewhere the inexpressible, after all, is what cannot be expressed. But for all that this is an absorbing novel."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p639 N 4 '39 480w

Wis Lib Bul 36:49 Mr '40

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 29:xii spring '40 20w

HENRY, HARRIET. When is a lady? 301p $2 Dutton

40-2694

Connie was a lady of the heart of gold variety, but there was some question in her daughter Monica's mind about how Connie would be received in conventional upper class English circles. The story describes Connie's charmingly free and easy ways, and the effects which they had on her own life and the lives of her two marriageable daughters. The scene is the English countryside, not far from Oxford.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p11 Ja 7 '40 320w

"A story as lively and warm-hearted as its heroine, who, though squeezed into stays and shining shoes, loses none of her beguiling earthiness—and even manages to have a romance or two of her own!" M. P. Johnson

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 27 '40 180w

"A gay and giddy story of warmhearted, wholesome entertainment. Here is British jollity specially imported by an American author." B. S.

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 7 '40 330w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '40 420w

HENRY, HARRIET. Widow's Peak. 294p $2 Dodd

40-13627

Story of a mother and daughter relationship that is almost ruined by a philandering artist, who is having an affair with the mother. The sweetly serious and very loyal seventeen-year-old worries herself almost into a collapse in her effort to set things straight, and eventually she succeeds.

"As an exhibition of the tactics of a man-crazy widow, it is more revealing than elevating. 'Widow's Peak' is a single situation story and could have been presented to better advantage in fewer words." Lisle Bell

— Books p15 Ag 25 '40 340w

"It is not a profound book, but it has charm and perception and an unexpected streak of sly humor." C. D.

+ N Y Times p16 S 8 '40 350w

" 'Widow's Peak' is a story of dramatic high lights, intense emotions and penetrating analysis into human relations."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '40 280w

HENRY, MARGUERITE. Auno and Tauno; a story of Finland; pictured by Gladys Rourke Blackwood. unp $1 Whitman, A.

Children in Finland 40-27548

Auno and Tauno were twins, living in Finland. When the teacher made Tauno stand behind the blackboard with only his boots showing, the idea came to him to slip out of his boots and run away home. The results were partly laughable, partly near tragedy for Tauno.

Booklist 36:414 Jl 1 '40

"The most important feature of the book, so far as the little listener is concerned, is that both its bright pictures and its easy words tell a real story, running straight through from cover to cover." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Je 30 '40 290w

"A book for children from seven to nine which gives a delightful picture of family life in Finland in times of peace." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 65:544 Je 15 '40 150w

New Yorker 16:126 D 7 '40 20w

Wis Lib Bul 36:151 N '40

HENSON, HERBERT HENSLEY, bp. The Church of England. (English institutions) 264p il $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Cambridge]

283 Church of England

"The former Bishop of Durham has provided us with a broad sketch of the Church of England which is both an accurate summary and a critical evaluation. Approaching the problem from the point of view of his well known opposition to Establishment, he indicates both the strength and weakness of a national church. After tracing its history and showing the political nature of the reforms of Henry VIII, he proceeds to the relation of church and state, the 'via media', subscription, bishops, parishes and clergy, and the relation of the English church to other churches." (Churchman) Index.

"No serious student of English institutions will want to miss a book which sparkles, as this does, with keen, incisive criticism and with brilliantly suggestive interpretations of historical events, remote and recent. The numerous illustrations have been intelligently selected and are admirably reproduced." W. W. Manross

+ Am Hist R 46:465 Ja '41 250w

Reviewed by W. A. Marzolf

Boston Transcript p9 My 18 '40 110w

"Who but a bishop, with the scholarship proper to his office and the experience inseparable from it, could have had the intimate knowledge necessary for the writing of this book? But who would have expected a bishop to use that knowledge so objectively, to criticize so freely the institution which he undoubtedly loves, and to make evaluations so free from apologetic motive or professional bias? The answer, of course, is that one who knows Dr. Henson, formerly Bishop of Durham, will feel no surprise." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 57:513 Ap 17 '40 950w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 154:17 Mr 1 '40 250w

"The sometime Bishop of Durham is an energetic writer, intellectually well equipped, and not afraid to speak his mind, even when this entails exposing his prejudices. The picture he paints is not rosy." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 19:76 Ja 20 '40 1400w

"[The book] is clear, comprehensive, erudite, vivid, and provocative. It will supply the Anglican laity, in particular, with a great deal of information that they ought to have known before. It is realistic and fair-minded. It does, however, give the impression of having been written against a background of encircling gloom. . . Dr. Henson has given us an exceptionally shrewd and stimulating book, and one that deserves to be widely read and carefully considered." Charles Smyth

+ Spec 163:830 D 8 '39 1850w

"Lord Stamp anticipates that this book may get Dr. Henson into trouble; possibly it may; but one of the most remarkable features of the English Church is that its sternest critics have always been found among its most devoted sons, and most readers are likely to feel that even when they disagree with him most completely they understand the position better for the way in which he has handled it and for the manner in which he has displayed it against its historical background."

Times [London] Lit Sup p680 N 25 '39 1100w

HENTZE, MARGOT. Pre-fascist Italy; with a pref. by Stephen H. Roberts. 400p il map $4.75 Norton [16s Allen, G]

945.09 Italy—History. Italy—Politics and government. Representative government and representation 40-8126

History of the rise and fall of the parliamentary régime in Italy. It traces the rise of Italian democracy from the time of the foundation of the United Italian kingdom to Mussolini's march on Rome. Index.

"Miss Hentze's scholarship is sound; she knows Italy really well; she understands the Italian temperament; she possesses a critical faculty. But she is so busy holding a mirror up to nature that she apparently has not time to consider big implications and judge wide issues. It is not her fault if nature is drab and the reflection uninspiring, but she would have cured its defects if she had displayed a little more initiative."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 D 9 '39 380w

Economist 137:213 N 11 '39 450w

"Miss Hentze's work, which has been so thoroughly done that it is likely to be accepted as final, necessarily involves consideration of the causes and consequences of all the Cabinet crises of half a century. But Miss Hentze never loses the wood for the trees and her book lays proper stress on those changes in social conditions which political circumstances reflected, or rather failed to reflect."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p596 O 14 '39 1000w

HEPPENSTALL, RAYNER. The blaze of noon. 303p $2.50 Alliance bk. [7s 6d Secker & Warburg]

40-5395

"An idealisation of sexual passion. The narrator of the story is a blind masseur, and one suspects a certain symbolism in this choice of a hero who must, by the nature of his affliction, depend for sensation largely upon touch. His sojourn in a Cornish country house and his relations, sexual and social, with the people he meets there are perceived through his fingertips only." New Statesman & Nation

HEPPENSTALL, RAYNER—Continued

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette
Books p17 My 5 '40 750w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p3 Ap 27 '40 100w

"Mr. Heppenstall has some acute things to say about the art of love which, though they are likely to be hotly disputed by the romantic, strike one as well founded. Out of a simple story he has raised innumerable questions about human nature, and it may well be, as Miss Bowen says in her foreword, that 'The Blaze of Noon' is the beginning of something new in fiction." Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 N 28 '39 390w

Reviewed by Janet Thom
New Repub 102:584 Ap 29 '40 300w

"[The story is] presented with such force and skill that one must congratulate Mr. Heppenstall on achieving a remarkable tour de force, if nothing more. The greater part of the book is devoted to detailed accounts of bodily accompaniments at the expense of spirit; and although the author's treatment is discreet in the extreme, an otherwise fairly sensible newspaper suggests censorship . . . and awards him the greasy palm for the Outspoken Novel of the Year. Actually, Mr. Heppenstall, like most of the prophets of Desire, is moral and romantic in the extreme." John Mair
New Statesman & Nation 18:716 N 18 '39 370w

" 'The Blaze of Noon' is a strong book, beautifully written, and perhaps, as Elizabeth Bowen says in her foreword, the beginning of something new in writing." Marianne Hauser
+ N Y Times p7 My 19 '40 600w

"Louis Duncan is rather tiresome. He speaks of Love as if he were a gymnastic instructor, and Love an exercise that must be conducted without gaiety or humor. He is a bit of a prig, and more than a bit of a bore. Sophie, on the other hand, is so well conceived a character that there are grounds for hoping that Mr. Heppenstall's next novel will at any rate be far more agreeable than this." George Dangerfield
Sat R of Lit 22:22 My 25 '40 400w

"A remarkable and original book. It is the story of a phase in the life of a blind man which, though it is an astonishing tour de force, possesses a depth and certainty of the kind which one does not associate with books whose distinction lies in their brilliance. It is a book of which, whether one likes it or not, time will not change one's opinion, for it is not tied to the tastes of a decade; unlike the average English novel of today, written and read within defined social boundaries, it might as effectively have been written in another language and given an alien setting, it will not date, and a reader coming to it in ten years' time will be in just as good a position to appreciate it or criticise it as a reader now." Derek Verschoyle
+ Spec 163:878 D 15 '39 650w

"It seems surprising that a woman of Miss Bowen's position can profess to see in such writing the token of a new literary dispensation. 'It is more like a novel one might imagine being written 10, or even 20, years hence,' she says. Actually, there is a good deal of crassness in both the language and the thought with which the author surrounds his sensual images. It seems probable that the English will have reason to demand more than this in their novels for some years to come."
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '40 300w

"Humorless, superficially 'abnormal,' The Blaze of Noon is not a great novel nor one that a wide public will at once admire. But it is a work of art with more than one dimension. As a parable, for example, it offers food for thought to those who have sight but waste it. As a tract it is a severe corrective to the mindlessness of the D. H. Lawrence preachings on sex. As Elizabeth Bowen says, 'the disabusedness, and the absence of conflict, make this un-English writing'; as she does not say, they make it something like French writing."
Time 35:96 Ap 22 '40 700w

HERBERT, ALAN PATRICK. General cargo. 243p $2 Doubleday [6s Methuen] 827 40-7150

A collection of Mr Herbert's humorous writings, in prose and verse, reprinted from Punch.

"Since Mr. Herbert became the Twentieth Century's most vivacious Member of Parliament he has rested on his laurels as novelist, but nothing could stop his writing and every so often enough of it gathers to make a book, and a good thing, too. The present offering is well up to standard."
+ Books p14 My 12 '40 250w
Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '40 90w

Reviewed by L. N. Feipel
Library J 65:299 Ap 1 '40 250w

"Good, healthy, English stuff. Mr. Herbert has a nice after-dinner wit. 'Now too that delicious railway problem arises: Shall one have lunch just after breakfast or just before tea?' This is the best of A. P. Herbert. He is good too, just as he is good in Parliament, at showing up abuses. But he carries on a joke far too long. Something which would do well as a paragraph, is a short story. Two sentences in the telephone directory, 'Don't say "Hullo." Announce your identity,' make him write a long, long poem with a repetition of the same joke reshuffled in long words, sixth-form humour, W. S. Gilbert patter which has long ceased to be funny and was never poetical." John Betjeman
+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:842 D 9 '39 170w

"The verse throughout the book is especially enjoyable, and there's a lot of it. One of the very best has to do with telephone manners. 'Don't say "Hullo," ' directs the London Telephone Directory. 'Announce your identity.' Which gives A. P. Herbert a grand opportunity."
+ N Y Times p18 My 12 '40 500w

"There is too much richness in the book to tell about; get it and keep it on your bedside table." B. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 Jl 27 '40 400w
Times [London] Lit Sup sup viii N 18 '39 270w

HERRICK, ALLAN MERLE. You don't have to be rich; the wise management of a small income. 235p $1.75 Appleton-Century
339.4 Finance, Personal (W) 40-4545

A book of practical advice by an American banker, on the management of a small income. Some of the chapter heads are: Earning your way in high school; Job-hunting on small capital; Cheap hobby-horses; Homes for the middle class; Wise investment of small sums; Paying the doctor's bill; Insurance for the salaried man; Safeguarding the small estate. Bibliography. Index.

J Home Econ 32:253 Ap '40 100w
Management R 29:195 My '40 60w
Springf'd Republican p5 N 4 '40 140w
Wis Lib Bul 36:63 Ap '40

HERRING, EDWARD PENDLETON. The politics of democracy; American parties in action. 468p il $3.75 Norton 329 Political parties—U.S. Politics, Practical. U.S.—Politics and government 40-27328

"The purpose of this book is to analyze the politics of democracy in order to show the nature of our party system and its relations to other social processes. [The author examines] the factors which are commonly treated as grave dangers to democracy: machine control, pressure politics, propaganda, monied interests, patronage, and bureaucracy . . . [and shows that] these factors are but the reverse side of elements integral to the democratic process. Organization is essential to political party activity. Groups and associations of citizens must not be denied the right to advance their political ends. . . The good and the bad are inextricably mixed under democracy as under any other human institution. Both passion and reason motivate political behavior. . . Only the spinster-minded would wish it otherwise." (Foreword) Index.

"This book is required reading. In thirty brief chapters, Professor Herring traverses some familiar ground covered by conventional textbooks on American parties plus a variety of subjects never treated by the writers of these manuals." E. E. Schattschneider

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:788 Ag '40 650w

"While the philosophy of totalitarianism sweeps a large portion of the world, it is stimulating to read so provocative and brilliant a defense of the politics of democracy. . . The appearance of this book IS well timed. . . Dr. Herring has placed before students of American politics a challenging treatise whose philosophical and scientific approach makes it a valuable supplement rather than a duplicate of the many texts on American political parties that are now available." Belle Zeller

+ Ann Am Acad 212:244 N '40 700w

Booklist 36:319 Ap 15 '40

Bookmark p16 N '40

"Mr. Herring's book is canny, good-tempered and engagingly aphoristic. It offers no substantive program, no neat tricks for curing depression, no ultimate wisdom on pump-priming or belt-tightening or what-not. It is a book of exposition, an essay in the description of political processes and institutions." John Chamberlain

+ Books p3 Je 23 '40 950w

"The author gives a very clear and penetrating analysis of American party organization, discussing such matters as the function of third parties, the elimination of the spoils system and the place of propaganda in politics. This section of the book is exceedingly good. Its shrewd realism and its comprehensiveness place it in the same rank as the classic treatises of Beard and other writers on the American party system. Unfortunately, when the author attempts to probe more deeply into his subject, treating such basic questions as the future of the American party system, he becomes shallow, superficial and a trifle platitudinous." W. E. Greening

+ — Canadian Forum 20:323 Ja '41 850w

Reviewed by O. G. Lawson

Library J 65:256 Mr 15 '40 150w

Reviewed by Max Lerner

Nation 151:250 S 21 '40 1250w

"The great value of Mr. Herring's book is that he avoids the either-or type of thinking that is the weakness of both our modern Utopians and our prophets of doom. He doesn't tell us that we shall have to be either democratic or totalitarian, either impossibly noble or utterly degraded. . . Of course, he settles nothing: he cannot tell us how to increase production, turn depression into boom or dispense equal justice to all. But there can be a division of labor in these matters. Mr. Herring is telling people who have specifics and panaceas just what they are up against should they try to get past the barriers of politics. He becomes a philosopher when he exalts these barriers as defenses against those who would use human flesh-and-blood as an artist uses clay, with regard only for the final form. Both as scientist and philosopher he is worth reading in a time when Occam's razor threatens the jugulars of us all." John Chamberlain

New Repub 102:676 My 20 '40 1000w

"A good book, thoroughly up to date, on the vital impulses which propel governmental agencies in America has been needed, and Professor Herring supplies it. In his introduction he speaks of the volume as devoted chiefly to 'extralegal implementation,' an alarming term; but his exposition is really simple, concrete, shrewd and founded both upon wide reading and catholic observation." Allan Nevins

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 12 '41 1650w

Reviewed by P. H. Odegard

Pol Sci Q 55:474 S '40 900w

Pratt p6 autumn '40

Reviewed by M. E. Tracy

Sat R of Lit 21:14 Ap 13 '40 600w

Springf'd Republican p8 My 7 '40 600w

"Pendleton Herring, having given us excellent studies of the organization of pressure groups and of their impact on administration, now widens his gaze to include those processes of party government by which a common opinion is created and maintained. The Politics of Democracy is an important book because it gives systematic form to a revaluation of American government which has been going forward in many places." August Heckscher, II

+ Yale Law J 49:1513 Je '40 1100w

HERRING, EDWARD PENDLETON. Presidential leadership. 173p $1.50; textbook ed $1 Farrar

353.03 Presidents (U.S.)—Powers and duties. U.S.—Politics and government. U.S. Congress—Powers and duties 40-34490

An essay on "the political relations of Congress and the chief executive." (Subtitle) Index.

Reviewed by C. A. M. Ewing

Ann Am Acad 213:233 Ja '41 450w

"An able book on a timely subject. An impartial, keen study of the rôle of the President as it grew out of the Constitution. The author is free from the lure of sentimental slogans. That he can face the fact that 'government of the people, by the people, and for the people . . . is sheer poetry' or that to talk of the president as the 'people's choice' is to use extremely loose language cannot help giving an added weight to his affirmation: 'Freedom today may mean little more than an opportunity to choose our masters, but this is no small privilege.' "

+ Commonweal 33:188 D 6 '40 60w

New Repub 104:125 Ja 27 '41 40w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers

Sat R of Lit 23:11 N 9 '40 300w

Reviewed by P. H. Odegard

Survey G 29:622 D '40 210w

"It is the peculiar virtue of Herring's work that he emphasizes what Laski neglects—the importance of devices for securing a consensus as to what ought to be done. . . In other respects the book fails to do justice to Herring's talents and experience. It appears to have been too hastily written, its argument marches unclearly, and there is altogether too little documentation of numerous generalized assertions." H. C. Mansfield

— + Yale Law J 50:535 Ja '41 230w

HERRING, JOHN WOODBRIDGE. Trails to the new America. 160p il $2 Harper

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy 40-4604

Simplified study of economics, discussing such questions as how we got into the depression, and describing the proposed ways out. The book offers proposals for a better distribution of American income. Short bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. I. King

Am Econ R 30:645 S '40 750w

Reviewed by David Tilden

Books p21 N 17 '40 600w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 20 '40 90w

HERRING, J. W.—Continued

"The description of the present situation (roughly the first half of the book) is a masterpiece of simple and direct exposition, and the illustrations by Alice Standish Buell add a real punch to the text. The later chapters, which deal with true and false solutions of the problem, are equally well written and are, in fact, a happy combination of clear writing, sound thinking and horse sense." G. R. Taylor

+ Christian Century 57:447 Ap 3 '40 550w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 29:193 Mr '40 210w

Wis Lib Bul 36:44 Mr '40

HERRIOT, EDOUARD. The wellsprings of liberty (Aux sources de la liberté); tr. by Richard Duffy. 279p il map $2.50 Funk [7s 6d Hutchinson]

323.44 Liberty. France—Politics and government. France—History—Revolution 40-8125

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun

Am Hist R 46:132 O '40 600w

Foreign Affairs 18:563 Ap '40 10w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

New Statesman & Nation 19:402 Mr 23 '40 380w

"The book contains nothing new. It is hardly more than a series of short notes on some of the less well-known figures of the Revolution. And for the use of those who are not familiar with the story, the translator gives, in an appendix, a short account of the most prominent of the leaders of different sections of opinion in France at that time. But the purpose M. Herriot has in view is important for the discussion of the controversies which lie behind the present war and will probably continue after the war has ended." C. D. Burns

+ Spec 164:291 Mr 1 '40 600w

"The translation by Mr. Richard Duffy is on the whole very readable, but unfortunately marred by serious defects. Too often words or phrases which ought to be translated are left, wholly or in part, in the original. . . The translator has added a long appendix in which he gives an outline of the principal phases of the Revolution and short accounts of its more important personalities. He expresses the hope that this will be found serviceable, and this may well be the case. But it would have been more serviceable had it contained fewer somewhat elementary mistakes."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p94 F 24 '40 650w

Reviewed by Leo Gershoy

Yale R n s 29:824 summer '40 190w

HERSKOVITS, MELVILLE JEAN. The economic life of primitive peoples. 520p map $4.50 Knopf

572 Society, Primitive. Economic conditions 40-27218

"The aim of this book is to present some of the available information concerning the economic life of primitive peoples, to consider some of the questions in economic science that are susceptible of examination through the use of these data, and to suggest lines of attack which may profitably be defined for future research in the field of comparative economics. . . In the main, I have tried to follow the conventional categories of economics, to indicate the points at which primitive economic life diverges so sharply from our own that it is not possible to follow these conventions, and in all cases to avoid the use of difficult technical terms, of either anthropology or economics, so that what is written here may be readily available to economists, anthropologists, and all others whose concern is with the processes and forms of human civilization." (Pref) Index.

"A distinct contribution to the type of economic generalization toward which institutional economists have been half-consciously groping. Economists will be disappointed by the scarcity of quantitative evidence throughout the volume. This defect, however, cannot fairly be blamed on the author. It is inherent in most of the monographs on which the study was based, and one may hope that it will be corrected as far as possible in future anthropological field work. The temperate character of the author's generalizations is well illustrated by the discussion of property. The patterns of primitive ownership are described and compared in four excellent chapters." L. G. Reynolds

+ — Am Anthropol 42:695 O '40 550w

Reviewed by C. M. Arensberg

Am Econ R 30:595 S '40 380w

"The reviewer has found this work so nearly a pocket of pure gold that he refrains from stating certain minor criticisms. A subject of immense interest to all social science here receives its first thoroughly competent general discussion by a writer who can see over the fences which artificially divide fields of study." M. M. Knight

+ Ann Am Acad 210:184 Jl '40 460w

Booklist 36:277 Mr 15 '40

"The volume is an interesting and scholarly discussion of an important but little stressed phase of anthropology. It should lead to wider interests and cooperation between workers in this field." Fay-Cooper Cole

+ Christian Century 57:1080 S 4 '40 280w

New Yorker 16:79 F 24 '40 60w

Reviewed by F. M. Keesing

Pacific Affairs 13:355 S '40 260w

Reviewed by Cora Du Bois

Pol Sci Q 55:284 Je '40 550w

Pratt p9 autumn '40

Reviewed by A. H. Compton & others

Scientific Bk Club R 11:1 F '40 950w

Reviewed by Hortense Powdermaker

Survey G 30:94 F '41 320w

HERTZLER, ARTHUR EMANUEL. Doctor and his patients; the American domestic scene as viewed by the family doctor. 316p $2.75 Harper

176 Sexual ethics. Marriage. Family (W) 40-32920

The author of The Horse and Buggy Doctor (Book Review Digest, 1938) philosophizes about the human race, as he has learned to know it in his fifty years of healing the sick. His special topics are childhood, adolescence, marriage, parenthood, divorce and old age.

" 'The Doctor and His Patients' is a treasure trove of observations and meditations. Parents should read it, and young people, too, and especially those about to be divorced." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p16 O 13 '40 800w

"This is one man's opinion, of course, but the sincerity and straightforwardness of the author's statements inspire a deep respect for a doctor who has done so much to alleviate the suffering of human souls." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 65:807 O 1 '40 130w

"It is the racy effectiveness of Dr. Hertzler's expression which gives force to his pronouncements rather than any originality or profundity in his ideas. His book's substance is better when he is dealing with concrete cases than when he is philosophizing. But whether from case records or personal thoughts, he writes with crispness as with obvious sincerity. 'The Doctor and His Patients' is not for the sophisticated or intellectually exacting, but it should have a definite practical value where its counsel is needed, and it speaks, no doubt, to a wide demand."

+ N Y Times p42 D 8 '40 700w

"The Doctor is fairly straitlaced, but wise and engagingly forthright."

New Yorker 16:80 O 5 '40 40w

Reviewed by Murray Bass, M.D.
Sat R of Lit 23:13 N 30 '40 410w
Reviewed by Haven Emerson, M.D.
Survey G 29:632 D '40 440w

HERZBERG, GERHARD. Molecular spectra and molecular structure; v 1; Diatomic molecules; tr. with the co-operation of the author, by J. W. T. Spinks. 592p il $6.50 Prentice-Hall

539.1 Spectrum analysis. Molecules (40-116)

"The present volume is the first one of a comprehensive presentation of the field of molecular spectra and the conclusions that can be drawn from them about molecular structure. This first volume is limited to diatomic molecules. A second volume, dealing with polyatomic molecules, will follow." (Pref) Bibliography. Author index. Subject index.

"As most calculations in the literature are based on the older values, the reader using the data in the present volume will need to exercise some care in order not to introduce inconsistencies. The book is furnished with an excellent subject index. Altogether, it is a work which is indispensable to anyone who has a serious interest in the field covered." O. K. Rice
+ Am Chem Soc J 62:1313 My '40 200w

"All workers in this country interested in band spectroscopy and the structure of molecules will welcome this volume as presenting this intricate field of physics and chemistry in their own language, with a clarity of style and a forceful directness which cannot be surpassed. Similar books have been written, but the present volume portrays the subject with just the right balance between theory and experimental material to make its perusal a distinct pleasure." Geo. Glockler
+ J Phys Chem 44:682 My '40 460w

"Prof. Herzberg's book will be assured of a grateful reception, and we shall eagerly await the promised sequel on the spectroscopy of polyatomic molecules." C. K. Ingold
+ Nature 147:36 Ja 11 '41 1300w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:12 Ja '40

"The book is certain to be very useful both as an introduction to the subject and as a reference work. It seems to the reviewer a matter of some regret that the author did not see fit to develop more fully the quantum mechanics of molecules. . . The student, especially one who is tackling the subject for the first time, would appreciate the inclusion of a more complete and unified account of the theory of which so much use is made." G. M. Almy
+ — R of Scientific Instruments 11:146 Ap '40 700w

HERZOG, B. G. See Herzog, E.

HERZOG, MRS ELIZABETH (GREENEBAUM). The Tinkers of Turntable; il. by Susanne Suba. 127p $1.75 Scott, W. R.
40-33935

Nonsense story about some apparently ordinary people who had extraordinary powers, and were able to use their magic to help their friends.

"It all makes good reading, with honest, straightforward fun, and nothing a discerning child could call silly." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 D 8 '40 240w

"A truly American nonsense story in which fantasy and realism are blended somewhat successfully. . . While not as spontaneous as Mary Poppins, still it will appeal to a limited audience who accept unquestioningly their fantasy and realism mixed together. Pen and ink sketches by Susanne Suba are in keeping with the story. For limited purchase. Suitable for reading aloud." E. A. Groves
+ Library J 65:983 N 15 '40 200w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Nation 151:455 N 9 '40 10w
Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:843 D 16 '40 20w

"This is a nonsense story that is closer in spirit to the briskness of 'Mary Poppin' than it is to the more imaginative atmosphere of George Macdonald's fairy tales or Josephine Daskam Bacon's recent 'The Door in the Closet.' The simple matter-of-fact style, the rapidity of the action, the unexpected and the absurd in a familiar, every-day setting make 'The Tinkers of Turntable' a book that readers from 8 to 10 will find entertaining and easy to read." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p7 D 29 '40 370w

HESSEL, FREDERICK ADAM; HESSEL, MRS MARY STANLEY (HINRICHS), and MARTIN, WELLFORD. Chemistry in warfare; its strategic importance; with a foreword by Crosby Field; and a technical appendix. 164p il $2 Hastings house

623.45 Chemical warfare (W) 40-27573

"A concise, but nonetheless thorough outline of the important role played by chemistry in feeding, clothing, sheltering and protecting the soldier, transporting him by land, sea and air, arming him with both offensive and defensive weapons, feeding his weapons with propellant, high explosives, shrapnel and gases—describing briefly the chemical processes and chemical products required in these various functions with the approximate quantities used." (Foreword) Bibliography.

Booklist 36:426 Jl 15 '40

"The authors have succeeded in making their little book as interesting to the layman as to the technologist. Mrs. Hessel, whom we suspect had a major role in that process, has become adept at taking the mystery out of chemistry. Her husband has drawn on his broad background of economic knowledge and industrial experience. Captain Martin knows his military tactics as well as the technique of explosive manufacture." S. D. Kirkpatrick
+ Chem & Met Eng 47:579 Ag '40 310w
New Repub 103:198 Ag 5 '40 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:32 Jl '40

"'Chemistry in Warfare' shows the importance to the nation of skilled chemists and the great advantage to the nation that the many commercial research laboratories will prove if the United States becomes involved in a war. Their importance in the present campaign to strengthen national defenses is evident, and their value in the event that M-day ever materializes is brought home to laymen with great force in this book."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 25 '40 550w

HETH, EDWARD HARRIS. Light over Ruby street. 294p $2 Smith & Durrell
40-30102

"Ruby Street is Main Street, Broadway and the Bowery of any little Harlem of any good-sized industrial city of the Northeast. . . In Aggie's home live Pa and their little boy, Milbo, and Grandma Looby. But Julee, Aggie's daughter, now a young lady, three-quarters Caucasian blood, with all the outward semblance of a white girl but with the environment of Ruby Street in her spirit, is the apple of her eye. . . It is an ancient story of mother and child. Here it is played out in comedy in one of the most tragic of settings. . . Julee is to enter and conquer the world outside Ruby Street. And Julee has no desire to do so, for she is in love and on Ruby Street. The story comes to its crisis and finds its climax in the Mother's Day Ball." Books

"Some readers may object to this story. Ruby Street is not refined and some of the situations are indelicate. . . More will object on the ground that it gives a false picture of Negro life. But, of course, it is no more a picture of Negro life than 'Tobacco Road' was a picture of the white South. 'Tobacco Road' was a story about Tobacco Road, which may be found in segments in many states. This is a story about Ruby Street, which may be found running blindly through sections of many Northern cities. A story outside the beaten track, swift and light, it has the breath of life in it." David Tilden

HETH, E. H.—Continued

+ — Books p4 S 8 '40 800w

"The story is not, of course, a novel of the American Negro people, but only of those who have drifted to, or been born in, some Ruby Street of the colored under-world of our Northern cities. As such it is to be read and understood, and as such, as well as a finished story of literary quality, it is worthy of high praise." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p14 S 1 '40 900w

Sat R of Lit 23:21 O 26 '40 170w

HEUSER, HEINRICH. Control of international trade. 282p $3.50 Blakiston [12s 6d Routledge]

382.094 Europe—Commercial policy. Commerce. Commercial policy 40-1928

"Comprehensive survey of the methods of regulating foreign trade, other than tariffs, adapted by the European countries, excluding Russia, since the world depression. The study is based on considerable first-hand observation by the author, whose travels were rendered possible by the Acland Travelling Scholarship. The work is divided into three parts: causes of the regulation of foreign trade, methods of foreign trade control and the results of the regulation of foreign trade. The general conclusion reached is that the restrictive measures described impeded rather than assisted economic recovery and that they are particularly intended as instruments of planning in a free economy." Times [London] Lit Sup

"No fault can be found with the author's theoretical deductions which are similar to the earlier analyses of the tariff by the neoclassicists. They will not, however, discourage governments concerned with economic planning or increased control over economic activities. For countries striving to preserve the competitive system the question remains unanswered —namely, will these new techniques used by other nations require radical changes in customary instruments of commercial policy?" E. B. Dietrich

Am Econ R 30:159 Mr '40 330w

Economist 137:511 D 30 '39 420w

"Mr. Heuser's study is thorough, well-documented, well-balanced and well-written. Owing to the terms of the Acland Travelling Scholarship, which financed the two years of research on which it is based, it covers only the Continent of Europe, and from this Russia is excluded; but the field is in all conscience wide enough even so, and has been notably well tilled." Honor Croome

+ Spec 162:718 Ap 28 '39 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p330 Je 3 '39 120w

HEWES, MRS AGNES DANFORTH. Iron doctor. 234p il $2 Houghton

(W) 40-30574

After his high school course Jed Sheldon trained with an eastern salvage company. His first big job was with the divers working on the foundations of the San Francisco-Oakland bridge, where he proved that diving was the right profession for him. The slight mystery surrounding his father is solved in the course of the story, which contains much technical detail about deep-water work.

"Good vocational story for junior and senior high school boys."

+ Booklist 37:75 O 15 '40

"In Sheldon's career . . . you have not so much a vocational story as a story of vocation. It does not have the breath-taking drive of Comdr. Ellsberg's undersea dramas, but it has a depth of its own. . . Diving seems to be the one way of earning a living that can match thrills with aviation, in books as well as in life. A boy attracted to it will find here how it is done." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 S 29 '40 420w

"All boys are fascinated with the tales of deep-sea divers. Here's a thrilling story about one based on the building of the Golden Gate Bridge across San Francisco Bay."

+ Churchman 154:35 D 1 '40 30w

"As the work of a diver is full of danger, this stirring story for older boys is not without its gruesome incidents." A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 16:444 N '40 140w

"The characters are alive and the characterization good; the plot plausible and the writing excellent and swift. The book is of value for any library for those readers of twelve and up." J. F. Carter

+ Library J 65:926 N 1 '40 130w

Wis Lib Bul 36:153 N '40

HEWETT, MARGARET. Party menus and recipes; decorations by Hiram Hurd. 109p $1.50 Holt

641.5 Cookery. Menus 39-29971

Out of the ordinary menus and recipes for luncheons, dinners, and buffet suppers, with a chapter on canapés and hors d'oeuvres. Index.

"Margaret Hewett's clever book should be a help even to the experienced hostess and treasure trove for the beginning entertainer."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 3 '40 120w

Wis Lib Bul 36:26 F '40

HEWITT, BARNARD WOLCOTT. Art and craft of play production. 388p il $4 Lippincott

792 Amateur theatricals; Acting (W) 40-12003

A textbook for college students. The author's purpose has been to treat "play production as a problem rather than as a process. The problem is to produce a particular play, in a particular theatre, for a particular audience, by means of the materials of theatre art. Such a treatment requires an analysis of the physical theatre, of the audience, of the written play, and of each of the materials of production regarded as a means of expressing the play in the theatre for an audience. The purpose of this organization is to reveal the traditional 'rules' firmly rooted in the nature of the art and in the conditions under which it must be practiced." (Pref) Glossary. Selected bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 37:86 N 1 '40

"An ideal manual and textbook for the non-professional producer and the student should include the following ingredients: a logical plan; comprehensive and relatively detailed coverage of all relevant material; an exact guide to special references which fill in the unavoidable gaps; an eye continually upon the actual, concrete conditions of theatre production; a sound and lively sense of the history of the art; and, last, a vigorous thesis which gives vitality to what can so easily become leadweight facts. Professor Hewitt's book admirably fulfills all of these requirements."

+ Theatre Arts 24:912 D '40 100w

HEYER, GEORGETTE (MRS G. R. ROUGIER). Spanish bride. 397p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Heinemann]

40-30103

Historical novel based upon an actual romance of the Peninsula war days. Sir Harry Smith, an English officer, and the young, high-born Spanish girl whom he rescued from the sack of Badajos and married two days later, are the chief characters. The story ends with the Battle of Waterloo.

Booklist 37:216 Ja 15 '41
Bookmark 2:12 Ja '41

"The novel is indeed a remarkable combination of a personally beguiling story with historic fact. A happy young love affair against a grim war's back-drop is apt to seem trivial or callous or distorted or all three. 'The Spanish Bride' is none of these. Miss Heyer has studied her history and has seriously reproduced its events and strategies. And her young soldiers are mettlesome and attractive. They are historic characters, of course. As for Juana, she is one of the most delightful heroines to be met with in many moons." John Patton

+ Books p14 O 6 '40 420w

"It may be that some of my readers have little time for 'old, unhappy, far-off things, and battles long ago'; but, for myself, I confess that the Peninsula is an epic that never fails to move me. For those who share this feeling Miss Heyer's book is a splendid prize." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 29 '40 430w

"It may seem odd that such a furious war story as this could be an antidote to the news of the day, but in its brilliant presentation of a struggle long past it is both relaxing and diverting." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p26 N 3 '40 290w
Sat R of Lit 23:19 N 9 '40 270w

"Miss Heyer manages a vast mass of material with considerable skill. Her military types are well characterized and differentiated, her battles lucidly described, as through the eyes of those engaged in them, and we are conscious all the time of the character of the country, which she manages to make us see very clearly."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p185 Ap 13 '40 360w

HEYLIGER, WILLIAM. Son of the apple valley; il. by Robb Beebe. 253p $2 Appleton-Century

40-4717

Chris Corbin came home from agricultural college for the Christmas vacation to find that the apple-growing community in which his father lived was rapidly going to ruin because of city racketeers. The story is of Chris' part in the eventual downfall of the thugs.

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p3 My 11 '40 30w

"In addition to being a smooth-moving narrative of action and suspense, culminating in a dynamite plot, the story provides an interesting picture of the cultivation and marketing of apples." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 3 '40 130w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '40 250w

HIBBEN, JAMES HERBERT. The Raman effect and its chemical applications; with a theoretical discussion by [the author] and Edward Teller. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 544p il $11 Reinhold [66s Chapman]

535.84 Raman effect 39-21640

"The present book, the first in English on this subject, goes a long way toward enabling the workers in almost any field of chemistry to understand and use the Raman effect as a tool, a use which in the early stages of development has been necessarily confined to the specialists in the field. It is written with a minimum of mathematics. . . Eighty pages give the requisite material for an understanding of the major problems involved in the interpretation of Raman spectra. There are less than 20 pages devoted to actual methods of measurement. . . The balance of the book, 500 pages, is devoted to a classified survey of the spectra of various substances." Chem & Chem Eng N

"We consider that this book will prove useful to those interested in the field. We also believe that the price is too high. This country has now taken the lead in scientific research, and the publication of books of a research character becomes our responsibility; it would be a pity if excessively high prices prevented the free circulation of such books among the very people for whom they are intended." D. M. Yost

+ — Am Chem Soc J 62:459 F '40 700w

"Granting [certain] limitations, the book fills a real need in making readily available the more important work in this field for discussion and for use as an aid in many fields of research. If the applications of the Raman effect continue to expand as is confidently to be expected, there will be many who will be grateful to the author." D. H. Andrews

+ — Chem & Chem Eng N 18:35 Ja 10 '40 650w

Reviewed by W. L. Abramowitz
Chem & Met Eng 47:133 F '40 360w

"The printing of the volume is done with care and the tables are neatly arranged, but the draftsmanship of the figures could be better. Scientific libraries, physicists, and chemists interested in the general field of molecular structure will need this compendium in their work." Geo. Glockler

+ — J Phys Chem 44:681 My '40 470w

"A highly valuable feature is the bibliography and index of compounds, which together constitute a complete guide to the literature of the Raman effect. Heavy labour must have been expended on this compilation, but, writing so complete a work, the author has rendered a signal service to science, and to all interested in the subject of molecular vibrations." C. K. Ingold

+ Nature 145:406 Mr 16 '40 900w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:26 Ap '40

HIBBEN, THOMAS. The sons of Vulcan; the story of metals; il. by the author. 259p $2 Lippincott

671 Metals. Metal work (W) 40-27601

Traces the progress of metal work from its simplest primitive forms to the highly developed forms of the present day. Metals of tools and weapons are discussed, but not the work of the gold and silversmiths. For upper grades and high school.

Booklist 37:18 S '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 D 8 '40 260w

"The author has taken some highly technical data and presented them so simply that they are almost absolutely clear. Thus even when describing a Bessemer Converter, Kelly or Open Hearth Furnace, there is a clarity which can hardly be expected. . . This book is an outstanding one for any boy or girl and his elders, too." E. M. Wedrow

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 24 '40 310w

"This history of metals and metal-work will be useful for school and public library reference although lack of an index will hinder the user. . . The effects of each development on the life of the age is carefully shown. The numerous black and white sketches should prove valuable in answering requests for pictures of a wide variety of objects from ancient to modern times. Age twelve through high school." Eleanor Kidder

+ — Library J 65:714 S 1 '40 180w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:846 D 16 '40 30w

"This is a book that boys and girls from 12 years on will enjoy using and dipping into, and one that teachers of social studies will find a valuable addition to the shelves for supplementary reading. It is unfortunate, however, that there is no index. A bibliography, too, would have added to the value and usefulness of the book." A. T. E.

+ — N Y Times p26 N 10 '40 180w

HICHENS, ROBERT SMYTHE. That which is hidden. 668p $2.50 Doubleday [9s Cassell] 40-6911

Set against a background of the Riviera and of Zurich, the novel is at once a psychological study and a romantic story—the story of Mark Ravensworth, an English youth studying in Zurich; of his friends, Kho Ling, a Chinese medical student, and Max Lindner; and of Mark's lovely and still young mother, with whose life each of the others becomes inextricably connected because of a shadow of suspicion.

"An intricate and adroitly sustained narrative of menace and motive." Lisle Bell
+ Books p11 Ja 14 '40 350w

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 27 '40 250w

"The tangle and its unsnarling by Kho Ling's study of that which is hidden, 'the underneath,' takes a long time to tell. Protracted conversations often leave the plot about where it was when they began, but it is all done with the smooth dexterity of a practiced storyteller. . . What the novel lacks is first-hand emotion and action."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 F 24 '40 350w

"If Mr. Hichens may have lost something of his magic touch, he is, nevertheless, just as capable as formerly of spinning out a yarn. 'That Which Is Hidden' will hold attention to the end, even if the end, when arrived at, may seem not wholly to justify all the pother of the long building up which has gone before. . . For those addicted to tales pivoting on oriental mysticism, with fakirs and their rope tricks, and things similar, Mr. Hichens's creation of the Chinese student Kho Ling will be a happy find. Kho Ling is, we believe, something new in English fiction." Percy Hutchison
+ — N Y Times p20 Ja 14 '40 400w

"All the old craftsmanship is here and the story moves steadily, however slowly, forward, helped by abundant detail, clever characterization and admirable dialogue that consistently maintain the interest from chapter to chapter."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p623 O 28 '39 360w

HICKS, GRANVILLE, and BENNETT, RICHARD M. The first to awaken [il. by Richard M. Bennett]. 347p $2.50 Modern age 40-11300

During the years 1940 to 1948 a certain Dr Carr of Braxton, Connecticut, puts a number of persons to sleep for a hundred years. The first to awaken is one George Swain, a bank clerk, veteran of the first Great war, a widower and childless. In anticipation of the awakening of the others, George sets down his experiences and observations of the "brave new world" of 2040, and summarizes the history of the century during which he slept.

Booklist 37:35 O 1 '40

Reviewed by D. M. Young
Books p8 Je 23 '40 850w

"Whatever Swain writes about, his writing remains boring. America of A.D. 2040 must be exciting, fascinating, thrilling. And yet he depicts it as being as boring as the Main Street of the nineteen twenties, with the only difference that all the Babbitts and the Main Streeters are socialized there." P. A. Sorokin
— Boston Transcript p1 Je 15 '40 460w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '40

"Unfortunately, books like this almost inevitably fall into the pattern of question and answer, like a minstrel team, and even though Mr. Hicks enlivens his pages with drawings by his collaborator, sprightly allusions to people and events of our own time, and an apparatus of pseudo-scholarly footnotes, the tempo of the story lags somewhat." L. B. Salomon
Nation 150:689 Je 1 '40 270w

"Your Utopia expert regrets having to report that this forecast of the future rates poorly. . . Mr. Hicks is simply not a novelist. Neither, however, were the authors of 'News from Nowhere,' 'Last and First Men' and 'The New Atlantis.' . . But when the Utopian writers have not been novelists, they have mingled poetry, wit, ethical passion and prophetic luminance in a blaze of which Mr. Hicks shows no glimmer." Edgar Johnson
— + New Repub 102:798 Je 10 '40 600w

"Mr. Hicks's blueprints of the future seem to me pretty blue. But he's on the same track as his many distinguished predecessors. That's the way the world is going and, in a broad general sense, should go." F. T. Marsh
+ — N Y Times p5 Je 2 '40 850w

New Yorker 16:92 My 25 '40 100w

"It is pretty terrible, whether as literature, life, or logic." Fletcher Pratt
— Sat R of Lit 22:11 Je 15 '40 500w

Discussion by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 22:9 Jl 6 '40 180w

"Nicely, almost winningly written, in a sort of First Reader style, and full of sunny, skillful little pen drawings by Collaborator Richard Bennett, the book should fascinate those readers who would just as soon skip the next 100 years if the next 100 years are going to be anything like 1940."
+ Time 35:99 My 27 '40 500w

HIGGINS, FREDERICK ROBERT. The gap of brightness. 85p $1.25 (3s 6d) Macmillan 821 [40-11177]

Volume of lyric poems by an Irish poet.

"The poems could be called a blend of Yeats, Gogarty, Colum, Synge. But they are not echoes of anything but Ireland as a poet hears the voices. This is a book which comes as a great refreshment after a long succession of books of criticism and biography, books about books about poets, books derived and books in comment. This is the real thing." John Holmes
+ Boston Transcript p11 Ag 12 '40 550w

"In imagination, in mingling of tenderness and hilarity, this man has a genuine gift of Irish song."
+ Christian Century 57:1145 S 18 '40 110w

Reviewed by Robert Peel
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 17 '40 410w

"Although not concerned with the problems of the age, these lyrics from Ireland have a natural vigor and music. Brilliant technique and a real feeling for words make this book of poems delightful and surprising."
+ Living Age 359:293 N '40 90w

"Mr. Higgins is one of the established Irish lyrists, and in his new poems the lyric spirit is as imaginatively free and its setting as subtly and delicately musical as ever. And it is the unshadowed, gold-lit face of his own country that he sings, clear of the half-light and freed from mythologic cloudiness." Charles Powell
+ Manchester Guardian p7 My 6 '40 160w

"His phrases are knotty, vigorous, humorous, and not without a high imagination that suddenly, for a moment, allows some familiar commonplace object to be seen in a rare intense light. That moment is the gap of brightness. It soon dims. For if Higgins has force, he has not a driving force; he lacks the compelling passion to carry through what was well begun to an accomplished end." J. P. Bishop
+ — Nation 151:397 O 26 '40 240w

"With a brilliant technique and verbal gift, Mr. Higgins is a master of this kind of writing and his poetry is extremely enjoyable." Stephen Spender
+ New Statesman & Nation 19:622 My 11 '40 130w

New Yorker 16:68 Ag 24 '40 30w

Reviewed by Richard Church
Spec 165:250 S 6 '40 340w

"Above all his lyrics are instinct with a warm humanity that summons up the presence of staunch and simple folk, 'The Old Jockey'

HICHENS (hĭch'ĕnz)

or 'Padraic O'Conaire, Storyteller,' or which makes a love song tingle with life and ardour and pathos. And he sings finely, too, of the country that has nourished the men he loves, whether the pastures of Meath or the mountains of Mayo. Magic and a vernacular strength reinforce each other in his verse."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p258 My 25 '40 220w

HIGGINSON, ALEXANDER HENRY. The fox that walked on the water; il. by F. A. Stewart. 88p $3.50 Scribner [10s 6d Collins]

799.2 Foxes—Legends and stories. Fox hunting

"Fox-hunting reminiscences by a native Bostonian who in the last 20 years has transferred his allegiance from Middlesex County foxes, State of Massachusetts, U.S.A., to Cattistock foxes, South of England. Mr. Higginson explains his book with the recollection that when the famous English artist was visiting him, the artist said he would like to illustrate some of the stories about fox-hunting Mr. Higginson was telling." Boston Transcript

"This is a pleasantly streamlined volume."

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 20 '40 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup sup xvii N 18 '39 60w

HIGHSTONE, HAROLD ALFRED. Practical farming for beginners. 199p il $2.50 Harper

631 Agriculture (W) 40-27394

A book designed particularly for the "city man" who wishes to turn to subsistence farming. Advice is given on what kind of farm to buy and how much acreage is needed, on livestock necessary to make one independent of "profit" crops, on what to raise, and on specialized techniques. Index.

Booklist 36:339 My 1 '40

"I like Highstone's 'Practical Farming' because it faces the realities. . . It explodes a lot of fallacies 'city people' have about the opportunity in farming. But after painting the dark side of the picture, the author goes into intimate detail relative to the renting or buying of a farm, its equipment, and finally its operation. . . Romantic twaddle has no part in the book; everything is slanted towards the crassly utilitarian." W. A. Freehoff

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 18 '40 150w

Christian Science Monitor p20 My 8 '40 700w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:22 Ap '40

Springf'd Republican p6 My 27 '40 140w

Wis Lib Bul 36:96 My '40

HILDITCH, THOMAS PERCY. Chemical constitution of natural fats. 438p $6.50 Wiley [35s Chapman]

547.2 Oils and fats

"The arrangement of the book is designed for the maximum ease in reference. Chapter one is a general summary of the data which are discussed in fuller detail in the following chapters. A biographical classification is the basis for the order in which the various natural fats are considered. First, the component acids of aquatic flora and fauna are studied. This is followed by the land animals and the vegetable fats. The component glycerides are then considered, first qualitative investigations of natural fats, then the vegetable and animal fats themselves. Biochemistry of fats is viewed both from the standpoint of synthesis and assimilation. The constitution of individual natural fatty acids is the subject of a chapter. Synthetic glycerides are reviewed, and the experimental technique employed in the quantitative investigation of fats is outlined." (Chem & Met Eng) Indexes.

"This book is recommended to specialists in this field, to chemists seeking a broad general knowledge of the fats, and to biologists." A. W. Ralston

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:1163 D 25 '40 320w

"In this book we find a veritable encyclopedia of information. It will take its place beside the dictionary on the desk of every chemist and chemical engineer who works with fats and oils, whether edible or inedible. Although it is not an engineering book, it is a reference volume of scientific data that will be invaluable to many engineers." G. W. McBride

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:807 N '40 240w

Reviewed by E. F. Armstrong

Nature 145:839 Je 1 '40 900w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:47 O '40

HILGARD, ERNEST ROPIEQUET, and MARQUIS, DONALD GEORGE. Conditioning and learning. 429p $2.75 Appleton-Century

158.423 Reflexes. Learning, Psychology of 40-6092

Critical survey of the literature dealing with conditioning and learning, as a field of research in modern psychology. Contents: The place of conditioning in psychology; Classical conditioning experiments; Instrumental conditioning experiments; The nature of reinforcement; The nature of extinction: Strength of conditioning; Gradients of reinforcements; Generalization and discrimination; Serial learning; Problem solving; Voluntary action; Personality; Neurophysiological mechanism of conditioning. Glossary. Bibliography. Indexes.

"The authors have succeeded well in the task of synthesizing this confused mass of research into an organized picture, which is clear enough and interesting enough to benefit workers who are not directly concerned with experimental conditioning. . . From an anthropological point of view, the most rewarding chapters of the book are, curiously, those which deal with the simplest and most basic phenomena. The authors have given a brilliant and impartial analysis of the three leading theories of learning." Gregory Bateson

+ Am Anthropol 43:115 Ja '41 600w

Booklist 36:405 Jl 1 '40

HILL, FRANK ERNEST. Training for the job; vocational education for adults. 160p $1.25 Am. assn. for adult educ.

371.426 Vocational education. Education of adults 40-27371

A study of the need for, and the agencies engaged in, the training of adolescents and adults for jobs in modern American industry. Index.

Booklist 36:328 Ap 15 '40

J Home Econ 32:330 My '40 40w

Reviewed by P. T. Orata

School & Society 51:646 My 18 '40 160w

HILL, MRS GRACE (LIVINGSTON). Head of the house. 299p $2 Lippincott

40-2384

"How to manage half a dozen younger brothers and sisters, keep interfering relatives under control and select the right young man to marry—these are the problems which confronted the heroine." Books

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p14 Mr 10 '40 80w

"One of the best of Miss Hill's recent novels —perhaps because the usual 'spiritual values' are rather late in making their appearance in this romance."

Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '40 100w

"This is one of Mrs. Hill's most innocent and gentle stories." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 Mr 3 '40 110w

HILL, MRS GRACE (LIVINGSTON). Rose Galbraith. 313p $2 Lippincott
40-9899

Young Rose Galbraith, at the death of her parents, went to Scotland to visit her relatives. She was received coldly by her mother's aristocratic family at the castle, but very kindly by the Galbraiths in their cottage. The story is of Rose's religious faith and how it brought happiness to herself and her estranged relatives.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p9 Jl 7 '40 130w
Boston Transcript p1 Jl 27 '40 90w
Churchman 154:35 O 1 '40 30w

"[Rose's] Scotch travels, her long distance friendship with the American boy, and her happiness with the Galbraith clan make a wholesome story." B. S.
+ N Y Times p18 Jl 28 '40 210w

HILL, HELEN DAY (MRS F. P. MILLER), and AGAR, HERBERT. Beyond German victory. 117p $1 Reynal

940.5373 European war, 1939—Influence and results. European war, 1939—U.S. U.S.—Economic policy. Germany—Nazi movement 40-34054

The authors discuss "the blueprints for Hitler's United States" and the possibility of our setting up a totalitarian government to fight Germany now. The book is based upon the supposition that Germany will win in the present war.

Christian Century 57:1586 D 18 '40 200w

"The two authors are skillful, and they present their argument with logic and persuasion. The style is chiefly that of a newspaper editorial with hortatory asides urging the Nation's leaders to build defenses on an even vaster scale than they now contemplate."
+ Living Age 359:392 D '40 230w

"Miss Hill and Mr. Agar have written a book calculated to disturb the complacent and certain to arouse furious controversy. But they have stated their case with a clarity and a passionate conviction that must command the respect of all but the most bigoted of the opposition." Keith Hutchison
Nation 151:424 N 2 '40 550w
New Yorker 16:88 O 26 '40 40w

"Any thoughtful American whether he completely agrees with the authors or not, must lay down this book with a sense of satisfaction. For here is a compressed yet completely thorough statement of everything the advocates of an aggressive, dynamic foreign policy for America have on their minds and hearts." H. B. K.
+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 D 28 '40 270w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 24 '40 650w

HILL, MRS JANET (MCKENZIE). Cooking for two; rev. by Marjorie Mills and Sally Larkin [pref. by Marjorie Mills]. new ed 268p $2 Little

641.5 Cookery 40-31884

"An old, popular cookbook suitable for the inexperienced cook. In addition to menus and simple recipes there are chapters on marketing, kitchen equipment and household management. Extensively revised." (Booklist) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 37:119 N 15 '40

"Thirty years ago this book was given a ready welcome, and the latest edition, published yesterday, faces just as eager a public. . . The editors have added many new recipes and words of shopping wisdom, keying the volume to demands of today's swift pace. The more experienced housewife, however, after learning her A, B, C's here, will soon look to more advanced advice."
Boston Transcript p8 S 12 '40 100w

"The two newspaper writers who have revised it have lightened its form of presentation to correspond to the present vogue, but fortunately without lessening its convenience."
+ J Home Econ 32:697 D '40 30w

HILL, JUSTINA HAMILTON. Germs and the man. 461p il $3.75 Putnam

616.01 Bacteriology. Infection and infectious diseases (W) 40-27865

"[An] exposition of the findings of bacteriology, 'the infant science': what the bacilli, cocci, and other germs are and do, who discovered them, how the body fights them, and how wounds heal. Also, an account of germicides, antiseptics, and disinfectants, including sulfanilamide and its derivatives." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:213 Ja 15 '41

"For the contemplative and relatively well informed layman, this will be an interesting and readable book. For the youngster contemplating a medical career, it will be enlightening and enlivening. Many medical students will know less about the subject after they have finished their present instruction in these fields than they would if they read and digested this book. It is not, however, to be recommended as light reading." Hugh Cabot, M. D.
+ Books p8 Ja 19 '41 650w

"The pace set by DeKruif in the dramatization of scientific phenomena for the allurement of lay readers is difficult to maintain. The present author is an accomplished scientist in DeKruif's field, and she writes conscientiously, accurately, and systematically of pathogenic bacteria and our defenses against them. Her book makes interesting reading for anyone, and the bibliography is remarkably comprehensive. Its weakest aspect is the attempt to give it a dramatic accent by such chapter headings as Job's Curse, the Staphylococcus, and Some Less Polite Germs; Sword Swallowing, or Drugs Taken by Mouth; and the like. There are some minor errors." Karl Menninger
+ — Nation 152:80 Ja 18 '41 130w

"This is a 'popular' book in the good sense of giving what is probably the clearest possible exposition of popular and practical details in a scientific subject of individual public interest. The subject is not easy for the layman to follow on all its paths of technical minutiae, but Miss Hill has kept her style lively even when her facts are difficult. It is a good book for studious reading and for permanent reference."
+ N Y Times p12 F 2 '41 480w

"A witty and perfectly readable humanization of a very abstruse subject."
+ New Yorker 16:122 D 7 '40 90w
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 D '40 550w

HILL, LOUISE BILES. Joseph E. Brown and the confederacy. 360p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press [16s Oxford]

B or 92 Brown, Joseph Emerson. Confederate States of America 39-20049

Joseph E. Brown was the obscure country lawyer who emerged from his obscurity in 1857 and served four terms as governor of the state of Georgia (1857 to 1865). This is a study of his relations with the Confederate government. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by B. B. Kendrick
Am Hist R 45:926 Jl '40 500w

"Brown's biographer has been eminently fair, and we see Brown for what he was. The destruction of his personal papers has hampered the work, but the picture is there in reasonably clear outline." R. F. Nichols
+ Ann Am Acad 208:222 Mr '40 150w

"Miss Hill's book is limited in scope, but thorough within that limited scope. . . It is replete with facts, well organized and presented, but wanting in interpretation." H. S. Commager

+ — Books p9 F 4 '40 850w

Reviewed by Tully Nettleton
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 13 '40 120w

Nation 151:118 Ag 10 '40 260w

"The facts of Brown's career except at its beginning and at the end are set forth in detail and make it unnecessary that the account be written again. The author might consistently have taken the necessary additional space and written a full life of Brown. Within its limits, however, the book gives the best account we have of Brown during the Civil War and in Reconstruction and in itself constitutes a valuable addition to the history of the period with which it is particularly concerned." T. R. Hay

+ N Y Times p17 Mr 31 '40 1000w

"The periods of the war between the states and reconstruction have been the subject of a tremendous amount of historical research and writing, especially during the past two decades, but very few of the books that have been presented to the public have been written so interestingly and with such evident scholarship as this study. . . The present biography has claims to attention rarely found in a historical work of this nature. Written in a style so luminous that the book will undoubtedly have a definite appeal to the general reader, this study is, at the same time, unusually heavily footnoted." W. A. Cate

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 27 '39 900w

HILL, MABEL BETSY. Jack o'lantern for Judy Jo; an Apple Market street story. 64p il $1.35 Stokes

(W) 40-27602

Judy Jo who lived Down-along Apple Market Street (Book Review Digest, 1934) was left to take care of a small cousin while his mother went to Ladies' Aid. At the end of a strenuous afternoon Judy Jo decided that "babies are an awful care but they are darling, just the same." Grades three to four.

Booklist 37:18 S '40

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 D 16 '40 120w

"The author's illustrations help to make a cheerful and attractive book for little girls of seven and eight." M. F. Potter

+ Library J 65:813 O 1 '40 130w

HILLER, ERNEST THEODORE. Houseboat and river-bottoms people. 146p $2; pa $1.50 Univ. of Ill.

323.35 Illinois—Social conditions. House boats. River life 39-28592

"This is a study of socio-economic adjustment among residents in the river bottoms of six Illinois counties. Data were gathered in 1935 as a cooperative venture with the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and the Works Progress Administration. From households located on or near the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, a sample of some 750 schedules was taken. Part of these schedules were discarded, and the analysis is based on 683 households. The cases included (1) 'houseboat and land-squatter residents'; (2) 'households that derived some or all of their living from the river'; and (3) 'control cases from other shelter and occupational groups.'" Am Soc R

Reviewed by T. L. Smith
Am Soc R 5:671 Ag '40 310w

"The volume is typical of a large mass of sociological writing which is of great value but having its value obscured by the details. Time after time throughout the book, figures and facts presented in the tables are repeated in the text. This, unfortunately, is much the pattern of the sociological analyst. I fear that such a method darkens the light that sociological research has to throw on human problems, leading the layman to think that sociological findings belong to the esoteric rather than to the mental reality of every day living." B. L. Melvin

Social Forces 19:137 O '40 650w

"While describing in detail a segment of activity of the people living on the river with squatter occupancy, the treatise seems strangely lacking in any awareness of the individuals and families as people whose living conditions it seeks to portray. No living person or family appears in these pages, only statistical items on behavior and abstract development of sociological concepts. One senses that the prior interest of the writer was in these concepts, rather than in the human beings who live along the river. The monograph would have profited by a few life history documents that describe whole individuals and families." R. S. Wilson

Survey 76:119 Mr '40 330w

HILLYER, ROBERT SILLIMAN. Pattern of a day. 81p $2 Knopf

811 (W) 40-30794

This twelfth volume of poems by the 1934 Pulitzer prize poet is composed of a long poem in blank verse called Variations on a Theme, first published in the now defunct American Poetry Journal, and some shorter poems. These last, altho on various subjects, show a preponderance of nature themes.

Atlantic O '40 150w

Booklist 37:113 N 15 '40

Bookmark 2:6 Ja '41

"Some of the lyrics in this new book are among Mr. Hillyer's best, the sonnet sequence is one of his most intensely religious and serious. The lighter poems serve their purpose. A scholar and a sensitive man, Robert Hillyer carries forward the faith that man's spirit like nature's is self-replenishing, must cyclically flower—let the war-makers do what they may." E. L. Walton

+ Books p8 D 22 '40 400w

"Among [the short poems] may be found some of the most skillful music this poet has ever evoked, which is saying a good deal, since his craftsmanship has always been undisputed. From the swift clarity of 'Bandusia' to the amusing objectivity of 'Dr. Samuel Johnson' he is able to move with ease and grace. He steps aside now and then for a few moments to peer behind veils he has not often lifted. The note of terror, or the recognition of darkness and evil, appears in such poems as 'Snake,' 'Visitants,' and most strikingly in 'The Assassination.' Again he turns satirical, as in the very acid group of three little verses called 'Poetical Sketches' and 'Incantation.' Robert Hillyer is at his clear musical best in 'In the Tidal Marshes,' 'Starry Night' and 'Night Piece,' to mention a few. At this level, too, stands 'Bandusia.'" John Holmes

+ Boston Transcript p11 Ag 26 '40 600w

"'Pattern of a Day' differs little, if any, from those which have preceded it. Mr. Hillyer's poetry remains lyrical, personal, and extremely civilized. He works in accepted classic forms or in neatly contrived variations on a classical theme. He likes to write about nature. . . When Mr. Hillyer approaches such subjects he is neither very original nor very striking. He steers a safe course among safe, established images and rhythms. The effect is a little like semi-classical organ music heard in the twilight." John Ritchey

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 24 '40 480w

Reviewed by J. P. Bishop
Nation 151:508 N 23 '40 500w

Reviewed by W. T. Scott
New Repub 103:636 N 4 '40 270w

HILLYER (hĭl'yẽr)

HILLYER, R. S.—Continued

"Skillful though sometimes conventional verse."

New Yorker 16:56 Ag 31 '40 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '40 350w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer

Yale R n s 30:382 winter '41 220w

HIMES, NORMAN EDWIN. Your marriage; a guide to happiness. 434p il $3.75 Farrar

173.1 Marriage. Sexual ethics (W) 40-10180

"A practical handbook for young people contemplating marriage or already married. About a third of it deals with courtship and another third with the general problems of building and running a successful household (with good tips about credit and insurance). The rest of it deals with sex, but not as an isolated factor. All the familiar sexual questions are discussed frankly and sensibly, in relation to economic, psychological and social issues." (New Repub) Index.

"The references are abundant and well chosen, the index is adequate in topics and detail and the bookmaking good though not superior. Professor Himes has given us not so much a piece of literature as a useful textbook for the convenience of the steadily expanding army of men and women who would listen and learn before and after the leap into marriage, and for those who serve as professional counsellors in the medical, social, economic, legal, and psychological problems of those who would live together permanently and happily." Haven Emerson

+ Am J Pub Health 30:1253 O '40 420w

"This book is written simply, interestingly, directly, frankly. Strange as it may seem, there are academic folk who will tend to depreciate the book because of this fact, seeming to think that obtuseness and erudition are synonymous. Obviously, the author does not belong to this school. Neither does the reviewer. Finally, this book is honest and clean. It does not evade nor does it smirk. It hews to the line in a straightforward, matter-of-fact way. The reference is intended here primarily to the discussion of the sexual factors in marriage adjustment." J. H. S. Bossard

+ Ann Am Acad 212:271 N '40 490w

"'Your Marriage' is the unified work of a single author, well organized and consistent in tone. Furthermore, it is written in a warm, friendly style, without academic affectation or professional cant. If the author seems now and then to be holding forth in a classroom lecture, it is usually when he is summarizing some item from his bibliography, and he makes up for it in his lively original passages." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p39 N 10 '40 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

New Repub 103:62 Jl 8 '40 70w

HIND, HERBERT LLOYD. Brewing; science and practice; 2v; v 2, Brewing processes. 507-1020p il $12.50 Wiley [56s Chapman]

663.3 Brewing (39-9495)

Continuation of Brewing; Science and Practice (Book Review Digest, 1939). The present volume deals with the plant and processes, with chapters on wort production and composition, wort boiling and cooling, fermentation, and the microbiology and biochemistry of fermentation. Name and subject indexes.

"Like the first volume, the present book is written in a clear and concise manner. . . Summaries and selected references to literature are appended to the more important chapters. Excellent photographs, photomicrographs, tables, and graphs are included in the book." Stephen Laufer

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:1046 N 25 '40 550w

"A large number of excellently reproduced photographs of brewery plant adorn the volume, whilst the photomicrographs of yeast in ultraviolet light are the best the reviewer has ever seen. A summary and list of references appear at the end of each chapter, whilst author and subject indexes terminate the volume. The author's long experience as brewer and chemist, supplemented by extensive reading and painstaking labour, have resulted in a book which should be of inestimable value to technicians engaged in the trade."

+ Nature 146:248 Ag 24 '40 700w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:32 Jl '40

HINDUS, MAURICE GERSCHON. Sons and fathers. 322p $2.50 Doubleday

(W) 40-27150

A novel of the Russian revolution and of the conflict between two generations representing warring ideologies. The father, Nikolay Mitosa, is a Marxist revolutionary, and the son Kolya, humanitarian intellectual, a defender of the old order. When the Bolsheviks seize power, the elder Mitosa returns from exile in Siberia and becomes a leader in the revolutionary regime. As head of the Cheka, his path tragically crosses that of Irina, daughter of a leader of the counter revolution, whom Kolya loves.

Booklist 36:264 Mr 1 '40

"It is not a long novel; but that is because it carries no excess baggage, for there is a great deal here, and there is illumination. The swift scenes and pithy discussions among the characters, rendered in admirable lean prose, along with the love story and its background, make this an exciting, very moving tale, as well as a serious and thoughtful novel." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p3 F 4 '40 600w

Reviewed by T. L. Cohn

Canadian Forum 20:61 My '40 190w

"Mr. Hindus writes with the strength and sincerity of one who is very earnestly 'on the side of the angels' but has the wisdom and the artistic integrity to present his case without exaggeration or any forcing of the issue. We cannot doubt that there were many who suffered more terribly even than Kolya in those horrible years. I cannot recommend it as an enheartening novel, but I admire its virtues." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 5 '40 300w

"Though it all proves little more than that class war plays hell with love and family relationships, and that all sides have their points, it does so entertainingly, sometimes excitingly, and with what the dust jacket, right for once, calls 'pace.'" Carlton Brown

New Repub 102:481 Ap 8 '40 220w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 19:470 Ap 6 '40 650w

"In a novel of this kind there is perhaps too little opportunity to develop characterization; rather are the characters swept along in the maelstrom of world-shaking events over which they have no control. On one side you have pathos and pity and tenderness; on the other ruthless power and force intent at all cost to gain their own ends. The conflict is an unequal one, as Mr. Hindus shows, with a simple honesty and eloquence all his own. His story is well conceived, the writing direct; there is but little attempt at nuance." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p7 F 4 '40 750w

"In spite of all that Mr. Hindus, a skillful novelist who knows his subject, can do, it seems very remote and rather inconclusive."

— + New Yorker 15:70 F 3 '40 50w

"'Sons and Fathers' is neither a left nor a right wing novel and avoids the heavy-footed horrors of both these houses. It is a passionless and yet compassionate study of the phenomenon of social change, and of the stark psychology of proletarian revolt. . . It is unfortunate for the strength of the story, at least from an American viewpoint, that it is interspersed with considerable Slavic hysteria. It is also unfortunate that Kolya, in representing the intellectual, is below the average in decisive clear-headedness. Mitosa, alone, stands through the storm, 'implacably consistent.' In Mitosa Mr. Hindus has achieved a revolutionary whom anyone, even a bourgeois, can reluctantly admire." J. P. Marquand

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:6 F 3 '40 1100w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien
Spec 164:536 Ap 12 '40 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p169 Ap 6 '40 280w

HINE, MURIEL, pseud. See Coxon, M.

HINKLE, THOMAS CLARK. Dusty, the story of a wild dog. 252p $2 Morrow
(W) 40-10378

Story of the Western plains, and of a wolfhound puppy adopted and brought up by a wolf. After the death of Old Gray the puppy was discovered by a ranch boy and the two became inseparable.

"It is a wholesome [story], and unsentimental, leaving any reader better disposed toward a wild creature whether wolfhound or wolf." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ag 18 '40 340w

"Mr. Hinkle is a well-known dog authority. His dog and boy and their increasing affection for each other seem natural and logical to the reader. However, the story, stripped of its repetitious phrases, might well have been shorter. It sounds as though the author were sprawling for space."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '40 130w

"This story of the Old West, while not particularly well written, will be read and enjoyed by all who like animal stories." J. E. Stromdahl

+ — Library J 65:714 S 1 '40 90w

"A book for dog lovers from 9 years on." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p32 N 10 '40 190w

HINSHELWOOD, CYRIL NORMAN. Kinetics of chemical change. 280p $4.50 (15s) Oxford

541.3 Chemical reactions. Gases, Kinetic theory of [40-32832]

"This new volume is a logical development of the original 'Kinetics of Chemical Change in Gaseous Systems' [Book Review Digest, 1926] and two succeeding editions, but is far more than just another edition. The character of the book has changed; instead of an encyclopedia of comparatively unrelated material it has become a broad review of general principles, well organized and clearly outlined." Chem & Met Eng

Reviewed by L. S. Kassel
Am Chem Soc J 62:1886 Jl '40 650w

"The volume is addressed, not to the experts, but to anyone with the background who is interested in learning the broad aspects of this branch of natural philosophy. It is difficult to imagine a better introduction. Workers in the field of chemical kinetics already own at least one of the earlier editions. This new volume, because its broader viewpoint so organizes the field, deserves equal recognition in its own right." G. F. Kinney

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:508 Jl '40 260w

"The author is to be congratulated on a magnificent achievement. In the preface he states that it is written for anyone who cares to read it; the reviewer might add, anyone who cares to read it will read it again and again." E. K. Rideal

+ Nature 146:603 N 9 '40 700w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:45 O '40

"There is no branch of physical chemistry which is in greater need of clarification and simplification than chemical kinetics, and there is no one better qualified to undertake such a task than Professor Hinshelwood. . . The book is clearly and interestingly written and will be very valuable to anyone seeking to know more about chemical kinetics." Farrington Daniels

+ R of Scientific Instruments 2:342 O '40 500w

HINTZ, HOWARD WILLIAM. Quaker influence in American literature. 96p $1 Revell

810.9 American literature—History and criticism. Friends, Society of 40-13876

A book for the general reader dealing with the influence of Quakers and Quakerism on American literature. Contents: William Penn; Thomas Paine; John Woolman; Charles Brockden Brown; James Fenimore Cooper; Ralph Waldo Emerson; Walt Whitman; John Greenleaf Whittier; Further lines of influence.

Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 90w

"To ascribe all that is good in these writers to their Quaker inheritance, however tenuous, is to overstep the bounds of scholarly objectivity. But Dr. Hintz is speaking to the general public rather than to literary specialists, and his account will be of interest both to his co-religionists and to others."

Christian Century 57:770 Je 12 '40 90w

Nation 151:118 Ag 10 '40 30w

HISCOCK, IRA VAUGHAN, and others. Ways to community health education. 306p il map $3 Commonwealth fund [12s 6d Oxford]

614 Public health—Study and teaching 40-3042

"Meetings, newspapers, the radio, exhibits, special campaigns and educational projects—these are among the ways described for helping with whatever program of community health the public health agencies may wish to 'put over' in their locality. Emphasis is placed on co-operation with other agencies and on the general improvement in health habits and attitudes. The authors have all had firsthand experience in such work." (J Home Econ) Index.

"Throughout there is a wealth of illustration—both verbal and pictorial. It is written in a clear, forceful, and interesting style. The extensive references for further reading at the end of each chapter are particularly useful." C. E. Turner

+ Am J Pub Health 30:553 My '40 380w

J Home Econ 32:254 Ap '40 60w

HISHIDA, SEIJI GEORGE. Japan among the great powers; a survey of her international relations. 405p map $3.50 Longmans

327.52 Japan—Foreign relations. Japan—History. Eastern question (Far East) 40-4803

"A concise diplomatic history of Japan from the earliest times to the present European war. Its material is well organized and it contains within manageable compass almost all the salient facts about Japan's treaty relations with foreign powers." (Christian Science Monitor) "The present work is an attempt to bring up to date the study of The international position of Japan as a great power, which was first published in 1905, [Book Review Digest, 1906]." (p x) Index.

"Dr. Hishida has written a good survey of Japan's foreign relations. . . He has aimed to give an objective, fair, balanced history, and has been most successful in his treatment of diplomatic and legal controversies, where he has presented the views of the several governments concerned by exact quotations from official records. But he is less successful in the narrative parts of his survey. Facts are sometimes omitted which non-Japanese writers generally regard as essential for an accurate history. . . Occasionally, only the Japanese case is presented, with the result that the reader, if unacquainted with Far Eastern history, would have no adequate understanding of the situation." G. H. Blakeslee

HISHIDA, S. G.—Continued
+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:583 Je '40 490w

Reviewed by Owen Lattimore
Ann Am Acad 211:210 S '40 480w

Atlantic Ap '40 170w

Booklist 36:328 Ap 15 '40

"Dr. Hishida's justification of Japanese expansion as 'self-defense,' ably presented as it is, will be convincing to few Western readers. At the same time one can admire the author and his book. Dr. Hishida is at home in diplomacy, has a deep knowledge of Oriental history, and is personally acquainted with persons and events of the past 35 years. Read as diplomatic history 'Japan Among the Great Powers' is engrossing; it might well become a text book, and certainly should be compulsory reading for American statesmen." P. J. Searles
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ja 27 '40 500w

"It may well become a standard reference work in its field." W. H. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 F 17 '40 550w

Living Age 358:195 Ap '40 240w

"The book is couched in suave, mild and temperate language. But if scholarship consists in telling the entire truth, examining all sides of a controversial question, concealing no relevant evidence, and basing conclusions on all the known facts, then the work of Dr. Hishida has small claim to scholarship in spite of Judge Moore's imprimatur. Indeed, the book is propaganda. It is high class propaganda, but nevertheless propaganda. While the author is admirably temperate in language and does not fail on two or three occasions to mildly censor his own Government, he misses no opportunity to belittle and defame China and its rulers, to exonerate Imperial Japan and to prove that the pattern of Japanese imperialism is superior to that of the Western world." Kenneth Colegrove
— + Pacific Affairs 13:471 D '40 1700w

"Dr. Hishida has a scholarly mind, and it is to be regretted that he attempted to deal with the controversial issues of the last few years if, as he himself admits, important materials bearing thereon were not available to him."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p467 S 14 '40 480w

Reviewed by A. N. Holcombe
Yale R n s 29:640 spring '40 650w

HITCHCOCK, EDWARD BERING. I built a temple for peace; the life of Eduard Beneš; with an introd. by Jan Masaryk. 364p $3.50 Harper

B or 92 Beneš, Edvard. Czechoslovakia—Politics and government (W) 40-27603

"An attempt to set forth the essential personal facts about this great man's life, as they have developed up to the present time, rather than to make a political or scientific study of his career." (Author's preface) The author, who is a personal friend, was formerly foreign correspondent for the Chicago Daily News, and head of the European bureau of the Christian Science Monitor. Index.

Booklist 37:11 S '40

Reviewed by M. W. Fodor
Books p4 Ag 25 '40 1050w

"Here is an outline of the life of a great man, too decent for his day. Mr. Hitchcock tells the story as he heard it from Benes's own lips—and that, unfortunately, means prosaically. Yet it has in it the stuff of poetry." Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p11 Ag 21 '40 130w

Reviewed by R. H. Phelps
Boston Transcript p1 S 14 '40 550w

"As Mr. Hitchcock narrates the events in his rapid, exuberant style, one begins to get a new light on the gallant little President and on the Czech people who prefer to have no heroics attached to their cause, and who see in the unremitting toil and tenacity of their leader the true symbolism of their own national purpose." H. J. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 27 '40 700w

Reviewed by G. N. Schuster
Commonweal 33:105 N 15 '40 150w

"Most books about the European scene written before the collapse of France are, to say the least, out of date. But there are a few which have survived the cruel test of reality, and 'I Built a Temple for Peace,' the first complete biography of Eduard Benes, head of the Czechoslovak government in exile, is one of them. Though it was finished before the German armies invaded the Low Countries, not one word is made senseless by the present war situation. For this achievement alone, which is obviously not accidental, it would deserve wide attention." Franz Hoellering
+ Nation 151:224 S 14 '40 600w

Reviewed by Shepard Stone
N Y Times p20 N 24 '40 1000w

New Yorker 16:72 S 7 '40 30w

"This authorized biography makes too little of Dr. Beneš's contributions in this [League of Nations] sphere, perhaps because the routine activities of a parliamentary body, however vital, are rarely spectacular. It does call attention, however, to the unusual gift that Dr. Beneš brought to Prague and Geneva. . . As a personal friend and journalist, Mr. Hitchcock is well qualified to portray a statesman who is, rara avis, rather shy, aloof, intellectual, and always restrained in action and speech." J. F. Green
+ Sat R of Lit 22:6 Ag 24 '40 600w

Wis Lib Bul 36:137 O '40

HITCHCOCK, HENRY RUSSELL. Rhode Island architecture. 69p il 81pl $3; pa $2 Museum press, R.I. school of design, Providence, R.I.

720.9745 Architecture—Rhode Island. Rhode Island—Historic houses, etc. 39-21233

"The treatment is chronological by six stages from 'The Earliest Buildings, 1640-1690,' to 'Twentieth Century Architecture, 1900-1939,' and forms a study of American building styles in general. Drawings and plans in the body of the text supplement the photographic plates." Special Libraries

---

"The author's logic properly admits the architectural claims of the factories in whose realism he detects merits and significances which invite a more general acknowledgement. Of the works elected as significant one seldom questions his critical estimates. The illustrations are excellent and admirably arranged for instant co-ordination with the reading, a too rare politeness." C. D. Maginnis
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 19 '39 420w

Reviewed by J. B. Wheelwright
New Eng Q 13:138 Mr '40 600w

Special Libraries 31:338 S '40

HOARE, DOROTHY MACKENZIE. Some studies in the modern novel. 154p $2 Prospect press, inc, Litchfield, Conn. [5s Chatto]

823.09 English fiction—History and criticism [39-12844]

"Sensitive, interpretive essays on the works of Henry James, Virginia Woolf, E. M. Forster, Katherine Mansfield, D. H. Lawrence, Hardy, Conrad, Moore, and Joyce. Originally delivered as lectures at Cambridge university." Booklist

---

Booklist 37:171 Ja 1 '41

"Throughout these studies Miss Hoare exemplifies certain qualities as a critic which are too often absent from critical and interpretative thinking and writing, especially, I think, among our own scholars and critics. She is never in a hurry; she never exploits herself; she is always good humored and measured, especially in dealing with judgments of others with which she obviously does not agree; she is objective throughout every page. She seems, in fact, to be thinking aloud and more for her own satisfaction than for the agreement or disagreement of her readers. One feels sure that she knows what she is talking about, but that she is making no effort to convince one of that fact. And as usually happens under such rare and pleasant circumstances, one is convinced." M. E. Chase

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 4 '41 1250w

"This kind of book is rather difficult to review. Owing to its being a 'slim volume of essays' it is likely to get overlooked; so I should say at once that it is extraordinarily good. Miss Hoare wastes no time in vague praise or blame: these are lectures, and in each of them she goes straight to her point, which is the distinctive quality of the novelist under consideration, his gift to the genre." Edward Sackville West

+ Spec 161:1133 D 30 '38 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p12 Ja 7 '39 750w

HOBART, MRS ALICE TISDALE (NOURSE). Their own country. 405p $2.50 Bobbs

(W) 40-27270

Continues the story of Hester and Stephen Chase, begun in Oil for the Lamps of China (Book Review Digest, 1933). The oil business having failed in China, Stephen returned to America, where Hester had preceded him in order to have her baby in safety. In New York the depression overtakes them. Kansas, where Stephen becomes manager of an industrial alcohol plant, is the scene of most of the novel.

Booklist 36:306 Ap 1 '40

"While Stephen and Hester make the hub of the pattern of this book, its spokes go out to a circle which embraces the lives of many people. Some of the minor characters are excellent, as real as Stephen and Hester. . . Some of the others fail to attain three dimensions. Similarly, while the story of Stephen and Hester is moving and real, Mrs Hobart occasionally slips in her treatment of the others. The melodramatic and tragic note at the end of the book seems a little out of focus both with respect to plot and the men involved. But these minor flaws do not impinge on the truths and the problems Mrs. Hobart presents so soundly and so vividly. 'Their Own Country' will make an impression on any person concerned with the question 'What price security?' especially after forty." Rose Feld

+ — Books p2 Mr 24 '40 850w

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 4 '40 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '40

"A fine story, with real people in a real world." L. M. Kinloch

+ Library J 65:257 Mr 15 '40 130w

Nation 150:521 Ap 20 '40 110w

New Repub 102:482 Ap 8 '40 50w

"It should be said, in fairness to Mrs. Hobart, that the present novel is a good story in its own right and can be read with profit and enjoyment by those unacquainted with 'Oil for the Lamps of China.' But taken together, as they will be, for it is hard to imagine that anybody will have read one without straightway reading the other, they form a big novel and an important one. How important—this is about the most earnest compliment one can pay the story of Stephen Chase—it is still much too soon to guess." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 31 '40 900w

"A fine, intelligent book."

+ New Yorker 16:75 Mr 30 '40 100w

"Mrs. Hobart has organized her novel competently and peopled it with characters that are, in the majority, acceptable and satisfactory. Some readers, not unfamiliar with profit-and-loss sheets, may wonder how Stephen, working on so small a scale with an overhead that was obviously considerable, ever expected to make his fuel a paying proposition. . . But Mrs. Hobart writes of American business life informedly and without exaggeration, painting the jungle not entirely black but with moral shadings of gray and even lighter tints. Her feeling for her scene is warm and intimate, and her frequent Chinese-American parallels are interesting. She has skilfully balanced her domestic and business stories." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 21:14 Ap 20 '40 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p469 S 14 '40 240w

HOBBS, CLARENCE WHITMAN. Workmen's compensation insurance; including employers' liability insurance. 2d ed 707p il $5 McGraw

331.825 Insurance, Employers' liability

39-29494

"This book was originally intended as a revision of a book bearing the same title by G. F. Michelbacher and Thomas M. Nial [Book Review Digest, 1925]. . . In the work of revision it was found that considerable portions of the text had since been covered more elaborately by other texts and could with advantage be condensed. Other portions had to be greatly expanded or rewritten, and very substantial additions had to be made to keep pace with the development of the subject during the past fourteen years. In order to avoid a patchwork product and to secure a reasonable unity of style, it ultimately proved necessary to rewrite the whole from the beginning. Something of the general design was preserved, and in the early chapters considerable segments were retained with but little change. But the work as a whole differed so widely from the original that it seemed inappropriate to style it a revision. The original authors agreed that it might be produced under the name of a new author." (Foreword) Indexes.

Reviewed by H. M. Teaf, Jr.

Am Econ R 30:440 Je '40 250w

Reviewed by Alfred Manes

Ann Am Acad 209:223 My '40 380w

Booklist 36:200 Ja 15 '40

HOCKETT, HOMER CAREY. The constitutional history of the United States, 1826-1876; a more perfect union. 405p $3 Macmillan

342.73 U.S.—Constitutional history

(39-14964)

The second volume in this projected three-volume survey of American constitutional history deals with the fifty years from 1826 to 1876, during which period the slavery controversy was the main subject of interest in the United States. For first volume in the series see Book Review Digest, 1939. Bibliography. Index.

"In point of view the work is conventional. Most of the older authorities are followed uncritically. . . These criticisms are much less applicable to the chapters in which the constitutional issues of the slavery controversy and the Civil War are considered. The discussion of these problems follows, to be sure, the conventional pattern, but it is comprehensive, and it is based upon careful study of the great mass of research devoted to these subjects." B. F. Wright

— + Am Hist R 46:431 Ja '41 480w

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 130w

"This volume has, on the whole, the same merits and the same inadequacies that were to be discovered in the previous volume. It has

HOCKETT, H. C.—Continued
the merits of clarity, simplicity, accuracy and impartiality. Its defects are a certain superficiality of treatment, an unwillingness to analyze and interpret, orthodoxy and conventionality. McLaughlin's interpretation of the same period is more thoughtful, Boudin's more provocative, while a host of recent monographs and law review articles challenge Hockett's interpretation of facts and present fresh points of view." H. S. Commager

+ — N Y Times p17 Ja 12 '41 1150w

"This volume continues the high standards of scholarship and clarity which distinguished the first." C. H. Coleman

+ Social Educ 4:291 Ap '40 460w

"The book fills the need of those who wish in brief compass a constitutional history of the United States, incorporating the research of many scholars and written with a clarity and depth of perception not often found in books of this nature." J. C. Miller

+ Social Studies 31:185 Ap '40 360w

HOCKING, ANNE (MRS M. N. A. MESSER). Deadly is the evil tongue. 277p $2 Doubleday 40-6341

Detective story.

Booklist 36:384 Je 1 '40

"This should go on your shopping list, under the heading of novelties. It's one of those tales where you have a fair notion who did it, and you hope the detective can't prove anything—a perfectly good kind of suspense for a change. Indeed, if you accused the author of selling you a transparent murderer, she would have an excellent out—that's the intention, though you can't be absolutely sure." Will Cuppy

+ Books p19 Ap 14 '40 220w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '40 60w

"The chief charm of the book, aside from and even surpassing the mystery, is that it introduces us to Mrs. Fitzgerald, one of the most delightful old ladies it has ever been our good fortune to meet." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 14 '40 220w

"Not mysterious, but should please feminine readers."

+ New Yorker 16:100 Ap 13 '40 50w

"Adroitly presented puzzle for which reader may write own answer. Excellently written, with much agile sparring by sleuth and octogenarian. Cerebral."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ap 13 '40 40w

HOCKING, WILLIAM ERNEST. Living religions and a world faith. 293p $2.50 Macmillan [10s Allen, G]

290 Religions (proposed, universal, etc). Religion. Christianity and other religions 40-30439

"Dr. Hocking defines and evaluates religious experience, surveys briefly the essences of the world's great religions, and examines approaches to a world faith. His central theme is that religion is 'man's hold on what is eternal and true for all men, and therefore his deepest bond with his neighbor.' " Library J

Booklist 37:83 N 1 '40

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
Books p37 N 10 '40 600w

"There is nothing in print to my knowledge than can compare with this study, which is written with wonderful economy and is fairly to be called only an outline; yet the substance is concentrated, withal so readable and concrete that any intelligent layman will get a great lift of assurance from it." A. C. Dieffenbach

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 17 '40 1700w

"For all missionaries, missionary administrators, teachers of missions and history of religion, this is clearly a 'must' book. Every thoughtful Christian interested in the missionary enterprise will find it stimulating reading. Indeed anyone—religionist, sociologist, philosopher or anthropologist—will find in Dr. Hocking's lectures remarkably suggestive material for his special field of interest." C. S. Braden

+ Christian Century 57:1382 N 6 '40 1750w

Reviewed by A. L. Murray
Churchman 154:23 S 15 '40 210w

Reviewed by Gordon Poteat
Crozer Q 17:311 O '40 480w

"The present reviewer does not grow enthusiastic over many books, but he is enthusiastic over this one, although not in complete agreement with the author's basic philosophy. Hocking brings to his task long familiarity with the metaphysical issues involved (the one and the many), personal contacts with both the literature and the leaders of other religions, and a rich and precious religious experience of his own. One sentence alone is worth the price of the book: 'The joy of refutation is a poor and cheap-bought joy in comparison with the joy of lifting a struggling thought [and one might also add religion] to a new level of self-understanding.' This is the way of reconception." A. G. Baker

+ J Religion 21:80 Ja '41 600w

Reviewed by A. H. Campbell
Library J 65:651 Ag '40 160w

"Suggestive and provocative book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p372 Ag 3 '40 750w

HODGES, MRS BARBARA K. (WEBBER) (ELIZABETH CAMBRIDGE, pseud). Mrs Dufresne [Eng title: Portrait of Angela]. 294p $2.50 Putnam [7s 6d Cape, J]
(W) 40-27083

"Angela went out from England to the British West Indian island of Saintes Maries when she was sixteen. For a time she was companion and governess to her cousin's children, David and Kenneth. Her passionately protective feeling for David became the motive force of her entire life. Later she married the French Catholic, Paul Dufresne, against the approval of his family and her own. Her brief marriage was happy, and she was left with two children of her own and a complicated estate to manage. It is in order to vindicate David's position in the family history that she searches her memories." Boston Transcript

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p8 Ja 28 '40 500w

"Graceful story of sentiment and exotic scene."

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 13 '40 230w

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd
Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 9 '40 190w

"The story is delightfully told, and the portrait of Angela, who writes it in the first person, is most convincingly drawn. Equally charming are the direct, unforced descriptions of the island, of the life on a fruit estate, and of the many characters involved, all of whom we see through Angela's eyes, occasionally, as we realise, overinfluenced by her personal prejudices. But I found the latter half of the book lacking in invention." J. D. Beresford

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 N 24 '39 300w

"To those who have lived or even visited in the West Indies the picture of Saintes Maries, with its lush vegetation, its great old houses, its blue encircling waters and its teeming life will bring a throb of homesickness. Angela's love for her adopted home is the motive power of a mellow story whose weakest point is in the character evidently most loved by the author, David. He does not quite come clear." Charlotte Dean

+ — N Y Times p23 Ja 28 '40 350w

"The separate incidents of the story are contrived with a practised touch and are seldom without point; all gain from the human sympathy that Miss Cambridge commands and from the air of tranquil and reflective melancholy that pervades Angela's recital of the past. But the story as a whole tends to be shapeless, mainly because the figure of David is enveloped in suggestions of romantic tragedy which are in fact without narrative substance."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p683 N 25 '39 450w

HODGSON, MRS VIOLET (HOFFMAN). Supervision in public health nursing. 376p $2.50 Commonwealth fund [10s 6d Oxford]

610.73 Nurses and nursing, Public health 39-33395

This book describes the principles and practice of supervision in public health nursing. The author is supervisor of outpatient tuberculosis nursing, New York state department of health. Bibliography. Index.

"Written by a public health nurse eminently fitted by the variety and type of her experience to be a real authority, this is one of the most significant books on public health nursing in several years." E. F. MacDougall

+ Am J Pub Health 30:557 My '40 340w

Reviewed by H. W. Gould

Survey 76:215 Je '40 260w

HOELLERING, FRANZ. The defenders; tr. from the German by Ludwig Lewisohn. 484p $2.75 Little

(W) 40-11889

Vienna on the eve of the Anschluss is the scene. The novel portrays the effects of the unrest on all classes of Austrians—the aristocracy, the intellectuals, socialists, and workers as the all-engulfing Nazi machine moves forward. The figure about whom the characters all revolve is the lovely young Maria Steiger, daughter of a famous professor; for Maria is loved by the aristocratic Baron Wiesner, and by Karl Merk, the young socialist, who is lost in the struggle for a free Austria.

"It is almost impossible not to describe this novel in blurb-like phrases of a Balzac completeness or an enormous canvas, for it is a novel on a gigantic scale. Austria before the Anschluss, with its diverse and contradictory forces, the Heimwehr, the Nazis, the bewildered government, the socialist workers, the hopeless apostles of the status quo—all these are sharply drawn in terms of individuals. Thus a book which is primarily a social document justifies itself as a novel. For the individuals are real and convincing."

+ Atlantic O '40 230w

Booklist 37:12 S '40

Bookmark 2:13 Ja '41

"It is not a personal story in fiction form, not even a political novel primarily, never argumentative or explanatory. It is a novel of representation, attempting to portray a whole society in all its social stratifications, something after the manner of Balzac. . . The broad canvas is not chaotic, not cluttered. The portrayal lacks passion and profound emotional power, for the historic situation is one of frustration, hopelessness and defeat. But it is expertly wrought by a gifted hand. The reader is deeply moved. But above all he is wholly convinced. For the novel impresses one as being intensely real; and therefore it is revealing, revealing in its complexity in a way that no mere historical or personal narrative could be." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p4 Ag 25 '40 1200w

"When you have turned the last page of this long novel, you breathe deeply, feel that you have lived more fully, and begin to argue with yourself—all signs that 'The Defenders' is a good novel." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p11 Ag 23 '40 550w

Reviewed by B. E. Nelson

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 24 '40 850w

"Mr. Hoellering's portrayal of the 'un-coordinated tower of Babel' that was Austria in 1934 lacks the depth and power which can be endowed on tragedy by literary artistry. Nevertheless, 'The Defenders' is a significant commentary on the interplay of the forces at work in the world today."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 S 14 '40 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '40

"Franz Hoellering, who knows what it is to flee with the breath of Nazism hot on his neck, has caught the feeling of 1934 with all of its foreboding, and in so doing he has written a novel that is history with a difference. Most novels of pregnant historical events have a chilly spectatorial quality. . . But 'The Defenders' is warm with a sense of participation. . . The novel is history in the three dimensions of space and the one dimension of time; it lives, it moves. In another setting the heroics of Karl Merk and his mother, and of Maria Steiger would seem like hokum; here, in the charged atmosphere which Hoellering creates, the heroism seems plausible and right. I judge that this is Hoellering's first novel; but the work is finished and mature. He knows how to put you under a spell, which is the final test of any creative artist." John Chamberlain

+ Nation 151:156 Ag 24 '40 1150w

"Such a book is, of course, in itself an affirmation of faith, and it is a victory of the spirit to have written it in our time and during years of exile. Mr. Hoellering is among those rare writers of the Left who have not allowed themselves to be blitzkrieged by what they read in the papers. . . If the Defenders, defeated in Vienna, still fight on in this remarkable novel, the values of civilization they defended have perhaps been better expressed by the temper of the novel itself than would have been possible for any of the members of the various implicated groups, with their special emotions and interests, to have expressed them. In a period that rocks like a ship in a gale, a period of seasickness and panic, such work is a steadying contribution to the creative critical consciousness of our world." Edmund Wilson

+ New Repub 103:283 Ag 26 '40 1900w

"This first novel to be published in English by the Austrian writer Franz Hoellering deserves to have a wide reading in our country. Not only is it excellent entertainment, but it deals with a state of mind even more prevalent among us than among the author's former compatriots, that of persons who think they can escape the problems and agonies of contemporary life in the pursuit and enjoyment of private happiness." A. E. Meyer

+ N Y Times p6 S 1 '40 1150w

"'The Defenders' is written on a level of dignity and understanding, but it is not written on a level of universality. It is and remains a novel of Vienna in 1934. That it is a fine novel of Vienna in 1934 is sufficient, and sufficient to induce us to read it." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:63 Ag 24 '40 1250w

"With a novel of this kind, so timed, the reader collaborates so willingly and so emotionally that detached literary evaluation is nearly impossible. But I have little doubt that 'The Defenders,' qua novel, is of sound quality and not merely timely. My judgment places it between Hans Habe's 'Sixteen Days' and Ernst Glaeser's 'The Last Civilian.'" B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 22:6 S 7 '40 650w

"The style of the book loses nothing from the fact that English is not the author's native tongue, for he is long since the master of the language. The book's message is worth consideration. Its characters, even in their most futile moments, possess the life and humanity that compel sympathy and interest."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 2 '41 270w

HOELLERING (hûl'ĕr-ing)

HOFF, SYDNEY. Muscles and Brains; il. by [the author]. [64p] $1 Dial press 40-32143

"It seems there were two little boys (there still are, this being the moment in which we now live) whose names were Muscles and Brains. They disliked each other with the violence of little boys who dislike each other; each thought the other respectively a sissy and a dumb ox. In absurd but enlightening full-page cartoons, they match feats along their own lines." Books

"This is frankly one of the Moral Tales: so are Aesop's, but this is funnier." M. L. Becker
Books p32 N 10 '40 120w

Boston Transcript p1 S 21 '40 20w

HOFFMAN, ROSS JOHN SWARTZ. The organic state; an historical view of contemporary politics. 116p $1.50 Sheed
320.1 State, The. Political science 40-3900

"This book, a diagnosis of political trends, draws attention to their origin and their probable consequences. . . The present revolution, he believes, will issue in the creation of a new state which he is convinced will be essentially monarchical. Dr. Hoffman urges us not to be led by similarities of minor importance to regard all authoritarian states as practically identical, and he insists upon the distinction between the ideology of Bolshevism and National Socialism on the one hand and of Italian Fascism on the other." Cath World

Cath World 151:762 S '40 260w

"Despite the fact that we have in this book as intelligent a defense of fascism (the organic state) on the Italian model as one can find anywhere, yet it is not attractive." J. G. Kerwin
Commonweal 31:536 Ap 12 '40 360w

HOFFMAN, RUTH, and HOFFMAN, HELEN. Our Arabian nights; with il. by the authors. 307p $2.75 Carrick
915.67 Iraq—Social life and customs. Baghdad (W) 40-27219

The American twin sisters, authors of We Married an Englishman (Book Review Digest, 1938), have written another travel record, this time about their adventures in furnishing a house at Bagdad, their numerous pets, and their sojourn in the tent home of Sheikh Fulan of Iraq.

Booklist 36:280 Mr 15 '40

"'Our Arabian Nights' is illustrated with gay, impudent little drawings. . . There is much keen observation here and delighted noting of oddities of life in a very strange world. Best of all is the blithe progress of the authors from adventure to adventure; they have as much curiosity as their peacock, and lots more fun." Lorine Pruette
+ Books p2 Mr 10 '40 600w

"'Our Arabian Nights' is written for the reader who has no objection to a combination of travel trivia and personal reminiscences. He may find it amusing to take along on a train trip, or glance through while waiting for dinner." Jean Arrowsmith
Boston Transcript p3 Ap 6 '40 240w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 6 '40 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '40

"Marriage to an Englishman seems to have dulled the edge of the Hoffman twins. . . Furnishing a house in Bagdad was more exciting to them than it now seems to the reader. And the ladies of the harem, when one gets there, seem hardly worth the trip."
— New Repub 102:353 Mr 11 '40 70w

"The same people who chuckled happily over 'We Married an Englishman' are going to have a delightful time with 'Our Arabian Nights.' Not all of either book is festive, to be sure; in each there is some excitement that is pretty grim; but the Hoffmans are young women of gay spirit, who can even serve information with a spice of fun. If you want to know the inner realities of Bedouin harem life, for instance, here it is. The Hoffmans can tell you about it. They were there." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p2 Mr 10 '40 1300w

New Yorker 16:91 Mr 9 '40 40w

"It is not for the physical excitements that the book is most appealing. It is for the exotic details of housekeeping, of shopping in Baghdad, of social relations in a small English community where to live on the wrong side of the Tigris is a national affront. The Hoffman twins can weigh character as nicely as they can design an iron chair or weave a rug . . . and they have an ear—four ears acutely sensitive—for the dialogue of both Europeans and natives." H. D.
+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 Mr 23 '40 250w

Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 12 '40 450w

Wis Lib Bul 36:66 Ap '40

HOFFMANN, ELEANOR. A cat of Paris; il. by Zhenya Gay. 145p $1.75 Stokes 40-14676

Thom, a mischievous Siamese kitten, is purchased in the Paris Bird Market by an American artist as a present for his small daughter. Thom's adventures, when he escapes into the streets of Paris, are extremely upsetting, but he is rescued in time and returned to his anxious little mistress.

Booklist 37:18 S '40

"Following Thom through these scenes and seeing them through his eyes, an artist's Paris comes to life for children—the city of hard-working, sober, happy artists such as one does not see on sightseeing tours." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 S 8 '40 350w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 27 '41 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:439 N '40 90w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Horn Bk M 17:61 Ja '41 60w

"Told with humor, freshness, and a genuine Parisian flavor. The introduction of French words and phrases will hinder use by some children and add to the enjoyment of others. For children of nine to eleven." E. D. Briggs
+ Library J 65:661 Ag '40 100w

"The people and the setting are so truly Paris that it is a surprise to look up from the book and find that one's window does not look out on a little street on the Left Bank." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 65:852 O 15 '40 50w

"Because she loves cats and thoroughly understands them (admirers of the Siamese variety will recognize the special characteristics of their favorites), and possessed of a lively sense of humor, Eleanor Hoffmann succeeds, without effort or affectation, in making us see people and events through the eyes of this absurd, lovable Siamese kitten. . . Zhenya Gay, another cat lover, has made lively, typical drawings." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 S 15 '40 490w

HOGAN, INEZ. Nicodemus and the newborn baby [il. by the author]. [53p] $1 Dutton 40-3667

The small colored boy, Nicodemus, returns from a visit to his grandfather and discovers that he has a new baby brother. His inquiries about the baby's birth are answered matter-of-factly. The story goes on to tell how Nicodemus trained the houn' dog to take care of the baby.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 F 11 '40 90w

"Not so humorous, perhaps, but just as good as the other books in this fine series about colored children." K. S. W.

+ New Yorker 16:96 My 18 '40 30w

"The explanation of the new arrival is simple, and probably would be accepted by younger readers, though a parent would be confronted with questions by the six or eight-year old. Miss Hogan's drawings are delightful and carry out the story of Nicodemus's adventures with his 'new brudder.' "

Springf'd Republican p7e F 18 '40 40w

HOGAN, INEZ. Twin seals [il. by the author]. unp $1 Dutton

40-12856

Picture-story book for very young readers about the adventures of twin baby seals, adopted by a little Eskimo boy.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 Jl 28 '40 250w

"If to adult eyes the story seems thinner and less eventful than its predecessors and the drawing less true in line, the enthusiastic verdict of one small but experienced listener testifies to its genuine interest and appeal for the young." E. L. Buell

N Y Times p9 Ag 11 '40 240w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 90w

Wis Lib Bul 36:170 D '40

HOGARTH, EMMETT, pseud. of MITCHELL A. WILSON and ABRAHAM POLONSKY. The goose is cooked. 277p $2 Simon & Schuster

40-31524

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p15 S 15 '40 150w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 S 28 '40 100w

"We like Marty Cohen enormously. And Peter Whitman, who is Watson to Marty's Sherlock when Seward Salem is murdered, is much less stupid than Watsons usually are. It's a clever, hard, swift-shooting tale, with a sharp zest of its own." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p19 S 15 '40 240w

Sat R of Lit 23:17 N 9 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 26 '41 250w

Time 36:88 O 7 '40 50w

HOGBEN, LANCELOT THOMAS. Author in transit. 278p map $2.50 Norton

910.4 Voyages and travels. Scandinavia—Social conditions. Russia—Social conditions. Japan—Social conditions. U.S.—Social conditions (W) 40-27757

The author and his twenty-one-year old daughter were caught in Oslo when the Germans took over in April, 1940. The only way to get back to England seemed to be along the 20,000 mile detour, across Sweden, Russia, Siberia, Japan, and the United States. This is his penetrating study of that trip, with his deductions upon the conditions of the countries he traveled thru and the people who inhabited them.

Booklist 37:135 D 1 '40

"Judgments based on train-window observations must, of course, be provisional and incomplete, even when the observer is as sharp of eye and nimble of mind as the author of 'Mathematics for the Millions.' Mr. Hogben acknowledges this in an urbanely deprecatory preface that disarms criticism in advance. Readers of his travel diary of a biologist may quarrel with him occasionally; they will never doze over him. He has written another wise, witty and provocative book." Ted Olson

+ — Books p7 O 27 '40 800w

"The story is delightfully entertaining. . . All Professor Hogben's observations are interesting. Some of them are undoubtedly accurate. As to which are, and which are not, that is up to the reader to decide for himself." H. J. S.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 D 21 '40 600w

"I know persons who had lived ten years in both the Soviet Union and the Land of the Rising Sun, and yet modestly hesitated to write down their impressions 'after such incomplete experience.' Lancelot Hogben, 45 years old, is not so scrupulous. So his judgments are quick, final and imperturbable. He is for nature, hygiene and practical efficiency and against 'day dreaming', including Oriental contemplation and the Christian religion. Yet his book is worth reading." C. O. Cleveland

+ — Commonweal 33:130 N 22 '40 360w

"This is not a joke book. It is a super-readable job of comment and observation, flexible as an old shoe, and frequently as informal. Hogben has written a short book which does for politics and nations what his Mathematics for the Millions did for calculation and computation. So doing, he reveals himself as never before as the heir presumptive to Bernard Shaw. . . In highlighting the readability of this book I should not like to undervalue its importance as a commentary on nations and politics in 1940. Between the covers of the book there is an ample account of analysis on many of the issues of the day." Norman Cousins

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:6 N 7 '40 850w

"This book is interesting mostly as a kind of documentary film produced in the brains of a highly receptive observer. It claims no place among the immortals but it is better than a travel book. Only occasionally does Professor Hogben fall into the habit of trying to obscure a thought which he could also state clearly. Evidently he was thinking of the readers who do not believe that clarity may be part of profundity." Emil Lengyel

Living Age 359:493 Ja '41 600w

Nation 151:457 N 9 '40 70w

"Aside from being a timely first-hand report on the countries visited en route, Mr. Hogben's entertaining travelogue is full of equable wit and well-informed comment."

+ New Yorker 16:87 N 2 '40 60w

"In spite of the superficial nature of Mr. Hogben's observations, and of his comments on them, there is much in this book which suggests that if he sat down and worked over his negatives he could greatly improve the prints in the album. There are some interesting and penetrating comments on language, and some evidence of sanity and clarity of thought particularly in his comments on communist ideology." Raymond Holden

— + Sat R of Lit 23:16 N 9 '40 450w

"The phrase 'informal as a letter home' may well be used to describe the style of 'Author in Transit.' Concerning all there was to see, Mr. Hogben displayed a lively interest. The fact that he was a witness to some of the most fascinating scenes in the current conflict gives added importance to his volume."

Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 2 '41 600w

HOGBEN, LANCELOT THOMAS. Dangerous thoughts. 283p $2.75 Norton [8s 6d Allen, G]

304 Social problems (W) 40-27220

"This book consists of a series of essays and addresses, most of which were composed for special occasions. They deal with a considerable variety of subjects ranging from John Wilkes, Parliamentarian and Pioneer of Scientific Humanism, to Havelock Ellis, and from Race and Prejudice to Marxism and the Middle Classes. All are united by the single thread of Professor Hogben's preoccupation with the problem, how can society be so organised that the vast increase of potential benefit accruing from the advance of science may be made available for the amelioration of human life? His answer is, by a combination of socialism

HOGBEN, L. T.—Continued
and what he calls 'scientific humanism.' How is this combination to be effected? In the last resort by a complete remodelling of our educational system." Spec

---

"A brilliant essayist, a trained natural scientist, a teacher of amazing pedagogical prowess, with broad social consciousness, and sensitive to the social functions and obligations of science and education, Hogben represents in many respects the modern ideal intellectual." Harry Alpert

+ Am Soc R 5:810 O '40 360w

"The author's discourse is semipopular, superficial, and replete with the taking cleverness of juvenile dogmatism. Why he should regard his thoughts as dangerous is not clear, for to most of us they must seem familiar and domestic creatures; we have often seen their like. For example, when all comes to all, scientific humanism's practical proposals for saving society turn out to be nothing but our harmless old friend Technocracy togged out in a white tie and tails."

— Atlantic Je '40 110w

Booklist 36:279 Mr 15 '40

"The iconoclastic freshness of attack, the erudition, the acidulous shrewdness of comment and the fundamental conviction that knowledge is a social product justified by its social usefulness all are here, salted—but I think not too heavily—by the conventional brand of wit which seems to be one of the more standardized products of a British university education. I doubt that these qualities will make the present book a best seller; but they do make it a pertinent as well as a pert tract for the times, irritating and cocksure, but with a good deal in it for those struggling to find a civilized path through the jungle of Fascism, Communism and general overcentralization which appear to lie before us." Walter Millis

+ — Books p1 F 25 '40 1700w

"Professor Hogben is a robust man who despises the refinement that has sapped the vitality of English academic culture. He overflows with high spirits, and every essay in this volume is a delight to read." F. H. U.

+ Canadian Forum 20:24 Ap '40 250w

"The author takes his cheerful way through fields in which he is something less than an expert, challenging many a conventional idea, cracking many a respectable head, and at the same time giving to the experts and the laity alike the inestimable boon of fresh and uncanonical views on many important topics. He may be an enfant terrible, but he is also a brilliant thinker and he knows how to keep his audience awake. Perhaps he is a little too conscious of his courageous nonconformity. Many of his thoughts are daring and some of them may be dangerous, but they are an antidote for intellectual stagnation, which is a disease far more dangerous than any of his thoughts." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 57:545 Ap 24 '40 650w

"This collection of essays . . . is not for the Million, because much of it is difficult reading. The tremendous weight of knowledge that it carries is apt, on impact, to make the head of the average reader spin; while the boom of the Professor's big guns—accompanied, it may be admitted by many flashes of wit—frequently leaves one dazed for a moment. . . [The author] has very good plans for reconstruction; he may annoy some, and shock others, but he certainly makes his readers think, and should bring the fair-minded to shake hands with him on a good many issues." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 3 '40 340w

Reviewed by C. D. Burns

Ethics 50:348 Ap '40 700w

"Perhaps some of the castigation he meets out to the English eugenists and 'educated classes' may be justified. But I can't help feeling that Mr. Hogben has a tendency to attack straw men. On the other hand he envisions Britain's real problems with insight and clarity. It is when dealing with the basic needs of humanity that Mr. Hogben speaks with serenity and authority. But when he attempts humor he lets me down." L. B. Bloch

+ — Living Age 358:189 Ap '40 400w

"Professor Hogben's new book contains all the virtue of his famous books, and is even easier to read." J. G. Crowther

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 5 '40 260w

"Professor Hogben . . . shows that the specialist without humility had better stick to the job where his arrogance is condoned in return for the perfection of his results. I hasten to add that three of the fifteen essays in this book, those, namely, dealing with John Wilkins, Sir William Petty (in part), and Scottish science in the late eighteenth century, seem to be excellent studies of important though little-known matters. It is when Professor Hogben talks about Hegel and Darwin, political economy, history, psychoanalysis, religion, and the humanities generally that he becomes the Dogberry of scientific humanism." Jacques Barzun

— + Nation 150:482 Ap 13 '40 1000w

Reviewed by Newton Arvin

New Repub 102:734 My 27 '40 550w

"Unlike Mathematics for the Million, which so many of us bought and so few, who were not mathematicians, finished reading, these essays are easily intelligible to the non-scientist and teach him a great deal more about mathematical and scientific method than Professor Hogben's more ambitious best-sellers." R. H. S. Crossman

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:932 D 23 '39 1050w

"Mr. Hogben has a fine gift for satirical statement, which he does not trouble to keep under restraint. Among his favorite bêtes noires, for example, are the professional economists. Unfortunately he does not attack the bad but the good ones, and he attacks them for foolish reasons. . . He is at his best in the present volume when he is either writing on some subject in his own special field or when he is discussing problems of education. An excellent example is his essay called 'Clarity Is Not Enough.' " Henry Hazlitt

+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 3 '40 1450w

"Mr Hogben, as I need hardly tell you, commands a stinging wit. Beyond this, he is a man from whom one can actually learn something. His book is particularly recommended to students of science and to teachers of all varieties." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:62 Mr 2 '40 60w

Pratt p5 autumn '40

"This is really a very mild and agreeable little book full of pleasant good sense. I hope Mr. Hogben doesn't mind. This reviewer also has had the experience of saying things he has thought were shocking and finding them regarded as gently whimsical." Irwin Edman

+ Sat R of Lit 21:11 Mr 23 '40 900w

"Professor Hogben shows the need for a new society; we can all do that. But when we press him for an indication of the pursuits of its members, he fails us." C. E. M. Joad

Spec 164:84 Ja 19 '40 900w

Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 14 '40 650w

Reviewed by B. C. Gruenberg

Survey G 29:300 My '40 370w

Time 35:87 Mr 11 '40 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p713 D 9 '39 800w

HOGBEN, LANCELOT THOMAS. Principles of animal biology; il. by J. F. Horrabin. 415p $3.75 Norton [7s 6d Allen, G]

574 Biology. Zoology 40-27758

"Principles of Animal Biology was published first in 1930 [in London]. It was designed to provide a general introduction to biology based on evolutionary principles with emphasis on function throughout. It was not intended to supplant but rather to supplement the work in the laboratory, for which many excellent guides or manuals are available. While the original plan remains, each chapter has been extensively revised or, where necessary, entirely rewritten. The chapter in which the Vertebrate skeleton is used to illustrate the principles of geological succession by reference to the fossil record has been recast to take advantage of the many new discoveries which have been made during the past ten years. . . All the illustrations in the previous edition have been redrawn by Mr. Horrabin, and many new ones have been added or substituted." (Pref. to 2d ed) Index.

Booklist 37:119 N 15 '40

"The 'Principles of Animal Biology' is essentially almost as conventional as its title, and it owes its interest and readability to the author's easy style and his unusual felicity in the use of apt examples from everyday life. The book's main departures from textbook form seem hardly promising, since they involve now an unsystematic arrangement of topics or a fragmentary presentation of material, now an incongruous mixing of technical and historical minutiae with elementary exposition. The work lacks integration, formal unity, and it certainly is not a precise, comprehensive and orderly reference book. The numerous figures, drawn by Mr. J. F. Horrabin, are competent, but pedestrian. On the whole, it appears necessary to consider this book as one of the less fortunate exemplars of textbook reform." H. M. Parshley
— + Books p21 O 13 '40 420w

"A general criticism of the book is that Prof. Hogben frequently over-estimates the sum total of factual information possessed by university students after a one-year course in zoology. This is particularly evident in the chapter dealing with the principle of succession with special reference to the vertebrate skeleton. The new edition is a useful addition to the current stock of literature, however, and should establish itself as quickly and successfully as its predecessor. As one would expect in a second edition, the book is free from even minor inaccuracies."
+ — Nature 146:545 O 26 '40 420w

HOGNER, DOROTHY CHILDS (MRS NILS HOGNER). Don't blame the puffins; il. by Nils Hogner. 50p map $1.25 Oxford 40-5386

"A humorous story of the fisher folk of the Gaspé Peninsula. When fishing is poor, William Macintosh is inclined to foster a feeling among the men that it is because the sea has been fished out by the puffins, the sea gulls, the gannets, and the cormorants. Sadly, the other men turn to farming, but William sticks to the sea and, sure enough, after three or four bad days, the fish are plentiful again. So 'don't blame the puffins. Perhaps, after all, it's the weather.' " Library J

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Mr 31 '40 230w

Reviewed by E. G. Mullan
Library J 65:214 Mr 1 '40 110w

HOHMAN, LESLIE BENJAMIN. As the twig is bent [foreword by Adolf Meyer]. 291p $2.50 Macmillan

136.7 Child study. Children—Management
40-27445

The associate professor of psychiatry at Johns Hopkins medical school discusses the effect in later life of good and bad habits formed in childhood. "In general, he represents a reaction against many of the theories of free development that have been prevalent and advocates more discipline, more formal training and more work and responsibility for children." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 36:359 My 15 '40
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '40

"This book is filled with practical advice. It is a book which parents and teachers will find very helpful and, as it is written in the language of the layman, it can be recommended as a beginning book about childhood training. . . The fact that this book is not objectionable to Catholic or Protestant readers is worth noting. Many of the recent educational books which are directed primarily to parents are positively objectionable, not only to Catholics but also to members of many Protestant groups." Ruth Byrns
+ Commonweal 32:105 My 24 '40 850w
J Home Econ 32:397 Je '40 130w
Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 28 '40 550w

Reviewed by M. S. Smart & R. C. Smart
Survey 76:231 Jl '40 320w
Wis Lib Bul 36:95 My '40

HOKE, MRS ANN. Restaurant menu planning; with a foreword by Howard Bagnall Meek. 333p il $3.50 Harper

641.572 Menus. Restaurants, lunch rooms, etc.
40-27733

Outlines the principles of planning restaurant meals for variety and profit. The book is based on teaching experience in the Cornell University School of hotel management, plus practical knowledge of restaurant problems. Partial contents: How to avoid menu monotony; Merchandising on the menu; Attractive menu wording; Some underlying principles of menu planning; Food costs and profitable menu pricing; Daily à la carte, standard and special menus. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:86 N 1 '40
J Home Econ 32:632 N '40 60w

HOKE, CALM MORRISON. Refining precious metal wastes: gold, silver, platinum metals: a handbook for the jeweler, dentist and small refiner. 362p il $5 Metallurgical pub. co, 123 William st, N.Y.

669.2 Precious metals. Metallurgy 40-6741

"The purpose of this book is to teach the jeweler or dental technician how to handle [various] kinds of [precious metal] waste. The equipment needed will be described, the processes will be explained, and he will be told how to decide whether a given type of waste is too complex for him to refine or not." (Page 1) Bibliography. Index.

"This book is remarkably comprehensive. It not only should prove of service to the manufacturing jeweler who does a certain amount of refining, but it will also be of decided interest to the technical man who works largely with and on precious metals." M. M. Goldsmith
+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:959 N 10 '40 40w
Chem & Met Eng 47:204 Mr '40 120w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:24 Ap '40

HOKE, MRS HELEN L. Mr Sweeney; il. by William Wills. [76p] $1.50 Holt 40-14815

Mr Sweeney was a bear cub, the pet of two children living on a farm near Lake Champlain. Mr Sweeney's mischief got his young owners into so much trouble that he eventually found himself on the way to a new home in the city zoo.

"A might-be-true story which will be popular with a wide range of readers. Sepia pencil drawings intersperse the brown printed pages and give a good woodsy tang. Opinion is divided on this book. Grades 3-7."
Booklist 37:39 O 1 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 S 8 '40 230w

Reviewed by D. L. Wood
Library J 65:813 O 1 '40 50w

HOKE, H. L.—Continued

"Younger readers will find the antics of this unusual pet lively and amusing. The style, vivid and smooth at its best, is uneven, and Mr. Sweeney is sometimes given credit for rather more introspection than seems quite plausible, but his ingratiating personality outweighs these imperfections, especially as portrayed in succeeding stages of growth in William Wills's pictures, in which light and shade are handled with a brilliant, spirited effect." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p10 O 27 '40 260w

HOLAND, HJALMAR RUED. Westward from Vinland. 354p il maps $3 Duell

973.13 America—Discovery and exploration 40-9570

History of the "Norse discoveries and explorations in America, 982-1362." (Subtitle) Part one is devoted to the general history of the Norse voyages to America; part two deals with the Kensington stone, a large stone covered with ancient runic inscriptions, discovered in Minnesota in 1898. It is the author's contention that this find proves the Viking explorers penetrated this far in 1362. Bibliographical notes. Index.

"Mr. Holand's fascinating and beautifully designed book is important and timely. . . Undoubtedly the book will be attacked by a number of scholars and rejected by some. It has its weak points and could have been strengthened in a number of instances by presenting as 'debatable' what it presents as fact. . . Be that as it may, as a fascinating detective story covering one man's labors over a period of thirty years, and as an able summary of the much-disputed Scandinavian finds in our Mid-West, the book is eminently readable and valuable. You don't need to agree with every one of Holand's points." E. P. Hanson

+ Books p2 Je 2 '40 1300w

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 20 '40 160w

New Repub 103:38 Jl 1 '40 90w

"From beginning to end the book is closely reasoned, well expressed and crammed with a great variety of evidence on many points. Any one who tries now to disprove the authenticity of the Kensington inscription is going to have a tough job." P. A. Means

+ N Y Times p9 My 26 '40 1250w

"Fascinating detective work."

+ New Yorker 16:95 My 25 '40 40w

Reviewed by E. P. Hanson

Sat R of Lit 22:15 Jl 6 '40 750w

Wis Lib Bul 36:136 O '40

HOLBERG, MRS RUTH LANGLAND. The bells of Amsterdam; il. by Richard Holberg. 88p $2 Crowell

40-30189

Story of Amsterdam in the seventeenth century and of Karl Ludwig, an orphan boy who was apprenticed to a famous bell ringer. It was thru Karl Ludwig's playing on the bells of a tune remembered from his babyhood that the boy discovered his father. Rembrandt and his young son are among the characters.

Booklist 37:39 O 1 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 D 29 '40 160w

"This book fairly glows with the life and colors of Holland, not only in the text, but also in the generous number of beautifully executed illustrations drawn by the author's husband. Here is an excellent book for six to eight year olds."

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ag 31 '40 200w

"This charming story gives an accurate picture of life in seventeenth century Holland. For eight- to fourteen-year-olds."

+ Christian Century 57:1032 Ag 21 '40 30w

Reviewed by J. E. Stromdahl

Library J 65:714 S 1 '40 90w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale

Nation 151:155 N 9 '40 20w

New Yorker 16:128 D 7 '40 60w

"Conventional. No charm." Raymond Holden

Sat R of Lit 23:21 N 16 '40 10w

Wis Lib Bul 36:151 N '40

HOLBROOK, RUTH. Katy's quilt. [78p] il $2 Doubleday

(W) 40-30565

Story of Maine in the late 1860's and of a little girl named Katy, who hated to piece patchwork. On the day of a great fire Katy's own "crazy quilt" was used to help save her home, and somehow after that making quilts did not seem such a chore. President Grant appears briefly in the story.

Booklist 37:40 O 1 '40

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p6 N 25 '40 180w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:847 O 15 '40 20w

"A 'must have' for Maine libraries because of local interest. Other libraries may find it just another pleasant story of a little girl and her family in the days when a ride on a steam train was a great adventure. Many pictures by the author add to the charm of the book." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 65:878 O 15 '40 110w

"The pictures, in soft colors and black and white, are very pleasing, with the flavor of the period, and the story, though slight, will be enjoyed by little girls from 8 to 10." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 O 6 '40 280w

New Yorker 16:127 D 7 '40 70w

HOLBROOK, STEWART H. Ethan Allen. 283p map $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Allen, Ethan (W) 40-27490

The leader of the Green Mountain boys, the "ring-tailed old peeler" of the American revolution, is the subject of this biography. The author is himself a Vermonter, and lays stress on Allen's part in the Vermont fight for statehood. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:382 Je 1 '40

"Mr. Holbrook is a warm and devoted partisan of his hero; not too devoted to deny certain legends, but devoted enough. . . His biography is robustly and vividly written. I could have spared some of the adjectives for a more detailed account of the Onion River Land Company and for a clearer picture of the involved negotiations between Allen and the British authorities but most readers will find this latest picture of an American hero an extremely readable and exciting one." S. V. Benet

+ — Books p3 My 12 '40 850w

Reviewed by Ruth Hard

Boston Transcript p1 My 11 '40 1000w

"Mr. Holbrook tells the story of the riproarious general with the zest and verve that it deserves. One could wish that he had dealt a little more fully, and a little more expertly, with the content and influence of the Oracle. But it is a praiseworthy service to have removed Ethan Allen forever from the category of stuffed-shirt heroes and plaster saints of American history and shown him as the rowdy but epic figure that he was." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 57:1210 O 2 '40 1050w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 22 '40 600w

Reviewed by M. I. Hart

Commonweal 32:152 Je 7 '40 1500w

"Not only Vermonters, but any reader interested in the Revolutionary period, will find in this robust figure a vital element in New England history." G. E. Brown

+ Library J 65:351 Ap 15 '40 170w

Nation 150:763 Je 22 '40 60w

"Mr. Holbrook writes easily and is a quick thinker, and sometimes his style fairly gallops. This accounts in a large measure for the popularity of his latest book. . . Not much new material appears in the volume and the amount of original research seems limited. The last chapter, entitled 'Footnotes for a Hero'—the best in the book—presents some fresh material." G. P. Anderson

+ — New Eng Q 13:557 S '40 1150w

"Told with gusto and racy Vermont patriotism."

New Repub 102:649 My 13 '40 50w

"Mr. Holbrook has made a rattling good story. He may have thrown in more profanity and mixed in more rum than was absolutely required. Still, Ethan Allen was beyond doubt a tough citizen, who drank more than his health required and conversed with passionate freedom. It took tough citizens, and not plaster saints, to win the struggle for Vermont independence." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p1 My 12 '40 1800w

New Yorker 16:99 My 11 '40 30w

"It is a stirring story, this of Allen; and Mr. Holbrook, without trying to make it exhaustive, brings out its most dramatic values. . . This briskly-told narrative catches the spirit of the times, of the region, and above all of the man—a man too remarkable to be left in the stiff steel-engraving presentment of the textbooks. Here he lives, breathes, curses, and fights, a convincing personage." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 22:13 My 11 '40 550w

"Mr Holbrook has done a very good job on Ethan Allen. It is quite likely that he has presented no new information, but he expands interesting incidents in Allen's life, particularly his voyage to England as a prisoner, and has repeated most of the better legends for what they are worth."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '40 1000w

"Mr. Stewart Holbrook turns to the half-legendary figure of Allen with assurance, verve, and a talent for maintaining narrative pace without sacrificing historical values. . . In his final fond estimate of Allen, however, Mr. Holbrook may encounter dissent. At times, Allen's tactics were sordid, as well as rough. . . However, if Mr. Holbrook's zeal was diminished his zest might be also, and he deserves acclaim for his highly readable story of a vivid and almost forgotten life." David Potter

+ — Yale R n s 30:175 autumn '40 420w

HOLCOMBE, ARTHUR NORMAN. The middle classes in American politics. 304p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

973 U.S.—Politics and government. Middle classes. Democracy 40-32763

"A study of the characteristics of the American way in politics and the means of preserving them, and a discussion of the economic bases of national politics and the part played by the middle classes in the formation of the Constitution. The author is professor of government in Harvard University." (Publishers' Weekly) Index.

"This book consists, in the main, of articles and addresses previously published or given elsewhere. Evidently called forth by the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the meeting of the Federal Convention in 1787, they yet form a consistent and well-rounded whole and are a vital and stimulating contribution, not only to the history of the period but also to a proper understanding of present-day politics." W. S. Myers

+ Ann Am Acad 213:236 Ja '41 600w

"Professor Holcombe has written a wise, a thoughtful and, in this our day of peril, a noble book." Louis Hacker

+ Books p2 Ja 5 '41 1300w

Reviewed by C. N. R. McCoy

Commonweal 33:305 Ja 10 '41 550w

"The relation of the middle class to democracy and social change becomes constantly more significant and crucial. Yet the subject is curiously neglected, save for appeals to prejudice and passion. In this sober, thoughtful study Dr. Holcombe develops the thesis that the rural middle class was formerly 'on the whole the dominant factor in national politics,' that the urban middle classes are now the dominant factor, and that these classes are the foundation of democracy. The study offers many suggestive analyses and ideas. . . Yet the net result is disappointing because of serious short-comings in Dr. Holcombe's historical analyses and approach." Lewis Corey

+ — Nation 152:51 Ja 11 '41 1350w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p3 N 24 '40 1450w

"Prof Holcombe's historical interpretation of middle-class influence, though possibly subject to some expansion or modification, is among the more illuminating generalizations advanced by present-day professors of government." E. N. Jenckes

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 5 '40 650w

Reviewed by P. H. Odegard

Survey G 29:622 D '40 500w

HOLDEN, RAYMOND PECKHAM. Arrow at the heel; poems. 110p $2 Holt

811 40-33316

This volume contains a long poem written as the 1939 Tufts College Phi Beta Kappa poem; a collection of lyrics, some of them previously published in magazines; and fifty sonnets.

"For its admirable opening poem, Raymond Holden's third book of verse should attract considerable attention. . . After the larded emotionalism, muddled thinking, sloppy syntax and monstrosities begotten of surrealism in much contemporary verse, reading Raymond Holden is like looking through clear water at the clean, hard kernel of fact. . . The poem, however, is motivated a little too much by didactic definition that skirts close to aphorism and truism. . . In his nature poems, such as 'Peony' and 'Renewal,' Mr. Holden continues to excel. . . With the exception of a technically superior but otherwise undistinguished sonnet sequence, 'The Arrow at the Heel' contains, of its kind, some of the finest poetry that has been written in our time." Ruth Lechlitner

+ — Books p2 N 10 '40 360w

Reviewed by John Holmes

Boston Transcript p9 D 23 '40 230w

"Mr. Holden's, 'Natural History,' appeared two years ago. Of that book, I wrote: 'Few poets writing in English today are more successful in both form and content than Mr. Holden.' That statement is also true in relation to 'The Arrow at the Heel.'" John Ritchy

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 9 '40 400w

Living Age 359:394 D '40 90w

"The author's narrow range of diction tends to limit his effects, but such poems as 'Lie Down! Lie Down!' and 'Country Cupboard' reveal a sound, conservative technique."

+ — New Yorker 16:104 O 12 '40 60w

"How is one to recognize it if, above ten thousand aspiring verses, a true poem lifts itself? Only, I suppose, by putting a little distance between oneself and it, for an immediate enthusiasm is an untrustworthy gauge. When I first came upon Mr. Holden's Storm Over Rockefeller Center, everything about it, even the look of the narrow lines on the long page, seemed right. . . The test of this poem

HOLDEN, R. P.—Continued
is that as we come upon it again after seven years (and such years) it stands unimpaired. . . None of the other poems in the volume would survive a comparison with great poetry, though two much slighter pieces approach flawlessness." Elizabeth Atkins
+ — Poetry 57:270 Ja '41 800w

HOLDING, MRS ELISABETH (SANXAY). The girl who had to die. 200p $2 Dodd 40-3032

Mystery story.

"Here's the most important crime novelty in a month of Sundays, so different in approach and execution from the standard brands as to take first place in any list of current offerings. . . It's a sort of stream of consciousness method, more vivid and pictorial than most, and it is admirably suited to the special kind of shudders, horrid hints, nightmare overtones and general wickedness dealt in by the wicked characters." Will Cuppy
+ Books p13 Ja 28 '40 200w

"Fascinating reading, although you won't be able to believe a word of it." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p3 F 3 '40 70w

"Differs from most mystery stories in that not one of the several mysteries in it is ever definitely cleared up. It may not appeal to the average detective story fan, but it has a curious fascination all its own." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 F 4 '40 200w

New Yorker 15:72 F 3 '40 40w

"Feverish."
Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ja 27 '40 40w

HOLDING, MRS ELISABETH (SANXAY). Who's afraid? 265p $2 Duell
40-14078

Psychological mystery story.

"Right up to the last, you're kept guessing on some of the points. With each and every copy you get unusual twists in the sinister, plenty of danger, persons running the gamut from mild to loony, and a satisfactory solution, not to mention love and other fun." Will Cuppy
+ Books p10 Jl 21 '40 190w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '40 80w

" 'Who's Afraid?' does not follow the usual pattern of the detective story but it holds the readers attention in a way that few books in that category are able to equal." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p13 Jl 28 '40 180w

"Top drawer."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 Jl 27 '40 40w

HOLDRIDGE, DESMOND. End of the river [Eng title: Death of a common man]. 317p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Hale, R] 40-6804

A young Indian boy from a remote civilization in the South American mountains is driven by circumstances into the civilization of the lowlands. He finds ill treatment and injustice, a friend or two, and a love, but in the end disaster overtakes him.

Atlantic My '40 70w

"Mr. Holdridge writes with understanding and authority about Indian life, the Brazilian jungle, and the cities at the mouth of the Amazon. His story-telling is economical and vivid, his style touched with a kind of playful solemnity that keeps it buoyant. In less sensitive hands his innocent Indian Candide might have become a mere inanimate mouthpiece, but Mr. Holdridge has made Manoel warm and real." J. S. Mabon
+ Books p12 Ap 7 '40 550w

"Desmond Holdridge writes superlatively well in 'End of the River.' He easily makes the inimical tropical landscape and malarial river settlement rotting in the sun catch up the reader. The accuracy with which he interprets in action—a most difficult task—the responses of the rigid primitive mind thrust bewildered into a fluid world of calculation is really uncanny. Anyone who has read Von den Steiner, the anthropologist who gave a large part of his life to studying similar Brazilian Indians, can vouch for this." E. B. Garside
+ Boston Transcript p11 Ap 5 '40 700w

"Mr. Holdridge does not write very well, and a story that might have been a moving one falls rather flat because the author does not possess the fluidity of style or sustained intuitive insight necessary to good imaginative writing. In addition, he has burdened his book with a rather clumsy allegory on dictatorships and democracy, something not even some of our best writers for some strange reason, have been able to handle well." Harry Sylvester
— + Commonweal 31:517 Ap 5 '40 90w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p6 S 13 '40 150w

New Repub 102:449 Ap 1 '40 50w

"The boy's adventures are told with an almost pastoral freshness and innocence, the unusual background is obviously drawn from first-hand knowledge, there are some gaily comic scenes and a genuine pathos in the conclusion. Altogether a very likeable, honest, unpretentious book about an uncommonly interesting subject." Desmond Hawkins
+ New Statesman & Nation 20:314 S 28 '40 80w

"It should be said before going on that this proud savage boy is a human being of flesh and blood, no mere figment; that the people he meets in his travels are real people; that the stories, strung along after the manner of the picaresque novel, are realistic stories. The reviewer wishes he could say that the allegory, the symbolism, the meaning were nowhere thrust forward. Unhappily, the very brief Book One, the first page of Book Two and the final paragraph, author's scaffolding which should have been removed, remain. Possibly they were left to help bolster up the not quite forgivable ending." F. T. Marsh
+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 31 '40 800w

"Mr. Holdridge evidently knows his jungle, and his portrait of Manoel is done with warm sympathy."
+ New Yorker 16:75 Mr 30 '40 30w

"It may not be necessary to take 'End of the River' in any special way at all, in which case one can simply settle down to a very good time. . . The story has the pattern and feel of a great river, twisting, varying, growing deeper and broader. The final tragedy, at the eleventh hour and fifty-ninth second before everything would have become all right, seems rather manufactured for the sake of a tight ending, but even so it has emotional force. The descriptions of scenery and activity are brilliant." Oliver La Farge
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:16 Mr 30 '40 600w

"An attractive, vivid and somewhat touching book, which should quite salutarily take [our] minds off Europe for a few hours and engage them sympathetically with the more innocent and brilliant South American scene—even though the shadow of the swastika falls there too in the latter pages. But still only a shadow, thank Heaven." Kate O'Brien
+ Spec 165:298 S 20 '40 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '40 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p439 S 7 '40 220w

HOLE, CHRISTINA. English folklore; with 50 il. from phot, old prints and other early sources. 191p $3 Scribner [10s 6d Batsford]
398.3 Folklore—England

"A collection of English popular beliefs and customs. . . Miss Hole has drawn her material in part from personal inquiry, in part from printed sources. . . The classification which she has adopted under the headings of 'The World of Everyday', 'The World of Nature' and 'The World of Magic', has enabled her to cover systematically a field which from the very nature of its content invites inevitably to scrappy treatment. In the first group of beliefs she deals with those which surround the individual from birth to the grave; the second illustrates the attitude of the individual to sun, moon and stars, birds and beasts, trees and plants, and water, wells and stones; and in the third division we have his relation with aspects of the unseen, the world of spirits, manifested in beliefs relating to witches and fairies." Nature

---

"A more genial showing of a solid subject would be hard to find. . . There is no stopping, once such a book is begun."
+ Books p12 S 1 '40 290w

Nature 146:215 Ag 17 '40 650w

"English Folklore is a dipper's book. Open it at almost any page and you will be delighted." G. W. Stonier
+ New Statesman & Nation 19:755 Je 15 '40 700w

Reviewed by Richard Aldington
Sat R of Lit 23:10 Ja 18 '41 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p276 Je 8 '40 500w

HOLLIS, FLORENCE. Social case work in practice; six case studies. 313p $2.50 Family welfare

361.8 Social work 40-3627

"Miss Hollis has edited six case records from the Cleveland Associated Charities, chosen as examples of successful practice in situations neither too simple nor involving psychiatric treatment, with running comment on methods and results. The introductory chapter presents some assumptions on which case work is founded. . . The cases are followed by a chapter on the principles underlying the treatment described, under the headings of causation (of behavior), understanding, and treatment." Am Soc R

"Sponsorship by the Family Welfare Association of America and the professional standing of the author, who is a case worker as well as a teacher of case work in the Western Reserve School of Applied Social Sciences, guarantee authenticity in the picture of case work set forth. The book is intended for professional classes and also for the non-initiate reader who wants to know what case work is and what the mysterious 'techniques and skills' of the art may be." D. K. Bruner
+ Am Soc R 5:683 Ag '40 440w

Reviewed by Fred Eggan
Social Forces 19:116 O '40 270w

"The concise, clear-cut sentences which serve as chapter headings are only one indication of the workmanlike way in which Miss Hollis has approached the task of writing this book. The summaries which end each case give an excellent picture of what is involved in this kind of service to individuals. It is a real landmark in social case work writing." E. M. de Schweinitz
+ Survey 76:212 Je '40 480w

HOLLISTER, MRS MARY (BREWSTER). Bright sky tomorrow; il. by Esther Wood. 122p map $1; pa 50c Missionary educ. movement 40-13525

A Chinese family, driven from their home by the Japanese invasion and a rising flood, is saved by the Eighth route army. Eventually the members of the little family—father, mother, and three children—are reunited and begin a new life in western China. For children nine to twelve.

Booklist 37:18 S '40

"It will give young readers a clear picture of what these people are undergoing (or as much of it as children ought to hear) and of the courageous way in which difficulties may be faced."
+ Christian Century 57:676 My 22 '40 60w

"There is a didactic element in Mrs. Hollister's narrative of wartime China, but it is deftly woven into a story which is readable for its own sake, which is spiced with mystery and which is so contemporary that it will please 9 to 12 year olds, who are more familiar with the headlines than we often credit them with being." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 My 26 '40 400w

HOLME, GEOFFREY, ed. This is England; commentary by Herbert B. Grimsditch. 128p il $5 (15s) Studio

914.2 England—Description and travel
40-31929

Photographs of England, showing typical institutions, buildings, and customs. The pictures are arranged under some sixty headings, and each picture has a short descriptive note. Index.

"For the most part, [these] are press photographs of excellent quality; and they present satisfyingly England as she normally is—an important contribution to the general mental stability when the outward aspect of England is anything but normal. To accompany the pictures, Mr. Grimsditch has furnished a running commentary which serves its purpose admirably." M. W.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 24 '40 440w

"The object of the collector has been inclusiveness rather than the selection of the most beautiful or impressive scenes: the title, thus, is really descriptive. Some of the groups of pictures suggest an inclusiveness in time, as the whole collection has an inclusiveness in subject. . . The text is less expert than the pictures. It was perhaps an excusable slip which ticketed Sulgrave Manor as the 'birthplace of George Washington,' amazing as that seems to us. But the author's childlike tendency toward superlatives detracts almost constantly from the dignity of the commentary. We can welcome, however, these English photographs."
+ — N Y Times p15 Jl 7 '40 300w

"A pleasant, unsensational book. The subjects are reasonably chosen, the photographs are adequate if unsurprising, the text is truthful if uninspired. It is not a book to provoke enthusiasm, but it may be recommended without qualms to anyone who wants a publication of its kind."
+ Spec 164:728 My 24 '40 120w
Times [London] Lit Sup p271 Je 1 '40 90w

HOLMES, H. H., pseud. See White, W. A. P.

HOLMES, RUTH VICKERY. Model-theatre craft; scenery, actors and plays; drawings by Elizabeth Holmes. 186p $2 Stokes

792 Theaters, Miniature 40-27697

Directions for making a miniature theater, with diagrams and patterns for making the actors, both persons and animals, from inexpensive materials—cardboard, felt, flannel and pipe cleaners. Four non-royalty plays are included: a Finnish peasant play; a fairy play; a Chinese play; and a Christmas pageant. List of supply firms; bibliography. For children ten or older.

Booklist 37:75 O 15 '40

"Operating the weighted figures calls for some skill, but should not be too difficult. The author tells what such figures can be made to do and what they must not be expected to do—such as changing position of their arms during an act. . . For children who love to make things that work this is an attractive guide." M. L. Becker

HOLMES, R. V.—Continued
+ Books p7 D 22 '40 130w

"Its information is clearly written and may be used effectively for projects in both school and Sunday school. A good book for any collection." D. L. Wood
+ Library J 65:769 S 15 '40 80w
Wis Lib Bul 36:152 N '40

HOLMES, THOMAS JAMES. Cotton Mather; a bibliography of his works. 3v il $15 Harvard univ. press
012 Mather, Cotton—Bibliography 40-32579

"This is a census of first editions, showing their locations, and includes a complete description of each of Mather's 444 printed items, together with a reproduction of the title page of its first and sometimes its second edition also. There are notes on fifteen unpublished additional works which Mather prepared for the press, and about 156 unnumbered entries, including paraphrased and imperfect titles. A chronological check list of titles precedes the bibliography proper and the indices are careful and complete." N Y Times

"Those who have made use of Mr. Holmes's 'Increase Mather' have come to regard that book almost as the classic example of the manner and degree in which bibliography may serve the study of history. That estimate of its worth, expressed more than once and by many scholars in recent years, may be repeated as a comment upon his newly published bibliography of Increase's son." L. C. Wroth
+ Books p33 O 6 '40 1450w

"Exhaustive notes give the circumstances that surrounded the writing of each book and pamphlet, and record so many incidents of Mather's life, so many of his vehement, piously truculent phrases, that the three volumes have the interest of an excellent biography. Here is the mind and thought of Cotton Mather redivivus. It is bibliography at its very best." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p16 S 15 '40 750w

Reviewed by C. P. Rollins
Sat R of Lit 23:16 D 21 '40 1100w

HOLMES, WILFRED JAY (ALEC HUDSON, pseud). Battle stations! 71p $1.25 Macmillan (W)

"A realistic picture of the business of submarine warfare, told by a man who has seen long service underseas. Lieut Hudson recounts the adventures of a squadron of five submarines in wartime, and acquaints the reader with the life and personnel of these craft and the terrific odds against them." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 36:264 Mr 1 '40

"Only one who has served through many mimic wars in the fleet submarine flotillas could have produced this story. . . 'Battle Stations' could hardly be more timely. It is short, as books go, but if it were five times as long it would still be something to gulp at a sitting. . . Fiction or not, this is the Navy." R. F. Armknecht
+ Books p3 Ja 14 '40 450w

"The story is grimly realistic and leaves out nothing from routine operations to a ghastly account of a submarine sunk by depth charges and participation in a full-dress naval battle. Endurance, coolness and courage are essential, every-day qualities of a submarine, and how these affect the course of war is stirringly told." P. J. Searles
+ Boston Transcript p5 D 30 '39 130w

"Vivid and sometimes breathless fiction."
+ New Repub 102:62 Ja 8 '40 50w

"Highly technical in its exposition of how a submarine is handled in tight spots, it yet maintains an exceptionally strong dramatic interest."
+ N Y Times p7 D 31 '39 240w

"The author has seen underseas service, has no illusions about it, and makes it seem as grim, exciting, and terrible as it probably is."
+ New Yorker 15:61 Ja 6 '40 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 14 '40 90w

HOLT, ARTHUR ERASTUS. This nation under God. 205p $2 Willett
261 Sociology, Christian. Democracy 39-29496

The Rauschenbusch lectures delivered at Colgate-Rochester theological seminary in 1938. The author urges a religious basis for democracy, and outlines the responsibility of the church in a democracy. "Some of the material included in these lectures I have used in Christendom and also in a book, published by the Pilgrim Press, entitled The Church and Social Work, and in another book, published by the Association Press, entitled The Bible as a Community Book. All this material is now out of print." (Acknowledgments)

Booklist 36:193 Ja 15 '40
Bookmark p23 N '40

"By all means buy this book and read it. Because its significance is in sentences and occasional paragraphs rather than in cogent logic, I suggest reading it through with a pencil and then rereading only the marked passages. This will make it arresting, stimulating, and prophetic. I wish it could be made required reading for every idealist." E. W. Luccock
+ Christian Century 57:385 Mr 20 '40 900w

"The importance of this volume cannot be overemphasized. No one who sees the present peril to democracy, and is interested in discovering some way for its redemption can afford to overlook it." Rittenhouse Niesser
+ Crozer Q 17:144 Ap '40 360w

"This is a book concerning Christian social ethics which is in method and temper a return to the earlier social gospel tradition; but it is written with full recognition of the contemporary situation. . . To me it is a very refreshing book after long preoccupation with theology-centered and Europe-centered discussions of Christian ethics. . Also it is refreshing after the deluge of semi-Marxist writing about social problems which has threatened to overwhelm one's judgment by sheer reiteration." J. C. Bennett
+ J Religion 20:187 Ap '40 850w

HOLT, MRS MAUD S. A travelogue through the years. 287p il $2.50 Dorrance
B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 40-10697

"An autobiography of sorts. . . The author is a resident of Little Rock, Ark., blessed with means to travel and pursue her profession as an artist. . . In the prolog the author finds, to her surprise, that the book 'has developed into an autobiography. Wishing to chronicle the principal happenings of my life in relation to the study of art, it has seemed the simplest way to tell them in the first person.' " Springf'd Republican

"A friendly, attractive book." M. L. E.
+ Churchman 154:35 S 15 '40 40w

"Viewed strictly as autobiography, the book lacks polish; there is no easy continuity of thought. . . Despite this, there is a travel flavor of journeys in much of Europe and the United States that will evoke happy memories in the minds of other travelers who read the book."
+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 5 '40 330w

HOLTON, EDITH AUSTIN (ELIZABETH ALDEN HEATH, pseud). Clear before 'leven 314p $2 Penn

40-4725

Cape Cod story with Hosanna Snow as heroine. Hosanna spent the earlier years of her life taking care of other people's responsibilities, but at twenty-eight she found time to think of herself and live her own life.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p14 Mr 10 '40 120w

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 16 '40 90w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p28 Mr 10 '40 170w

HOLTON, EDITH AUSTIN (ELIZABETH ALDEN HEATH, pseud). Gallant fraud. 311p $2 Penn

40-13628

A Vermont girl, bored with the prospects of a summer vacation in East Joppa after a year at college, decided to do a good turn for her grandfather. The good turn involved introducing a handsome stranger as a long lost grandson from Wisconsin. The ruse worked well for all concerned.

Booklist 37:69 O 15 '40

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p11 Ag 4 '40 210w

"A sprightly little summer-time romance."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '40 80w

N Y Times p15 Jl 21 '40 250w

Wis Lib Bul 36:138 O '40

HOLTON, PRISCILLA. Chuck Martinez; il. by Eva Auld Watson. 312p $2 Longmans

40-13973

Chuck was Mexican by blood, but American by training. When he was in his teens his Mexican scientist father invited Chuck to Mexico for a visit. Strange, mysterious things began to happen almost as soon as Chuck had crossed the border. This story of his adventures in discovering his own country is intended for older boys and girls.

"Besides shocks and chills the story, evidently based on personal knowledge of the country, makes land and people real to the reader; Mexico has been so largely presented to our children through gentle little boys on their way to the fiesta that we can do with a few more grown-up lads taking part in the present difficulties of life." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 Ag 18 '40 360w

Christian Century 57:1146 S 18 '40 20w

"A good book, the boys will say."
+ Churchman 154:35 D 1 '40 30w

"While the plot is not very convincing, the characterizations are good. The author has a real understanding of Mexican people, their manners and customs. Especially interesting is the account of school life at the Colegio of Guadalajara where Chuck enrolled as a student. The action of the story is rapid and the suspense well maintained. It will be a popular book with older boys and girls." C. E. Scott
+ Library J 65:771 S 15 '40 190w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 65:855 O 15 '40 10w

Reviewed by M. L. Pfaelzer
Social Studies 32:93 F '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 180w

HOLZINGER, KARL JOHN, and SWINEFORD, FRANCES. Study in factor analysis; the stability of a bi-factor solution. 91p pa $1 Univ. of Chicago. Dept. of educ.

151.265 Mental tests. Correlation (statistics) 40-11767

"This compact monograph, in five short chapters, presents the results of a study of a bi-factor method when the same battery of tests and the same form of solution are used for two pupil populations. The chapters deal, in order, with a discussion of the objectives of the study; a detailed exposition of the nature of the groups of children and of the tests used; an analysis of the data . . . an estimation of factors; and a study of the effect of adding new factors to the pattern already evaluated." School R

Reviewed by D. E. Scates
El School J 40:468 F '40 750w

"Since Holzinger and Swineford's work brings factor analysis closer to practical application, the reviewer feels impelled to reiterate that a rapprochement between neurological and statistical data is sadly needed. If, in addition, the statisticians could put their house of disorder in greater harmony, the reciprocal contributions of psychological theory and of statistics would be enormously facilitated. Holzinger and Swineford's report is presented in sober and unassuming language. If anything, it suffers from a paucity of discussion. It adds to Holzinger's well-deserved credit for long and patient work in his chosen field." A. H. Turney
+ — School R 47:709 N '39 1100w

HOMES, GEOFFREY, pseud. See Mainwaring, D.

HOMRIGHAUSEN, ELMER GEORGE. Let the church be the church. 199p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

261 Christianity. Church. Kingdom of God
40-31299

"The author of this book of sermons is a prominent American theologian of Barthian persuasion. . . These sermons deal with those eternally vital themes of God, Christ, Church, Bible, man, sin and the cross." Christian Century

"One of the most valuable aspects of the book is [that the book is] the most provocative theology of our day in the throes of communication. Only the people who heard these sermons can tell whether the preacher succeeded. We who read them are entitled to no more than a hazy guess. Make no mistake about this: they are worth a good block of anyone's time spent in careful reading. . . The [subjects] are treated with a singleness of purpose and a passionate conviction that will command the immediate attention and respect of a thoughtful reader. Illustrations abound and are deftly used. Only once did the reviewer's attention flag—and that during the author's wrestle with the book of Revelation." Harold Bosley
+ Christian Century 57:1379 N 6 '40 1000w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore
Christian Science Monitor p10 N 2 '40 900w

HONNESS, MRS ELIZABETH (HOFFMAN). Did you ever? [il. by] Pelagie Doane. [30p] $1 Oxford

40-31949

Colored pictures illustrating such nonsense questions as Did you ever see a purple cow kneeling in the grass? and twenty-three others, make up this book for the very young.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p6 Ja 12 '41 100w

Cath World 152:374 D '40 40w

HONYMAN, ROBERT. Colonial panorama, 1775; [his] journal for March and April; ed. by Philip Padelford. 86p maps $2 Huntington lib.

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. U.S.—Social life and customs 39-32992

"In March, 1775, Dr. Robert Honyman, a civilian, set out from his home in Virginia and journeyed to Philadelphia, New York, Newport, and Boston. Traveling by horseback, stagecoach, and boat, he detailed faithfully in his journal, each day, precise observations of the country through which he passed. Although the man and his journey are interesting in themselves . . . the greatest contribution of Dr. Honyman's journal is his close attention to the intensity of political feeling in the cities he visited, and to the actual preparations being made for the Revolutionary War." (Publisher's note) Index.

HONYMAN, ROBERT—Continued

"Dr. Honyman's Journal is beyond doubt the best traveler's account yet discovered of the Middle and Northern colonies on the eve of the Revolution, surpassing in rich detail and cogent comparisons even the itinerary of his countryman, Patrick M'Robert. . . The introduction is helpful; the editing leaves much to be desired." C. B.
+ — New Eng Q 13:166 Mr '40 270w
Sat R of Lit 21:17 F 3 '40 250w

HOOK, SIDNEY. Reason, social myths and democracy. 302p $3; school ed $2.40 Day 301 Social sciences. Democracy 40-34126

Philosophical essays on some of the present day political ideas. "No one in America has expounded Marxist philosophy with greater authority and persuasiveness than Sidney Hook. For this reason a book by him in which practically all Marxist doctrines are subjected to some criticism and many completely rejected is something of an event. Taken in the context of the general mood of Marxist revisionism, it is not only an intelligent event but part of a political movement of real significance. Hook has of course always been a critical devotee of Marxist thought, and therefore cannot be accused of reversing himself. Nevertheless, he here extends previous criticisms so far beyond their earlier proportions that the progress of his thought may be described as moving from heresy to apostasy." (Nation) The author is professor of philosophy at New York university. Index.

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Ann Am Acad 213:199 Ja '41 550w

Reviewed by A. N. Holcombe
Books p6 D 22 '40 480w

"The essays are certainly thought provoking and may help the troubled intelligentsia of our times in understanding the real issues of this age. That does not necessarily mean that one always agrees with the author when he argues with men like Thurman Arnold, Max Lerner, and Jacques Maritain. But even a reader who constantly disagrees with Hook would get some enlightenment from studying the book, which may be recommended for large public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ — Library J 65:873 O 15 '40 120w

Reviewed by Albert Lippman
Living Age 359:593 F '41 1100w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 151:370 O 19 '40 1100w

"Mr. Hook ought to stop tilting so valiantly and effectively against vanishing windmills, or windmills not destructible by argument. He should carry forward, as he here so ably begins, his own analysis of the logic of democracy and its empirical salvation." Irwin Edman
New Repub 103:762 D 2 '40 1450w

"An evaluation of conflicting social philosophies, rather dense going but quite fundamental. Gives you one heavy thinker's idea of what is alive in Marxism and what is dead."
New Yorker 16:124 D 7 '40 30w

"No one can fail to be enlightened and even moved by Mr. Hook's mastery over his own forces and his fair play in battling against others. And as a modest student of Jamesian thought, I should be the first to applaud unreservedly at Mr. Hook's victories, if after reading him I were not left with the persistent doubt that there is one recurring flaw in his argument, one essential distinction that he fails to make." Jacques Barzun
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:15 Ja 11 '41 490w

HOOP, JOHANNES HERMANUS VAN DER. Conscious orientation; a study of personality types in relation to neurosis and psychosis; tr. by Laura Hutton. (Int. lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 352p $4 Harcourt [15s Routledge]
131.34 Psychoanalysis. Psychology, Pathological [39-32144]

"This book by the Professor of Psychiatry at Amsterdam is a detailed study of personality types in relation to neurosis and psychosis. Normal and abnormal aspects of the subject are considered. . . The main part of the book is devoted to an exposition and criticism of Jung's classical work. . . The concluding section of the book deals with the philosophic basis of objective psychology." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

"Conscious Orientation will not offer much to the systematic student in his search for a workable typology. This is so primarily because of the work's essential non-dynamic view concerning the mechanics of personality development, and its dependence upon vague concepts of 'inherited predispositions,' 'instinctual life,' 'intuition,' and 'feeling types.' Despite its occasional stimulating discussion of the current systems of classification, the book seems more like a curious historical relic of naïve mentalism, than a psychological treatise offered in 1939." Rosalind Gould
Am J Psychol 53:484 Jl '40 220w

"The student will find here a mine of well documented information, including references to works at present unavailable in English translation. . . The author's personal opinions based upon extensive practical experience in psychological medicine combined with his gifts as a teacher make this volume extremely valuable to the student and should serve to revive interest in the study of psychological types which the later work of Jung himself has neglected."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p543 S 16 '39 140w

HOOTON, EARNEST ALBERT. Why men behave like apes and vice versa; or, Body and behavior. 234p il $3 Princeton univ. press
572 Anthropology. Primates (W)

This book contains the substance of the author's lectures delivered at Princeton in February 1940, plus some additional material. The theme of the book is "the relation of organism and behavior" in the primates, in the human family as a whole, in the races of man, in nations and ethnic groups, and in the individual. Index.

Booklist 37:265 F 15 '41

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley
Books p8 D 22 '40 750w

Reviewed by J. A. Sohon
Library J 65:807 O 1 '40 160w

"This interesting document is primarily a call for the integration of the biological and sociological sciences of homo sapiens. It is a soundly scientific work done with a light touch —of course popularized in Mr. Hooton's inimitable manner."
+ Living Age 359:490 Ja '41 120w

"Whether his ideas are good or bad—and many are good—Hooton's style is vivacious and his popularity as a teacher easy to understand. Unfortunately he cannot resist an excessive use of puns and wisecracks which carries his style a step beyond lucidity and color. His writing has the challenge of that of the old-time Mencken in its ability to bring into focus usually ignored variables and to surprise the reader with unexpected accents, but it is marred by the interpolated ir-relevancies and flippancies. It gives the reader the impression that the author, for all his intensity, does not take himself or his subject seriously." Karl Menninger

+ — Nation 151:539 N 30 '40 550w

New Repub 104:94 Ja 20 '41 80w

"The truth is that the magic word science does not make Dr. Hooton scientific all the time. When he is scientific he is stimulating and instructive and when he is not scientific he is just as much an example of prejudiced behavior as any of the rest of us—including the general public." R. L. Duffus
+ — N Y Times p4 Ja 5 '41 1450w

Reviewed by H. W. Smith
Sat R of Lit 23:14 D 28 '40 750w

HOPKINS, B. SMITH. Chapters in the chemistry of the less familiar elements. loose-leaf $5 Stipes [pa 42s Harrap]

546 Chemical elements. Earths, Rare 40-1410

"A surprising amount of work has been done with the less common elements since the first edition of this classic in 1923 [Book Review Digest, 1924]. . . In some cases the author has simply inserted new material to bring the 1923 edition up to date, but several chapters have been largely rewritten and the treatment is more critical. Chapters on the recently established elements hafnium, masurium, and rhenium have been added. Included also is a short chapter on the magneto-optic method and elements 85 and 87. The chapters on gallium and indium have been rewritten and extended to include recent research." Chem & Chem Eng N

Reviewed by George Hooker
Chem & Chem Eng N 18:674 Ag 10 '40 290w

Chem & Met Eng 47:445 Je '40 90w

HOPKINS, EDWARD SCOTT, ed. Elements of sanitation; in association with Walter D. Binger [and others; foreword by Abel Wolman]. 435p il maps $4 Van Nostrand

628 Sanitation 39-23200

"Mr. Hopkins, Filtration Engineer of the Bureau of Water Supply, Baltimore, Md., has co-operated with twelve experts in their respective fields to produce 'a guide for the training of college students in the fundamentals of sanitation and hygiene.' While intended primarily for prospective health officers and public nurses, the engineering student should also discover much of interest. The topics are: the scientific background of sanitation; the meaning and determination of pH; water and sewage disinfection; public water supplies; sewage disposal; stream pollution and trade waste disposal; refuse disposal; the essentials of food sanitation; milk sanitation; ventilation and air conditioning; swimming pool control; environmental hygiene." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

"In reading a book of this type anyone in the field of public health or sanitation will feel that his particular specialty has been slighted at the expense of other, less important matters. . . In the hands of an experienced instructor, the book should be a useful tool in teaching the elements of sanitation." F. J. Maier
Am J Pub Health 30:557 My '40 210w

Chem & Met Eng 46:726 N '39 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:62 O '39

HOPSON, WILLIAM L. Gun-thrower. 256p $2 Phoenix 40-11752

Western story.

"All lively and picturesque in the border fashion."
+ Books p17 S 15 '40 80w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '40 40w

"There are double-crossings, murders, cattle rustling, a kidnapping, a range fire, and gunfighting all the way. Western fans who revel in gunsmoke will find plenty of that in this very animated and well-written tale." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p18 Ag 11 '40 140w

HOPWOOD, PERCY GEORGE SAMUEL. —And the other Mary; faith's victory over death; introd. by Charles S. Macfarland. 122p $1.25 Revell

237.2 Immortality 40-5292

Mystical study of death and the life after death, told in the guise of the author's experience with a dying parishioner in Glasgow. The author is an English pastor.

Christian Century 57:251 F 21 '40 10w

"Poetically conceived, the logic of this fine study of the great Illusion makes it a beautiful and valuable help when the cruel sadness of bereavement seems endlessly thick and dark. It brings faith into its fulfillment: Belief." M. L. E.
+ Churchman 154:35 My 1 '40 80w

"To many the volume will seem highly sentimental. To others, more partial to the mystic's temperament, it will come as an authentication of the reality and power of the spiritual life. The volume is chiefly of interest as a study in pastoral psychology." G. W. Davis
Crozer Q 17:153 Ap '40 180w

Reviewed by Vergilius Ferm
Ethics 50:482 Jl '40 80w

Reviewed by C. T. Holman
J Religion 20:414 O '40 50w

HORAN, MRS KENNETH (O'DONNELL). Night bell. 278p $2 Scribner

40-27329

Rose Morgan, wife of a surgeon at the Good Samaritan hospital, undergoes a serious operation. While she is convalescing, she watches the hospital life around her, gets to know the personalities of the doctors, nurses, and patients, and takes a hand in settling some major problems.

Booklist 36:325 Ap 15 '40

"In only one place does Mrs. Horan's hand slip. It is a minor flaw, but it seems hardly in character for the finely drawn Sister Seraphina to tell her closely guarded secret to Rose Morgan in the presence of a nurse and interne. Outside of this, the book moves logically and swiftly, making the reader one with the storyteller." Rose Feld
+ — Books p10 Mr 31 '40 850w

Cath World 151:382 Je '40 160w

New Repub 102:586 Ap 29 '40 50w

"There are lavish details of the professional and emotional turmoil in the hospital, viewed from Rose Morgan's ringside seat. The untangling of the major problem is smooth but rather flat, a highly ethical but mild finish to a teasingly sensational set-up." B. S.
+ — N Y Times p21 Mr 31 '40 360w

"The novel moves along easily and has that specious smoothness which too often substitutes for characterization and plot. The contending surgeons wholly lack conviction. The hospital atmosphere is fairly well conveyed, but the detailed descriptions of operations and diseases seem dragged in and add nothing at all to the story's development. In brief this novel seems to the reviewer an undistinguished attempt to take advantage of a public's hypertrophied concern with the body and its ailments before that interest abates." M. S. U.
— + Sat R of Lit 21:31 Ap 6 '40 270w

HORAN, MRS KENNETH—Continued

"Much byplay of emotions makes this a very readable story which, in spite of some forcing of contrasts, can touch the lives of most readers."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '40 420w

Wis Lib Bul 36:100 My '40

HORGAN, PAUL. Figures in a landscape. 284p $2.50 Harper 40-7419

"Short descriptive articles and stories, some of them reprinted from magazines, and dealing with the Southwest from the early days of its discovery to the present. . . These brief scenes and sketches endeavor to show the essential unity of the place and the people." Library J

Booklist 36:398 Je 15 '40

"Mr. Horgan's plan for the book is interesting and new. . . As a writer Paul Horgan has improved his style greatly since his earlier work. This book is interesting and impressive, but the plan of the book sometimes is more exciting than its execution. . . The sketches of modern life, too, are interesting and true to fact. . . One is not likely to forget a good many of the tales within this novel. Nor will one forget Horgan's sensitive descriptions of the country. The purely informative chapters one will probably forget. And the book as a whole lacks the irrevocability with which scene should fade into scene with proper montage to indicate symbolic connections between past and present." E. L. Walton

+ — Books p8 Ap 21 '40 700w

"The book resurrects the reluctant adjective 'uneven.' There is much grand writing—'The Surgeon and the Nun' is as good as Hemingway —and much that simply doesn't click, as for example the New England transcendentalist who is supposed to be writing to the folks back home. All in all, though, the good outweighs the bad by a sizeable margin." G. K. Smart

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Je 22 '40 250w

Reviewed by J. G. E. Hopkins

Commonweal 32:412 S 6 '40 180w

"Vivid descriptions and good characterization are occasionally hampered by a somewhat mannered style. The book will appeal to adults interested in American life in all its aspects and particularly in the Southwest." A. T. Davidson

Library J 65:257 Mr 15 '40 130w

"On the whole, 'Figures in a Landscape' strikes me as an interesting experiment but not altogether a successful one. Some of the isolated stories are admirable; a picture of a region, a way of life, a tradition does emerge; and yet one feels regretfully that Mr. Horgan has not made the most of a first-rate idea. For one thing, he has been too literary. His running chronicle and commentary is couched in an over-careful, over-elaborate, rather mannered style which contrasts unpleasantly with the directness of the actual tales he has to tell. Though he is eloquent, he is more often precious or obscure. Secondly, as I have indicated, some of his tales are weak." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 21 '40 1150w

"Some of the episodes are sharp and pointed, but the book lacks direction and unity, and the essays, though often interesting, are superfluous."

+ — New Yorker 16:94 Ap 20 '40 60w

Reviewed by H. T. Moore

Sat R of Lit 22:5 Je 8 '40 360w

Time 35:88 Ap 29 '40 500w

HORNUNG, JULIUS LAWRENCE. Radio as a career. 212p $1.50 Funk

621.384 Radio. Radio workers (W) 40-10129

"The author takes the reader on a personal tour of the various divisions of the radio industry, describing the work of each, the necessary requirements of training to qualify for a position in its personnel, the duties of those holding positions, the remuneration and other details. The author shows how, especially in radio engineering, a high type of professional training and skill is required. An outline is included of work in radio engineering, with data about various courses in schools and colleges." Springf'd Republican

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '40

"Since only one chapter is devoted to non-engineering radio work, it is an excellent complement to Arnold's Do You Want to Get Into Radio [Book Review Digest, May 1940] which excludes technical and engineering work and training. The two together cover the field thoroughly and should be especially useful in high school libraries. This should give direction to the boy who likes to experiment with radio." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 65:596 Jl '40 170w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:39 Jl '40

"A comprehensive and practical treatise."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 3 '40 340w

Reviewed by Mary Hitchings

Survey 76:280 S '40 60w

HORRABIN, JAMES FRANCIS. An atlas-history of the second great war. 99p maps $1.50 Knopf [3s 6d Nelson]

940.53 European war, 1939-. Atlases. Geography, Historical (W) (40-27446)

"In this new atlas, done in the manner of his standard Atlas of Current Affairs, Mr. Horrabin sets forth graphically the physical background of the present struggle. By means of fifty-one maps and charts, with explanatory comment, he shows the condition not only of the belligerent nations but also of the principal neutrals. . . He sets forth the territorial limits and changes of these countries since 1914; their equipment in man-power and raw materials; the sources of their supplies; their industrial areas and principal lines of communication by both land and sea." Publisher's note

Booklist 36:363 My 15 '40

Bookmark p7 N '40

"A useful book for stay-at-home tacticians with a modest background."

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 4 '40 70w

"For the average newspaper reader who never can remember whether Hungary borders on Germany or is separated from it by another state, Mr. Horrabin's little book is just the thing. For the student of foreign affairs who finds that the usual atlas either omits the locality which has, perhaps, suddenly loomed into the news, or at best fails to allot it the desired focus, the book is even more valuable."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 29 '40 230w

Commonweal 32:27 Ap 26 '40 40w

"Both maps and diagrams are beautifully drawn, and though containing all the necessary information are remarkably clear and free from overcrowding. It is the sort of book which will appeal to all who like facts and figures presented graphically and particularly to those who have to teach them to the young."

+ Economist 138:573 Mr 30 '40 110w

New Repub 102:618 My 6 '40 50w

"The accompanying text is clear, and simple, and to the point. Mr. Horrabin believes in letting the maps and diagrams do the work. His well-known 'Atlas of Current Affairs' has gone into its seventh revised edition, and he also has turned out an 'Atlas of European History,' from the second century to the twentieth, and an 'Atlas of Empire.' All these books are practical, fair-minded, and useful, but the new World War addition is almost a 'must' for those who seriously try to unravel the current overseas mess." Roger Shaw

+ Sat R of Lit 22:6 Ap 27 '40 260w

"As supplementary reading to a daily paper the book supplies a need. Its helpfulness in interpreting the day's news and in giving a broader perspective to the dispatches from Europe is obvious. The author and the publisher make no claim to having presented a book for reading. It is rather one for assistance in research of the moment."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 6 '40 200w

"A very useful handbook for ready reference on the war." D. H. Popper

Survey G 29:560 N '40 120w

HORTON, WALTER MARSHALL. Can Christianity save civilization? 271p $2 Harper

261 Civilization, Christian 40-14418

"The author draws upon the rich fields of cultural anthropology and the history of religion to substantiate his conclusion that the present widespread collapse of national and continental cultures opens the way for the universal culture of the world community. Ranging over the centuries he shows that religion and particularly Christianity has repeatedly come to the rescue of dying cultures and reconstructed them into new and living systems. As he diagnoses the present situation he agrees with Spengler and Schweitzer that our own culture is dying, and with Schweitzer he holds that in the essence of Christianity there is sound basis for hope that it may be reborn." (Christian Century) Index.

Booklist 37:5 S '40

Bookmark p23 N '40

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes

Books p27 N 17 '40 600w

"This important book makes a substantial contribution to the growing literature out of which Christianity is fashioning the scientific and philosophic supports for its drive toward cosmic community." H. E. Fey

+ Christian Century 57:1083 S 4 '40 700w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 154:22 S 15 '40 340w

"This book is not for the timorous, the superficial or the hidebound. Certainly it brings no comfort to easy optimism. And yet it is hopeful nevertheless: sternly and searchingly hopeful of eventual success in the meeting of a challenge, if intention and courage be sufficiently strong. . . This is the moment to welcome this book with a thoughtful reading."

+ N Y Times p8 Jl 21 '40 500w

HORWILL, HERBERT WILLIAM. An Anglo-American interpreter. 100p $1 (2s 6d) Oxford

427.9 Americanisms

A phrase-book and vocabulary of American terms for the English tourist.

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 18:407 S 16 '39 470w

"This book is as seductive as a dish of salted almonds, and as savorous and delectable. Its classified vocabularies touch practically every department of modern existence and its miscellaneous phrases, alphabetically arranged, fill forty-five pages. The author (who also compiled the 'Oxford Dictionary of Modern American Usage') has gone at his task with disarming modesty, omitted mere slang for the most part and produced a careful work of practical interest and value. It is a happy chance that it is entertaining as well."

+ N Y Times p2 Mr 24 '40 470w

"As was to be expected, Mr. Horwill has displayed a mastery of the subject that no one could rival. His learning in both tongues is prodigious and the most devoted and learned student of American civilisation will learn a great deal from this book, even if it is only the renewed knowledge that we all of us speak an Americanised tongue and that despite the protests of snobs and pedants, of stuffed-shirts and highbrows, the course of linguistic empire has taken its course westward." D. W. Brogan

+ — Spec 163:415 S 22 '39 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p555 S 23 '39 190w

HOTCHKISS, GEORGE BURTON. An outline of advertising; its philosophy, science, art, and strategy. rev ed 631p il $4 (18s) Macmillan

659.1 Advertising (W) 40-4495

"Some rewriting and revision bring the main part of the book up to date; there are new illustrations and three new chapters on trademarks, packages, advertising production, and advertisement testing." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1934. Index.

Reviewed by Harold Alspaugh

Ann Am Acad 210:177 Jl '40 650w

Booklist 36:328 Ap 15 '40

HOUGH, HENRY BEETLE. Country editor. 325p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-27604

Personal story of the author's twenty years as editor of the Vineyard Gazette, a weekly newspaper, founded in 1846 and published in Edgartown, Martha's Vineyard.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic S '40 170w

Booklist 37:11 S '40

Bookmark 2:10 Ja '41

"Mr Hough has given the flavor of the Island and portrayed the character of its people. You see the narrow little streets of Edgartown just at twilight on a late fall evening. You smell the salt breeze blowing in across the harbor from the ocean. You hear New England voices, rich with dry Yankee humor telling their unique tales and anecdotes. To those who know the Vineyard, reading Mr. Hough's book is like spending a day on the Island. To those who don't know the Vineyard, well—reading Mr. Hough's book is the best way to become acquainted." Barbara Woollcott

+ Books p1 Ag 11 '40 1700w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 Ag 9 '40 600w

"'Country Editor' is an important book in many ways. Some of the technical problems may be more pertinent to the writing craft, it is true; but no person could do less than benefit from the lesson in simple Americanism, and creative living. Simplicity and beauty of prose is assuredly a prime quality of the book." Virginia & A. E. Larsson

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 10 '40 900w

"The whole story, charmingly written, displays, unadorned and unembellished, a wise and patient philosophy of life and living. . . The book is replete with reminiscences, some intensely interesting, some of importance only because they illuminate and sharply delineate, not the characteristics of the off-shore people whom they describe picturesquely, so much as the patience, the wisdom, and the persistent courage of the young adventurers." F. L. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 24 '40 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

"On the face of it, this is a book which stands a good chance of being bought by a lot of people. It is attractively written, with enough wit and ease to hold any reader's attention, and it deals with matter perennially interesting: how a man and his wife carved out of life the measure of success they truly desired. And it fits into that pattern of rediscovery of America which has so strongly

HOUGH, H. B.—Continued
appealed to Americans these last few years. Nor is there a word or sentiment in it calculated to disturb the susceptibilities of anyone." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 32:392 Ag 30 '40 850w

"With rare appreciation of human nature and an ability to portray character and incident, Mr. Hough gives a picture of a cross section of the community and its life as it passes in and out of the office of the Gazette. Added to this he makes one feel the charm and interest of his old island and of Edgartown in particular. This is a book which should appeal to a variety of ages." Jacqueline Overton

+ Library J 65:652 Ag '40 120w

"Publicity about this book may have created the impression that it is another one of those cracker-box glorifications of the small town in which the tobacco-chawin' editor spins tall yarns about professional 'local characters.' On the contrary, it is a serene and dignified chronicle of civilized living, written in a style as distinguished as that which marks the editorials in the Gazette itself." McAlister Coleman

+ Nation 151:279 S 28 '40 650w

"A book that wears well for leisurely reading."

+ New Repub 103:286 Ag 26 '40 50w

"We have here, I think, what will prove to be for many people one of the most delectable books of the year. It is not only that; what is more important, it is also an honest and convincing picture of one segment in the American way of life. It is one more of those personal records which add something to our understanding and appreciation of the American scene. Its value as entertainment is equaled by its worth as a suggestive stimulant to thought about some of the things in our daily possession which we have taken so casually for granted and which may demand our every effort and sacrifice to preserve." J. D. Adams

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 11 '40 1400w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 16:60 Ag 10 '40 900w

"Mr. Hough finds good in small things and shares it with his readers. . . His book is a faithful and interesting contribution to the records of journalism." C. McD. Puckette

+ Sat R of Lit 22:12 Ag 17 '40 270w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 11 '40 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 36:165 D '40

HOUSE, SUSAN ADELINE (BEERS) (MRS JOHN HENRY HOUSE). A life for the Balkans; as told to J. M. Nankivell. 208p il $2 Revell

B or 92 House, John Henry. Thessalonike, Greece. Agricultural and industrial institute 40-5686

The story of John Henry House of the American Farm school at Thessalonike, Greece. Sixty-three of his ninety years were given to missionary work in the Balkans.

Christian Century 57:116 Ja 24 '40 80w

"This life in the Balkans was filled with fascinating incidents and illuminates the folk ways of exceedingly interesting peoples. The book grips one's attention and leaves him inspired." R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 29 '40 650w

"There is no small amount of adventure in this book, and always a fine blending of courage, progressiveness and simple brotherly love. Mrs. House has told her story with quiet naturalness and has given it thus a genuine force."

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 24 '40 440w

HOUSEHOLD, GEOFFREY. The salvation of Pisco Gabar, and other stories. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 322p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Chatto]

(W) 40-27447

Volume of short stories by the author of Rogue Male (Book Review Digest, 1939). Contents: The salvation of Pisco Gabar; El Quixote del Cine; Estancia la Embajada; Delilah of the back stairs; Kangaroo loves me; Taboo; Dionysus and the Pard; Water of Iturrigorri; Technique; The chaplain to the embassy; An Irishman and a Jew; Women on wheels.

Booklist 36:364 My 15 '40

"Most warm-hearted and almost the most profound of the whole dozen narratives is an Irishman and a Jew, which positively ought to be made required reading for all members of refugee committees. . . Just as in the case of 'Rogue Male,' one feels certain while reading this that the author must surely be an engagingly and amazingly nice person and, somehow, not the kind of fellow who usually writes books at all. Perhaps this is Mr. Household's particular talent, that he is able to externalize and make understandable the inarticulate and unselfconscious 'regular fellow.'" Iris Barry

+ Books p6 Ap 14 '40 600w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 27 '40 800w

"The flair for the strange and bizarre can, of course, be a fascinating quality in a writer; but Mr. Household does not always succeed in rendering his effective. His settings are convincing, but his characters, like his plots, are apt to seem thin, and the result to appear but a flitting of shadows over the landscape. The story that gives the book its title, and another, 'El Quixote del Cine,' make the deepest impression."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 F 1 '39 290w

Reviewed by Thomas Moult

Manchester Guardian p7 O 4 '38 270w

"Household is a natural story-teller; vivid prose, good selection, interest and fun too. But there is more in it. He has ranged just about everywhere, going with a quick eye for the human and absurd but no malice, in fellowship and with gusto." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 102:584 Ap 29 '40 430w

"The title story is the most deft; 'Delilah of the Back Stairs' has the most depth; 'Taboo' is the most daft; 'El Quixote del Cine' has the best idea; 'Dionysus and the Pard' is the most amusing of the raconteur pieces, not for its story but for its breezy humor of expression; 'Kangaroo Loves Me' is a character sketch of an old pattern; 'An Irishman and a Jew' is the most sentimental; 'Estancia la Embajada' is the most disappointing, for it contains some of the best things in the book but doesn't amount to anything as a tale. They all have an engaging quality." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 14 '40 700w

New Yorker 16:98 Ap 13 '40 40w

Pratt p24 autumn '40

"Although the title story of this collection is quite the best, the reader will find an extraordinary variety in Mr. Household's short stories, and very few among them that do not reward his attention with a natural charm that is all the author's own. . . The least successful of these stories is the longest and the closest to home, that of a London butler's love affair with a London porter's wife. . . If you put this volume on your shelves you will take it down to reread at least four of its stories. And that is a fine average for any small company of short fiction." O. J.

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:20 Jl 13 '40 350w

Time 35:100 Ap 22 '40 40w

"This is a stimulating book which seems to add a dash of courage as well as of gaiety to the reader's mind."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p649 O 8 '38 240w

HOUSMAN, ALFRED EDWARD. Collected poems. 264p $3 Holt [7s 6d Cape, J]
821 (W) 40-27330

The first collected edition of Housman's poems. It consists of: A Shropshire Lad; Last Poems; More Last Poems; some additional poems; and translations. There is a chronology of the poems, and index of first lines and titles.

Booklist 36:322 Ap 15 '40

Bookmark p8 My '40

"It is a volume for all admirers of the man who has been called the greatest English poet of our day. . . As a whole, the latest additions to the body of Housman's work add little to the original 'Shropshire Lad' and 'Last Poems.' But there are poems among them, 'the better for the embittered hour,' that may stand with the best of such flawless lyric writing as English poetry is not likely to see soon again." Ruth Lechlitner
+ — Books p6 Mr 17 '40 1250w

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 20 '40 240w

"Here is the volume for all who read and loved A Shropshire Lad and the other verse by this great contributor to English letters." W. P. Sears, Jr.
+ Churchman 154:17 Mr 15 '40 90w

"As, presumably, the few additional poems given at the end of this edition represent the last of Mr. Housman's work we are to have, it is unfortunate that the author's literary executors have chosen to suppress or overlook the very witty parody of a Greek drama which appeared in the Cornhill Magazine many years ago. . . It is unfortunate, too, that the very fine translation of a poem of Sappho on page 169 is printed as an original poem and not accredited to its original author as are the other translations. The new poems given us in this edition are as fastidious and perfect in their way as were their predecessors." J. G. E. Hopkins
Commonweal 31:498 Mr 29 '40 320w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum
Forum 103:322 Je '40 600w

Reviewed by Alfred Kreymborg
Living Age 358:394 Je '40 450w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel
Nation 150:684 Je 1 '40 2600w

"What is exciting about this book is its cumulative effect. Housman's verse throughout his life shows an extraordinary identity of mood. . . While technically he maintained a consistently high level, 'Last Poems' is in my opinion a better collection than 'A Shropshire Lad' because less dominated by the pseudo-pastoral element. His admirers still refer chiefly to these two collections, but the other two sections of this book make valuable additions to the picture." Louis MacNeice
+ New Repub 102:583 Ap 29 '40 900w

"In his own way and with a new music Housman has added to and advanced the cause of English poetry, bringing to it the perfection of its art. It may be, for all I know, the last perfection of its kind; it may quite likely be, as the young men say, that Housman's lovely lines are no more than a melancholy echo of the past and a prescience of the death of all of us." P. M. Jack
+ N Y Times p1 Mr 17 '40 1500w

New Yorker 16:108 Mr 16 '40 20w

Reviewed by J. P. Bishop
Poetry 56:144 Je '40 3350w

Sat R of Lit 22:21 Je 1 '40 150w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée
Spec 164:22 Ja 5 '40 1150w

"Simple, concise, resigned, delightful—perhaps these four words summarize 'The Collected Poems of A. E. Housman.' "
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 31 '40 600w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory
Yale R n s 29:841 summer '40 2750w

HOUSMAN (house'măn)

HOUSTON, MARGARET BELL (MRS W. H. PROBERT). Pilgrim in Manhattan. 263p $2 Appleton-Century 40-12657

Chloe Cameron came from Oklahoma to New York bent on making a career in radio by her impersonations. Chloe's rise to fame is complicated by the presence of three men in her life—a hard-up young poet, a home-town boy, and a wealthy man whose interest in Chloe's career threatens for a time both the career and her happiness.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p11 Ag 4 '40 200w

"Miss Houston's novel is light-hearted and merry. Chloe Cameron's ups and downs in adventure and romance are kept in nice balance for pleasant pastime reading. The book, like Chloe, offers successful light entertainment." B. S.
+ N Y Times p15 Jl 21 '40 220w

HOUSTON, MARY GALWAY. Medieval costume in England and France; the 13th, 14th and 15th centuries; with 8 plates in colour and 350 drawings in black and white [by the author]. (Technical hist. of costume) 228p $4.25 Macmillan [12s 6d Black, A. & C]
391 Costume (W) [40-13216]

"For each of the three centuries under discussion Miss Houston provides a brief but extremely helpful introductory chapter, in which she not only deals with the general style of costume but gives practical instructions and diagrams to aid designers in cutting-out and making. In the same systematic fashion she handles civilian costume, armour, regal costume, ecclesiastical costume and the dress of the religious orders; and for the fifteenth century, academic and legal costume as well. For each period she has also a chapter on ornament as applied to textiles and embroideries." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Glossary. Bibliography.

"The interested general reader as well as the student should find treasures in this book."
+ N Y Times p12 Jl 14 '40 290w

"This is such an exceptionally good and useful book that it would be difficult to praise it too highly. Miss Houston has already made something of a name for herself, with the knowledgeable, with the first two volumes of her admirable 'Technical History of Costume.' . . Not that this is a book for the general reader or the dilettante. It is emphatically a book for the enthusiast, the specialist and the student—crammed with facts, business-like and scholarly in method, blessedly and completely free from anecdote. . . It is a grand book for the genuine worker."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p720 D 9 '39 650w

HOVING, WALTER. Your career in business. 211p $2 Duell 371.42 Applications for positions. Profession, Choice of (W) 40-27448

Advice on how to prepare for a job, how to get it, and how to keep it, by a successful business man—president of a large New York department store.

Booklist 36:394 Je 15 '40

Reviewed by Dorothy Canfield
Books p2 My 5 '40 250w

Christian Century 57:642 My 15 '40 110w

Churchman 154:35 Jl 1 '40 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '40

"Evidently Mr. Hoving is interested in more than making money through trade, since he has troubled himself to write this engaging book, which manifests a sincere desire to help young people to economic accommodations." Harry McNeill
+ Commonweal 32:131 My 31 '40 500w

HOVING, WALTER—Continued

"Mr. Hoving has written a fine book. Its material is better than good—it is excellent. It contains the accumulation of knowledge gained by an important and successful businessman, who has reached the top because of his own fine achievements. As was to be expected, he approached this important problem of job getting in an orderly, analytical way." D. B. Tansill

+ Forum 103:329 Je '40 330w

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson
Library J 65:545 Je 15 '40 50w

"Mr. Hoving's book has no truck with illusion, is not content with superficiality, scorns the easy philosophy of indolence or defeat, refuses also to measure success in money terms. He writes with clarity and élan. And he gives his readers the benefit of a rare breadth of vision and of interest. This well-packed volume encloses no narrow concept of the 'business man's' life. Essentially practical, it holds a genuine inspiration for a business career."

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 28 '40 650w

Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 31 '40 600w

HOWARD, EDWIN LACLEDE. Children's gardens. 64p il $1 (2s 6d) Studio

635.9 Gardens—Juvenile literature [40-30111]

Descriptions, with working drawings, of twelve unusual gardens for children. Contents: The zoo garden; The water garden; The little farm; The bird garden; The circus garden; The tin can garden; The games garden; The forest garden; The picnic garden; Window gardens outside; Window gardens inside; The enchanted flower garden.

"Mr. Howard will prove a real friend to those boys and girls anxious to start the special garden which appeals and which will belong to them."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 8 '40 120w

"The author of this unusual little book is an architect who loves gardening and who is interested in children. This combination of interests has produced a unique book, valuable to parents who want their youngsters to get the most out of their Summer months of outdoor living." F. F. Rockwell

+ N Y Times p5 Je 9 '40 180w

HOWARD, FLORENCE RUTH. Green entry. 274p $2.50 Morrow

40-27759

A story of a horse show circuit in California and of a family whose whole interest is apparently concentrated on horses and horse shows. But side by side with the story of racing and jumping horses flows another story, the story of a mother's hopes of seeing her son and her second husband brought into closer relationship.

Booklist 37:116 N 15 '40

"Miss Howard evinces keen enthusiasm and familiarity with her subject. She can describe the sharp competition in a touch-and-out class, or a smooth performance by a handsomely matched pair of jumpers, or a driving contest of six-horse hitches of heavy Percherons, Suffolks, Clydesdales, and Belgians, and do it with infectious tenseness. She is somewhat less successful in dealing with the problems of her human characters, especially with the problem child, Alan. When it comes to horsey types whose part in the book is relatively unimportant, she does very well. They are recognizable, even acutely drawn." R. P. Harriss

+ — Books p10 N 17 '40 550w

"'Green Entry' is a definitely engaging book. Although it cannot possibly mean as much to the neophyte as to those who know horses, it is good reading on a number of counts. Joan, who tells the story, is likable and gallant, and her relations with young Alan are very deftly handled. . . Michael and Joan are not quite mature, and neither is 'Green Entry,' but as escapist literature their story is appealing." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p26 O 27 '40 750w

"The people are pleasantly, casually done; the horses are first rate."

New Yorker 16:86 O 26 '40 40w

Sat R of Lit 23:21 N 30 '40 290w

HOWARD, GRAEME KEITH. America and a new world order; with a foreword by James G. Harbord. 121p $2 Scribner

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. World politics 40-33231

In his prefatory note the author says: "The purpose of this book is to sketch the general background of international politics, and then to point the way toward an American foreign policy." Chief among his proposals for America are non-intervention in the present conflicts in Europe and Asia and the establishment of a cooperative region in North America and the Caribbean wherein economic and trade relationships would be worked out for the greatest good of the several separate nations included.

Booklist 37:147 D 15 '40

Reviewed by E. M. Lynskey
Commonweal 33:402 F 7 '41 800w

Reviewed by Robert Strausz-Hupe
Current Hist & Forum 52:4 D 24 '40 600w

New Repub 103:566 O 21 '40 70w

"Definitely rejecting the conclusion that the Nazi design for living and the aggressive axis program of expansion sufficiently menace United States interests to call for American entrance into the hostilities, Graeme K. Howard . . . presents a frank, forceful argument for strongly armed neutrality. . . Unlike most other American analysts of war developments, the author gives little emphasis to the evils of totalitarian dictatorship. He regards this, it appears, as merely a symptom of a world disease, which, he seems to expect, will disappear when international health is at length restored."

Springf'd Republican p7e N 24 '40 900w

HOWE, GEORGE FREDERICK. A general history of the United States since 1865. 654p il maps $2.50 Prentice-Hall

973.8 U.S.—History—1865- 39-9944

"Professor Howe, biographer of Chester A. Arthur, [Book Review Digest, 1934] has told again the familiar story of modern America, the rise of a democratic industrial world power, but with stronger emphasis upon what actually happened in politics and economics than can be found in many longer works." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

Am Econ R 29:575 S '39 20w

"To simplify the complex pattern of American development is a difficult task. The author has accomplished it in a succinct, thoughtful, and interesting style. But he did not help himself by devoting a quarter of his space to 'illustrative documents' quoted from statutes and treaties that may be conveniently consulted elsewhere. His account of foreign affairs, which runs to 193 pages, is based on the latest monographs and could not easily be surpassed within such limits." R. W. Shugg

+ — Ann Am Acad 206:209 N '39 490w

HOWE, QUINCY. News and how to understand it; in spite of the newspapers, in spite of the magazines, in spite of the radio. 250p $2 Simon & Schuster

070 Journalism. Newspapers. Radio broadcasting (W) 40-27806

Most of this book deals with the raw material of the news and where it comes from. The author has not attempted to cover all the newspapers, magazines, and radio stations or all the people from whom we get the news, but has confined himself to news sources and news channels which reach the whole country. Hence he includes press associations and those who write for them, chief syndicates and syndicate writers, a few of the more popular general magazines, and the radio networks. (Adapted from Foreword) Index.

Booklist 37:147 D 15 '40

Reviewed by John Chamberlain
Books p10 Ja 12 '41 700w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 57:1516 D 4 '40 420w

"This book [is] written in a breezy cocksure style. Some of the news magazines and reviews are also examined. Informative but not profound or terribly original. His definitions could stand overhauling and his opinions cry for shadings. As they stand, they are often too simple."
Commonweal 33:212 D 13 '40 70w

"It seems to me that Mr. Howe speaks much more feelingly, and authoritatively when he is on the subject of magazines, than when he sets out to catch the essences of the other news agencies. And he is on good, solid ground when he points out—by reason and example—that those magazines which have been hampered by the heavy hand of businessmen have been indifferent products and mostly failures, while those that have been dominated by their editors have been the outstanding successes." L. B. Bloch
+ — Living Age 359:384 D '40 200w
Nation 152:26 Ja 4 '41 110w

Reviewed by Robert van Gelder
N Y Times p5 Ja 26 '41 450w

"Lots of takeoffs, which you'll probably insist on reading aloud, especially the ones involving Mr. Swing, Miss Thompson, and Mr. Kaltenborn."
New Yorker 16:94 N 23 '40 120w

"The body of his book is filled with fascinating stuff about syndicates, columnists, news magazines, foreign correspondents, radio networks, and radio commentators. But one confusion is apparent almost everywhere; although the author repeatedly says that he is writing about international news, there is no notice of this in the title, and he constantly slips over into consideration of other aspects. Furthermore, his style is clipped and peripatetic, and his facts sometimes turn out to be incomplete or unsatisfactory. There are too many non sequiturs and too many half-reasoned conclusions." Paul Bixler
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:10 N 30 '40 600w

"[This] book is a blend of parody and caustic interpretation. The reader is likely to feel that the author means to be provocative and amusing rather than deeply instructive. Along with various criticisms subject to challenge, he makes points which are thoughtful and enlightening." E. N. Jenckes
Springf'd Republican p6 N 16 '40 1250w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 30:87 F '41 250w

HOWES, DURWARD, ed. See American women

HSIEH, PING-YING. Girl rebel; autobiography; with extracts from her New war diaries; tr. by Adet and Anor Lin; with an introd. by Lin Yutang. 270p $2 Day

B or 92 China—Social life and customs (W) 40-27582

The author of this autobiography is a young Chinese woman, who before she was twenty, rebelled against her family, refused to enter an arranged marriage, and became a soldier. In the ten years since, she has written three books—War Diary, Autobiography, and New War Diary. This book contains a translation of the Autobiography and the New War Diary done by the two young daughters of Lin Yutang.

Booklist 37:11 S '40

" 'Girl Rebel' gives a unique and touching picture of a woman soldier and propagandist and of the young China she represents. The translation of the two young Lins through virtue of its ingenuousness, earnestness and idealism, is extremely effective in catching the mood of the young rebel." Rose Feld
+ Books p3 Jl 14 '40 950w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
Boston Transcript p11 Jl 11 '40 600w

"The book, an autobiography, is both thrilling and tantalizing, thrilling because of the wild adventure and momentous events of the author's life, and tantalizing because no single volume can tell the entire story. Whenever China's war is ended, I hope she will expand the present work several fold and detail many of the adventures that are now barely hinted. For the present we must be content with an enthralling and searching human document." P. J. S.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 20 '40 240w

"Miss Pingying's book is notable for its unaffected candor and vigor. It is a story of struggle and the only softening notes are those of battle comradeship. It has the very style of conflict—terseness and tension. 'Girl Rebel' is valuable for giving a feeling of what is happening in China in its essence." Isidor Schneider
+ New Repub 103:391 S 16 '40 420w

"The book is written with a beautiful straightforwardness, and so it is translated. Adet Lin is 16 years old and Anor is 13; the individual flavor of their young minds is known from their delightful 'Our Family,' published a year ago. Here, in their deeply serious prefatory notes, as also in the maturity of their translation, they show the new young China, this side of the gulf the girl rebels crossed, in the fervor of a common patriotism."
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 28 '40 850w
New Yorker 16:66 Jl 13 '40 70w

"The passionate Girl Rebel, who is now at the front, has great literary ability as is revealed in the translation of her autobiography made by the youthful daughters of Dr. Lin Yutang. It is one of the best renderings from the Chinese that I know. Instead of using, as many of their compatriots do, eighteenth century English peppered with endless clichés Adet and Anor have brought over the idiom of their native language. The book is fresh, sincere, and vital." Florence Ayscough
+ Sat R of Lit 22:10 Jl 13 '40 600w

"Frankly and vividly [the author] writes of her experiences, of life in prison, in field-hospitals, in the trenches; of her boy and girl comrades—one of the girl-cadets was shorter than the rifle she carried! Her diaries of the present war are intensely realistic, yet always colored with her idealistic love for China and her comrades." L. C. Rich
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '40 600w

HUBBARD, LEONARD EGERTON. Economics of Soviet agriculture. 316p $4 (12s 6d) Macmillan

630.947 Agriculture—Russia 40-8529

"This is the third book which Mr. Hubbard has published on soviet economics. He is an Englishman who knows well the Russian language and whose family for generations lived in Russia; he paid several visits to Russia in the last years. The new book is devoted to Russian agriculture. . . It begins with a short description of pre-war conditions and is brought up to date (June, 1939). Mr. Hubbard is basing his study entirely on soviet statistics and official reports and skilfully criticizes them; unfortunately, he relates hardly anything from his personal observations. He concentrates all his attention on the collectivized peasantry (kolhozy) and says practically nothing about the state farms." Am Econ R

"A popular, impartial and well written study." Paul Haensel
+ Am Econ R 30:388 Je '40 320w

HUBBARD, L. E.—Continued
Reviewed by Karl Scholz
Ann Am Acad 209:230 My '40 500w
Foreign Affairs 19:260 O '40 10w

HUBBARD, MARGARET ANN. Little Whirlwind; il. by Dorothy Bayley. 292p $2 Macmillan
(W) 40-6696

Story of Scotch settlers on the Canadian border of what is now North Dakota, in 1823. The central character is a dynamic young twelve-year-old girl, Chatty MacKenzie, whose activities are the despair of her gentle mother, but will endear her to young readers.

Booklist 36:369 My 15 '40

"Notice this book carefully if you mean to write a story of pioneer America for children. Miss Hubbard keeps the action steadily moving and getting somewhere. Second, as much of this action takes place among Chippewa Indians she spent some time on a Chippewa reservation to check up on her local color. But more important than either of these, most important of anything in a book for ten or twelve year olds, the story centers on a girl with whom a girl will at once identify herself and whom a boy will at least respect." M. L. Becker
+ Books p16 My 5 '40 250w

"The story is somewhat long; the first hundred pages are devoted to life in Pembina. However, it is not just an ordinary pioneer story. The most interesting parts concern the tribal customs of the Chippewas, which the author knows well. Dorothy Bayley's illustrations are pleasing, and the book is well made. It should appeal to girls of ten to fourteen." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 65:455 My 15 '40 150w
Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:850 O 15 '40 50w

"This is a pioneer story which is more than just a series of amusing and exciting episodes, for it is colored by Chatty's own gusto and by her sensitive appreciation of the wilderness and her Indian friends. It is a first book which shows promise of good things to come and one which girls of 10 to 14 will enjoy for its own sake." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Ap 14 '40 370w
New Yorker 16:98 My 18 '40 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 120w

HUBERMAN, LEO. America, incorporated; recent economic history of the United States. 251p $2.75 Viking
330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions
(W) 40-13615

This economic history of the United States since the Civil war is in two parts: part one, closing with the crash of 1929; part two, covering the decade after 1929 and particularly the policies, achievements and failures of the New Deal. Index.

"Unfortunately, the author fails to outline fully the blueprint for his new order. Production for use rather than for profit apparently will be its cornerstone. The book should be useful as a presentation in popular style of the socialistic indictment of American capitalism." J. E. Kallenbach
Am Pol Sci R 34:1038 O '40 160w

"This is a political pamphlet for the times, written from a well-known dogmatic viewpoint, and repeating what we have all read many times."
Am Soc R 5:844 O '40 100w
Reviewed by D. L. Kemmerer
Ann Am Acad 213:228 Ja '41 500w
Booklist 37:30 O 1 '40

"Of course, the mere fact that Mr. Huberman is a fellow traveler of the Stalinists does not mean that his work could not be stimulating. John Strachey, after he left Mosley's Fascists for the Stalinist position, wrote 'The Coming Struggle for Power,' a specious but very brilliant performance. The trouble with Mr. Huberman's ten-acre canvas is that where the picture is easy it is banal and where it becomes difficult it is wrong. He lacks the first essential of the sound popularizer of complicated subjects: mastery of his material." Benjamin Stolberg
— Books p6 Jl 21 '40 1000w
Reviewed by J. B. Parrish
Churchman 154:20 S 1 '40 140w

"A readable volume expressing a personal judgment and current viewpoint, incomplete by itself, and leaving the reader with many questions in mind." H. A. Wooster
Library J 65:590 Jl '40 130w

"Leo Huberman's new book is well organized, simply written, and moves at a fast pace." Margaret Marshall
+ Nation 151:75 Jl 27 '40 800w

"A lively and conscientious interpretation from an already somewhat old-fashioned Leftist viewpoint."
New Yorker 16:67 Jl 27 '40 50w
Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 14 '40 650w
Wis Lib Bul 36:134 O '40

HUDSON, ALEC, pseud. See Holmes, W. J.

HUEBENER, THEODORE. La douce France; an introduction to France and its people; in English; with maps and drawings by the author [and other illustrations]. 362p $1.44 Holt
944 France—Civilization 40-7963

"A successful combination of a travel book, a history, and a commercial geography. The material is organized under six headings: The land of France, Important cities, Picturesque provinces, Famous men and women, Great periods in French history, The French people. . . Useful as supplementary reading for junior and senior high school." Booklist

Booklist 36:400 Je 15 '40
Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson
Library J 65:544 Je 15 '40 50w

" 'La Douce France' may possibly be useful as a factual outline, but if boys and girls are to become in any degree familiar with the French spirit and tradition, if they are to gain any real insight into the essential and distinctive culture of a great people, this book must be supplemented by others written with deeper sympathy and with imagination." A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p9 Jl 28 '40 270w

HUESTON, ETHEL (POWELSON) (MRS E. J. BEST). Uncle Lancy for president. 314p $2 Bobbs 40-6129

Sequel to The Honorable Uncle Lancy (Book Review Digest, 1939). This time the imperturbable Aunt Olympia determines to make her husband—"the middle-of-the-roadest" man in Washington—candidate for president. With the help of her three orphan nieces Aunt Olympia sails into action. The results are hilarious.

"Some of the episodes may strike you as unblushingly bizarre, and no doubt your impression is accurate. However, the same can be said for the antics of sundry unfictional figures now in political circulation." Lisle Bell
Books p15 Mr 24 '40 210w

"There is fun in Aunt Olympia's profundity. She can not make Uncle Lancy stick to his expertly written speeches, nor keep one of her publicity men from interfering with the baby's intimate care, but she can make some fine blustering remarks. . . Her machinations to keep her niece from falling in love are less successful than her campaigning but almost as funny. The romance does not interfere much with the main plot, which should be enjoyed by every one who expects to take an interest in the outcome of the vote next November." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 24 '40 220w

HUEY, EDWARD GREENE. What makes the wheels go round; a first-time physics; il. by Elmer Loemker. 175p $2.50 Reynal

530 Physics—Juvenile literature (W) 40-31163

A beginner's book on physics, illustrated with line drawings. Partial contents: Some very little things; Solids, liquids, gases; Why solid water floats; Air has weight; Magnetism; Electrons by rubbing; Generators and motors; Batteries; Locomotives; Evaporation; Friction; Sound; Telephone; What stars are made of; The magic box; The scientific spirit. Index.

Booklist 37:139 D 1 '40

"So far as the information goes it is sound, and it is all the eleven-year-old usually wants as yet. But in a world where atoms, electrons, neon lights, accelerators and turbines keep coming into family conversation, he does want to know what they are, and as far as he can be told, how they work. When I remember my own excursions into physics in school, and the gloomy books that frowned me away from them, I am glad to greet this pleasant, honest young starter on the road to knowledge, good for schools, no doubt, but almost as good for an inquiring child at home." M. L. Becker

+ Books p30 N 10 '40 230w

HUGHES, MRS DOROTHY BELLE (FLANAGAN). The cross-eyed bear. 289p $2 Duell 40-35993

Mystery story.

"Toward the home stretch the casualties mount alarmingly, but Miss Hughes so maneuvers matters that they play right into her hand and help to point the final bang-bang. Main thing is the brilliantly managed puzzle. Glittering, but not hard boiled." Will Cuppy

Books p30 D 8 '40 170w

"The author has succeeded admirably in depicting the fear and the suspense that are Lizanne's portion until the mystery is finally cleared up." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 D 15 '40 210w

"A not-so-beautiful girl answers an advertisement for a beautiful girl, gets the job, and from then on—well, don't read this when you're alone in the house. Very fine indeed."

+ New Yorker 16:88 D 21 '40 50w

Sat R of Lit 23:21 D 14 '40 50w

Time 37:60 Ja 6 '41 40w

HUGHES, MRS DOROTHY BELLE (FLANAGAN). The so blue marble. 240p $2 Duell 40-7242

Mystery story.

Booklist 36:384 Je 1 '40

"Write 'The So Blue Marble' down on your shopping list and make it a must. We're telling you that a thriller so impressive in wallop and so irresistible in manner and other merits hasn't appeared in a long time." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 Mr 24 '40 290w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 30 '40 80w

"If you want to know what happened to the so blue marble and to the people who became involved in the search for it, you will just have to read the book for yourselves, and if you wake up in the night screaming with terror, don't say we didn't warn you." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 Mr 24 '40 180w

"Refreshing style and a climax that should open your eyes."

+ New Yorker 16:76 Mr 30 '40 40w

Sat R of Lit 21:18 Mr 30 '40 40w

HUGHES, MRS HELEN (MACGILL). News and the human interest story. 313p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

070.1 Reporters and reporting. Journalism 40-27153

This study of human interest in relation to the news is at the same time a history of American journalism and of the change of emphasis in newspapers from practical, important news about public affairs to entertaining personal gossip. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. P. Shalloo

Am Soc R 5:663 Ag '40 320w

"There are other students who have gone over the same ground, but [Mrs Hughes'] unique contribution comes in a tolerant appraisal of the human-interest emphasis in news content. Where others have spoken of the degradation of an honorable institution, she evaluates the changes in the newspaper as natural and significant. This interesting sociological approach is a real contribution." M. M. Willey

+ Ann Am Acad 211:242 S '40 550w

Booklist 36:275 Mr 15 '40

"The book's rigid sobriety in comment is perhaps one of several vestigial remnants of the doctoral thesis. Others are a compensating orgy of quotation conspicuously acknowledged, charts, bibliographies, cross-references, repetitions, and occasional stylistic bloomers. Would that all doctoral theses were so readable, however. This book is written with a feeling for the strange humors of modern life and will justify the claim of its jacket to be 'of interest to anyone who enjoys the news behind the news.'" Earle Birney

+ — Canadian Forum 20:94 Je '40 300w

"There is not an intelligent newspaper reader in the country who would not be made more intelligent by reading this book, and even some of the unintelligent might be made a little less so."

+ Christian Century 57:114 Ja 24 '40 240w

"The specialist in this realm will find a good store of anecdotes which will make interesting reading, especially after the opening chapters, which repeat the familiar high spots in the history of the American newspaper and describe newspaper practices. However, the specialist will not find a precise statement of what curiosity moved the work, what selection of evidence was used in the analysis, and what significant relation this study bears to other questions in this field of social research. The book should be extremely useful in classes where students are concerned with why newspapers cover the news as they do. Mrs. Hughes has a good eye for the interesting illustration and a good sense for quotations that conform to the flow of her text." J. L. McCamy

+ Ethics 51:122 O '40 200w

New Statesman & Nation 19:474 Ap 6 '40 450w

"This book is an interesting and at times odd mixture. Much of it has the real flavor of the city room plus a shrewd perspective on day-by-day journalism; and some of it is a bit pedantic, perhaps in deference to its sociological parentage. . . The larger part of Mrs. Hughes's book is good, crisp reading. . . The pedantic side of the volume shows itself in the tracing of the newspaper's human interest as the lineal descendant of the folk ballad." C. McD. Puckette

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:7 Ja 20 '40 300w

Reviewed by A. M. Lee

Survey G 29:475 S '40 190w

HUGHES, LANGSTON. The big sea; an autobiography. 335p $3 Knopf

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-30931

Autobiography of the Negro poet, novelist, and playwright. It recounts his life story up to the age of twenty-seven, his trip on a freighter on the African run, his struggles to make a bare living in Paris during the '20s, his part in the Harlem renaissance, with an interlude of beachcombing in Genoa, and finally his college days and his early success as a poet.

Booklist 37:34 O 1 '40

"A friendly, ramblingly anecdotal chronicle characterized by a tolerance, simplicity and unpretentiousness that borders on the naive." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p5 Ag 25 '40 950w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 Ag 29 '40 900w

"As a poet, who must study his own emotions as the source of his writing, Hughes is never quite free of self-consciousness; as a Negro, even if his family could have been 'society' in Kansas had they been less poor, he naturally is never able to escape the implications of his racial handicaps; as an important member of the 'Negro Renaissance' of the prosperous Twenties he narrowly escaped the precious. The frankness with which he discusses his own difficulties is one of the most engaging features of his tale." E. B. Schriftgiesser

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 28 '40 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

Reviewed by Richard Wright

New Repub 103:600 O 28 '40 850w

"The book can be followed through with fascination as a success story and chronicle of adventure, full of living individuals and colorful scenes. . . Whether scenes and incidents are beautiful or ugly they are set down in quiet candor, without exhibitionism or apology; and only when one looks back does one realize how much reserve there is also, and how much one has read, even in this straightforwardness, by a glimpse here and there, a curtain drawn for a moment, a suggestion." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 25 '40 1650w

New Yorker 16:54 Ag 31 '40 30w

"When I was more than halfway through this book I felt a strong sense of disappointment. It seemed to me that it had not justified itself. It was vulgar in spots, trivial elsewhere; neither the contents nor the style were original, noteworthy, or compelling. But when I laid it down it was with regret. . . This is a moving, a well worthwhile book which should have been written; a most valuable contribution to the struggle of the Negro for life and justice and freedom and intellectual liberty in America. But I warn Mr. Hughes that when our military dictator takes the saddle 'The Big Sea' will burn among the first." O. G. Villard

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:12 Ag 31 '40 950w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '40 1800w

"The story is packed with adventure, some of it gayly purple, much of it dealing with personages both Negro and white with whom the author came into odd and interesting contact. It is written in beautiful English and is a fine tale." E. R. Embree

+ Survey G 30:96 F '41 390w

HUGHES, RICHARD ARTHUR WARREN. Don't blame me! pictures by Fritz Eichenberg. 159p $1.50 Harper

(W) 40-31724

Eleven fanciful short stories for young readers. The title story concerns a young man named Simon who bought a second hand motor cycle which developed such a distressing characteristic that he was glad to sell it again.

"Little children, happily unconcerned with technique, will happily hear or read these tales, but some people who would like to write simple tales of magic for children of today may read and envy." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 S 29 '40 240w

"Pure nonsense to be sure but fun and practical wisdom too, for the whole family."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 28 '40 270w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:849 O 15 '40 20w

"The ideas are original and entertaining with a touch or two of horror, and the style is crisp and direct. A few of the stories, 'The Doll and the Mermaid' and 'Don't Blame Me' in particular, are developed at some length, but most of them are short and slight. For the large library." E. W. Turpin

Library J 65:926 N 1 '40 70w

"The author of 'High Wind in Jamaica' can write as well for children as of them. This witty volume of short stories—fantasy, fairy tale, and highly logical nonsense—should prove a boon to families who read aloud."

+ New Yorker 16:128 D 7 '40 30w

Spec 165:658 D 13 '40 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p634 D 14 '40 430w

HUGHES, RUPERT. Attorney for the people; the story of Thomas E. Dewey. 361p il $2.75 Houghton

B or 92 Dewey, Thomas Edmund

(W) 40-27084

This campaign biography is less a personal portrait than an account of Mr Dewey's career as a public prosecutor and a record of the underworld crime which he has uncovered and brought to conviction.

Booklist 36:236 F 15 '40

"A masterly job of gilding the lily has been accomplished on behalf of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey of New York, a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, by one of the most skillful and prolific writers of profitable fiction in an earlier generation." Allen Raymond

Books p10 Ja 14 '40 550w

"Among other things, Mr. Hughes says he is going to destroy the idea that Mr. Dewey has no acquaintance with national affairs. I have faithfully read his 350 pages and looked into the index, which is full of names, but Mr. Dewey persistently remains a brilliant technician manipulating the law from the point of view of the prosecuting attorney, and there isn't the slightest evidence in the book that Mr. Dewey has even thought about the problems which Mr. Franklin raises [in his book, 1940]." H. M. Jones

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 13 '40 110w

"Although Mr. Hughes has written an entirely uncritical biography, it is a useful one." J. R. D.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 F 8 '40 600w

Reviewed by Carlton Brown

New Repub 102:864 Je 24 '40 190w

"Colorful, journalistic, and shrewd writing, intended to show that Dewey's experience is broad enough to fit him for national office."

New Yorker 15:63 Ja 13 '40 50w

"Despite fairly heavy brushwork, the essential virtues and natural attractiveness of the sitter emerge. One might wish, in the name of art, for some compensating relief against a too zealous advocacy." Melville Cane

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:13 Ja 13 '40 800w

"The year's first campaign biography . . . has the advantage of being breezily written and of reading like a crime story. Anybody who wants an account of New York racketeering and of the dramatic prosecutions conducted by Mr Dewey will find here a narrative as colorful and exciting as a tabloid newspaper."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 28 '40 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p347 Jl 20 '40 480w

Wis Lib Bul 36:29 F '40

HULL, HELEN ROSE. Experiment. 309p $2.50 Coward-McCann
(W) 40-27085

Four short novels by the author of Frost Flower, and Hardy Perennial. Contents: With the one coin for fee; Food for thought; Snow in summer; Experiment.

Booklist 36:238 F 15 '40

"Here, as in her novels, Miss Hull is proof against the glib and specious tale which 'success story' often connotes—that is, the glorification of the commonplace. The interest of her stories and the reality of her people seem to me due largely to the fact that she does not recognize the commonplace or at least does not fear it or feel a need to defend it. I doubt if people often bore her." Mary Ross
+ Books p4 Ja 21 '40 700w

"A satisfying and delightful book." Olga Owens
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 27 '40 800w

"Miss Hull employs a clear, unhurried prose that sets her characters down firmly and makes their domestic upheavals something of an event. Pleasant reading."
+ New Repub 102:158 Ja 29 '40 40w

"It is 'With the One Coin for Fee,' in the opinion of this reviewer, which places Miss Hull in the company of novelists like Edith Wharton and Willa Cather. Its opening page has the warmth and the depth of a rare old painting and this impression is sustained beyond the final word. . . One dares prophesy that 'With the One Coin for Fee,' will live as a classic, equal in stature to 'Ethan Frome' and 'The Red Badge of Courage.' Not forgetting the references made to Willa Cather, its quality may be compared to 'Death Comes for the Archbishop.' " Rose Feld
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 21 '40 1000w

"Cleverly told, and easy reading."
+ New Yorker 15:62 Ja 27 '40 50w

"The title of the book has a twofold significance. It is the name of the last, and best, story in the group. It also undoubtedly refers in the author's mind to the experiment she is making in a length half-way between the short story and the novelette. There are ideas that one can honestly say fall between the two categories. . . Blown up to a full-length novel, they do not carry. Pared down, they lose something; expanded, they lose more." R. C. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 21:11 Ja 27 '40 460w

Time 35:67 F 5 '40 170w

Wis Lib Bul 36:30 F '40

HULL, HELEN ROSE. Through the house door. 264p $2.50 Coward-McCann
(W) 40-27574

Character study of an American woman, who tho pampered and cared for all her life, was suddenly thrown upon her own resources when her husband became blind. In her struggle to make a living for herself, her husband, and her daughter, Beatrice lost sight of her family's need of her. An accident which nearly cost the life of her much loved mother was the turning point in Beatrice's career.

Booklist 36:429 Jl 15 '40

"Invention does not seem to be concerning this writer now. The device of an illness or an accident to deflate the emotions and get the characters out of 'the situation' has been used over and over. . . Miss Hull is certainly repeating herself, but though she has not bothered to ferret out new material, we must give her credit for sharpening her focus on the old." Muriel Chatain
Books p8 Jl 7 '40 700w

"Helen Hull has for fifteen years been accepted as a discerning and entertaining writer of stories about contemporary American life. She is never colored by regionalism, and the wave of collectivism in fiction left her serenely untouched. Since 'Heat Lightning' she has moved steadily up into the uncrowded circle occupied by Edith Wharton and Willa Cather. Often compared to these two, she is still mostly Helen Hull; and this is her best book so far." Olga Owens
+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 6 '40 800w

Cath World 152:121 O '40 140w

"Mrs. Hull has a knack for story-telling but rather ostentatiously parades her analytic psychology which has brought her the compliment of being another Mrs. Wharton. Unfortunately she permits her characters to take themselves more seriously than is justified by their inherent cheapness. She has sharp penetration—witness the scene between the trained nurse and the patient—but little humor. 'Through the House Door' has no claim to being literature, but those who love fiction will find it a readable story of contemporary upper-West-Side Manhattan." E. V. R. W.
— + Commonweal 32:293 Jl 26 '40 270w

"It is honestly written, but smacks too much of the woman's magazine public. Men, and a good many women, will be impatient with it. Recommended for a limited public." Esther Johnston
+ — Library J 65:591 Jl '40 150w

New Repub 103:94 Jl 15 '40 50w

"Miss Hull always tells a good story, but her books hold claim to distinction for more than story. Unerringly she goes to the roots of human frailty, compassionately she unearths them for examination and in human kindness she hides them again from the light of day. Agatha as a fictional character is superb. . . Equally fine are her portraits of Julian, whose weakness lay in his sensitive pride, and of Leslie, not yet escaped from the chrysalis of childhood for all her seeming independence. But to this reviewer it is Agatha who takes first honors in this book." Rose Feld
+ N Y Times p6 Jl 14 '40 850w

"In general, these feminine novels, no matter how well written—and Miss Hull writes very well indeed—are apt to seem to the bewildered male reader nothing but sophisticated, conscientious variations on themes also to be found in the advice-to-the-lovelorn columns." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 16:65 Jl 13 '40 150w

"It is a good story enlivened with understanding, close to the reality of nice people in the apartment houses. It is all written with a sure touch in a craftsmanship admirable always. Yet somehow the book seems only as half lit with emotion as Julian's world of the half blind. There is, indeed, a good deal of light in it but not any fire." Jonathan Daniels
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:5 Jl 13 '40 410w

Time 36:64 Jl 29 '40 50w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 30:xii autumn '40 20w

HULL, KATHARINE, and WHITLOCK, PAMELA. Oxus in summer; il. by Pamela Whitlock. 271p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Cape, J] 40-4858

"[This] is a third book by veteran authors, who must be in their late teens by now. Exmoor ponies and their mysterious boy hero, Maurice, play a large part in the exciting story." Spec

"In a way, the Oxus stories are derivative. They began with the opening chapters of a book sent to Arthur Ransome by two schoolgirls who wanted to write like him. He cheered

HULL, K., and WHITLOCK, P.—Continued
them on; they used his 'formula'—if the word may be used for anything so alive—but their Maurice makes it all different. Nobody now calls attention to the youth of the writers, still under twenty. They have been accepted among our steady providers of children's literature." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 Mr 10 '40 380w

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p3 My 11 '40 40w

"For those who like outdoor life with horses and dogs, the fields and woods of Exmoor as this gay group of boys and girls return to it for imaginative play offers new mystery and excitement." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:169 My '40 50w

"Their new book has an odd romantic and imaginative violence which may later lift one or both of them out of the class of merely competent author. There is something faintly alarming to the adult in it, though it will not strike the child for whom it is intended in this way. But well as both write, and cleverly as they manage suspense, character, incident, and the still greater art of omission, Miss Whitlock will, I fear, never become a competent illustrator." Amabel Williams-Ellis
+ Manchester Guardian sup viii D 1 '39 140w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 18:840 D 9 '39 80w

" 'Oxus in Summer' shows increased facility in writing, but it is also superficial, as the other books are not, and the reader misses the unpretentious sincerity of the earlier stories. If these two authors are to fulfill the promise of their first books, they will be well advised to take their craft seriously and to spend a period of conscientious study before their next appearance in print." A. T. Eaton
+ — N Y Times p10 Ap 7 '40 490w
New Yorker 16:98 My 18 '40 30w

Reviewed by Amabel Williams-Ellis
Spec 163:840 D 8 '39 30w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '40 40w

HULL, RICHARD, pseud. See Sampson, R. H.

HULLINGER, EDWIN WARE. Plowing through; the story of the Negro in agriculture. 60p il $1.50 Morrow
325.26 Negroes in agriculture 40-33237

Photographs and brief descriptive text on the American Negro farmer, showing what the following are doing to help him: the National farm program; the Department of agriculture extension service; Agricultural experiment stations, etc.

Booklist 37:147 D 15 '40
Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '40 130w

HULTMAN, HELEN JOAN. Murder on route 40. 250p $2 Phoenix 40-6539

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p17 Ap 21 '40 160w

"The author has a fine plot, but she spoils it by making the majority of her characters completely run-of-the-mill." Marian Wiggin
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 60w

"The author might have done better with a simpler problem, for her narrative skill is not quite equal to the task she has set for herself in this story." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p24 Ap 14 '40 180w

HUMPHREY, ZEPHINE (MRS W. W. FAHNESTOCK). 'Allo good-by. 284p map $2.50 Dutton
917.2 Mexico—Description and travel. U.S.—Description and travel (W) 40-27519

Driven out of their Vermont home by a bad ear condition, aggravated by the winter weather, the author and her husband took a four months' trip in search of warmth and surcease of earache. They drove down the Atlantic coast, to Florida, thence to Texas, dipped down into Mexico, came back to the United States, went to Arizona, and returned home by a more northerly route. This account of their trip describes their various stopping places, the people they met, and the country they observed. The title is the greeting they received from the children in Mexico.

Booklist 36:397 Je 15 '40
Bookmark 2:8 Ja '41

"Their observations are amusing, original and completely personal. . . They are rambling wayfarers, with a sense of humor, and Mrs. Humphrey seems to have an uncanny sense of striking the essence of a country and its inhabitants. She gets a great deal of the poignant feeling of Mexico for instance by quietly observing one lone figure, bowed down beneath an enormously heavy stone burden." D. C. Hogner
+ Books p8 Je 9 '40 550w

"Although we always reply 'Yes' promptly to that question, 'Did you like Mexico?' we like Miss Humphrey for her honesty in saying that she did not. We like her as a traveling companion. In short, we like her. And her book, after all, is herself." Ruth Blodgett
+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 1 '40 600w

"It is the Vermont flavor that gives pungency to this account of Mexico. The author would not want her comments to be taken too seriously. They are, rather, to be enjoyed for the personalities of Zephine, Christopher, and Chevy, for charm of phrasing, and for a pleasant mixture of sympathy and romance with a playfully expressed but stubborn conviction that, east, west, north or south, Vermont is best." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 13 '40 600w

Reviewed by A. M. Colt
Library J 65:452 My 15 '40 170w

"The book is one of impressions, disclaiming any quota of prolonged study; but it has thrust and substance for all that. To be original is not to be eccentric, still less strident or exhibitionist: it is to be direct and honest and clear-souled, to keep the metal of one's own mind unalloyed. In that true and fine sense of an often misused word, Zephine Humphrey is a wholly original travel writer, and this is a wholly original travel book." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p19 Je 9 '40 1050w
Sat R of Lit 22:22 Jl 13 '40 250w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '40 1050w

HUNGERFORD, EDWARD. Locomotives on parade. 236p il $2.50 Crowell
621.13 Locomotives 41-51509

History of the steam locomotive engine and its part in the beginning and development of railroading in the United States. The author, who wrote the script of Railroads on Parade for the World's fair, has added anecdotal details of American locomotives to the present, including electric, Diesel, and combination types. Index.

Booklist 37:237 F 1 '41
Christian Century 58:27 Ja 1 '41 20w

Reviewed by Florence O'Gara
Library J 66:143 F 1 '41 140w

"Interestingly if not very well written, and seductively illustrated."
+ — New Yorker 16:64 D 28 '40 50w

HUNT, FRAZIER. The long trail from Texas; the story of Ad Spaugh, cattleman. 300p map $2.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Spaugh, Addison A. Cattle trade. Cowboys. Chisholm trail 40-9201

The Chisholm trail was the path of the great western cattle drives from Texas to Abilene, Kansas, the shipping point for beef during the 1870s and '80s. Ad Spaugh, son of a Kansas farmer, left his home in the '70s, to drive cattle over the Chisholm trail, and this story of his life is typical of the cowboy life of that time.

"Mr. Hunt has put the recollections of Mr. Spaugh into colloquial language and dialogue; indeed, the style might lead the unwary reader to suspect that it is more fiction than fact, larded as it is with snatches of conversation and observations which, after all this time, could not possibly be remembered accurately by any one—not even by the admirable Mr. Spaugh. However, notwithstanding these liberties, the book is thoroughly authentic." Stanley Walker

+ Books p13 Je 16 '40 500w

"The story sounds like fiction, for all its authentic tone; but we are told that Ad Spaugh is an actual cattleman, still managing his Wyoming ranch, although being 83, he does most of his riding in a car . . . and his story is a readable and accurate portrayal of one of the most glamorous epochs in American history." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 22 '40 600w

New Repub 103:93 Jl 15 '40 60w

"With painstaking honesty as to details of work the rough frontier life is pictured. But Mr. Hunt, an accomplished journalist, seems to have left most of the work to Ad Spaugh, with the result that some incidents and conversations are considerably overdone in a waste of words, while others have rather less space than they deserve. The book is far less interesting than the material warrants." Robert Van Gelder

+ — N Y Times p7 Je 2 '40 450w

New Yorker 16:95 My 25 '40 40w

HUNT, GEORGE T. The wars of the Iroquois; a study in intertribal trade relations. 209p map $3 Univ. of Wis. press

970.3 Iroquois Indians. Indians of North America—Commerce. Indians of North America—Wars 40-3755

A study of the wars waged by the Iroquois during the seventeenth century by which they gained a dominant position among North American Indian tribes. The author has set out to show that early theories concerning the causes of the wars and the Iroquois successes are only partially true and that the real motivation was economic, a desire and need for trade with white settlers. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. N. Fenton

Am Anthropol 42:662 O '40 1550w

"The reviewer is not competent to appraise Professor Hunt's treatment of the source material; he has obviously followed the best traditions of historical research and has produced a clear picture of a puzzling period. Anthropologically, one regrets his somewhat dogmatic assertions as to tribal characteristics. . . It is true that these observations were made by contemporary observers, but surely the day is past when it is assumed that all members of a tribe (or a nation for that matter) can be pigeonholed as having characteristics which set them apart from their neighbors. Professor Hunt's bibliography is admirable." T. F. McIlwraith

+ — Am Hist R 46:415 Ja '41 600w

Reviewed by Leo Srole

Am J Soc 46:616 Ja '41 230w

"Although Professor Hunt presents an impressive case, on the basis of meticulous scholarship, for the view that Iroquois greatness derived from geographical location and economic need as stimulated by the influx of European trade goods, and that the early league was never much more than a mariage de convenance, yet it may be that in endeavouring to stand straight on the subject, he has leaned almost a little backwards. . . With these queries raised, however, it remains true that Professor Hunt has made a scholarly contribution to the literature of the fur trade which no student of North American economic history, or of the anthropology of the Iroquoian peoples, can afford to neglect." A. G. Bailey

+ — Canadian Hist R 21:212 Je '40 500w

HUNT, LEILA WALL. The child in the home. 259p $2.50 Prentice-Hall

649.1 Children—Nutrition. Children—Care and hygiene 39-31739

Textbook for students of home economics. Covers questions of care of mother during pregnancy, feeding and care of infants and older children, formation of habits, health essentials, etc. Index.

Reviewed by M. E. Champion

Am J Pub Health 30:558 My '40 150w

"The volume is not, in my opinion, one of the best available on the care of the child. While it is a fairly satisfactory survey of some information which at present we believe is likely to be helpful to young parents, this reviewer is convinced that the average American college student can tolerate, even in a first course, more real grist. He needs instruction that will provide him with more degrees of freedom, make him constantly challenge his practice, give him some conception of the fallibility of our knowledge and of the methods whereby it has been attained, make vivid the problem of individual differences, raise the curtain for him on the question of the conflict of values and forces, and develop in him a better understanding of the framework of values—the philosophy—in which dogma is set." H. L. Koch

— + El School J 40:634 Ap '40 600w

HUNT, MABEL LEIGH. Michel's island; drawings by Kate Seredy. 266p $2 Stokes

(W) 40-30716

"A boy's strong love of his home and his people is the theme of this tale of the Great Lakes country in the days of the voyageurs. Michel's mother is a fine and faithful Indian woman; his jolly, simple-hearted father a French trader. . . Michel's adventures are many, both among his mother's people and as a member of the little community around the American fort at Michilimackinac." Publisher's note

Booklist 37:40 O 1 '40

"All that happens in this story is significant. One understands why the habitant still sticks like a limpet to a fatherland that long since forgot him. In the course of a stirring story, with a mystery involved, one learns a good deal about why some people in America are what they are. Some of these people are Indians." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 22 '40 230w

"Miss Hunt has done her strongest character work, so far, in drawing the boastful, warm-hearted fur trader, Jarnac, and the sons he loved so well, especially Michel. Kate Seredy illustrates the story with sympathy and understanding." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:348 S '40 110w

"There is much the same sensitivity and the same sure touch that is in Mrs Armer's Waterless Mountain. But there is also adventure, intrigue, and the excitement of frontier life. For all of that, the book had best be read aloud to the ten and eleven year olds." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 65:714 S 1 '40 120w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:850 O 15 '40 50w

HUNT, M. L.—Continued
Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Nation 151:455 N 9 '40 10w

"In 'Michel's Island' Miss Hunt uses a larger canvas than in her earlier stories. She writes with a sincerity that shows how deeply the northern country and the old tale out of which she has fashioned her book have touched her imagination. The scene of her story is vivid and she gives the reader the freedom of a lovely region of green forest and sparkling water." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p9 D 15 '40 280w
Wis Lib Bul 36:153 N '40

HUNT, TERRY. Exercise and keep fit; foreword by Ernst Lubitsch. 202p il $1.96 Prentice-Hall
613.7 Exercise (W) 40-27395

Directions and photographs on some forty daily exercises, with short chapters on nerves and emotions, by a conditioner of movie stars and business men. A brief chapter contains notes about some of the movie actors and executives the author has helped.

"While these exercises seem clear and foolproof, it is wiser that they be started under expert advice and observation, both as to the total amount and choice of exercises and the proper technic of each." C. H. Keene
Am J Pub Health 30:1132 S '40 90w
Booklist 36:339 My 1 '40
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '40 50w

HUNT, WALTER BERNARD. Rustic construction. 78p il $1; pa 50c Bruce pub.
694 Woodwork 39-17941

"Brief directions and 137 really helpful drawings tell the boy or man who likes to work with tools and wood how he may, with little expense, make durable and simple rustic articles such as furniture, interior fixtures and equipment, fences and gates, arbors, bridges, wayside stands, road signs, and birdhouses." N Y New Tech Bks

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '40
N Y New Tech Bks 24:20 Ap '39
Wis Lib Bul 36:13 Ja '40

HUNTER, ESTELLE BELLE. Personality development; a practical self-teaching course. 5v il $5; de luxe ed $7.50 c1939 Better-speech inst. of Am, 307 N. Michigan av, Chicago
137.5 Personality. Conduct of life 40-4289

"A practical self-teaching course, comprising health, posture, dress, grooming, voice and speech, conversation, social and business etiquette, self-confidence, poise, living and working with others, acquiring background, improvement of mind and character, achieving success and happiness. . . The purpose of this five-volume course in personality development is not only to make the reader see his faults, but to recognize his possibilities for improvement and growth. According to the author the five volumes contain only tried and practical suggestions that anyone can put into practice." Subscription Bks Bul

"For a set of this type, Personality Development contains nothing that is offensive. The style is clear and the material is outlined in an orderly manner, making the set usable with a wide range of readers. The emphasis is placed on the interpretation of principles rather than on boring discussions of the basic principles of good conduct and wholesome human relationships. . . Personality Development is recommended."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 11:35 Jl '40 700w

HUNTER, REGINALD. Porlock; a portrait; with a foreword by John Cowper Powys; il. by William O'Brian. 152p $2 Caxton printers 40-33836

Greenwich Village in the prohibition era is the scene of this novel about shy little Mr Porlock. Mr Porlock's "inability to do anything, or receive anything with grace," and his constant, devastating fear were his two chief characteristics.

"Reginald Hunter, a widely traveled New Zealander, who now lives in New York, has set himself to sly humor and gently-spoken ribaldry in an unusual effort in portraiture. . . In his portrayal of a character Mr. Hunter has also portrayed a place. The suggestion of the Greenwich Village streets and backwaters is not the least charming, or the least capable, feature of his little book. It is not a book for every one, but those who like it will like it very much, and will probably go back and read it again, continuing to enjoy its drawings, too." H. M. Shaw
+ Books p12 N 3 '40 280w

Reviewed by David Stevenson
Canadian Forum 20:252 N '40 440w

"This portrait of Porlock . . . is a real creation in character. One need not go along with the publishers in thinking it a classic to be warmed by its mellow humor and unobtrusive literary and philosophical flavor."
+ Nation 151:400 O 26 '40 80w

HUNTER, ROBERT. Revolution; why, how, when? 385p $3 Harper
321.092 Revolutions 40-6961

"Mr. Hunter's book is a seemingly detached analysis of the nature of revolution and conspiratorial technique. Ransacking the past for analogies and uniformities and citing corroborative commentators from Thucydides to J. M. Keynes, the author describes conditions preceding revolutionary disturbances and the course of revolutionary cycles. He argues pretty convincingly that successful revolutions do not necessarily occur during times of large scale mass suffering and shows that they are never spontaneous proletarian or peasant outbursts." (Boston Transcript) Index.

"Mr. Hunter's close acquaintance with such people as Lenin, Júarez, Balabanoff, Kropotkin, the Webbs, and others, and his vivid presentation of their personalities, make a fascinating narrative of what is actually a serious, detached, and valuable contribution to an understanding of the social and economic convulsions of our times." L. P. Edwards
+ Ann Am Acad 211:207 S '40 400w
Booklist 36:360 My 15 '40

"This is a book which should be required reading in every American college. It is at the same time an anatomy of revolution and a guide to sane thinking about social and political problems. . . Only a radical could have made this book so convincing—but only a completely disillusioned radical could have written it." Nicholas Roosevelt
+ Books p4 Ap 7 '40 1200w

"As an historian of revolution [the author] can be interesting and informative; when he undertakes to expose the iniquities of venal New Dealers, he becomes merely another tiresome partisan." Daniel Aaron
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Mr 30 '40 280w 360w
New Repub 102:481 Ap 8 '40 50w

"The subject with which Mr. Hunter has dealt is so new, so vast and so intrinsically difficult . . . that even a plausible thesis deserves our very serious consideration. The author of the present volume has gone beyond plausibility and developed a singularly persuasive case. He has made a permanent contribution to an understanding of our times, and perhaps, through understanding, to fruitful social action." Simeon Strunsky
+ N Y Times p5 Mr 31 '40 1200w

Pratt p6 autumn '40

Reviewed by Crane Brinton
Sat R of Lit 22:20 My 18 '40 400w

"Despite certain limitations this book is a genuine contribution to the discussion of many types of revolutionary activity." H. W. Laidler
+ — Survey G 29:304 My '40 500w

HURD, CHARLES. The White House; a biography. 339p il $3.50 Harper

975.3 Washington, D. C. White House. Presidents (U.S.) 40-33307

A history of the house, its building, its renovations, furnishings, and decorations at various times, combined with anecdotes, chiefly on the social and lighter side, of its occupants from 1800 to 1940. Index.

"In many respects Mr. Hurd's book runs parallel to Harold J. Laski's 'The American Presidency,' to which, in fact, it might serve as an excellent introduction. 'The White House' is lighter in tone and much easier reading. To comprehend Laski one must have a fair working knowledge of American history and willingness to follow rather close reasoning; but to enjoy Hurd the requirements are much less. In fact, any one who knows the names of the Presidents and the main events of American history need not hesitate to pick up the book. Nevertheless, this breezy chronicler and the philosophical student reach conclusions that are very much alike." G. W. Johnson
+ — Books p6 N 10 '40 550w

"Since one could write the significant things about the White House in 1,000 words, Mr. Hurd discusses the presidents, their wives, and something of our history. I have read much better pen-portraits of Abigail Adams, Dolly Madison, Peggy Eaton and Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt Wilson in almost any book that treated of them. The stories about them are well known. Nor is the book always exact." Francis Downing
— Commonweal 33:61 N 1 '40 480w

Reviewed by Chauncey Hackett
New Repub 103:810 D 9 '40 240w

"Mr. Hurd has used his sources and his newspaper man's experience and flair to produce a work which, though it rambles about a little disconcertingly and loses its way every now and then, really gets somewhere and meantime provides both entertainment and information. He is best when he deals with the events and persons of the period which begins with Herbert Hoover and is proceeding with Franklin Roosevelt." H. I. Brock
+ — N Y Times p14 N 17 '40 800w
New Yorker 16:111 O 19 '40 30w

Reviewed by E. K. P. Stokes
Sat R of Lit 23:10 D 28 '40 700w

HURD, CLEMENT. The race. [27p] il $1.50 Random house 40-27605

Picture book with captions describing the race of a duck and a monkey, the conveyances they used, and how they got home. For picture book age.

Booklist 37:40 O 1 '40

"The reviewer has used this book with the age children for whom it is intended, namely the two and three years olds, but with no appreciable applause. . . The illustrations by the author are in the bold colors young children like and are simplified in detail. This sounds as if the book had all the proper ingredients for success. But it does not have that necessary touch of true inspiration that makes such stories as, The Three Little Kittens really beloved. Recommended for collections that can afford it as something to try; or for those centers working extensively with preschool children who feel they need more 'here and now' picture-books." M. F. Potter
Library J 65:813 O 1 '40 130w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:842 D 16 '40 30w

"With all the picture books being produced today there is no over-supply of those appealing to the nursery ages. This one has the qualities that a 3-year-old child loves, simplicity, clarity, variety, and action."
+ N Y Times p34 N 10 '40 110w

HURD, EDITH THACHER (MRS CLEMENT HURD). Engine, engine, no. 9; il. by Clement Hurd. [34p] $1 Lothrop

Locomotives—Juvenile literature (W) 40-34109

Explains in text and picture suitable for five to seven-year-olds just what makes the railroad engine work, what a roundhouse is, how an engine fuels and takes on water, answers signals, and other matters of interest to small boys.

Cath World 152:375 D '40 50w

"The book is a little older in appeal than The Little Train by Lois Lenski but might well be used to supplement it." M. F. Potter
+ Library J 65:1044 D 1 '40 80w

"Excellent illustrations. Education made easy." Katharine Scherman
+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 N 16 '40 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 240w

HUSSEY, DYNELEY. Verdi. (Master musicians; new ser) 355p il $2 Dutton [5s 6d Dent]

B or 92 Verdi, Giuseppe 40-31980

A combination of biography of Verdi and a study of his works. The work is based to some extent on a large collection of Verdi's letters recently published. Contains a chronology, bibliography, catalog of Verdi's works, and an index.

"After the unpromising beginning, Mr. Hussey surprises one by showing both understanding and sympathy in his careful discussion of Verdi's music. . . Moreover, Mr. Hussey recounts Verdi's life, whether in its musical aspect or in its phase as 'gentleman farmer,' interestingly and with due regard for its unexplosive drama." Peter Bowdoin
+ — Books p10 S 15 '40 850w

"Mr. Hussey's volume is a model of what a succinct critical biography should be. Well-arranged and clearly written, it combines the maximum of factual content with the maximum of criticism and comparison. Musical examples are not stinted, and there are many stimulating obiter dicta." Edward Sackville-West
+ New Statesman & Nation 20:44 Jl 13 '40 410w

"There have been many books about Verdi written during the last few years, and there is little new to be discovered about him; but Mr. Hussey has at any rate had the advantage of Luzio's Carteggi Verdiani, published in 1935, from which he has extracted biographical details of considerable interest. The chief merit of this study of Verdi lies in the remarkably attractive way in which the author, by a judicious process of selection, presents familiar material seen from an individual angle as regards the development of Verdi's personality. . . Mr. Hussey's book is a really important contribution to the dramaturgy of opera in general, from both the literary and the musical points of view." E. J. Dent
+ Spec 165:126 Ag 2 '40 800w
Times [London] Lit Sup p372 Ag 3 '40 800w

HUSSLEIN, JOSEPH CASPER, ed. Heroines of Christ. (Science and culture ser) 186p il $2 Bruce pub.

922.2 Roman Catholic church—Biography. Saints. Woman—Biography 40-3334

"This is a collection of biographical sketches of fifteen women of varied temperaments, times and environments. Sanctity is their common denominator. Many of them have been beati-

HUSSLEIN, J. C., ed.—Continued
fied, a number of them have been canonized and all of them evidenced heroic virtue. Several of them suffered martyrdom." Commonweal

---

"The biographies are necessarily brief, but in their telling, the incidents have been well chosen and strikingly narrated, and they bring the reader into closer contact with the human, lovable and strong personalities of the Saints." J. H. Barry
+ America 62:612 Mr 9 '40 120w

"Eleven members of the Society of Jesus have written these attractive sketches, and they have made them highly interesting reading. Fortunately, they have avoided the usual weaknesses of small biographies, which frequently are either concentrated numeration of bare facts or—the other extreme—entirely lacking in factual information. These writers have used both history and tradition, and they have told their stories in a manner which should appeal to a wide circle of readers." Lois Byrns
+ Commonweal 31:368 F 16 '40 250w

HUTCHENS, JANE. John Brown's cousin. 297p $2.50 Doubleday
40-30530

The life story of Henry Brown, a distant cousin of the famous John Brown, and son of a pioneer Missouri family. In childhood Henry had seen a man, his friend, killed in a duel and he vowed then never to kill a man. This vow affected his whole life: he fled to Canada during the Civil war and was ostracized on his return; in the World war he contrived to prevent his young grandson from enlisting; in his old age he went against family and neighbors to testify against a band of Ku Klux Klansmen.

Booklist 37:36 O 1 '40

"'John Brown's Cousin' is acted against an ominously important background, and Jane Hutchens has sketched in a wealth of living characters to make her book continuously interesting. Except for an occasional lapse into embarrassing colloquialism, and the fact that she usually overlooks the full treatment of immediate settings, she has done a solid and expert job. The difficulties of maneuvering double handfuls of characters into smooth-textured, logical action are capably resolved. Beginning in every respect as a typically dated, sectional novel, 'John Brown's Cousin' presently expands in both time and space, but its temporal and geographical as well as its human, moral perspective, is rarely distorted." Lawrence Olson
+ Books p12 S 22 '40 650w

"The author seems to draw her hero so consistently and sympathetically that we cannot understand why he leaves us a little cold. It isn't our objection to his pacifism. We, too, are a pacifist—that is, until those ideals which are our livelihood are threatened. And right there we believe is our quarrel with Miss Hutchens. If she wished to draw a pacifist, why not make him struggle with those ideals which are his life blood." Ruth Blodgett
— + Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '40 400w

Reviewed by L. N. Feipel
Library J 65:709 S 1 '40 90w

New Repub 103:394 S 16 '40 40w

"'John Brown's Cousin' is a very American novel, a story of vigor and thrift and hard work and nonconformity and stubborn opinionation. Jane Hutchens would say—or at least has strongly implied—that Henry Brown was John Brown's cousin by something more than a tenuous tie of blood." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p7 S 8 '40 700w

HUTCHINSON, RAY CORYTON. The fire and the wood. 440p $2.50 Farrar [9s 6d Cassell]
(W) 40-27607

Story of a young German-Jewish doctor in the years just before and after the Nazi rise to power. Josef Zeppichmann, a man of science fundamentally, is willing to sacrifice a patient in his search for a cure for tuberculosis, but as he works over the girl Minna, his own nature slowly undergoes a change. Nazi persecution leads to his own illness, and tho he and Minna escape to England it is too late to save their own happiness.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic S '40 120w

Booklist 37:12 S '40

Reviewed by C. S. Forester
Books p5 S 1 '40 1300w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 Ag 30 '40 400w

"I have a feeling that two or three years ago Mr. Hutchinson's novel would have been pigeonholed as lurid melodrama with propagandist intentions. Now there are signs that it is in for a shower of encomiums. But perhaps this is as it should be. Mr. Hutchinson's fears that the war has made his book faulty will, I think, prove a boomerang. It will rather make the defects of his novel seem unimportant in comparison with the enormous and terrible faults of society with which it so courageously deals." G. K. Smart
Boston Transcript p7 Ag 31 '40 700w

"The excitement of violent emotions and reactions, the transforming power of love make very dramatic this serious novel, well worth reading, although extremely painful to the reader at times." E. C. Thompson
+ Churchman 154:5 N 1 '40 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '40

Commonweal 32:474 S 27 '40 190w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p7 Je 14 '40 360w

Reviewed by Edward Sackville-West
New Statesman & Nation 19:750 Je 15 '40 1250w

"[A] deeply felt story, powerful in its writing and passionate in its truth." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p6 S 1 '40 1000w

"The last third of 'The Fire and the Wood' goes haywire—too many new characters and too much intensity—but the first two-thirds is capital. If Mr. Hutchinson lives (he's in his country's service, of course), he should prove one of the most interesting of England's post-Second World War novelists." Clifton Fadiman
+ — New Yorker 16:53 Ag 31 '40 350w

Reviewed by George Dangerfield
Sat R of Lit 22:6 Ag 31 '40 700w

"Mr. Hutchinson's new book is long and ambitious, with a largish canvas carefully filled in—much too carefully filled in in the opening chapters, which are clogged with unnecessary detail. . . His eye for people is sharp but not penetrating; he has invention but little imagination, so that existence never falls into a new perspective because of the construction he puts upon it." E. B. C. Jones
Spec 164:818 Je 14 '40 600w

"The best thing in the book is the study of Zeppichmann—an acute, well-balanced and sympathetic portrait of the creative man of science. Mr. Hutchinson writes, too, with evident knowledge of German types and moods and not without a certain affection for various domestic and intellectual aspects of German life. His weakness here, as in his previous work, is that the story is on too uneven a plane."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p289 Je 15 '40 360w

HUTCHINSON, MRS RUTH H. The blue butterfly goes to South America; pictures by Kurt Wiese. 112p $2 Whitman, A.
40-33454

Two children, Patty and Petey, leave the orphans' home where they had been staying, and go to South America to live with an uncle. This informational story describes for nine and ten year old readers the life in Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires, as observed by the two children from North America.

Booklist 37:140 D 1 '40

"Boys and girls who are just beginning to be interested in travel and foreign lands will enjoy learning what the author tells them about South American life."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 100w

HUTCHISON, MRS DOROTHY DWIGHT (POWER). Nathalie enters advertising; with il. by Forrest W. Orr. 277p $2 Little

39-30183

Vocational story for older girls. It describes the career of a young girl from the country who comes to New York determined to have a career in advertising. Starting as an assistant in the mechanical department of a small agency, Nathalie works her way up to a job as copy writer.

Booklist 36:290 Mr 15 '40

"How Mrs. Hutchison, whose personal experience in the advertising business was wide enough to take a girl through field after field of its activities, manages to get so much of its technique into a story for girls and keep the story going, is a matter for conjecture and congratulation. This is not a book to be read solely for entertainment value, but it is continuously entertaining, even to one who knows the business only as an outsider looking in. To an insider the scramble-and-rush is real." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 N 12 '39 400w

"Convincing characters and clever repartee enable this story to stand on its own feet as an entertaining novel for older girls generally. It is an excellent career story, too." Maude Adams

+ Library J 65:172 F 15 '40 140w

"A sparkling style and a pleasant amount of nonsense enliven a story which includes some useful hints on copywriting." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 3 '40 100w

HUTCHISON, MRS DOROTHY DWIGHT (POWER). Nathalie moves ahead; il. by Forrest W. Orr. 277p $2 Little

40-33633

Junior novel, which continues the story begun in Nathalie Enters Advertising.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p22 N 10 '40 310w

"This book tells the story of an intelligent young girl's second year in a New York advertising office. . . Her attitude toward criticism, obstacles, and a puzzling boy friend is refreshingly wholesome and the career angle is sketched in briefly and interestingly. The author's experience as an advertising writer shows in her clear-cut style." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 65:1045 D 1 '40 80w

"A complicated social life after work-hours provides humor and love interest." Katharine Scherman

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 N 16 '40 40w

HUTTON, CLARKE. Country A B C. unp il $2 Oxford [5s Chatto]

40-33634

A B C picture book, each letter having a separate page of colored illustrations showing plant and animal life.

"A more enjoyable way of learning the Alphabet cannot be imagined than that of turning the pages of 'A Country A B C.' "

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 N 25 '40 110w

"The letters are in modern type and the pictures are exquisitely drawn and colored, although some pages are much superior to others. A few names, such as hare, kestrel, and newts, will be unfamiliar to American children. Recommended for ages two to five." Marion Farquharson

+ Library J 65:769 S 15 '40 70w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale

Nation 151:454 N 9 '40 10w

"An alphabet which solves the problem of x and y with pictures of crossroads and a zigzag road is worth noting, if only for its ingenuity. . . Imagination has gone into the making of these lithographs with their colors, intense yet fresh, which seem as if they were going to clash and never do. . . An American child learning his alphabet will not be helped overmuch by the words and pictures of newts and kestrel, but the others stand for objects generally familiar to children who have ever seen either English or American country, and just the joyous use of color and form in these pages should encourage a return to the alphabet." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 S 29 '40 220w

New Yorker 16:125 D 7 '40 30w

HUXLEY, MRS ELSPETH. The African poison murders [Eng title: Death of an Aryan]. 279p $2 Harper [8s Methuen]

40-1701

Detective story.

Bookmark p14 Mr '40

"This is a whirlwind job, Grade 'A.'" Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 Ja 7 '40 150w

"It is a wild tale of mysterious killings and tortures on an African farm. The conclusion is anything but a surprise." Marian Wiggin

— Boston Transcript p6 Ja 6 '40 40w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian sup xiv D 1 '39 100w

"This book is not to be judged merely as a crime puzzle, although it is a baffling one. Its chief merit is the convincing manner in which the author pictures the background, with which she is thoroughly familiar, and the way in which the various characters fit into that background as if they belonged there and nowhere else." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 Ja 7 '40 200w

"The international complications are too faint to be annoying and the mysterious atmosphere is thick enough to cut with a knife. Beautifully written."

+ New Yorker 15:64 Ja 6 '40 60w

"Obscure venom, maniacal mutilations, deadly bush fire, thrilling climax compose major opus—at which purists may raise eyebrows. Top-flight."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 Ja 6 '40 50w

Time 35:68 F 5 '40 40w

"Some readers may find the local colour a little strong, the sentiment too sugary, and the cruelty to animals too nauseating, but it is all a question of individual taste."

Times [London] Lit Sup p627 O 28 '39 100w

HUXLEY, JULIAN SORELL, ed. The new systematics. 591p il $6 (21s) Oxford

574.012 Biology. Evolution. Genetics

[40-35139]

"Twenty-one authors have contributed articles to this publication. Except for a German, an American, a New Zealander, and a Russian, Britishers have supplied the material. 'Experimental and Synthetic Plant Taxonomy,' 'Mutations and Geographical Variation,' 'Problems of the Origin of Species,' 'The Problem of Closely Related Species Living in the Same Area,' 'Ecology and the Future of Systematics,' 'Embryology and Taxonomy,' 'A Museum

HUXLEY, J. S., ed.—Continued
Zoologist's View of Taxonomy,' and 'The New Systematics of Cultivated Plants' are among the subjects presented. Professor Huxley has contributed the introductory article, 'Towards the New Systematics.' Here he comments on the new approach, the origin of species, the effects of geographic isolation, different modes of speciation and their consequences, taxonomic theory and practice, the problem of subspecies, and character gradient and taxonomy. He concludes with some practical suggestions that have arisen from the articles or from discussions with the contributors." Scientific Bk Club R

Reviewed by J. W. Gregory
Nature 146:42 Jl 13 '40 1000w
Scientific Bk Club R 11:4 Ag '40 210w

"The various authors fulfil their allotted tasks with admirable conciseness and clarity; and the results of their researches go far towards justifying the title of the book. 'The New Systematics' is a notable contribution to the literature of biological knowledge, and should be in the hands of all who wish to keep abreast of the latest developments and discoveries within the scope of the subjects with which it deals."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p475 S 14 '40 220w

I

IMHOFF, KARL, and FAIR, GORDON MASKEW. Sewage treatment; with a discussion of industrial wastes by Edward Warren Moore. 370p il $3 Wiley

628.3 Sewage disposal 40-14678

Discusses "briefly and simply the considerations and calculations that enter into the design and operation of modern sewage treatment plants," with especial attention to American requirements. The bulk of the book is given over to discussion of the basic principles involved and their applications. Index.

"The book is up to date and does not emphasize anywhere radical departures of established practice. Some very definite statements are made indicating the conviction of the authors. . . The book is written in remarkably clear language with conciseness of expression. The various chapters are balanced, covering the entire field. The book will be especially useful for engineers and chemists and forms an excellent foundation for teaching. Sewage treatment plant superintendents and operators will find it of much value." Willem Rudolfs
+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:908 O 25 '40 500w

"Both authors are active participants in, and thoughtful observers of developments in sewage disposal, and consequently their interpretation of process application and design has much practical value. . . Throughout the book there are many valuable tabular summaries of chemical costs, process efficiencies, sludge characteristics and other matters on which comparable data is frequently needed."
+ Eng N 125:63 Ag 29 '40 300w

INFELD, HARRY. Israel in The decline of the West. 257p $3 Bloch

296 Jews—Civilization. Spengler, Oswald 40-4304

"The author is a Spanish Jew, a psychologist, who studied with Freud. He now lives in South Africa. Though he is indebted to Spengler for part of the title, he criticizes Spengler's theory. If modern civilization is a disease, it is a curable one. The methods are those of modern psychology. The greater part of this thoughtful and scholarly work is devoted to a study of the place of the Jewish people and Jewish culture in the development and decline of European civilization." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 57:770 Je 12 '40 80w

"This reviewer recommends this book for its illumination of the past of Israel, but not for any light it throws upon its future." Baruch Braunstein
+ — J Religion 20:414 O '40 550w

INGERSOLL, RALPH MCALLISTER. Report on England, November, 1940. 202p $1.50 Simon & Schuster

940.5342 European war, 1939—Great Britain (W) 41-51511

The editor of PM spent two weeks in London and southern England in November, 1940, and wrote a series of articles about his experiences. These articles, first published in PM, have been expanded and enlarged to form this book. One of his most startling statements is that Hitler took London in September, 1940, and didn't know it.

Booklist 37:239 F 1 '41

"Ralph Ingersoll's articles on Great Britain under the air war, based on a two-weeks' flying visit to London in October, created something of a stir when they appeared as a series in his newspaper, 'PM.' Polished up . . . they seem even more impressive as vivid eye-witness reporting, but perhaps rather less so as a balanced judgment on events . . . Mr. Ingersoll may be subject to correction. But his is a good job of useful reporting." Walter Millis
+ — Books p8 Ja 5 '41 700w

"An unusual piece of work. That is partly because Mr. Ingersoll had unusual opportunities. Not only was he given complete freedom of action by the authorities, but Englishmen in all walks of life seemed to realize the urgency of his mission. Instead of showing him what they thought he ought to see, they encouraged him to go after what he himself wanted. A lot of average American questions are answered by Mr. Ingersoll's intelligent and energetic leg-work." J. C. Skinner
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 4 '41 700w

"This little book is not only packed with timely information, it is full of brilliantly written passages that take the reader right into bomb-ridden London. As long as Mr. Ingersoll sticks to this reporting of what he saw and heard, it is impossible to be anything but enthusiastic about his book. For one who knows the difficulties of collecting reliable information in war-time England, the volume and value of what Mr. Ingersoll did in the short space of two weeks spent in Britain is really remarkable. When he begins to draw conclusions, however, and to add his own observations and comments on things that happened before he arrived, it is not so easy to agree with him." Mallory Browne
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 14 '41 550w

"The whole picture is one of adaptability and resilience rather than the pursuance of set plans. This quick survey will bear more than a superficial reading."
N Y Times p3 Ja 19 '41 700w
New Yorker 16:64 Ja 11 '41 90w

Reviewed by Frederick Lawrence
Sat R of Lit 23:13 Ja 18 '41 900w

" 'Report on England' is a vivid and significant story, and one which few Americans will want to miss." R. J. C.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 19 '41 800w

"His comment is personal, short-angled, for no man can get an over-all view of any war. But he is honest, sensitive, and illuminating, though the rush of events has already dated some of his observations. Best of all are his pictures of 'the little people' amid the rubble and suffering; he loved and reverenced them. They are the heroes of a good book." Leon Whipple
+ — Survey G 30:87 F '41 700w

INGLIS-JONES, ELISABETH. Pay thy pleasure. 304p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Faber]

40-7244

This story, in a modern setting in twentieth century Wales, deals with the strange, frustrated life, the tragic love and death of Esther Girling. Esther's face was terribly scarred by fire in her babyhood, her childhood was passed under the shadow of a cruel, unhappy father, her young womanhood was spent as a shy recluse. At forty-seven, heiress of a large fortune, she bought a lover, and knew some little happiness before her story inevitably ended in disaster.

"If you have any complaint that the current crop of scoundrels in fiction is not quite up to nineteenth century specimens, that they are underweight and lacking in red blood and crimson curses, Elisabeth Inglis-Jones will give you immediate relief. It has been some time since a blackguard of such unimpeachable vileness as Lew Gower has been at large, and you should enjoy him thoroughly." Lisle Bell

+ Books p10 F 11 '40 450w

"The writing has precision. This novel, however, does not reach tragic status." Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 S 29 '39 230w

"Altogether this is a somber affair, with a dark 'Wuthering Heights' atmosphere and a story that's not strong enough to hold together its grim climaxes."

— New Repub 102:322 Mr 4 '40 50w

"Miss Inglis-Jones has qualities unsuggested in her theme, and brings to the story the insight and imagination that distinguish writing from reportage." John Mair

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:377 S 9 '39 160w

"It is a gloomy, violent tale, best read with Winter winds howling at the windows." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p7 F 4 '40 300w

"Depends on a constantly sustained suspense, and the suspense isn't always sustained."

— New Yorker 15:70 F 3 '40 40w

"It may be the very singleness of vision which adds depth and clarity to every detail of Esther's torture and Gower's degeneracy, and yet there is that effect of their playing out their tragedy in a void, the only realities in a vague, thin world. If they had been placed against a texture of environment, secondary characters, minor details, comparable to their own roles, it would be possible to conjecture a novel of large and classic proportions." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:15 F 17 '40 300w

Time 35:78 F 12 '40 210w

"Not a pleasant story but a wholly readable book, with some very clever character drawing and a truthful and lovely glimpse of Wales in mist and in sunlight."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p561 S 30 '39 360w

INGRAM, ARTHUR FOLEY WINNINGTON, bp. Fifty years work in London. 249p $3 (10s 6d) Longmans

B or 92

"As rector of Bethnal Green, Bishop of Stepney and then as Bishop of London for thirty-eight years until his retirement in 1939, the author has had an extraordinary amount and variety of experience and has won a high place in the affection of those among whom he worked. In this informal and very personal record he discusses some of the problems he has encountered and relates his experiences both at home and on visits to Canada, the United States, Russia, Khartoum and the Far East." Christian Century

---

Christian Century 57:977 Ag 7 '40 80w

"It is written in such a perfectly charming and natural style that one can easily forget he is reading and imagine he can hear the bishop telling his story." E. S. Hertell

+ Churchman 154:18 S 1 '40 750w

"In plain words, if you seek in these pages for guidance as to why the world and the Church are where they are today you will not find it, but if you are curious as to the spiritual and psychological secrets which made Dr. Winnington-Ingram one of the most discussed, acclaimed and criticised figures in the world for fifty years, you will read this book (which, incidentally, bears many a trace of the haste with which it was written) with interest—and some smiles." Francis Gower

Spec 165:102 Jl 26 '40 370w

Times [London] Lit Sup p300 Je 22 '40 350w

INNES, HAMMOND. Trapped. 270p $2 Putnam

40-32081

Mystery story of the present World war. A London dramatic critic on a fishing trip to Cornwall is jerked overboard one day by what he thought was a shark. It was something entirely different and much more dangerous.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p18 N 3 '40 70w

"This is a story in which things happen, and the tenseness is one of adventure rather than of a puzzle to solve. But you don't want to know too much about what happens, until you find yourself following it—and that strange aphasia of Big Logan's for instance—step by step." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p16 O 6 '40 180w

New Yorker 16:109 O 19 '40 70w

"Hair-raiser."

Sat R of Lit 23:17 O 26 '40 40w

INNES, MICHAEL, pseud. See Stewart, J. I. M.

INNIS, HAROLD ADAMS. The cod fisheries; the history of an international economy. 520p maps $3.50 Yale univ. press

338.3 Cod fisheries 40-7538

An exhaustive and scholarly treatise on the international and economic aspects of the cod-fishing industry, in which the interplay of competing national interests, American, Canadian and European, and the development of commercialism have created a complex situation. Regionally, the discussion centers about New England, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. The study is included in the series of Relations of Canada and the United States, issued by the Division of economics and history of the Carnegie endowment for international peace.

Reviewed by S. H. Thompson

Am Econ R 30:601 S '40 450w

Reviewed by Henry Reiff

Am Pol Sci R 34:613 Je '40 170w

Reviewed by R. E. Moody

Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 130w

Christian Century 57:354 Mr 13 '40 70w

Foreign Affairs 19:253 O '40 20w

"There is a wealth of documentary evidence of which Professor Innis has made fundamental use. A substantial part of the volume consists of quotations from such sources and gives a realistic flavor to the discussion. . . In his course from Cabot's discovery of these waters 'swarming with fish' to the present day of quick-freezing process and radio location of fish and markets, Professor Innis has cast his net wide and reaped a rich harvest with profit to many."

+ Geog R 30:351 Ap '40 750w

"This work is a monument of erudition in the field of meticulous, factual economic history. The reader is always impressed and sometimes overwhelmed by the evidences of beaver-like industry displayed in the uninterrupted flow of facts and figures and in the hundreds upon hundreds of footnote references to little-known source materials. . . Since the juridical and political aspects of these British-French and Canadian-American fishing disputes have been covered in many other works, Professor Innis wisely restricts his analysis to the economic aspects of the fisheries and their outcroppings in cultural, military, and international patterns. Within this field the work may well prove to be definitive, for it is difficult to perceive any need for a more intensive treatment of the subject." E. P. Hohman

INNIS, H. A.—Continued

+ — J Pol Econ 48:907 D '40 550w

INSTITUTE OF PACIFIC RELATIONS. Agrarian China. 258p $2.50 for sale by Univ. of Chicago press [10s 6d Allen, G]

630.951 Agriculture—China. China—Economic conditions. Land tenure—China [40-3471]

"This book is mainly a selection of articles from Chinese periodicals of the past few years, but in addition, some of the materials have been taken from hitherto unpublished studies. . . This collection has been prepared by members of the research staff of the Secretariat of the Institute of Pacific Relations with two aims in mind. It forms part of the Institute's programme of research into problems of land utilization, population and rural standards of living in Pacific countries and is intended in particular to supplement in certain respects the Institute's much more detailed statistical investigation of Chinese agriculture, recently completed by Professor J. Lossing Buck of the University of Nanking. It also represents a result of the Institute's attempt to make available to western students some little part of the great mass of new research which Chinese scholars have been conducting during recent years into the basic problems of social life and economic organization." Pref.

Foreign Affairs 18:763 Jl '40

"These articles will be useful to anyone interested in the social reforms which must come —indeed are coming—in China, but it will be well for the student in forecasting any solution not to under-estimate the deep-rooted individualism of the Chinese peasant." E. W. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 18 '39 240w

IRVINE, HELEN DOUGLAS-. See Douglas-Irvine, H.

IRVING, ROBERT LOCK GRAHAM. The Alps. 128p il maps $3 Scribner [10s 6d Batsford]

914 Alps. Mountaineering 40-14031

"The Alps are not contained within political boundaries. They cover most of Switzerland, stretch almost to the sea in France, can be seen in their covering of eternal snow from the outskirts of one of the large cities of Italy, and send the dramatic peaks of the Dolomites into what no doubt is considered without upper limits as the German sky. It is the most distinctive feature of this latest book about the Alps that its English author is not concerned with political boundaries at all. It leaves much of Switzerland untouched; it guides its readers through the Alps and makes them long for Alpine travel. Its colored frontispiece shows Mont Blanc in ethereal beauty; its 130 photographs include the spectacular, the majestic, and the picturesque, and its two maps are supplemented by a geological chart of Alpine structure." N Y Times

"Like other volumes of this travel series, the beautiful photographs are the main attraction; the text is informative, pleasant and making no effort to outpace the dramatic passion of the scenery."

+ Books p14 Ap 28 '40 160w

Reviewed by Arthur Waley

New Statesman & Nation 18:934 D 23 '39 230w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:24 Ap '40

"It is an excellent book of its kind. Although the author mentions Winter sports, has a good deal to say about Alpine flowers, and is much interested in mountain-climbing, his book's chief appeal is to the mountain-loving traveler."

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 3 '40 310w

"The text that accompanies picture-books is often a mere make-weight: Mr. Irving's book is an exception. His 120 pages of text are full of diverse and reliable information, and the 130 excellent photographs really illustrate the text. . . The standard of Alpine photography is high, but the photographs in this book are as good as those in any book of the kind; and although the life of the valleys, the pastures and the pine-woods is admirably represented, the climber will find plenty of rock-walls, ridges, cornices and ice-falls to give him armchair problems." Michael Roberts

+ Spec 163:939 D 29 '39 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p20 Ja 13 '40 850w

IRVING, WILLIAM HENRY. John Gay, favorite of the wits. 334p il $3.50 Duke univ.

B or 92 Gay, John 40-8098

"A detailed life of the author of 'The Beggar's Opera,' utilizing materials new and old in scholarly fashion. Rich in details not only of literary history but of a social background in which Swift, Pope, Arbuthnot, Chesterfield, the Queensberrys and Queen Caroline were among the chief figures." New Repub

"The marked increase in interest and knowledge of the Augustan Age, which is a feature of contemporary taste and scholarship, is the inspiration of this book. A great deal of information about Gay which has hitherto been scattered through old memoirs and periodicals is brought together and supplemented by a considerable amount of hitherto unpublished material."

+ Books p11 S 1 '40 400w

Nation 151:199 S 7 '40 220w

New Repub 102:681 My 20 '40 50w

"The interest of Professor Irving's volume lies not so much in his interpretative criticism of Gay's productions, good as it is, but rather in the fascinating background he draws of the Augustan Age that produced him. . . One can only hope that Professor Irving will collect John Gay's letters in book form. For the time being we must rest content with what is undoubtedly the most nearly definitive biography of the poet that we possess." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p24 My 19 '40 750w

"Professor Irving's book is the work of a scholar, and it has a definite value as a contribution to the history of eighteenth-century letters, though a student would have been grateful for a list of Gay's publications and a general bibliography. It is written with competence, though sometimes in a consciously elaborate style."

+ Spec 165:22 Jl 5 '40 220w

"Now for the first time a really exhaustive account of the poet's life is available. With scholarly patience, Mr. Irving has studied the memoirs, letters and innumerable quarrelsome pamphlets of that pamphleteering age, and gleaned from them a mosaic of facts which build up a portrait of an amiable if unromantic figure."

+ Theatre Arts 24:614 Ag '40 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p427 Ag 31 '40 330w

IRWIN, DAVID, and RECK, FRANKLIN MERING. One man against the North; foreword by Lowell Thomas. 244p il maps $2 Crowell

919.8 Arctic regions. Eskimos (W) 40-5585

An American in his early twenties made a solitary trip across the Arctic Circle, from January, 1933, to February, 1935. This account of his journey is a description of his adventures and mishaps en route, his life among the Eskimos, and the good sportsmanship with which he met his difficulties. The same story has been told in part in an earlier book: Alone Across the Top of the World (Book Review Digest, 1935).

Booklist 36:385 Je 1 '40

Books p21 My 5 '40 190w

"Boys will be delighted and instructed."
+ Christian Century 57:219 F 14 '39 40w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 29 '40 190w

"The book has no particular individual literary style but it is well written and runs along—a smooth, easy tale. There is a photograph of David with one of his dogs taken at the World's Fair. . . Though written in the first person, it is a book which should appeal to boys from twelve years on." J. F. Carter
+ Library J 65:354 Ap 15 '40 190w

"Plainly written, absorbing story. . . Interesting material on the Eskimos."
+ New Yorker 16:63 Mr 2 '40 30w

Wis Lib Bul 36:66 Ap '40

IRWIN, GRACE. The happy tower; pictures by the author. 305p $2 Lothrop

40-8614

"The Abbott family—five children and lighthearted parents—went to live in the country with high hopes. . . There was one cloud in their sky. The house was rented only until the owner, an opinionated old lady with the bad taste to dislike the place, could find a buyer." Books

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p16 My 5 '40 240w

Reviewed by E. M. Mack
Boston Transcript p2 Je 15 '40 210w

ISAACS, GERALD RUFUS, 2d marquis of Reading. See Reading, G. R. I.

IVES, GEORGE. Obstacles to human progress. 283p $3 Norton [10s 6d Allen, G]

301.15 Progress. Ethics. Social psychology. Antipathies and prejudices 39-24942

"This book is so packed with quotations as to be practically an anthology; however, though no argument runs strongly through it, there is more method than at first appears. . . Bertrand Russell has described the Good Life as inspired by love and guided by reason, and we can take it that the lives of those people who are not inspired by love and at the same time guided by reason are the chief obstacles to human advancement. Mr. Ives's instances bear this out: it is not even so much spontaneous hate and unreason, he shows, which militate against progress, as these things sanctioned, and indeed insisted upon, by the community." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Indexes.

"Mr. Ives has read not wisely but too well. He appears to have stuffed his mind so full of other people's thoughts as to have little room left for many of his own. . . Most of the quotations in Latin and French are bedevilled by misprints. The most interesting parts of the book are the chapters on rationalism and religion, which have little or nothing to do with its announced subject."
— + Canadian Forum 19:198 S '39 110w

"Mr. Ives has written, or perhaps one might say compiled, an interesting book rather in the style of Dean Inge. It is not on the same level as Dicey's book on Public Opinion and is rather more concerned with anthropology than with civilised communities. It is perhaps unfortunate that if Mr. Ives wishes to quote Latin, he should not make his quotations intelligible."
+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:704 My 6 '39 370w

"Mr. Ives's approach is not analytical, like Freud's, and he is not a stern materialist, like Marx; he is a qualified 'believer,' rather after Abelard's style. . . He would appear to be the last man to identify progress with the all too romantic triumphs of invention. Since, on the other hand, it is difficult to dissociate progress from the world's worldly success, so to speak, it is a wonder that Mr. Ives has had so much truck with the idea of progress, and has not instead concentrated on the problems of the individual conscience. But it would be unfair to leave the matter there; this book is a storehouse of ideas, a mine of relevant historical facts, and is full of useful references."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p212 Ap 15 '39 440w

J

JACKSON, ADA. Against the sun. 112p $1.50 Macmillan

821 40-9351

Volume of short poems, some on social and religious themes, others character studies of persons. Some of the poems included are reprinted from two earlier volumes published in England, Narrow Homes and The Widow.

Books p11 D 22 '40 140w

"This is poetry of simplicity and insight."
+ Christian Century 57:547 Ap 24 '40 70w

"Miss Jackson is a promising candidate for popularity within her limits, but to be a poet must deepen her soil with heavy trenching." B. S.
Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 26 '40 110w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 7 '40 280w

JACKSON, MRS CHARLOTTE E. (COBDEN). Tito, the pig of Guatemala; pictures by Kurt Wiese. 74p $2 Dodd

40-6446

Tito, the mischievous Guatemalan pig, lived in the mountains with his little Indian master, Diego. When he was taken to town to a fiesta, Tito caused more havoc than he usually did in the country, for he ate Diego's father's identification card. Then he repaired the damage he had caused in a truly spectacular manner.

Booklist 36:386 Je 1 '40

"Mrs. Jackson has a lovely sense of fun and of proper economy of words: her story jumps. Kurt Wiese has seldom done more in fewer strokes than in these pictures—most of them are in bright colors, but the sharp shadows of the black and whites have the very sense of strong tropic sunlight." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Ap 28 '40 280w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 My 27 '40 180w

"This light-hearted, original little comedy of misadventures will stamp Guatemala into the consciousness of 6 to 9 year-olds more vividly than three geography lessons, for its brisk writing conveys much of the color of the country and the pattern of every-day life. The color is repeated, too, though in crude tones not particularly suggestive of the country, in Kurt Wiese's pictures, heavier in line than usual but equally comic in spirit." E. L. Buell

JACKSON, C. E.—Continued
+ N Y Times p10 Ap 28 '40 210w
New Yorker 16:96 My 18 '40 30w

JACKSON, JOSEPH HENRY. Extra! extra! photographs by Scott Newhall. 48p $1.50 Macmillan

070 Newspapers—Juvenile literature (W) 40-27491

Terse account in prose, with accompanying photographs, showing how a big city newspaper gets out an extra. The process is followed step-by-step from the time of the turning in of an alarm of a big oil blaze, until the paper is called in the streets. Grades six to eight.

Booklist 36:386 Je 1 '40

"A picture will do at a glance what a page of print will not, but it will do more if it has the right print—and not too much of it—alongside. In this book they work together in the least possible time—like their subject." M. L. Becker
+ Books p5 Je 16 '40 320w

Reviewed by E. M. Mack
Boston Transcript p2 Je 15 '40 80w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '40

"Boys and girls of ten and over will enjoy this account." Josephine Smith
Library J 65:502 Je 1 '40 110w

"Excellent photographs, dominating every page, complement a clear, concise text. . . By this splendid arrangement of text and photograph a complex story has been brought within the understanding of the young people for whom the book is chiefly intended."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '40 110w

JACKSON, PERCIVAL E. Look at the law; the law is what the layman makes it; foreword by Arthur Garfield Hays. 377p $2.75 Dutton

340 Law. Justice, Administration of (W) 40-27271

"Taking up the commonest grievances against the courts, a prominent New York attorney shows that 'our lawyers, our judges, and our legal system require a bath of realism.' He argues that the layman is basically responsible for this state of affairs and ought to take steps." New Yorker

Reviewed by Kingsley Davis
Am Soc R 5:800 O '40 50w

Reviewed by W. E. Mikell
Ann Am Acad 211:242 S '40 550w
Booklist 36:300 Ap 1 '40

Reviewed by Alexander Lindey
Books p12 Ag 25 '40 1200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '40

"Mr. Jackson admits that his book does not add anything new to what has already been written on this subject. His purpose is rather to arouse the layman from whom any real reform movement must come. For this reason his conclusions are well seasoned with 'horrible examples' of the technicalities of the law which only a layman can fully appreciate. His style tends to repetition and exaggeration, but there are some excellent passages which support his forensic reputation at the bar." H. L. de Give
+ — Forum 103:331 Je '40 450w
Harvard Law R 53:1223 My '40 310w

"Each chapter is studded with richly illustrative stories taken from law reports, newspapers, lawyers' lore. They make the core of the book and are worth its price. In fact, I confess that the examples remain in my mind even when the commentary has slipped away." Max Lerner
+ Nation 150:398 Mr 23 '40 700w
New Repub 102:449 Ap 1 '40 50w

Reviewed by Chester Rohrlich
N Y Times p21 My 5 '40 550w

"A valuable book."
+ New Yorker 16:79 F 24 '40 50w

Reviewed by J. R. Parker
Sat R of Lit 22:10 Ag 24 '40 330w

"Arthur Garfield Hays says in a foreword, 'Lawyers are rarely as frank and illuminating as Percival Jackson.' This at least means that Mr Hays is in sympathy with a substantial number of the views presented by Mr Jackson. Other readers may not agree so fully, but they will find Mr Jackson's criticisms for the most part sufficiently well grounded, to deserve consideration and possible rebuttal."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '40 1300w
Wis Lib Bul 36:95 My '40

JACKSON, RICHARD MEREDITH. Machinery of justice in England. 342p $3.75 Macmillan [16s Cambridge]

347 Justice, Administration of. Courts—Great Britain [41-1136]

"The writer of this book is a solicitor of the Supreme Court and a lecturer in law in the University of Cambridge. His object is to explain the English system of law courts and allied matters relating to the administration of justice. In his opinion, the best introduction to law is a study of the institutions and environment in which lawyers work. . . He devotes the greater part of his book to an examination of the operations of the present English legal system from the standpoint of jurisdiction, organization, procedure, personnel, costs, and the outlook for reform." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

"Mr. Jackson's purpose is to explain the essentials, briefly but adequately. This he has succeeded in doing in an admirable fashion. The net result is an excellent picture of the English legal system in action. For the student of the American judicial process, there is much to be gained from this book, since it throws very helpful light upon English experience with many devices and experiments in the field of judicial administration which have been receiving attention in this country in recent years. An index and a table of statutes are appended to this useful study." F. R. Aumann
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1015 O '40 500w

"It is to be hoped that this book will be widely read. The ground covered in its 329 pages is immense, and the work has been well done. The author describes clearly not only how our legal system is intended to operate but how it actually works."
+ New Statesman & Nation 19:809 Je 29 '40 650w
Times [London] Lit Sup p220 My 4 '40 850w

JACKSON, WILLIAM HENRY. Time exposure. 341p il $3.50 Putnam

B or 92 40-14543

Autobiography of a pioneer American photographer, whose adventurous career included many other activities, among them participation in the Civil war, bullwhacking on the Western plains, service with the United States geological survey, and painting murals for a government building at the age of ninety-two. The author, who is now ninety-seven, has based his book upon the diary he has kept since he was a boy in upstate New York in the '50s.

Booklist 37:89 N 1 '40

"I like it. It's as American as 'Swanee River,' a barrel of Northern Spys and ice-water." R. F. Crandell
+ Books p4 Jl 28 '40 900w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 Jl 26 '40 750w

"Mr. Jackson has not achieved longevity by coddling himself. He writes a brisk and amusing narrative of these experiences. An inveterate traveler during all his long life, he still travels extensively; but now, characteristically modern, he travels mostly by plane."

+ Christian Century 57:1001 Ag 14 '40 320w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 24 '40 600w

"It is an achievement to live to be 97 years old. . . It is more of an achievement to live that long and remain young at heart. It is a miracle to live that long and be able to write an autobiography which has the vigor of hale middle age, with no trace of the garrulousness and proneness to inconsequential anecdotes which afflict so many otherwise Grand Old Men. And yet William Henry Jackson . . . has earned just these laurels." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 4 '40 1500w

"The author, a likable man, tells his story well. Real Americana, and a yard wide. Many pictures, most of them by the author."

+ New Yorker 16:63 Ag 10 '40 50w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins

Sat R of Lit 22:7 S 7 '40 800w

Time 36:70 Ag 5 '40 240w

JACOB, HEINRICH EDUARD. Johann Strauss, father and son; a century of light music; tr. by Marguerite Wolff. 385p il $3.25 Greystone

B or 92 Strauss, Johann, 1804-1849. Strauss, Johann, 1825-1899 (W) 39-28985

This story of the Strauss family of Vienna, most famous of waltz composers, is a history, as well, of the waltz, and of the social forces which brought about its popularity.

"If the method is alarmingly diffuse, jumping all over the lot, the style is overblown. . . It may be that Marguerite Wolff has translated clumsily, but it is our guess that the author is himself responsible. It is a pity that a book that contains so much incidental information and that held forth such promise should have been so disappointingly handled." Alexander Williams

— + Atlantic F '40 600w

Booklist 36:149 D 15 '39

"The value of the present volume is the understanding it gives us of the waltz as a social expression." John Erskine

+ Books p3 D 10 '39 1200w

"This book, as much a biography of the waltz as a study of the Strausses, makes a significant attempt to supply the social context in which this Viennese music was created—sentimental, light-hearted, spontaneous—and bourgeois. If the personal portraits are not as full as we might have wished, it is because Mr. Jacob's attentions were seriously divided. But socially-conscious musical biography has been slow in developing, and Mr. Jacob's 'Johann Strauss' profits greatly from his method." Claude Simpson

+ Boston Transcript p15 D 8 '39 450w

"The author is inclined to be portentous. When he is content with straightforward narrative his style is vivid, and his translator has been faithful to him. There are some excellent photographs." G. A. H.

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 My 6 '40 270w

"This is a delightfully interesting book, which tells its ever-interesting story with warmth and verve and objectivity. 'A Century of Light Music' the author calls its subject in his subtitle. That great century of light music his work revivifies for us, from the first Johann's childhood to the first World War." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p2 D 10 '39 1250w

New Yorker 15:55 D 30 '39 50w

"This new book about the Strauss dynasty steps rightly into a vacant place that has long waited for it. If it is somewhat ponderous in approach and if it stresses the social rather than the more human aspects of the Strauss geniuses, it nevertheless is altogether illuminating and altogether valuable. It also has that wrenching bitter-sweet perfume of the Vienna that has gone." Marcia Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 21:5 D 9 '39 1400w

"The tempestuous lives of the Strausses are related with vivacity and understanding, and the book has the readability of fiction."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 7 '40 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p124 Mr 9 '40 800w

Wis Lib Bul 36:27 F '40

JACOB, NAOMI ELLINGTON. Full meridian. 336p $2 Macmillan [8s 6d Hutchinson]

40-7245

Character study of a forceful English woman, whose dissolute husband drove her to interest herself in his department store when he himself was failing at the job. Thru years of personal disappointment Ann Harrington compensated by her interest in the store, and after the deaths of her husband and son, found a belated happiness. The scene is Yorkshire.

Booklist 36:383 Je 1 '40

Reviewed by David Tilden

Books p6 Je 9 '40 500w

"Naomi Jacob is an artist, but there are times when she need not emulate Van Gogh by stressing the amount of pigment which she can heap upon a single canvas." Edna Bryan

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '40 360w

"A well-written light novel." J. A. Sohon

Library J 65:452 My 15 '40 150w

"Certainly nothing new about this story, and here it covers too much time too quickly to be really gripping, but it's neatly and pleasantly told."

+ — New Repub 102:802 Je 10 '40 60w

"The ending should be encouraging to women in their late forties, and the whole should give pleasure to many who may or may not agree with Miss Jacob's conceptions. As an author she has taken a step forward." M. L. Rossbach

+ N Y Times p7 Je 23 '40 470w

" 'Full Meridian' does not move as clearly to its conclusions as might be wished. The thread of the narrative twists from time to time through incidents that impede the progress of the story and the all too lengthy conversations have a kind of familiar bright falseness at least to American ears, that prevents the feeling of intimacy which they are designed to produce. But the novel creates again the period atmosphere that marked the early stories of Arnold Bennett and it is pleasant to be back with the family-and-business complications that flourished at the turn of the century." Gladys Graham

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:10 Je 15 '40 480w

"There is not a dull moment in the story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p667 N 18 '39 200w

JACOB, NAOMI ELLINGTON. They left the land. 424p $2.50 Macmillan [9s 6d Hutchinson]

40-35093

"The author of Time Piece and Four Generations [Book Review Digest, 1937, 1934] tells the story of a line of Yorkshire yeomen who forsake the cultivation of their land to go to London, enjoy success there, but in the end return to their own countryside." Library J

Booklist 37:175 Ja 1 '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p10 D 8 '40 240w

"Miss Jacobs is one of the most dependable and substantial of British novelists. She is never trivial, never dull."

+ Christian Century 57:1483 N 27 '40 40w

"Miss Jacob has an unaffected love for the North Country of England and a deep knowledge of its scenery and its people—their peculiar idiom, their folklore, and characteristic qualities. When it comes to linking characters and incidents together she is not quite so sure. . . The most important constituents of the story, however, are Bess Langdon and Calderholm. Both of these impress the reader with their clear authenticity."

JACOB, N. E.—Continued
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 F 1 '41 500w

Commonweal 33:237 D 20 '40 40w

"This book will appeal to the readers who enjoy the type of book which Thomas Hardy and Phyllis Bentley have written. It is recommended for library purchase." M. E. Clark
+ Library J 65:982 N 15 '40 90w

"The characterisation lacks something of the subtlety familiar to the readers of Miss Jacob's Jewish novels, but her people, if a trifle stagy, are always alive. And her story marches steadily forward through her account of the four generations which covers a period of seventy years." J. D. Beresford
+ — Manchester Guardian p5 Mr 8 '40 260w

Reviewed by J. S. Southron
N Y Times p6 N 24 '40 800w

"The story moves swiftly and vigorously with the intimacy of family gossip and a rich human warmth that arouses sympathy for even the most subsidiary characters. Miss Jacob is always a fine story-teller, but this is by far her best novel."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p109 Mr 2 '40 300w

JACOBS, IDA T., ed. See National council of teachers of English. Committee on international relations. Educating for peace

JACOBS, THORNWELL. Red lanterns on St Michael's. 670p il $2.50 Dutton 40-5327

Long historical novel of the Civil war, centering in Charleston, South Carolina.

"The accuracy of the tremendous amount of historical data in 'Red Lanterns on St Michael's' has been attested by an expert and exacting antiquarian, Mr. A. S. Salley, secretary of the South Carolina Historical Commission, so that the mind of the reader may rest easy as to authenticity of what he reads. Its value as a picture of the times has been enhanced further by the use of prints from contemporary magazines and newspapers. The book has the same fault, however, that is peculiar to so many of the stories dealing with the war between the states. Its plot and characters are weak and suffer from the weight of the historical background." C. M. Waring
+ — Books p11 Mr 24 '40 700w

New Repub 102:482 Ap 8 '40 60w

"To give Mr. Jacobs credit, he knows a good deal about local history and local legend. He can also, with perhaps more deadliness than he knows, expound a point of view that did exist among certain Southerners of the period he writes about—a point of view so self-sufficient and caste-conscious that it makes the utterances of the more violent secessionists seem mild and reasonable by comparison. As a novel, however, 'Red Lanterns on St. Michael's' creaks with Victorian melodrama; as history, in the larger sense, its atavistic prejudice defeats its own ends. Nor does the lush, rambling style . . . assist the narrative." S. V. B.
— + Sat R of Lit 21:19 Mr 16 '40 420w

"The novel is perhaps too long, but it takes one into the heart of the great conflict as few novels about the Civil war have done."
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '40 700w

JAMES, ARTHUR WILSON. Virginia's social awakening; the contribution of Dr Mastin and the Board of charities and corrections; with an introd. by Frank Bane. 198p $3 Garrett

360.9755 Virginia. Board of charities and corrections. Mastin, Joseph Thomas. Charities—Virginia 40-3195

A survey of the work of the Virginia Board of Charities and Corrections and, "unavoidably and intentionally," a biography of the man who for more than a decade was its executive secretary, the Reverend Joseph T. Mastin. Bibliography. Index.

"This book is a valuable record of Virginia's social awakening, and a fitting tribute to a great man who devoted his life to public service."
+ Am Soc R 5:998 D '40 140w

Springf'd Republican p8 F 28 '40 650w

"Virginia's third commissioner of public welfare, Arthur W. James, has used the reports of the first secretary of the original Board of Charities and Corrections to produce a readable account of fourteen fruitful years in the state's three hundred and twenty of social history. But Mr. James' book is more than that. It is a reverent testimonial to the devotion and vision of that first Virginia public welfare worker, the Rev. J. T. Mastin." J. P. Guild
+ Survey 76:214 Je '40 350w

JAMES, EDWIN OLIVER. The social function of religion; a comparative study. (London theological lib) 312p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury [7s 6d Univ. of London press]

261 Sociology, Christian

"This book is a study of 'the spiritual factors that determine the social structure' and an evaluation of these with special reference to today's needs. First the author digs into the anthropological evidence and presents a compact outline of religious history as a necessary background for his thesis. Revelation, myth, ritual, ethics and conduct as developed in primitive cultures and in the Christian religion are investigated. The roots of society as expressed in marriage and the family, the church and the community, the nation and nationalism are then examined in the latter half of the book. From this analysis Dr. James concludes that religion has been the dynamically cohesive force of society, and that if civilization is to save itself, the religious factor must be recovered." (Churchman) Bibliography. Index.

"Within the last ten years there has arisen a fresh and insistent demand for sociology which escapes the romanticism of liberalism on the one hand, and the materialism of Marxism on the other. Dr. E. O. James of the universities of Leeds and Oxford, and examining chaplain to the Bishop of Wakefield, has this year contributed to the London Theological Library a discussion calculated greatly to help satisfy this demand. . . To those who can agree with Dr. James in [his] assumptions and who share the desire for a sociology which escapes the romanticism of liberalism and at the same time avoids the materialism of Marxism, this book will bring heartfelt satisfaction." D. J. Bradley
+ Christian Century 57:1481 N 27 '40 1400w

"The book is of greater scope than the title might indicate; it offers a sound apologetic for and a challenge to Christianity." J. H. Titus
+ Churchman 154:19 N 15 '40 150w

Reviewed by K. W. Morgan
J Religion 21:105 Ja '41 360w

"I doubt if inquiry into the beginnings of religious ideas is really very helpful in dealing with present-day problems. And, secondly, is there any science in which professors are at once so dogmatic and so divided among themselves as in anthropology? And, thirdly, might not some of our modern writers ration themselves in the use of words of more than two syllables? Dr. James is really unnecessarily difficult to read at times."

Manchester Guardian p10 O 8 '40 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p504 O 5 '40 500w

JAMES, HENRY JOHNSON. German subs in Yankee waters; first World war; il. by Charles E. Pont. 208p $3 Gotham house

940.451 European war, 1914-1918—Naval operations—Submarine. European war, 1914-1918—U.S. 40-30476

"A half-dozen German U-boats sank 197,761 tons of shipping off the Eastern seaboard in 1917 and 1918. The author provides a vivid account of the progress of that campaign, and observes that a really efficient United States coast patrol in time of war might not be a bad idea." (New Yorker) Index.

Bookmark p19 N '40

"A splendid adventure story and valuable history." W. C. Rivers

+ Books p14 Ag 4 '40 650w

"Henry James's well told, detailed story of enemy underwater depredations will startle even older readers from whom much that happened during the last war was kept secret. He served in a Provincetown fishing vessel during the raids, and to his personal knowledge has added the results of extensive research. The author's insistence that it can happen again will be disturbing to our placidity and may shock us into adopting some of his proposals for defensive measures." P. J. S.

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 24 '40 210w

Cath World 152:254 N '40 120w

"This is not a story of atrocities. It does not glorify the submarine commanders as some others have sought to do. It is a simple statement of war-time accomplishment which should be better known today." W. M. Agar

+ Commonweal 32:372 Ag 23 '40 140w

"The entire record set down in this book is startling, even to those who remember the news accounts of the submarine warfare twenty-two years ago. And in telling one by one the stories of the seven submarines sent against the United States, Mr. James has given his material a most effective arrangement." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 11 '40 950w

New Yorker 16:56 Ag 3 '40 60w

JAMES, WILL. Horses I've known. 281p il $2.50 Scribner

Horses—Legends and stories (W) 41-1024

Stories of horses, good and bad, which the author has known. The book is written in the cowboy vernacular which Will James usually employs in his books, and is illustrated by him.

"The style of these sketches is the regular Will James-Will Rogers-cowhand style, careless, colloquial, but forceful and amusingly imaginative. It is gusty and vigorous, of course. . . There is no reason why any literary 'ranahan' shouldn't enjoy these short pieces but I imagine its most enthusiastic audience will be youngsters up to sixteen or so." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 22:42 O 12 '40 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '40 320w

JAMES, WILL. My first horse. [45p] il $1.50 Scribner

B or 92 Horses (W) 40-30566

This is Will James' first picture book in colors. It describes his own experiences as a very small boy with a homemade rocking horse, and the little horses he found under the Christmas tree, which were too small to ride, but not to be saddled and bridled and put in tiny homemade corrals. The book closes with the present of his first real horse, when he was four years old.

Booklist 37:243 F 1 '41

"Don't let this leave your home library if a child is ever to come into that room. Borrowers will keep it, and nothing else will take its place but another copy. When this one wears out, get another copy anyway. You will never find a better book about toys and the part they play in the inner life of an American country child not yet four." M. L. Becker

+ Books p13 N 10 '40 190w

"Boys will be delighted with the fine colored pictures and the details about roping, making corrals, drawing horses, and other things the author did as a small boy on the ranch where he lived."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 28 '40 90w

Horn Bk M 16:340 S '40 40w

"My First Horse [is] written and pictured with directness and sincerity." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 65:846 O 15 '40 70w

Reviewed by Claire Nolte

Library J 65:878 O 15 '40 170w

"A very appealing picture of childhood, for adults especially. It is a true study of childhood and there is a pleasant suggestion of sympathetic understanding on the part of the grown-ups. With its fine drawings this is a book which may well be called to the attention of the 7 to 9 year olds. Children, however, are more interested in what they hope to do some day than in what they can do as children, and it may be that while fathers and mothers are enjoying this understanding account of a little boy's early experiences, boys and girls will prefer to attempt the pages of Will James's 'Smoky.'" A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p12 S 22 '40 180w

New Yorker 16:126 D 7 '40 50w

Sat R of Lit 23:17 D 14 '40 30w

JAMESON, STORM (MRS GUY CHAPMAN). Europe to let; the memoirs of an obscure man. 282p $2.50 Macmillan

40-4885

Four stories about the European situation during the last few years. The central character is an English journalist who wanders thru Europe, describing the things and people he sees. The scenes of the stories are the Rhineland in 1923 during the French occupation; Vienna at its downfall; Prague in like situation; and Budapest.

Atlantic Ap '40 100w

Booklist 36:345 My 1 '40

"The pleasing tints of sweet nature and kind humanity, as we were brought up to detect and enjoy them, do somehow shine through the hateful murk of the general outlook. 'Europe To Let' is nevertheless a tragic kind of book. In all of the four unconnected episodes which it presents, admirable and valuable people are being submerged, threatened, punished or obliterated. . . It is this inner sense of values and dignities preserved even on the brink of destruction which gives the book its particular balance and meaning, and makes it almost necessary to read these four stories through twice in order to gain from them their full import of horror." Iris Barry

+ Books p3 Mr 10 '40 800w

"Miss Jameson's approach is intellectual. An artist whose diction and craftsmanship are superb, whose books have been consistently beautiful, she does come a cropper this time in our opinion. Here and there a well stated or iconoclastic point of view is arresting; but for the most part her individuals are so overlarded with ugly physical habits that repulsion blurs all mental response." Olga Owens

— + Boston Transcript p2 Mr 30 '40 380w

Cath World 151:254 My '40 110w

JAMESON, STORM—Continued

"Miss Jameson has never equaled this writing for sheer emotional power. It makes the nightmarish character of contemporary European life almost too clear; reason revolts at such human waste."

+ Christian Century 57:453 Ap 3 '40 90w

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 27 '40 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '40

Reviewed by M. L. Elting

Forum 103:269 My '40 150w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p7 My 24 '40 200w

New Repub 102:482 Ap 8 '40 50w

"Despite its excellent material this is not a successful novel; for it sets out to show the psychological decline and fall of post-war Europe, but ends merely as a fictionalised Gunther. Miss Jameson's narrator never comes out from the wings, but taints every scene with the spirit of journalese." John Mair

— + New Statesman & Nation 19:706 Je 1 '40 220w

"Actually, although its matter is as new as tomorrow's newspaper, Storm Jameson has been writing this book for almost twenty years. Ever since it began to seem to intelligent persons in England that the Armistice was in truth an armistice and not a peace. She has never written better. Her prose, always fine, becomes here a polished and flashing instrument, not merely in passages but with amazing consistency throughout. 'Europe to Let' is a beautiful book, for all its harshness. Read it at your peril. It will not make you feel any better about anything." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 10 '40 850w

"The story of the betrayal of Czecho-Slovakia could stand as a monument to a people which deserves more than a monument. This book should be read by all who are hardy enough to stand it."

+ New Yorker 16:62 Mr 2 '40 90w

"It is exciting, haunting reading. It is a view of life that will irritate the purely rational; yet it had better be taken account of." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 21:13 Mr 9 '40 550w

"It is a long time since I have read a novel of Miss Storm Jameson's, and after finishing this electrifying and ferocious book I am left wondering if I have missed much of the work of an admirable writer, or whether a passionate disgust and indignation, combined with a masculine intelligence, have here fused all her powers, enabled her to prune away dead wood and achieve something on a scale totally superior to anything that has gone before. . . Her style is nervous, pungent, highly charged, extremely dramatic. The sense of pity, horror, impending catastrophe informs the book from beginning to end." Rosamond Lehmann

+ Spec 164:760 My 31 '40 350w

Time 35:88 Mr 11 '40 50w

"In some ways this is the most striking book [Miss Jameson] has written, pregnant in expression and taut with the poetic awareness of sensibilities naked to the nerve. Stylistically, indeed, the novel is a very remarkable achievement. But there is no shade under the fierce sun of Miss Jameson's wrath and compassion."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p241 My 18 '40 900w

JAMIESON, LELAND SHATTUCK. Attack! 140p $1.50 Morrow

40-10770

A story of a battle in a war of the near future, a battle between the planes of an American airplane carrier and a group of the enemy's vessels attempting to establish a base in South America. The story is told as it appeared to the eyes and intelligence of a young pilot, serving under an older brother whom he has regarded as too stern a believer in naval discipline.

Booklist 37:36 O 1 '40

"The author has turned a remarkable trick in this little book. That it is propaganda is obvious. It makes no bones about that. The naval officers whose conversation we overhear continually repeat: 'If only the politicians had listened.' . . . Every page of it is a vociferous and angry plea for preparedness, for armament, for more navy and more air force. Since 'attack' so urgently and so grimly describes a circumstance which is at least not wholly inconceivable as pictured here, it furnishes a strongly effective argument." Iris Barry

+ Books p3 Ag 11 '40 410w

Reviewed by W. E. Barrett

Boston Transcript p1 Ag 17 '40 250w

"Mr. Jamieson's book is not the most important reading for those who believe that Hitler means what he says when he claims that he has no ambitions in the Western Hemisphere. But it might serve as an introduction to the full course." Robert van Gelder

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 4 '40 500w

New Yorker 16:67 Jl 27 '40 50w

"The plotting of the story is a bit thin; it is obviously arranged to demonstrate, one after another, all the different types of operation Naval Air can and would undertake in war. Also, the attacks are pressed home with a determination a little rare in the current experience of Europe. But it is plenty exciting stuff, breathless in pace, done with an energy that carries the reader right to the finish before he remembers to look for criticisms." F. P.

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:19 Jl 27 '40 310w

Time 36:64 Jl 29 '40 90w

JAMIESON, LELAND SHATTUCK. High frontier. 309p $2.50 Morrow

(W) 40-31630

Steve Richards was in South America when the news of his father's death reached him. Sometime later he landed on the Midstates Airways field, his father's airline, to take over the business. To Sylvia, who had held the business together for him, he looked like just a kid, but she soon learned that he had a business head and a will of his own.

Booklist 37:137 D 1 '40

"Mr. Jamieson, out of his own experience with the growth of commercial aviation . . . has written a lively forthright romance of the conquest of the air. With Steve we feel the 'prickly heat traveling across our scalps' as he hauls on the stick and presses the rudders until his knee muscles tremble, twisting through the shrieking wind, diving, sliding, lost, trying to find Chicago in the rain. He has given this adventure with the elements such a keen-edged reality that we are in the cockpit too, scrubbing at the windshield, feeling that sick fear in the pit of the stomach, conquering the night." Page Cooper

+ Books p10 N 3 '40 400w

"It is no novel of subtlety and finesse; Mr. Jamieson's values are the plain and simple values; the love story derives from a familiar romantic pattern. But the tale is as mature as it is vigorous; and there is no more hokum about its people than about its background of flying history—which is to say, none at all." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p28 O 27 '40 650w

JANSEN, WILLIAM. Social agencies and public education in New York city. 136p $1.85 Teachers college

362.7 New York (city)—Charities. Social work. New York (city)—Public schools

40-31130

"This volume attempts to develop between New York City's vast system of schools and its many social agencies a type of team work that will result in a maximum of service to the city's children." (School & Society) Bibliography. No index.

"The specific relation of the book to the New York situation makes it at once more valuable to the principals and teachers of that city and less valuable to educational workers elsewhere. For the former group it provides an excellent manual of information, although its effectiveness might have been increased by the inclusion of more specific suggestions of how the teacher or the principal can profitably draw on the resources of the agencies mentioned or can make available to such agencies the facilities of the school. For educational workers outside New York the book, although if not so specifically useful to them as it is to the educators of that metropolis, will provide a general understanding of the way in which social services are established and maintained in a great city. It may also serve as an incentive and a model for similar studies elsewhere." C. O. Houle

+ — El School J 41:393 Ja '41 600w
School & Society 52:272 S 28 '40 30w

JASNY, NAUM. Competition among grains. 606p maps $4 Food research inst.

338.1 Grain. Grain trade 40-4363

"The purpose of this study is 'to indicate the major influences responsible for the present distribution of grain production and world trade among the individual grains and the major long-run changes in this distribution' (p. 2). The book, as Dr. J. S. Davis points out in his introduction, is a study in the neglected field of inter-commodity competition. For practical reasons the study is limited to the five grains which figure most prominently in world production and trade, viz., wheat, corn, oats, rye and barley. A further limitation is geographical; the study is concerned primarily with the occidental parts of the world's temperate zones." (Pol Sci Q) Index.

Reviewed by Geoffrey Shepherd
Am Econ R 30:602 S '40 260w

"Although the author may have tried to cover too much and missed the scientific approach in a few cases, the book is full of interesting information and references, and will commend itself to students interested in agronomic and economic problems." A. F. Vass

+ Ann Am Acad 210:166 Jl '40 600w

"The reviewer is not competent to pass on the accuracy or significance of technical sections dealing with agronomical and chemical factors. But for the author's treatment of economic factors, he can express only admiration. To assemble and relate the pertinent material on the five grains from the fields of geography, farm management, and marketing was in itself a difficult task, which has been well performed. The book is truly encyclopedic; its chief merit, however, is not as a convenient source of information, but rather in its conclusions. From the information he has collected, much of it not reproduced in the text, Dr. Jasny has distilled the significance, giving his readers the benefit of wise and stimulating generalizations." P. W. Bidwell

+ Pol Sci Q 55:277 Je '40 1250w

JASTROW, JOSEPH. Getting more out of life. rev ed 312p $2 Emerson

131.3 Psychology. Mental hygiene. Personality 40-9234

Revision of a book published in 1935 under title: Sanity First; the Art of Sensible Living (Book Review Digest, 1935). "The author, a leading psychologist, presents mental hygiene in popular fashion, writing simply but authoritatively of instinct and personality, intelligence and human resources, nerves and complexes, dreams and fantasies, and a host of other psychoanalytic subjects." (Am J Pub Health)

"The art of living sensibly is ably explained in this book. . . The book should be valuable for the general reader, and might even enlighten an occasional sanitarian. It has no index, but otherwise is well printed." J. A. Tobey

+ Am J Pub Health 30:1371 N '40 150w

"The treatment is much more systematic and less desultory than this catalogue of particulars might suggest. With no psychological nostrums to peddle, Professor Jastrow employs the science in which he is an expert to make it serve the ends of sane and satisfactory living."

+ Christian Century 57:1482 N 27 '40 120w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '40
J Home Econ 32:476 S '40 60w
Survey 76:311 O '40 30w

JAUNCEY, GEORGE ERIC MACDONNELL, and LANGSDORF, ALEXANDER SUSS. M.K.S. units and dimensions and a proposed M.K.O.S. system. 62p $1 Macmillan

537.7 Electric units 40-4198

"In the title of this little book the cryptic initials stand for Meter, Kilogram, and Second. These basic units were adopted by The International Electrotechnical Commission in June 1935, the action becoming effective in January 1940. Properties of the new system are described as well as methods for changing from one set of basic units to another. Also a proposed M.K.O.S. system is described in which the ohm is the fourth basic unit." Chem & Met Eng

Chem & Met Eng 47:205 Mr '40 80w

"Interesting and instructive brochure." F. H. MacDougall

+ J Phys Chem 44:825 Je '40 140w

"Some readers may doubt whether there is an inevitable connexion between the nature of a quantity and its dimensions, but the subject is skilfully expounded. The student is shown how the ideas work by a series of theoretical experiments, and even if the ideas may afterwards require overhauling, the book forms a good introduction to the subject." L. Hartshorn

+ Nature 146:793 D 21 '40 1450w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:34 Jl '40

JEFFREYS, HAROLD. Theory of probability. 380p $7 (21s) Oxford

519 Probabilities [40-12704]

"In his 'Scientific Inference', Dr. Jeffreys has already adumbrated his approach to the theory of probability. The present book is a more systematic presentation of his views, beginning with the formulation of axioms, developing a theory of probability, describing and illustrating its use in testing significance and in estimation, and concluding with two chapters on the weaknesses of other theories and on some general scientific questions." Nature

Reviewed by Ernest Nagel
J Philos 37:524 S 12 '40 2250w

"Dr. Jeffreys' views deserve the most serious study. They may not be right; but they are more tenable than many statisticians have been willing to concede in the past, and it is hoped that this book will be widely read." M. G. Kendall

+ — Nature 145:607 Ap 20 '40 1400w

"Theory of Probability is not a conventional text on the mathematics of probability, but rather a treatise on learning by induction. As such it is a useful contribution to the methodology of physics as well as a mine of information about technical methods of applying the probability concept. . . The vigorous and stimulating character of this work is in full accord with the high reputation of the author as a productive scholar. In this controversial field one should demand good sense rather than hole-proof logic and good sense is supplied by Dr. Jeffreys in abundance. Physicists are usually amateurs at the theory of probability and readers from their ranks are likely to wish at times that the author had made more concessions to the beginner. Nevertheless the material gathered together in this volume is particularly adapted to the needs of physicists." E. C. Kemble

JEFFREYS, HAROLD—Continued
+ R of Scientific Instruments 2:331 O '40 1050w

JENNINGS, HENRIETTA COOPER. The consumer in commercial banking. 158p $2 Consumer credit inst. of Am, inc, 233 Broadway, N.Y.

332.2 Banks and banking. Credit. Loans 39-22452

"This specialized volume is concerned with the development and operation of personal loan departments by commercial banks. . . The most common practices in the methods of extending loans, the security required, the maturity of notes, and the charges made, as well as the obstacles in the operation of a personal loan department, are described at length. It is to be regretted, however, that more conclusive data on costs of operation and costs to borrowers are not available." (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is of value because it summarizes widely scattered information and opinion. An excellent bibliography is included." J. M. Whitsett
+ Ann Am Acad 210:167 Jl '40 290w

"The book is synthetic in viewpoint, authoritatively documented, cogent and readable. It has definite sociological implications and fills the need for a bird's eye view of what is taking place in this new field of consumer finance." C. W. Coulter
+ Social Forces 18:463 Mr '40 500w

JENNINGS, SISTER MARIETTA. A pioneer merchant of St Louis, 1810-1820; the business career of Christian Wilt. 219p $2.50 Columbia univ. press [10s King]

B or 92 Wilt, Christian. St Louis—Commerce. Frontier and pioneer life—Missouri 40-11802

"This study presents an account of Christian Wilt, a pioneer merchant of Saint Louis during the decade from 1810-1820, years that mark a well defined period in the development of the western community. . . In this study an attempt has been made to show the rôle played by the business man in the growth and development of pioneer life." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by I. Lippincott
Am Econ R 30:379 Je '40 250w
Christian Century 57:321 Mr 6 '40 170w

"The work is provided with many footnotes and a bibliography giving ample references to primary and secondary sources. In addition to its value as a source-book for the study of the history of St. Louis and its early economic development, it presents a fascinating story of the romance and heroism of pioneer life. The dean of Fontbonne College has done her work with literary as well as scholarly skill. The book is well worthy of its place among the studies edited by the faculty of political science of Columbia University." Rittenhouse Neisser
+ Crozer Q 17:308 O '40 210w

"Christian Wilt was not a Chouteau or an Astor, but he was an interesting and representative figure and he has found a sound biographer."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p139 Mr 16 '40 110w

JENNINGS, WILLIAM IVOR. A federation for western Europe. 208p $2.50 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

321.021 International cooperation. Europe—Politics. Federal government (W) 40-10759

The author of several treatises on British government, here presents his arguments for a federation of European states and explains in detail how the machinery of its government could be made to work. Index.

Reviewed by W. H. C. Laves
Am Pol Sci R 34:1021 O '40 130w

"If Jennings' plan is viewed as an articulated and reasoned step forward toward the inevitable settlement of the problem of world order, it would be uncharitable to point out defects; but the rapidly deepening crisis which confronts the world at the time this review is written makes it imperative that I, as an American, express vigorous dissent with many of the ideas that have been advanced by previous advocates of a new world order, and that are apparently accepted by Jennings. . . Having uttered these sentiments, I must return to Mr. Jennings and acknowledge that he has performed a valiant service in giving thought to these problems and boldly submitting his conclusions. I must also record my conviction that the members of the British Federal Union and their scholarly 'fellow-travelers' have pondered more deeply, tolerantly, sagaciously, and constructively about this awful problem of world order than have the nationals of any other country." R. V. Peel
— + Ann Am Acad 212:245 N '40 700w

"This book, the work of an English lawyer, suffers from three of the major defects which have so far afflicted literature on the subject of European federation. The first of these defects is the uncritical assumption that the Allies are bound to win the war. . . The second is the belief that all that is needed to produce a federation is to draft a constitution, with little or no discussion of the actual political, economic, and even emotional conditions under which such a constitution would have to be applied. And the third is the conviction that Anglo-Saxon institutions, although admittedly imperfect, will be inevitably accepted by other peoples as a model for the new federation." V. M. Dean
Books p12 Jl 14 '40 500w

Reviewed by J. A. De Haas
Boston Transcript p1 Je 1 '40 750w

"The project here outlined probably does not seem as plausible, even to the author, as it did when he finished writing the argument and drafting the constitution for a federal Europe. . . But taken as a plan to work toward after an Allied victory, after the cat has been belled, it has its merits."
Christian Century 57:740 Je 5 '40 120w
Christian Science Monitor p20 My 29 '40 260w
Foreign Affairs 19:255 O '40 30w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn
Library J 65:499 Je 1 '40 290w

Reviewed by C. D. Burns
Manchester Guardian p7 Je 10 '40 330w

Reviewed by John Chamberlain
New Repub 103:32 Jl 1 '40 10w

"It is in dealing with economic relations that Dr. Jennings is most unclear. He not only presents alternative schemes, but he also delves into problems which have thus far proved just about impossible to solve in any final way in the American federation, and makes rather glib suggestions about them. . . The book closes with a draft constitution. It has the supreme merit of embodying concrete proposals. It has more substance and less wind than most of its fellows." C. H. Grattan
+ — N Y Times p14 Je 30 '40 1150w
New Yorker 16:93 My 25 '40 40w

"The American Federal Unionist is bound to quarrel with many things in Dr. Jennings 'blueprint,' but even he is bound to welcome it as a very useful work, rich in ingenious ideas and stimulating to thought and action as only detailed, concrete, constructive proposals can be." Clarence Streit
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:20 My 25 '40 500w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan
Spec 164:632 My 3 '40 320w

"It would require a volume probably larger than his own to criticize Dr. Jennings's scheme adequately; but in its precision and completeness it should provide the essential starting-point for all future discussion of the federal plan."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p286 Je 15 '40 1000w

JENNINGS, WILLIAM IVOR. Parliament. 548p $6 Macmillan [25s Cambridge]

328.42 Great Britain. Parliament 40-5004

"The present volume is an attempt to describe and analyse the working of the parliamentary section of the machinery of government. It is, therefore, complementary to Cabinet Government [Book Review Digest, 1937]. The two volumes do not, however, complete the survey of British political institutions, and other aspects, especially those of the party system, must be left for later treatment." (Pref) Index.

"Despite the wealth of materials which he has had to examine, Mr. Jennings is able to take his reader through the maze of parliamentary procedure without losing him. There is a good deal of the past in order to explain the present. Biographies and diaries have been well combed for illustrative incidents. Despite the mass of detail, the slips are few, and when a second edition is called for, not many statements of fact will have to be corrected." Lindsay Rogers
+ Am Hist R 46:400 Ja '41 490w

Reviewed by F. A. Ogg
Am Pol Sci R 34:800 Ag '40 460w

Reviewed by Sir Alfred Zimmern
Manchester Guardian p3 N 28 '39 450w

Reviewed by Karl Loewenstein
Nation 150:632 My 18 '40 800w

"A well written, thoroughly documented exposition, in the liberal tradition. Likely to be a standard work."
+ New Repub 102:681 My 20 '40 30w

"The book is based on a remarkable knowledge of the material. There is hardly a significant debate or political biography that is not brought under effective contribution. Certainly the reader of this book will be able to put it down with the sense that he has really grasped the way the machine works and the reasons which underlie its rules. It is, I think, a pity that Dr. Jennings has, for the most part, decided rather to describe than to interpret. There are many, and important, problems connected with parliamentary procedure upon which it would have been of great value to have his views in the context of his description." H. J. Laski
+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:800 D 2 '39 490w

Reviewed by E. M. Sait
Pol Sci Q 55:598 D '40 900w

"This book will doubtless be put by the student on his shelf in a row of meritorious textbooks along with Brogan's work on American Government. But the scholar and perhaps the legislator will find an especial and honorable niche for it, while expressing the hope that Dr. Jennings will follow these studies on the legislative and executive instruments of government by one on Public Opinion and its Party Controls in the twentieth century." G. C.
+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 Mr 30 '40 410w

"Those who have read Mr. Jennings on Cabinet Government will open this book with high hopes; they will not be disappointed. His touch is as light as his learning is great: he has cast his net wide and, unlike many writers upon contemporary political themes, he can distinguish between the big and the little fish. . . Admirable as is Mr. Jennings' survey, we miss in it any adequate recognition of the overwhelming urgency of reform." Arnold Wilson
+ — Spec 163:623 N 3 '39 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p713 D 9 '39 650w

JENSEN, GERARD EDWARD. Life and letters of Henry Cuyler Bunner. 250p $3 Duke univ.

B or 92 Bunner, Henry Cuyler 40-5038

"As versifier, editor, and short-story writer, 'H.C.B.' gained an enviable place in lighter American letters. He was an endearing fellow as well as a deft craftsman. Mr. Gerard E. Jensen's 'Life' is not only a good account of the man but contains a rich collection of his letters." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
Books p23 Mr 17 '40 330w

"Mr. Jensen has labored faithfully in libraries and unpublished manuscript material . . . but it cannot be said that his volume remains anything more than a piece of conscientious mosaic work. He has been mastered by his materials instead of mastering them, and Bunner is perpetually being lost in a cloud of minor facts that get between the reader and the evocation of a personality."
— Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '40 80w

"Bunner's letters were often much more than casual notes. Although lacking in any considerable exercise of critical abilities, they abound in picturesque observation of the persons and the scenes of New York in the eighties. Professor Jensen's own account of Bunner's life and work is discriminating and possesses a charm and reserve not always found in monographs of this kind. Perhaps there is a little too much reserve." F. L. Mott
+ — New Eng Q 13:349 Je '40 360w

"It is strange that we have had to wait so long for a book of Bunner's life and letters, which would include also a critical estimate of his work. But here the book is, comprehensive, interesting and highly welcome." K. W.
+ N Y Times p2 F 4 '40 600w

Reviewed by W. R. Benét
Sat R of Lit 21:10 Mr 9 '40 330w

"This book is valuable for the letters and quotations that it contains and for thoughtful summarizing chapters. The detailed biographical information is handled with something less than mature skill; it is not enough to say that a comic opera is 'said to have had a lengthy run at the New York Casino,' for exact information on such matters is obtainable. But Mr Jensen has written an objective and self-effacing book. It is more for the specialist than the general reader, but anybody can obtain from it something of the flavor of a gracious age." E. N. Jenckes
+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 3 '40 1300w

JEROME, EDWARD COLUMBUS. The problem of the Constitution. 224p $2.50 (8s 6d) Longmans

342.73 U.S. Constitution. U.S.—Constitutional law 39-25262

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

"In his short treatise on the constitution Mr. Jerome shows at once originality of thought, dialectical aptitude, and scholarly competence. The scholarship is unobtrusive; it manifests itself without any piling up of detailed evidence and without recourse to a single footnote." E. M. Sait
+ Am Hist R 45:901 Jl '40 400w

"There may be many things of value in Edward Jerome's The Problem of the Constitution, but if so, they are seriously obscured by the author's lack of clarity in organization and statement. A patient and careful single reading is not sufficient basis for critical appraisal of the point the author is trying to make, but the resulting impression discourages any inclination to study out the paradoxes and apparent contradictions." Earl DeLong
— Am Pol Sci R 34:159 F '40 440w

"According to Mr. Jerome, the Supreme Court started right off by making mistakes and it has been at it ever since. The offending justices begin with John Marshall and come right down the line to those who now sit on the bench. The very fact that Mr. Jerome demonstrates all this in some two hundred pages invites a scrutiny of the technique that is employed. It is plain enough that there are many ways of judging the rightness and the wrongness of the work of any institution of government. Some of these ways are hard and laborious, while others are easier. Mr. Jerome has taken an easy way, and the reader must be left to judge for himself whether his whole enterprise serves any useful purpose." B. P. McAllister

JEROME, E. C.—Continued

Ann Am Acad 208:218 Mr '40 600w

Boston Transcript p2 F 17 '40 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p63 F 3 '40 80w

"The assurance with which the author goes about his work is disarming. If you go along with him from premise to premise the process of mowing down the Supreme Court and nearly all of its works is simplicity itself. There is just nothing to it. The reader who stops to ask questions and to ponder the wisdom of the premises that appear along the road is no fit reader of this book. And, of course, no reader should stop to ask whether the whole enterprise is worth while. This book is only for the naïve and the simple minded." B. P. McAllister

Yale Law J 49:777 F '40 1600w

JERVIS, MRS VERA MURDOCK STUART (JANE ENGLAND, pseud). Peach orchard. 256p $2 Arcadia [7s 6d; 2s 6d Bles]

[37-4545]

Mystery romance laid in Rhodesia.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p24 O 27 '40 80w

"Why the author or the publisher or any one should have given this ironic, bitter-sweet book its bucolic title is beyond understanding. It should have been called some name that would suggest the beauty and menace of the Rhodesian landscape, and there should have been hints in it of madness and murder and thwarted love. It is lively and queerly fascinating reading, and at the end you feel that you know the people and that part of Africa as well as if you had been mixed up with the terrible Timballs yourself." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p26 O 20 '40 310w

JESSON, HENRY. And beacons burn again; letters from an English soldier; arr. by Leighton Rollins. 81p $1 Appleton-Century

172.4 War. Peace. European war, 1939— Personal narratives

Letters from a young Englishman to American friends, showing the gradual change in his attitude toward the war. At the outbreak of the war he had been in America for two years, studying. Recalled by his father's serious illness, he enlisted almost at once, because he became convinced that the only way to meet force was with an opposing force.

"This impassioned appeal . . . must be taken for just what it is, not the opinion of a military expert but the word of a young British soldier who has everything to live for and who has the insight to know that victory over the enemy would be an empty thing if there did not remain in the world a nucleus from which liberty, justice, religion, culture and all the things that belong to the free spirit of man might again grow. America need not be selfish or smug or self-righteous to realize that she has, in some sense, become the trustee of these things. It is above all necessary that she be faithful to that trust. And it is well to be recalled to this trusteeship by such a voice as Mr. Jesson has lifted. In the roar of battle, as he has said, it is a lonely voice."

+ Christian Century 57:1440 N 20 '40 1500w

"People who abhor war will find here a greatly interesting and impressive book."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 19 '41 170w

JESSOP, THOMAS EDMUND. Law and love; a study of the Christian ethic. 186p $2.25 Macmillan [6s Student]

171.1 Christian ethics. Love (theology)

The theme of this "study of the Christian ethic," is that Christ's moral teachings are embodied not in the principle of duty but in the principle of love. The author is Ferens professor of philosophy and psychology in the University College of Hull.

"A book of thoughtful substance and beautifully unstilted style."

+ Christian Century 57:1146 S 18 '40 110w

"It is refreshing to come across an author who has something important to say, who knows how to say it within the limits of brevity, who wastes no time threshing over old straw, who has no trace of conventionality or sentimentality in what he says about love." Gordon Poteat

+ Crozer Q 18:75 Ja '41 280w

"A remarkable little book. . . No modern book of its size and scope could be more usefully placed in the hands of a thoughtful teacher, be he cleric or layman; and it would be difficult for a study circle to be dull, which used it as a text-book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p415 Ag 24 '40 300w

JEWETT, SOPHIE. God's troubadour; the story of Saint Francis of Assisi; il. by Elinore Blaisdell. 94p $2 Crowell

B or 92 Francis of Assisi, Saint—Juvenile literature

The facts of the life of St Francis of Assisi, interwoven with the legends which have sprung up about him. For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1910. For young readers.

Booklist 37:159 D 15 '40

"Graceful telling of the familiar tales. The illustrations by Elinore Blaisdell are excellent."

+ Christian Century 57:1282 O 16 '40 40w

"Simple style but sometimes too stiff. For older children."

Churchman 154:35 D 1 '40 10w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 65:985 N 15 '40 50w

"Good." Katherine Ulrich

+ Sat R of Lit 23:8 N 16 '40 30w

"A charming story and volume."

+ Social Studies 31:380 D '40 20w

JIRKA, FRANK JOSEPH. American doctors of destiny; with an introd. by Harold W. Camp, and 20 portraits by Raymond Warren. 361p $3.75; ltd ed $7.50 Black Cat

926.1 Physicians. Surgeons. Medicine—U.S.

40-13210

"A collection of historical narratives of the lives of great American physicians and surgeons whose service to the nation and to the world has transcended the scope of their profession." (Subtitle) Among the men considered are: Benjamin Rush; Oliver Wendell Holmes; Walter Reed; Major-General William Crawford Gorgas; Silas Weir Mitchell; Major-General Leonard Wood; William Worrell Mayo. Bibliography. Index.

"A very interesting and useful book." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 30:1371 N '40 600w

"Reads slowly and heavily."

Am Soc R 5:843 O '40 50w

"Whether one agrees or differs with Dr. Jirka's choice of his moderns, no one can question that he has written an inspiring account of achievement. Finally the fact should be stressed that this book is designed for the general reader, that it requires no medical background, and that it makes no effort to impart medical information." M. S. Ulrich, M.D.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:16 Ag 3 '40 750w

JOECKEL, CARLETON BRUNS, and CARNOVSKY, LEON. A metropolitan library in action. (Studies in lib. science) 466p maps $3 Univ. of Chicago press [18s Cambridge]

027.47731 Chicago public library 40-27038

A comprehensive survey of the Chicago public library, roughly divided into two parts, the first stressing problems of organization and administration, the second concerned chiefly with library service. A final chapter summarizes the principal recommendations of the survey in a "Program for the future." Index.

"This impressive, analytic study of the Chicago public library is the result of a survey financed by the Carnegie corporation and conducted under the auspices of the graduate Library school of Chicago university, by the authors, faculty members of the school. It is of far more than local interest, for many of the problems are common to large library systems, and administrators will find it invaluable."
+ Booklist 36:207 F 1 '40

Reviewed by Carl Vitz
Library J 65:342 Ap 15 '40 2450w

"The tone of the whole study is appreciative, encouraging, and optimistic for the Chicago Public Library. To every librarian it offers arresting questions and provocative suggestions that should be an electrifying challenge to know more accurately what he is doing and why he is doing it. The volume offers new and convincing proof that the objective study of library performance and achievement is a practical possibility." J. S. Cleavinger
+ Library Q 10:416 Jl '40 1150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p560 N 2 '40 550w

Wis Lib Bul 36:62 Ap '40

JOHNS, MRS VERONICA PARKER. Hush, Gabriel! 292p $2 Duell

40-33702

Mystery story.

"As a sleuth, Agatha is not particularly successful, but the story of her attempts along that line makes very pleasant reading. The mystery is solved quite satisfactorily by other persons." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p16 O 27 '40 200w

"You'll like this story if you don't insist on too much detailed sleuthing."
+ New Yorker 16:88 O 26 '40 30w

"Eye-opening dialog, lush Caribbean color, cleverly concealed killer, gobs of action, and wind-up with potent punch. Prime and pungent!"
+ Sat R of Lit 23:17 O 26 '40 40w

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. The National labor relations act; should it be amended? (Reference shelf) 416p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

331.154 Labor laws and legislation. U.S. National labor relations board (W) 40-4364

"In this number of the Reference Shelf the compiler presents without prejudice some of the factual and controversial material underlying the public hearings and the current discussions on the Wagner Act. The charges and defense by some of the more prominent spokesmen on each side are included, also the cases of the advocates and opponents of amendment. A sidelight is given on state legislation of a similar nature." (Management R) Bibliography.

Booklist 36:327 Ap 15 '40
Management R 29:195 My '40 70w
Wis Lib Bul 36:123 Jl '40

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Trade unions and the anti-trust laws. (Reference shelf) 308p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

331.88 Trade unions. Trusts, Industrial (W) 40-11303

"In this number of the Reference Shelf the effort has been made to sum up impartially, so far as available materials have permitted, the case for and against labor's liability under the anti-trust laws, and labor's tactics as represented in monopolistic trends tending to affect the patterns of our industrial and economic life. Labor's case for the most part, and so far as accessible materials have allowed, has been presented by its own advocates. In keeping with the practice and precedent of the series, the needs of debaters and the convenience of the general reader have particularly been kept in mind in its compilation. Material and bibliography are presented as general, affirmative or supporting the desirability of wider regulation of labor organizations and affirming their liability under the anti-trust laws, and negative, or presenting labor's defense and its claimed immunity from these laws. A summary of arguments is also presented." Introd.

Booklist 36:399 Je 15 '40
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 7 '40 210w
Wis Lib Bul 36:123 Jl '40

JOHNSON, DOUGLAS WILSON. The origin of submarine canyons; a critical review of hypotheses. 126p il map $2.50 Columbia univ. press [12s 6d Oxford]

551.46 Ocean bottom. Canyons 40-3242

Study of the origin of the submarine canyons which extend downward and outward to the depths of eight or ten thousand feet below the surface of the sea. The author attempts to explain their origin "as the result of long-continued sapping by submarine springs fed . . . by waters, chiefly artesian, migrating thru the sediments of the continental shelf to appear on its steeper seaward face." Index.

"Regardless of the reader's individual 'faith' in the present submarine-valley controversy, he will find this volume valuable as the most nearly complete reference source on this subject and as a stimulus to productive thought on a problem of great importance to many of the earth sciences." P. A. Smith
+ — Geog R 30:520 Jl '40 850w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:7 Ja '40

"This slender volume from the pen of Columbia University's famous geomorphologist should be called to the attention of a larger audience than the small group of specialists working on the problem. . . Although his explanation may appear incredible at first glance, Professor Johnson's marshaling of data and cogency of logic are such as to give much plausibility to his ideas."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 F '40 300w

JOHNSON, EDGAR AUGUSTUS JEROME. An economic history of modern England. 230p $1.75 Nelson

330.942 Great Britain—Economic conditions 39-23624

"This work, based on a wide variety of standard secondary sources, is designed as a text for undergraduates. . . The author has summarized in able fashion the main changes which have taken place in English economic life since 1700." Am Hist R

"The main criticism which may be directed against it is its extraordinary brevity. This reviewer, however, must take issue with the author on certain rather important points. Professor Johnson mentions neither the Cobden Treaty system nor the highly significant era of European free trade from 1860 to 1879. . . The discussion of Joseph Chamberlain's movement for tariff reform is also far from adequate. Criticisms of this sort, however, are inevitable in so brief a treatment. As a whole, Professor Johnson deserves commendation for covering as well as he has done the economic history of modern England in 230 pages." Sidney Zebel

JOHNSON, E. A. J.—Continued
+ — Am Hist R 45:957 Jl '40 280w

"This is a first-rate little book—evidence that bigger and better things can be done within smaller compass. Its word count is about a quarter of that of an extended text designed to meet the needs of a full-dress course, yet it abstracts most excellently the economic history of modern England and cites an abundance of accessible literature." A. R. Upgren
+ Ann Am Acad 208:223 Mr '40 480w

JOHNSON, EMORY RICHARD; HUEBNER, GROVER GERHARDT, and WILSON, GEORGE LLOYD. Transportation: economic principles and practices. 678p maps $4 (21s) Appleton-Century

385 Transportation 40-9065

"This volume is the successor of Principles of Transportation by the same authors. The present book is not a revision of the former one that was published twelve years ago, but is one that has, for the most part, been written de novo. . . Each of the five kinds of transportation, railroad, pipe line, air, water, and highway, is discussed. . . One third of the volume is devoted to railroad transportation and the practices, principles and problems connected therewith, the remaining two-thirds being apportioned among the other kinds of transportation. The business of transportation—the facilities, services, business methods and procedure—is here emphasized in the discussion of each type of transportation." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by T. C. Bigham
Am Econ R 30:865 D '40 450w

"A comprehensive, lucid and objective treatise." Miller McClintoch
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 440w
Eng N 125:63 Ag 29 '40 150w

JOHNSON, ENID, and JOHNSON, MARGARET. Mystery of the seven murals. 269p $2 Random house

40-33364

Mystery story for girls of teen age.

"Another good detective story for girls." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '40 120w

"This is a fast moving story that will be liked by girls aged eleven to fifteen." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 65:661 Ag '40 150w

JOHNSON, FREDERICK ERNEST. The social gospel re-examined. 261p $2 Harper

261 Sociology, Christian. Theology, Doctrinal 40-34183

"The Rauschenbusch Lectures at Colgate-Rochester Divinity School in 1939 are now issued in book form, and this book has been chosen by the Religious Book Club as one of its monthly selections. . . Professor Johnson faces the criticism of the social gospel which today comes, not simply from religious and economic conservatives, but from theologians 'who eschew biblical literalism' and who, in some cases at least, hold radical political and economic ideas. Niebuhr, Tillich, Brunner are names which appear frequently in his pages." (Crozer Q) The author is professor of education, Teachers college, Columbia university. Index.

"This book belongs in the class of bridge-building books of which we need a vast number. . . In this case we have a professor of social ethics and education writing a book on theology. It is one of those books which a man has a right to produce when, after he has made thoroughly good in one field, he feels the need of formulating something about the whole of life. This is as it should be if we are not, in our attempt to get an organic society, going to lose the advantage we once had when we encouraged every man to concentrate on his special field which of course engendered an atomistic set of disciplines with no one dealing with the question 'What is the whole of life about?' " A. E. Holt
+ Christian Century 58:59 Ja 8 '40 1700w

"This is a very able discussion. It carries forward the present debate in theology and ethics to a higher level of comprehension and practicality. The chapters on 'The Nature of the Christian Ethic,' 'Our Secular Culture,' 'Christianity and War,' and 'Democracy and the Christian Ethic' are particularly notable." Gordon Poteat
+ Crozer Q 18:74 Ja '41 340w

JOHNSON, GOVE GRIFFITH. The Treasury and monetary policy, 1933-1938. 230p $2.75 Harvard univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

332.4 Money—U.S. Currency question. U.S. Treasury department 39-31817

"The author divides his treatment into a discussion of the gold policy during 1933 and 1934, the stabilization fund, the policy of sterilizing gold, the silver policy, and the process of policy formulation. One of the principal threads binding the discussion together is the thesis that 'the Great Depression . . . sealed the doom of independent central banking and destroyed the mirage, fostered so carefully in the twenties, that politics and money could be kept apart in troublous times.' " Ann Am Acad

"The work is a good descriptive and analytical survey of the development of monetary policies during those years of rapid change. In organization and balanced judgment, it leaves little to be desired. Although the author allows no doubt of his preference for democracy and of his desire to maintain democratic controls, he admits that this is one of the important problems awaiting solution in the future." Lawrence Clark
+ Am Econ R 30:189 Mr '40 850w

Reviewed by D. H. Leavens
Am Hist R 45:848 Jl '40 200w

"Coming at a time when published material on the subject is confined largely to piecemeal treatment in periodical literature, this study is an excellent correlation of the most important elements comprising recent monetary history. It purports to deal only with American monetary experience under Roosevelt. But so skilfully does it interweave the broader monetary associations in time and place that the book is to be commended also for its information and insight into world monetary history generally." G. H. E. Smith
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:357 Ap '40 450w

"This is, in general, the best of the books that have appeared to date on recent monetary policies in the United States. The material has been well covered, and interpretation and analysis show keen insight and penetration. The author's style is not the most lucid, but this is compensated to a considerable extent by his forthright willingness to flay particular actions or attitudes when he feels that they deserve it." C. R. Whittlesey
+ Ann Am Acad 208:204 Mr '40 360w

"Dr. Johnson has written a penetrating and critical analysis of the monetary policy of the Roosevelt administration. . . What makes this book significant is that it is not the product of an orthodox gold-standard author of the Kemmerer school. It is written by a man who believes that some form of managed currency is essential under modern conditions, but demonstrates that we have got to improve the form of management if our economy is to function properly." R. L. Buell
+ Books p14 Ja 21 '40 800w
Foreign Affairs 18:569 Ap '40 20w

Reviewed by K. R. Bopp
J Pol Econ 48:906 D '40 410w

JOHNSON, HEWLETT. The soviet power; with il. by Nowell Mary Hewlett Johnson [Eng title: Socialist sixth of the world]. 352p $2.50 Modern age [7s 6d Gollancz]

947.084 Russia—Social conditions. Russia—Economic conditions. Communism—Russia 40-35696

The author, dean of Canterbury, surveys the achievements, social and political of Soviet Russia, lays the blame for the Russo-German pact on the French and British governments, and finally pleads for friendship between Russia and England before it is forever too late. The American edition is a revision of the London edition published in 1939.

"To criticize Dr. Johnson within brief compass would be quite impossible; one would have to write a book of corresponding length to point out all the misstatements and fallacies which the good Dean accepted from his Soviet hosts and passes on to his readers with naïve faith."

— Atlantic F '41 170w

"The Very Reverend Hewlett Johnson is a staunch admirer of the Soviet Union who is not afraid to stick his neck out. In this almost lyrical account of Russia he has stuck his neck out very far indeed. . . His defense of the Soviets shows more personal courage than political wisdom." Joseph Barnes

Books p20 D 15 '40 280w

"There is nothing remotely suggestive of an adequate explanation of the long series of purges that have destroyed so many eminent Communists of the early years of the Revolution. Nor would one learn from Dean Johnson that along with scientists who have been able to do normal work there is a long list of men of learning in concentration camps." W. H. Chamberlin

— Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 11 '41 460w

"Theodore Dreiser finds the book 'wholly fair and well intended.' We would entirely disagree and condemn the whole book as unfair in presenting a partial, a very partial, picture, and in ignoring every particle of evidence that embarrasses his thesis." Mother Mary Lawrence

— Commonweal 33:258 D 27 '40 600w

"The Dean of Canterbury has written here a very uncritical laudation of Soviet Russia, and published it, impenitent, after the crime against Finland had caused most of the other unpaid admirers of the Soviet to reconsider their position. One cannot but sympathise with men of eager intelligence who had for years fixed high hopes for humanity on the Soviet's leadership and from whose eyes Stalin has now rudely torn the scales. It is not so easy to condone an infatuation which induces blindness like the Dean of Canterbury's. There are times when in reading the Dean's book one wonders whether he has any critical sense left at all." R. C. K. Ensor

— Manchester Guardian p3 F 2 '40 460w

"Dean Johnson is obviously too naïve and ignorant to know that he is propagating lies. His book is part imaginative wish-fulfilment and part faithful transcription of Soviet propaganda material. . . Not once does this dean of the Church of England notice the beggars, the homeless children or the ragged peasants. . . Many statements in this book are just plain untruths. . . 'Nothing strikes the visitor to the Soviet Union more forcibly than the absence of fear' writes the Dean. He does not, of course, mention that there is no habeas corpus and that imprisonment without trial is the rule rather than the exception . . . that children of twelve who steal food are subject to the death penalty. If this is the kind of security 'socialism' gives to the workers, they would be well advised to fight for the preservation of the insecurity they enjoy under the capitalist system." Freda Utley

— New Repub 104:28 Ja 6 '41 1200w

"This is a shining example of the Rollo Book school of writing about Soviet Russia which rather went into decline after Stalin's pact with Hitler and the Soviet invasion of Finland. Neither of these events seems to have had any effect in shaking the worthy Dean of Canterbury's conviction that all is for the best in the Stalinite world." W. H. Chamberlin

— Sat R of Lit 23:13 Ja 11 '41 750w

"'In material results the Soviet Union moves up a steady incline: her moral advance is steeper still.' The Dean of Canterbury has himself undertaken an uphill task in trying to substantiate such a statement at the present time. But he has unbounded faith in the power of statistics. He has compiled nearly four hundred pages of them, almost a statistical abstract of the Soviets, each chapter of which inspires a growing wonder at his own credulity." Christopher Hobhouse

— Spec 164:151 F 2 '40 1000w

— Times [London] Lit Sup p750 D 30 '39 600w

JOHNSON, JACK T. Peter Anthony Dey; integrity in public service. 246p $2 Iowa state hist. soc.

B or 92 Dey, Peter Anthony 39-28859

"Railroad surveyor and engineer, a man who had an important part in pushing the steel tracks westward from New York to Chicago, from Chicago to the Mississippi River, from the Mississippi to the Missouri, and who made the basic surveys for the Union Pacific lines from Omaha to Utah, was Peter Anthony Dey. The story of his life is an illuminating footnote on railroad history, as well as a modestly inspiring record of a sturdy, helpful character who influenced the people of his town (Iowa City) and his state." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"Mr. Johnson's brief biography will interest all who are stirred by midwest pioneering, not in its gaudy phases, but as a way of life which was not easy, one which strong men found just to their taste." G. G.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 Mr 2 '40 130w

"Mr Dey clearly deserves a real biography. This effort is too obviously the thesis of a graduate student. Irrelevant material is included, and important information about Mr Dey is omitted. It is too scrappy and cyclopedic in style to be of much use in public schools. In its present form it is neither good biography nor good history, although it contains much useful information." O. M. Dickerson

— + Social Educ 4:216 Mr '40 240w

JOHNSON, MARGARET SWEET, and JOHNSON, MRS HELEN LOSSING. The smallest puppy; il. by [the authors]. 89p $1.75 Harcourt

(W) 40-27272

Picture story book about a very small but intelligent Eskimo puppy who finally achieved his ambition as lead dog in a sled team.

Booklist 36:309 Ap 1 '40

"This is told in clear eighteen-point type, for children at an age especially interested in puppy stories and likely to be led by a good easy one into making efforts to read for themselves. It can also be read aloud with practical certainty of approval. There is a picture on every other page, furry, bustling and genuinely sympathetic with a little dog's difficulties." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Mr 10 '40 180w

Churchman 154:5 D 1 '40 20w

"Slightly wooden but on the whole a pleasant, satisfactory little story." J. L. Sauer

+ — Library J 65:213 Mr 1 '40 90w

"Though the style is simple, the story reads aloud well and the little Eskimo puppy who is its hero is drawn with humor and a thorough understanding of the ways of puppyhood." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 7 '40 320w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '40 80w

JOHNSON, MARGARET SWEET, and JOHNSON, MRS HELEN (LOSSING). Tim; a dog of the mountains. 112p il map $1.75 Harcourt
(W) 40-30722

Dick Marshall, a young American scientist working in Afghanistan, is given an Afghan hound puppy. This is the story of the long journey to America; Tim's loss for a time, and the reunion of master and dog in Colorado.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 S 1 '40 250w

"A good story by authors who have written before of dogs."
+ Churchman 154:34 D 1 '40 30w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:852 O 15 '40 30w

"A good dog story for the younger children. The excellent illustrations add value to the book." J. E. Stromdahl
+ Library J 65:878 O 15 '40 50w

"These author-artists, whose long list of dog stories keeps up a remarkable level of freshness and excellence, now give us an interesting tale, for the younger children, of an unusual breed of dog, the Afghan hound." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p9 D 15 '40 180w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 120w

JOHNSON, OSA HELEN (LEIGHTY) (MRS MARTIN ELMER JOHNSON). I married adventure. 376p il $3.50 Lippincott

B or 92 Johnson, Martin Elmer. Photography of animals. Africa—Description and travel. Adventure and adventurers
(W) 40-5007

The story of a brief courtship and a runaway marriage of a pair of Kansas youngsters is followed by an account of their travels and adventures in the South seas, Borneo, and Africa, making the films that made them famous —Mr and Mrs Martin Johnson. Index.

"It makes good reading. It makes, at this dark hour, as good an 'escape story' as you are apt to run into for some time."
+ Atlantic Jl '40 100w
Booklist 36:363 My 15 '40
Bookmark 2:10 Ja '41

" 'I Married Adventure' is a fine book on many counts. It is a good travel book, a good adventure book, a good book about animals, a good book on photography and, best of all, it is a good human story about two extremely likable people, told by one of them with simplicity, humor, warmth and complete lack of 'side.' " Rose Feld
+ Books p1 My 19 '40 1550w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p11 My 17 '40 1100w

"It isn't just the animal-lover who will cherish this story. Anyone who likes a thrilling tale (a true one, too) with a plucky, nervy, cheerful and charming hero and heroine is all set. 'I Married Adventure' is as 'rare and real' as the people who made it possible." Olga Owens
+ Boston Transcript p1 My 18 '40 750w
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '40

"The reader is impressed with the tremendous industriousness of these two people, their physical endurance, their patience, their understanding of animals and natives, and their love for each other. They made their own job, always knew what they wanted to do, and were unconfused. Old and young will enjoy this book. It is splendidly illustrated." M. N. Baker
+ Library J 65:396 My 1 '40 150w

"Every page of her book is readable and exciting; the photographs are plentiful and have all the dramatic quality that we are used to in the camera work of the author and her husband." M. C.
+ Manchester Guardian p7 N 1 '40 260w

"The Martin Johnsons were not and never pretended to be scientists. . . They were simple people who loved adventure, who loved animals, and who, thanks to a quiet singleness of purpose, must have lived a very happy life until Martin was killed in the crash of an American air liner. Their story, as Mrs. Johnson here tells it, is almost as interesting for the picture it gives of two happy and likable people as it is for the account of adventures in Borneo, Africa, and the South Seas. . . 'I Married Adventure' tells the whole story unaffectedly and with a simple charm that is highly engaging. It belongs in any list of Americana, for the Johnsons were as American as David Crockett." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 150:736 Je 15 '40 240w
New Repub 103:62 Jl 8 '40 90w

"Books of adventure are so numerous that they might be shoveled into our libraries by the scuttleful and for the most part so ephemeral that they might speedily be shoveled out again in the same way. But not this one. This one is unique. It has the human quality of a novel and the permanence of social, as well as exploring, history; and the day's breathless excitements have their place in it naturally, as they come." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p5 My 19 '40 1300w

"A pleasant, forthright, occasionally exciting book." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 16:92 My 18 '40 700w

" 'I Married Adventure,' will delight the rocking-chair-travelers and explorers and revive the urge in those who have wandered along the byways." Linton Wells
+ Sat R of Lit 22:10 My 18 '40 750w
— Spec 165:402 O 18 '40 130w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 11 '40 1300w

"In their famed animal films (Simba, et al.) Mr. & Mrs. Johnson virtually told a serialized story of their adventures for 25 years in the South Seas, Africa, Borneo. But because Osa Johnson also makes a companionate idyl of their life together, many a reader will agree that their adventures are worth telling twice."
+ Time 35:94 My 20 '40 170w
Times [London] Lit Sup p437 S 7 '40 700w
Wis Lib Bul 36:126 Jl '40

JOHNSON, OSA HELEN (LEIGHTY) (MRS MARTIN ELMER JOHNSON). Osa Johnson's jungle friends. 200p il $2 Lippincott

591.5 Animals, Legends and stories of 39-33416

Stories of interesting animal personalities met by the author in her travels. Grades four and up.

"Thrilling stories of Osa Johnson's jungle adventures, well filled with pictures and told in facile, sprightly style." E. V. W.
+ Cath World 152:377 D '40 30w

"Pleasant and interesting."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:27 N 18 '39 20w
Wis Lib Bul 36:72 Ap '40

JOHNSON, PAMELA HANSFORD (MRS G. N. STEWART). Too dear for my possessing. 383p $2.50 Carrick 40-12033

Character study of a shy, sensitive Englishman, Claud Pickering. His early youth was spent in Bruges, with his author-father, and Helena, his father's mistress. Bruges was Claud's spiritual home, and all his life he retained his love for that city, and for Cecil, the English girl he met there. In England where he later went to school and grew to manhood he married another girl, but the marriage was unsuccessful. After Cecil's death Claud divorced his wife and wandered back to Bruges and his dreams of his childhood and Cecil.

Booklist 37:12 S '40

" 'Too Dear for My Possessing' conveys the emotions of adolescence with such clarity that one regrets Claud's growing up. He becomes less real with the years, and the author's touch is proportionately lacking in assurance and felicity. The central figure does not live up to the promise of his beginnings, and neither does the novel." Lisle Bell
+ — Books p2 Jl 28 '40 550w

"Once again Miss Johnson has written an absorbing story about real people. Helena is a triumph of sympathetic creation. Even though it seems odd that she should have been attracted by the feeble-spirited creatures to whom she devoted her vitality, perhaps this is the truest touch of all." Wilfrid Gibson
+ Manchester Guardian p6 Ag 30 '40 190w

"A narrative that is bright with people and fine dialogue. It isn't a deep story, yet it is told movingly and with considerable skill." Marianne Hauser
+ New Repub 103:307 S 2 '40 300w

Reviewed by Desmond Hawkins
New Statesman & Nation 20:214 Ag 31 '40 550w

"This is a book of queer enchantment; of strange, astringent realism; a book stripped utterly of sentimentality but deep with feeling that is both psychic and sensuous. . . It is a story with heartbreak in it; mystery—the mystery of personality, of spirit, before which science has nothing to say; and the occasional aching loveliness that is art's greatest gift to life. For Miss Johnson is a young artist but a real one; with the artist's unceasing dissatisfaction as insurance." J. S. S.
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 28 '40 700w

"Rather wistful, neatly written, without any great impact. The city backgrounds have the right atmosphere."
+ New Yorker 16:56 Ag 3 '40 50w

"It is a thoroughly competent, better than average, story." R. L.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 Ag 3 '40 350w

Reviewed by J. A. Smith
Spec 165:202 Ag 23 '40 270w

"Today, when world conditions cause many to seek escape in books, a well-told love story is doubly welcome. Pamela Hansford Johnson's novel 'Too Dear For My Possessing' will be most satisfying to such readers, for not only does she write an absorbing, almost pitiful, love story, but she presents unusual characters, each interesting apart from his or her role in the plot." M. D.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 28 '40 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p421 Ag 31 '40 370w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 30:xii autumn '40 20w

JOHNSON, SIDDIE JOE. Debby; il. by Ninon MacKnight. 213p $2 Longmans 40-13974

Debby was a little city girl who lived with her father and mother in a trailer in the Texas gulf country while her father was writing a book. This story for readers of eight to ten describes Debby's happy experiences in learning to know the country and the people, especially the Sanders who lived on a farm in a "real" house.

Booklist 37:18 S '40

"Girls from eight to eleven will enjoy this pleasant story." Florence O'Gara
+ Library J 65:661 Ag '40 110w

"Little girls of 8 or 9 will be captivated by this simply written story about a real-seeming little girl who lives in Southern Texas. It abounds in atmosphere of the Gulf Coast, whose warm sun, mesquite bushes, blue water and cotton fields were highly satisfactory to this young Deborah." I. S.
+ N Y Times p41 N 10 '40 90w

"Gives an informative as well as entertaining picture of Texas country life near the Gulf."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '40 320w

JOHNSON, THOMAS HERBERT. The printed writings of Jonathan Edwards, 1703-1758; a bibliography. 136p $7.50 Princeton univ. press

012 Edwards, Jonathan—Bibliography
40-32578

Bibliography of the works of Jonathan Edwards, with indications of the libraries where the work may be found, in any particular edition. Title index.

"Edwards' rank as the leading American philosopher before William James and the recent revival of interest in him justify the publication of this exhaustive bibliography. It will of course be useful primarily to specialists in American cultural history."
+ Christian Century 57:1032 Ag 21 '40 70w
Library Q 11:128 Ja '41 60w

JOHNSTON, MARIAN. The snow house; pictures by Marion Downer. 33p $1.50 Dutton 40-14541

Story for pre-school children, describing a family composed of Billy and Joan and their father and mother, and the beautiful snow house they all built and played in during a big snowstorm.

"The story will give little children a secure and cozy feeling. Recommended for all preschool collections." E. G. Mullan
+ Library J 65:879 O 15 '40 80w

"The text, while in no sense distinguished, is adequate and the illustrations are factual rather than imaginative. But youngsters who have enjoyed making a snowman or 'playing house' outdoors after a snowstorm, will relive with Joan and Bill the adventurous fun of constructing a snow playhouse large enough for daddy and mother as well."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 60w

JOHNSTONE, MRS NANCY J. Hotel in flight. 378p $3 Longmans [8s 6d Faber]

914.67 Spain—Description and travel. Hotels, taverns, etc.—Spain. Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939 [40-1150]

In her former book Mrs Johnstone described how she and her husband built a hotel at Tossa, on the Catalan coast. Here she continues the story of the hotel, describing its various phases during the Civil war. It was variously a home for British journalists covering the war; a temporary headquarters for commissars and spies; a rest house for relief workers; and a home for refugee children. The final episode described is the author's successful trip over the border into France with a lorry-load of Spanish children.

Booklist 36:342 My 1 '40
Bookmark 2:8 Ja '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p6 Ap 14 '40 800w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Fainsod
Boston Transcript p11 Ap 8 '40 450w

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd
Christian Science Monitor p10 O 21 '39 500w

" 'Hotel in Flight' is a rambling, highly sympathetic portrait gallery. It recounts in simple fashion the author's heroic efforts to aid all sorts of war victims; it is more important for its human interest than any light it casts on the Spanish war." E. S.
+ Commonweal 31:516 Ap 5 '40 150w

JOHNSTONE, N. J.—Continued

"The whole book is amusing, and part of it is extremely exciting. As a discourse on methods for managing children who arrived dirty and difficult from a bombed city it is excellent. The amiability and sense needed to win their hearts have passed into the writing, which is a charming piece of work. In the reception areas, where it ought to be read, it should shine as a mirror of perfection." A. W. J.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 24 '39 220w

New Statesman & Nation 18:734 N 18 '39 280w

"It is an intensely live and interesting book, and one need not have read its predecessor to enter into its circumstances and feel close and warm acquaintance with its characters. But those who have read 'Hotel in Spain' will be glad to know that the same mettlesome spirit is here."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 7 '40 600w

New Yorker 16:92 Ap 6 '40 50w

"With all its excessive British heartiness this book is a good record of a village in the rearguard of the first great resistance to fascism. There's no fake propaganda and there's a lot of downright sense in it. What Popular Front concessions to middle-class tradesmen cost the poorer people in the way of soaring prices you may read here. How the fascists machine-gunned a horde of fleeing civilians outside of Barcelona you may also read. For Mrs. Johnstone saw it." Ralph Bates

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:6 My 11 '40 700w

"Mrs. Johnstone's account is full of human interest, and her acrid comments on the guests at her hotel all make good reading; but the book is also valuable as showing exactly how the civil war affected the life of a fairly out-of-the-way Catalan village. . . Mrs. Johnstone's book has its humorous touches. She is excellent on the petty Catalan officials and the English poets who used to stay at her hotel, all writing the same sort of poem about the war and all reading to each other from anthologies. Hoteliers who keep diaries are terrifying people, but it must be confessed that they write entertaining books."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p534 S 16 '39 650w

JONES, ARTHUR JULIUS; GRIZZELL, EMIT DUNCAN, and GRINSTEAD, WREN JONES. The principles of unit construction. 232p $2 McGraw

371.39 Education—Curricula. Learning, Psychology of. Teaching 40-2677

"After several years of experimentation in Classes at the University of Pennsylvania, the authors, convinced that previous types of units were not in accord with up-to-date psychological theory, developed a new approach which is illustrated by many actual examples of practice. 'The chief emphasis in this volume is upon a learning process that continuously integrates the specific learnings and ultimately attains a desired central objective—an adjustment in personality.'" (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 36:230 F 15 '40

"The Jones book strikes a dynamic note at the start by asserting that a unit which does not result in actual adaptation of behavior is inadequate as an educational instrument. . . The book supports this line of thought by a masterful selection of the essentials of the organismic psychology as related to learning, tension reduction and integration. So far all is excellent, sound and well done. . . Then follow examples of units of adaptation. Some of these are excellent, others unfortunately chosen or presented." C. C. Crawford

+ — School & Society 53:61 Ja 11 '41 550w

Reviewed by M. H. Willing

School R 48:470 Je '40 500w

JONES, CHESTER LLOYD. Guatemala, past and present. 420p il maps $5 Univ. of Minn.

972.81 Guatemala (W) 40-27154

Survey of the political, economic, and social history of Guatemala. The author is professor of economics and political science at the University of Wisconsin. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Morris Siegel

Am Anthropol 42:669 O '40 1000w

"The photographs and statistical maps are valuable accessories to a straightforward—almost too sober—text, which is also accompanied by careful documentation and a thorough bibliography." T. S. Berry

+ Am Econ R 30:373 Je '40 550w

"Throughout, the author writes in a calm, detached fashion. Perhaps the account is too factual and detailed, but, after all, facts are essential before adequate interpretation can be made. With the facts themselves and the relative value given them the present reviewer can find little to challenge. The style tends to be heavy, however, and a bit more of summary and conclusion to each chapter might have helped. . . All in all, Guatemala, Past and Present is the best work on a single Latin-American country to appear in English, at least since the Foreign Policy Association's Problems of the New Cuba (New York, 1935). Any scholar contemplating a study of some individual country would do well to follow Professor Jones's work as a model." L. W. Bealer

+ — Am Hist R 46:447 Ja '41 600w

Reviewed by J. F. Rippy

Am Pol Sci R 34:389 Ap '40 230w

"Dr. Jones has been a student of Caribbean affairs for a long time, and thus brings ripe scholarship to his new volume. . . Dr. Jones and the University of Minnesota Press are to be congratulated on making this most welcome and satisfactory contribution to the body of literature on Central America." R. R. Hill

+ Ann Am Acad 209:243 My '40 450w

Booklist 36:262 Mr 1 '40

"A solid, detailed and thoroughly documented history of Guatemala. In it that lovely, mountain-pierced land is presented, not as a picturesque tourist stop, but as a seriously analyzed young republic." Agnes Rothery

+ Books p9 F 18 '40 950w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 3 '40 290w

Current Hist 51:9 Mr '40 60w

Foreign Affairs 18:764 Jl '40 20w

"Neglected by history itself, an able historian has at last caught up with Guatemala. And Chester Lloyd Jones, a leading authority on Caribbean affairs, has in his work done a superb job of scholarship on one of the least known but most important of the Central American countries."

+ Living Age 358:588 Ag '40 400w

Nation 150:577 My 4 '40 70w

"A thorough, well documented study."

+ New Repub 103:62 Jl 8 '40 60w

"As a bit of carefully organized scholarship it is superb, especially in view of the dearth of source-materials and the difficulty of getting at them." L. J. H., Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:21 Mr 16 '40 290w

Reviewed by B. P. Adams

Survey G 29:257 Ap '40 80w

JONES, ELISABETH INGLIS-. See Inglis-Jones, E.

JONES, ELIZABETH ORTON. Maminka's children. 108p il $2 Macmillan

(W) 40-27647

"An engaging group of stories about a young Bohemian mother, her three adored offspring and their grandfather, a woodcarver who came to the new country. Here they keep alive the traditions and customs of old Bohemia and together share their joy in simple things." Booklist

Booklist 37:40 O 1 '40

"As gentle, humorous and lovable a set of short stories as I have seen for introducing foreign children to six or eight-year-old Americans. . . The book has pictures that are truly Czech, very bright, and there are many of them." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 S 22 '40 290w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 11 '40 110w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 16:438 N '40 100w

"Maminka's Children is full of warmth and kindness and the deep affection of three happy children and their mother. . . The stories will tell very well, but children will want to hold this book in their hands without delay for Nanka, Marianka, and Honzicheck are friends to keep." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 65:851 O 15 '40 70w

"In the Introduction the author explains her love for Bohemian things and Bohemian ways and Bohemian people. And in a slight, beautifully made, beautifully illustrated book, she has given a sensitive, gay interpretation of those things, ways, and people." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 65:879 O 15 '40 100w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele

New Repub 103:843 D 16 '40 20w

"The many delightful colored lithographs and the stories . . . are alike in their genuinely childlike quality, their kindliness and gentle humor. . . Miss Jones, who knows children well, has told the stories with warmth and gayety and a lovely simplicity. The book is good for reading aloud and story-tellers will welcome it; boys and girls, however, will want to have it in their own hands in order to look at the pictures over and over again." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 N 3 '40 320w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 80w

Wis Lib Bul 36:172 D '40

JONES, FRANKLIN DAY. Machine shop training course. 2v 474;552p il ea $4; set $6 Industrial press

621.75 Machine shop practice 40-9533

"This treatise covers both elementary and advanced machine shop practice. It is designed for shop courses, self-instruction, and technical or trade school use. Volumes I and II may be used independently, each covering about half of the subjects dealt with in the complete two-volume treatise." Management R

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '40

Management R 29:310 Ag '40 450w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:48 O '40

JONES, GWILYM PEREDUR, and POOL, ARTHUR GEORGE. A hundred years of economic development in Great Britain. 420p $4.50 Macmillan [18s Duckworth]

330.942 Great Britain—Economic conditions

Outline of British economic history from 1837 to 1939. The work is divided into three periods: ending respectively in 1875, 1914, and 1939, but the period divisions do not mar the continuity of the study. The authors are an economist and an economic historian; the senior author being lecturer in economic history in the University of Sheffield; and the other lecturer in economics at the same university. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. T. Morgan

Am Econ R 30:851 D '40 600w

"Because this book is extremely rich in factual detail, methodologically sound, and theoretically adequate, I consider it, by all odds the best single-volume work on modern British economic history. . . A dozen or more indispensable monographs are omitted from an otherwise excellent bibliography. The index is inadequate. But the book is splendid textually, methodologically, and theoretically." E. A. J. Johnson

+ — Ann Am Acad 213:217 Ja '41 750w

"Throughout discreet use has been made of both literary and statistical sources: the work as a whole is well proportioned, and the writers show gifts of imagination no less than of learning. . . One might wish to have had a fuller account of the engineering trades, on which the technical development of so many industries hinges; and one would like to have been given a clearer account of the booms and depressions with which this page of history was so amply punctuated. These, however, are minor criticisms. Undergraduate students should be grateful to the authors for meeting their needs in such reasonable compass; and when present urgencies have passed there should be many non-specialist readers of this admirable survey." T. S. Ashton

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 15 '40 330w

"A thoroughly competent outline. . . It is well arranged, clearly written, and firm in its grasp of the essential lines of development. It has a good bibliography, which would have been better if some of the titles had not been incorrectly quoted, and if students had been given some help in choosing among the very large numbers of books mentioned. . . Very suitable in other respects to be used as a textbook by students both in Universities and in the top forms of schools, it is condemned by its high price to be bought mainly by libraries and to forfeit the chance of the wide sale which it deserves."

+ — New Statesman & Nation 19:220 F 17 '40 160w

Social Studies 31:287 O '40 20w

JONES, HAROLD SPENCER. Life on other worlds. 299p il $3 Macmillan [7s 6d English universities]

523.4 Planets. Plurality of worlds 40-34047

In an attempt to answer the question: Is there life elsewhere than on Earth? the author reviews the findings and theories of modern astronomy, setting forth the conditions necessary for life, and examining the possibilities of the various planets. Index.

Booklist 37:133 D 1 '40

Christian Century 57:1215 O 2 '40 180w

"Everything written by the Astronomer Royal is well worth reading, and the intelligent reader will find much to interest him in the present volume." Hector Macpherson

+ — Manchester Guardian p6 Jl 19 '40 490w

"It is a model of what such a book should be, popular and scientific at the same time, clear but concise in its writing, with the main theme standing out unburdened by irrelevant details, and the conclusions stated with balance and fairness. If there are any inaccuracies of fact, or even of typography, the present writer has failed to notice them." J. H. Jeans

+ Nature 146:211 Ag 17 '40 1300w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:44 O '40

"For readers who do not demand slippered ease for their speculative faculties this is a fascinating, as it is authoritative and comprehensive, book."

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 26 '41 500w

"In this effectively illustrated and efficiently compact volume, Britain's Astronomer Royal achieves superbly the objective of presenting a difficult and inherently abstruse scientific problem in terms that cannot fail to be comprehensible and interesting to the lay reader. It is an excellent example of the scientific method of approaching a question to which no answer can be given as a result of direct observation or controlled experiment. It is also an able survey of the present state of knowledge concerning the universe of stars and the solar system of planets."

JONES, H. S.—Continued

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 O '40 500w

"Many interesting lines of astronomical inquiry are brought together in this book. It shows science, not so much in a conquering phase, as hard-pressed to make a little progress against formidable obstacles. It is in the questions and in the stratagem of attack that the fascination lies, we need not trouble overmuch about the answers. Needless to say, the book is authoritative and abreast of all the latest developments." A. S. Eddington

+ — Spec 165:64 Jl 19 '40 1000w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 22 '40 100w

"This fascinating book is attractively got up and is in every way an example of popular scientific exposition at its best."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p395 Ag 17 '40 600w

JONES, JOHN HARRY, and others. The coal-mining industry; an international study in planning. 404p $5.40 (16s) Pitman

338.2 Coal mines and mining [40-30624]

"This factual study of the post-war experience of the coal-mining industries of Great Britain, France, Belgium, Poland, Germany, Canada and the United States consists of a survey of the efforts made by these countries to deal with the problem of depression in their respective coal industries. The authors, having prepared the work largely under an endowment from the West Yorkshire Coal Owners' Association, are concerned primarily with the British experience, to which half the volume is devoted. The separate studies are brought together only in the reflective summary by Professor Jones in which are discussed the parallel features of the British and American experiments in control. The volume is concerned with the organization of capital, not with that of labor." (Am Econ R) Index.

"This volume cuts a narrow path through the tremendous array of problems confronting this industry of strategic importance. It carefully avoids the broader significance of the facts it presents; that is, of the decline of the industry which was in the forefront of laissez faire development and of the passing in it of laissez faire itself. Within the confines that they have established, the authors have produced a modest but a thoroughly commendable study." W. R. Pabst, Jr.

Am Econ R 30:603 S '40 380w

New Statesman & Nation 19:286 Mr 2 '40 250w

JONES, NARD. Swift flows the river. 449p map $2.50 Dodd

(W) 40-5396

Pioneer days on the Columbia river forms the background for this story of Caleb Paige. When both his parents were killed in 1856 in the assault of the Indians on the Cascades, Caleb was taken charge of by Mike Shea, an Irish trooper. The boy's constant dream was to become a river-boat pilot, and it was while he and Mike were searching for gold that the first step in his career as pilot was made.

Booklist 36:364 My 15 '40

"Perhaps not one of a thousand prospective readers for Mr. Jones's novel has even seen or will ever see the Columbia. Yet not one of these will finish the book without coming to feel that he knows the river and its history, that he has —through Mr. Jones's thorough craftsmanship and evident affection for his theme—got the 'feel' of the Columbia and the men who helped to make a great state out of the wilderness along the Columbia's banks." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p1 Mr 17 '40 1200w

Reviewed by E. S. Fainsod
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 16 '40 130w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 12 '40 190w

"Mr. Jones has constructed a popular piece of historical fiction. . . Obviously he doesn't know his way about a steamboat. He writes about it and the river and its people, all from the outside. His book only suggests the rich story that lies in the movement of settlement up one of the great valleys of the American Continent." Horace Reynolds

— + N Y Times p25 Mr 10 '40 550w

New Yorker 16:106 Mr 16 '40 30w

" 'Swift Flows the River' is to be welcomed for the spot of light which it throws upon a region which has as yet been so inadequately represented in our fiction. Mr. Jones gives evidence of having worked carefully upon his history. His is not any profound interpretation. . . But he presents carefully the surface of life in his region, sometimes with much elaborate and painstaking detail." G. R. Stewart

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:6 Mr 16 '40 500w

"There can be no real complaint that Mr Jones has not given a picture of the times and the river; the trouble is that he has worked too hard to graft an involved plot to a story that really needed no plot. . . For all his top-heavy narrative, Mr Jones has produced a very readable and informative novel about a river not well enough known in this part of the country, and it should receive a cordial reception."

— + Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '40 750w

"The story flows freely and vigorously, its excitements deepened by a quiet instinct for tests of character and by the lessons of experience. The passages of sentiment are both restrained and unselfconscious. And Mr. Nard Jones's feeling for the sheer romance of American development, for the living urge that expressed itself in the navigation of the virgin waters of the North-West and in the fierce competition for freight charges and the like has the quickening force of imagination of what is best in the distinctively American fiction of to-day."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p325 Jl 6 '40 350w

JORDAN, ELIZABETH GARVER. First port of call. 265p $2 Appleton-Century

40-7420

The scene is at first a luxury airliner. The plane runs into a storm, is crippled, and after a forced landing on the ocean, sinks. After a gruelling experience of clinging to buoys in an icy sea, five of the liner's passengers and crew are rescued. But between these scenes there is an interval in which one of those rescued exists for a time in a strange land of shadows, halfway between life and death, where the scenes of the past and the strange present meet and mingle.

Booklist 36:364 My 15 '40

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p12 Ap 14 '40 380w

"As a parable the novel is thought-provoking, which is all that can be asked of any parable."

Christian Century 57:640 My 15 '40 420w

"Reading this intriguing and exciting story of the soul's first adventure in another world, one feels that there is an optimistic solution yonder to the riddle of a war-torn world here." E. C. T.

+ Churchman 154:16 My 15 '40 100w

"Miss Jordan is a competent writer and this is an edifying book." E. S.

+ Commonweal 32:25 Ap 26 '40 250w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p20 Ap 28 '40 200w

"It must be admitted that this conception has long ago had whatever was in it wrung out of it, and in this present instance we find, as soon as the novelty has worn off, that none of the thirteen is interesting enough to give to his saving or damnation any significance." N. L. R.
— Sat R of Lit 22:20 Jl 6 '40 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p653 D 28 '40 140w

JORDAN, MRS HELEN ROSALINE (ASHTON). The Swan of Usk. 320p $2.50 Macmillan [9s Collins]

Vaughan, Henry—Fiction 40-6293

An historical novel on the life of the seventeenth-century English poet, Henry Vaughan. The work is to some extent based on unpublished material collected by Louise Guiney and Gwenllian Morgan for a projected "life" which death prevented them from writing.

"Miss Ashton skillfully blends imagination with fact in writing of background and event, but she never pauses long enough to provide the solid dramatic scenes which fiction needs to focus attention and make characters come alive. Using the manner of pre-Boswell biographers, she chronicles her hero's deeds from birth to death in monotonous summary-narrative style. More actively annoying is her studied quaintness of phrasing." Kerker Quinn
+ — Books p12 Mr 31 '40 550w

Christian Century 57:453 Ap 3 '40 60w

Churchman 154:35 My 1 '40 50w

"The novel is as a whole an uneasy and unsatisfactory compromise between authentic biography and speculative fiction. Miss Ashton always writes well; her book is packed with erudition, and she has brought to her task much sympathetic understanding. Yet, withal, we must still turn to Vaughan's own radiantly crystalline poems for the essential illumination of his character." Wilfrid Gibson
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 F 2 '40 230w

"A somber, dignified treatment that, on the whole, fits its subject, but could hardly be classified as stirring fiction."
New Repub 102:553 Ap 22 '40 40w

"Although Vaughan is not a good subject for a novel, The Swan of Usk is a scholarly and notably well written book, which plunges the reader into the period it describes. A biography of Vaughan does not exist, and this novel, so slight are its fictitious elements, can be recommended as a substitute."
+ New Statesman & Nation 19:186 F 10 '40 290w

"Helen Ashton has done an enticing and disturbing piece of work. These troublous times, however different politically and economically the line-up differ not greatly in their psychological impositions from the days in which Henry Vaughan lived strenuously. There is, then, in this narrative a lesson in calmness, fortitude and faith not to be denied. For those who have ears Helen Ashton has read both from the First and the Second Lesson. 'Swan of Usk' is an exceptionally beautiful depiction of an exceptional soul." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p16 Mr 31 '40 800w

"Miss Ashton gives the impression that she has made a pretty thorough study of her materials. Not a good novel, 'The Swan of Usk' is an absorbing study of an olden time in Wales." Alexander Cowie
Sat R of Lit 21:22 Ap 6 '40 420w

Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 18 '40 500w

Time 35:87 Ap 8 '40 70w

"Imaginative writing about Henry Vaughan should leave that 'knowing, glorious Spirit' still mysterious, still over the border of everyday, if he is to engage our interest in a new way as a dramatic figure. Miss Ashton's reconstruction of his life makes the country doctor a trifle too ordinary. It is not that she uses a novelist's license too liberally, but that she does not use it sufficiently. Her reconstruction of Vaughan's life and times makes good fictional reading for those whose knowledge of Vaughan amounts to little; for those who are anxious to see the cryptic 'Silurist' plain he gets lost, in this narrative in the excitements and strife of his times."
Times [London] Lit Sup p61 F 3 '40 360w

JORDAN, PHILIP DILLON. William Salter, western torch-bearer. (Men of America ser) 273p $3 Miss. Valley press, Oxford, Ohio

B or 92 Salter, William 40-3335

"During the twenties, thirties, and forties of the last century there had arisen in the colleges and theological seminaries in the East student societies whose members were pledged to devote their lives to some form of missionary service. . . William Salter, the subject of this biography, belonged to such a group at Andover Theological Seminary, and the year 1843 found him and others of the band beginning their work in the Territory of Iowa. After several years at Maquoketa, the death of the missionary at Burlington brought Salter's removal to that rising river metropolis, and there he remained as the minister of the Congregational Church until his death in 1910." New Eng Q

"The debt which America owes to these pioneers of morality and culture is incalculable, and in so far as Mr. Jordan's biography contributes to an appreciation of that debt it is a useful performance." H. S. Commager
Books p18 Ap 21 '40 600w

"William Salter's work after 1843, except for service with the Christian Commission during the Civil War, was almost entirely in one middle-western state; but that does not detract from the value and significance of this book. Much to be desired are many more critical and sympathetic studies, such as this one, of the lives of men who played their parts on a local rather than a national stage." C. B. Goodykoontz
+ J Religion 20:415 O '40 400w

"The story of his achievements comes far short of being an exciting tale, though the young author has done his best to make it seem important. . . And in a sense it is an important story, for it is such studies as this which help to make clear how a single generation was sufficient to transform a rough, raw frontier into orderly and intelligent communities. Like all books it has some faults; perhaps its most serious one is that it is far too parochial in its outlook." W. W. Sweet
New Eng Q 13:359 Je '40 600w

JOSCELYN, ARCHIE (A. A. ARCHER, EVELYN MCKENNA, LYNN WESTLAND, pseuds). The nightmare riders. 251p $2 Phoenix

40-13263

Western story.

Boston Transcript p2 S 14 '40 20w

"Lynn Westland has turned out a clever and well written Western tale with certain elements of novelty in a complicated plot, though its title is not particularly apposite." G. W. Harris
+ — N Y Times p22 S 8 '40 240w

JOSEPHSON, MATTHEW. President makers; the culture of politics and leadership in an age of enlightenment, 1896-1919. 584p $3.75 Harcourt

973.91 U.S.—History—20th century. U.S.—Politics and government. Statesmen, American (W) 40-33441

Sociological and political history of the United States during the years 1896 to 1919, from McKinley to Wilson, by a former editor of The New Republic. The "president makers" are

JOSEPHSON, MATTHEW—Continued
Mark Hanna, Theodore Roosevelt, Colonel House and George Harvey, but the preponderance of material is devoted to the presidents themselves, particularly Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and by inference, Franklin D. Roosevelt. Contains a list of sources and an index.

Booklist 37:150 D 15 '40

Reviewed by H. S. Commager
Books p2 N 10 '40 1900w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 O 10 '40 700w

Churchman 154:35 N 1 '40 90w

"Such a book as this ought to be part of our political equipment. Yet Mr. Josephson has a thesis to which I must dissent. . . One reason I cannot accept it is that Mr. Josephson does nothing to document his arresting position. And it seems to me that he has simply gone off the deep end when he writes that this conviction was 'one of the most decisive forces that swayed the judgement of the President.' For this I know no evidence whatever. It is too simple—undocumented as it is—far too convenient a rationalization of Wilson's complex and elusive mind." Francis Downing
Commonweal 33:107 N 15 '40 550w

"Some of his statements about Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson may not please their admirers. The book will add to the understanding of two important decades in American history. It is well written, though it might have gained by shortening. Recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 65:761 S 15 '40 190w

Living Age 359:491 Ja '41 100w

Reviewed by Robert Bendiner
Nation 151:342 O 12 '40 1000w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 103:840 D 16 '40 1100w

"A superb job."
+ New Yorker 16:103 O 12 '40 70w

"In my opinion the book is worth reading and worth owning." J. T. Adams
+ Sat R of Lit 23:11 N 30 '40 550w

Social Studies 31:380 D '40 10w

"Here is a clear picture of democracy at work, and on the whole a pretty encouraging picture. It makes a vote in 1940 worthwhile." Leon Whipple
+ Survey G 29:557 N '40 1100w

Time 36:97 O 21 '40 550w

JOY, CHARLES RHIND, comp. Harper's topical concordance. 478p $3.95 Harper

220.2 Bible. Whole—Concordances 40-33097

"This 'new type of concordance' is an index of ideas found in the Bible, not merely of words. It contains 25,000 texts arranged under 2,150 topics." Christian Century

Booklist 37:131 D 1 '40

"Used with discrimination, as every tool must be, this will be one of the most useful in the minister's kit."
+ Christian Century 57:1178 S 25 '40 150w

"The compiler has rendered a real service in preparing practical help to Bible study." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 21 '40 80w

"This volume is a worthy successor to Hitchcock's Analysis and Nave's Topical Bible. It has all the virtues of these earlier works with the added value of having more texts, more conveniently arranged, under more topics." Rittenhouse Neisser
+ Crozer Q 18:78 Ja '41 210w

JUDD, CHARLES HUBBARD. Educational psychology. 566p il $2.25 Houghton

370.15 Educational psychology 39-17290

A textbook by the professor emeritus of education at the University of Chicago. "This book, which aims to present the essentials of a system of educational psychology, is divided into four parts. Part One deals with the human organism and human behavior. . . Part Two deals with the social environment, showing how its most important factors came into existence and how individuals acquire social modes of thought and behavior. . . Part Three deals with personality—with the way in which personality is produced and with the relation of personality traits to teaching and school administration. Part Four gives some account of the ways in which the techniques of investigation and the findings of psychology can be employed in solving certain typical practical problems encountered by teachers and school administrators in the conduct of schools." (Introd) Index.

"The book appears to the reviewer as partial and one-sided. So close has the author been to one school of thought largely inspired by himself that other work equally valuable is treated in a cavalier manner. For example, the word 'motivation' does not appear in the index. The broad field of interest is dismissed in a few pages and the problems of growth and maturation are inadequately considered. It is clear that to this author education is for the most part an intellectual process by means of which the maturing individual learns to understand the civilization which encompasses him. The text is undoubtedly a significant contribution to the field of educational psychology. Its style is learned and intellectual; its arrangement logical and compelling; and its illustrations full of point." A. M. Jordan
+ — Am J Psychol 53:315 Ap '40 750w

"All students of Dr. Judd, of whom the reviewer is one, as well as many others interested in the study of education, will welcome his book on psychology. Much of the material has been heard in the author's classes and public lectures or has been published in his earlier textbooks and monographs. However, to see the entire body of material brought together in an organized and complete whole will be a real pleasure to many persons." C. T. Gray + El School J 41:311 D '40 700w

"The reader who approaches Judd's book with the traditional notion as to the proper content of educational psychology may not like what he finds. The book contains nothing like a complete summary of relevant research. . . There is no systematic treatment of learning, learning theories, factors affecting learning, and related issues; and the psychological terminology is not that to which most readers have become accustomed. Missing these familiar items, some readers may even be disinclined to regard the book as an educational psychology at all. On the other hand, if the reader examines the book with an eye to its potential contributions to an improved education, he will evaluate the book quite differently. He may then concede that, if the book is not an educational psychology, then so much the worse for the field of educational psychology." W. A. Brownell
+ School R 48:227 Mr '40 1300w

JUDSON, CLARA (INGRAM) (MRS J. M. JUDSON). Boat builder; the story of Robert Fulton; il. by Armstrong Sperry. 121p $1.50 Scribner

B or 92 Fulton, Robert. Steamboats—Juvenile literature 40-32220

"The first half deals with the inventor's boyhood, beginning with his first day of school at the age of eight, and is more fictionized than the latter half. The story of the 'Clermont's' first voyage is told in detail." Library J

Booklist 37:274 F 15 '41

"Mrs. Judson's style is inviting; it has led little folks into biography and proved a boon to parents whose children insist that any story read to them must be 'true.' Now she uses it on the eight-to-ten group, to the advantage of Fulton, for most of us tied firmly to the 'Clermont' and deprived of the rest of his life." M. L. Becker
+ Books p26 N 10 '40 200w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:853 O 15 '40 10w

Reviewed by Alice Monroe
Library J 65:879 O 15 '40 120w

"This is not, as a matter of fact, a very strongly delineated portrait of Fulton as a personality, and the narrative shifts abruptly half-way through from story form to a biographical treatment, but it is a readable and informative book."
+ — N Y Times p10 O 13 '40 320w
New Yorker 16:130 D 7 '40 30w

JUDSON, CLARA (INGRAM) (MRS J. M. JUDSON). People who come to our house; pictures by Marjorie Peters. 48p $1 Rand McNally 40-10456

Short stories for four-year-olds about the butcher, the baker, and other tradesmen and workers, who explain what they do simply to two questioning children. The book is divided into two parts: the town and the city.

"The introductions are in lively story form, as if a child were really meeting regular visitors to the house. I can remember when such a book would have been treasured in my own house; it will be now wherever there is a sociable little child." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 Ag 18 '40 150w
Boston Transcript p2 S 14 '40 90w

JUDSON, JEANNE. What every woman should know about furniture. 99p il $2.50 Stokes
749 Furniture (W) 40-27155

A volume made up largely of photographs of furniture of various periods and styles from early English to modern American. Photographs are accompanied by brief descriptions and there are introductory sections laying down the principles of furniture selection for the modern housewife with a limited budget.

Booklist 36:260 Mr 1 '40

"A clear and simple exposition."
+ Books p16 Ag 4 '40 130w
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '40
J Home Econ 32:331 My '40 80w
Wis Lib Bul 36:46 Mr '40

JUNG, MOSES, ed. Modern marriage; contributors: Grace E. Chaffee [and others]. 420p il $3.75 Crofts
173.1 Marriage. Family 40-27449

"This volume aims at a frank and complete discussion of the major aspects of marriage with emphasis on the ethical and aesthetic implications of the marriage relationship. The book has grown out of the course in Modern Marriage offered for the last six years at the State University of Iowa." (Pref) Partial contents: Marriage and mental hygiene; The aesthetics of marriage; Factors in family friendship; The legal aspects of marriage; The physical aspects of marriage; A religious approach to marriage; Art in the home; Child welfare: its guiding principles. Index.

Booklist 36:359 My 15 '40

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley
Books p39 N 10 '40 700w

"As a scientific study of all aspects of marriage, by experts who combine a realistic attitude toward the facts with a keen sense of social responsibility and an awareness of the religious significance of the family, this book has no superior."
+ Christian Century 57:705 My 29 '40 160w
J Home Econ 32:397 Je '40 90w

"There is not an untrue statement in the book but at the same time not an original idea, not an original suggestion, not an original illation in it. It is simply a compilation of the obvious, a collection of intellectual clichés." V. F. Calverton
— Sat R of Lit 22:18 Jl 6 '40 900w

"The contributors evidence a wide appreciation of the nature and meaning of marriage as an institution, as a source of personal development, as a means of attaining happiness, and as an end for securing racial propagation. With this broad outlook and the fine standard of frank discussions, it is a valuable addition to current literature." I. S. Wile, M. D.
+ Survey 76:310 O '40 280w

JUSTUS, MAY. Here comes Mary Ellen; il. by Helen Finger. 140p $1.50 Lippincott 40-8615

Mary Ellen, the Tennessee mountain girl, heroine of Near-Side-and-Far (Book Review Digest, 1937) spends a second year with Granny Allen and goes to the mission school. The story is filled with the details of everyday life among these plain but good people.

"May Justus gives an appealing glimpse of life in the Tennessee mountains with some of the superstitious and quaint speech of the mountain people to add charm to the story." E. M. Mack
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 15 '40 190w

"The author tells a good story and paints a true picture of Tennessee Mountain life. . . We are grateful to her for introducing Mary Ellen to us and for arousing our interest in this less familiar but fascinating corner where simple living, friendliness and adventure may be found." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 26 '40 140w

"Mary Ellen, in the pictures, is quite different from the Mary Ellen in those of the first book (she is perhaps more convincing here). In the writing, however, she is the same capable person for her years—one whom girls from ten to twelve will enjoy knowing." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 65:544 Je 15 '40 140w

"There is no plot in this book; the chapters are almost complete stories in themselves of that friendly, hospitable life of ballad-singing and housewarmings, of recitation day at school, and of neighborly acts performed with grace and simplicity. If there is little that has not been told before in May Justus's earlier books, it is, nevertheless, told with the same warmth and charm, the same flavor of picturesque speech and custom in direct, easy-to-read sentences for little girls of 8 to 10 or so." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p9 Je 9 '40 380w

JUSTUS, MAY. Mr Songcatcher and company; il. by Howard Simon. 237p $2 Doubleday 40-27608

Song catching among the Tennessee mountaineers is the theme of this story for readers from eight to twelve. Mr Songcatcher is an "outlander" who comes to Look-A-Yonder taking notes, and forms a partnership with young Joe Purdy, who wants to own a full-sized fiddle. The climax comes at a songcatchers' contest.

Booklist 37:19 S '40

"May Justus has staked out a claim in the Cumberlands; there is richness in those hills." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 Ag 25 '40 220w

JUNG (yo͝ong)

JUSTUS, MAY—Continued

"There is no absorbing plot; the numbers of characters are confusing; folkways are packed in rather solidly. But all those who love the Smokies rejoice to have another book for children which presents so well life in the more remote parts of the mountains." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 65:714 S 1 '40 130w

"The genuine and human qualities of this mountain tale are well expressed in Mr. Simon's pictures, the whole making a book that deserves the reading of children around 10 years old." I. S.

+ N Y Times p46 N 10 '40 140w

Wis Lib Bul 36:172 D '40

K

KAFKA, FRANZ. Amerika; tr. by Edwin [and Willa] Muir; pref. by Klaus Mann; afterword by Max Brod; il. by Emlen Etting [Eng title: America]. 299p $2.50 New directions [8s 6d Routledge]

[39-943]

An unfinished novel by the author of The Trial, and The Castle (Book Review Digest 1937, 1930). The story concerns the adventures in America of a young boy, Karl Rossmann, who has been driven out of his home in Prague by his parents after he was seduced by a servant girl. Karl's America is a strange land; his adventures border on the fantastic or the farcical, but at the end there is a hint that Karl will find a happiness denied Kafka's other heroes.

"In spite of Dickens and Franklin and Whitman, there is no health in this book. But precisely because it is a study at once of a diseased soul and of the spiritual ailment of our time, it is pertinent now." Babette Deutsch

Books p12 D 8 '40 700w

"The translation is excellent and never fails to do justice to a prose which brings a rare lucidity to its chiaroscuro task." H. B.

Canadian Forum 20:289 D '40 490w

"This is not a book for one who seeks joy or solace in reading; it is, rather, intended for the enlightened who, aware of the deep, the meaningful, can appreciate as well a scherzo with proportionate discernment." Stephen Baldanza

Commonweal 33:234 D 20 '40 250w

Reviewed by Stephen Spender

Living Age 355:382 D '38 950w (Reprinted from the London Mercury)

"Amerika is more hopeful in mood than Kafka's other efforts. His writing, too, combines dreamlike romanticism and the most exact realism. It is subtle and intense. It is as compelling as mental obsession. Klaus Mann's Introduction is a welcome key to the mystery of Franz Kafka, who at best has been comparatively unknown even to the literati."

+ Living Age 359:292 N '40 200w

"Kafka makes no attempt to give a realistic account of America. He is quite inaccurate, as Klaus Mann observes in his preface, 'in every detail, yet the picture as a whole has poetical truth.' If on its existential side this story is a sort of good-humored parody of the career of Poor Richard, on its literary side it derives from Dickens. . . One misses in 'Amerika' the profound implications of Kafka's other work. Plainly his imagination did not wholly support this one effort to guide the life of a human being to a happy outcome. He was more at home in the dread castles and courts where K. wandered in search of justice, only to discover at the very last that justice is as meaningless as it is inescapable." Philip Rahv

+ — Nation 151:396 O 26 '40 1100w

"In stressing the psychological aspect of Kafka's work, I am not, of course, trying to depreciate his art. That ranks high, however one approaches him. But he is the writer for initiates. And in considering America, I am aware of the impossibility of writing a review which would address at the same time those who admire Kafka as I do and those for whom he will be always intolerable. I have preferred to do a general article rather than a review. Initiates will in any case read America without my recommendation; waverers may be tempted to try him; outsiders will do well to keep clear." G. W. Stonier

New Statesman & Nation 16:574 O 15 '38 1200w

"Not as good as 'The Trial' and 'The Castle' but important as the first American edition of a novel—a fantastic satire on modern life in the United States—by one of the most serious and interesting of pre-Nazi novelists. Mr. Mann's preface is a first-rate introduction to Kafka's work."

+ New Yorker 16:109 O 19 '40 60w

"Chaplin's films hadn't been produced when well before 1913 Kafka commenced work on 'Amerika.' Hence the wonder of the fact that this first of the Bohemian's long novels startlingly resembles the great comedian's movies. . . Possibly this 'Chaplinade' is not as solid and stirring a performance as is 'The Castle.' The narrative technique is uncertain: some of the chapters are distinctly the inferiors of others and give color to the suspicion that Kafka actually had only one great book in him. The dream-like tale in the present edition has the further disadvantage of association with sometimes irrelevant, frequently disagreeable, illustrations by Emlen Etting. Yet 'Amerika' remains wonderfully full of the fantasy, wit, and poetry unmistakably Kafka's own; nor for all its mannered Anglicism is Edwin Muir's translation unworthy of the original's characteristically crystalline, homely, perfect prose." Paul Rosenfeld

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:18 O 26 '40 550w

"The more one reads Kafka, the more one is impressed by the exactitude of his art. His characters are not less real and complex for being so highly universalised; and it is the symmetry of the frame which makes, for instance, his pictures of gay, frivolous callousness so terrifying." Edward Sackville-West

+ Spec 161:576 O 7 '38 900w

"There is no limit to the meanings one can read into each page of the book. But life is short and it is plain that Kafka's impulse as a writer was not so much to unfathom mystery as to look for it in every nook and cranny of his consciousness of self. The search is more artlessly mechanical in 'America' than in the two earlier books."

Times [London] Lit Sup p648 O 8 '38 300w

KAGAWA, TOYOHIKO. The challenge of redemptive love; tr. by Marion R. Draper. 160p il $1.50 Abingdon

234.3 Salvation. Love (theology) 40-6516

"Marked by simplicity and easy to read, filled with effective illustrations, [here] is Kagawa's testimony at its best, coming with an earnest and passionate sincerity from his heart and mind. For devotional purposes or as a textbook for group study of the theory of God's offering of his Son upon the cross for the atonement of the sins of humanity, it would be difficult to find a book superior to this one. . . The author's meditations upon the theme of redemptive love as it is revealed by the coming of Christ into the world, his death and resurrection, are based largely upon Paul's epistles." Christian Century

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes

Books p20 Ap 14 '40 310w

Reviewed by B. M. Ridpath

+ Christian Century 57:576 My 1 '40 850w

"In spite of his theology he is surely one of God's greatest sons, and this book, like all his books, possesses a deep and contagious religion which lifts and chastens the reader." H. J. Simpson

+ — Churchman 154:21 Ap 15 '40 150w

" 'The Challenge of Redemptive Love' presents the simple work of a man devoted to a simple principle. Predominant is the idea of forgiveness for sin, and Mr Kagawa writes as one well-versed in a familiar subject. Though not an outstanding discussion, it makes for pleasant, and in some cases profitable, reading."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 29 '40 210w

KAGEY, RUDOLF (KURT STEEL, pseud). Dead of night. 323p $2 Little 40-11551

Detective story.

"Four deaths and admirable sleuthing by Hank, attended and assisted by Orson Quick, his comic companion. 'Action, fast and furious; dialogue, crisp and crackling; mystery to the final pages.' " Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Ag 4 '40 200w

"The solution is, perhaps, a bit on the obvious side, but events come so quickly that you are likely to forget that you knew what was going to happen." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '40 80w

"The story is rather rough going for those who neither know nor care to know anything about astrology." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p13 Jl 28 '40 190w

"Clever stuff, and smooth as a greased pig."

+ New Yorker 16:68 Jl 27 '40 70w

KAHMANN, MRS MABLE (CHESLEY). Sinfi and the little gypsy goat; il. by F. Luis Mora. 70p $2 Random house

(W) 40-7290

Sinfi, a carefree little gipsy girl, and her ardent desire for a pet, even a pet goat, make this a lively story for young readers of from six to nine.

Booklist 36:369 My 15 '40

"A funny little tale full of little surprises, moving quickly. F. Luis Mora's pictures in color are in his characteristic manner, especially well adapted to gypsy groups in lively action." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 14 '40 430w

"A generous number of remarkable illustrations by F. Luis Mora, drawn with a real feeling for gypsy people, add color and distinction to this slight but appealing story for six, seven and eight-year-old girls." F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 29 '40 250w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 16:269 Jl '40 80w

"This book has a fresh, spring-like quality that is a credit to its designer as well as to its author. No small part of the book's distinction comes from the really lovely illustrations by F. Luis Mora. . . The story is for younger children than Miss Kahmann's other books. Its special appeal will be to girls of eight and nine or for reading aloud to children even younger." M. F. Potter

+ Library J 65:502 Je 1 '40 100w

"This is Chesley Kahmann's first story for younger children, but she has adapted her style and approach beautifully to the 6-to-9-year-old viewpoint, and her skill in characterization and in incident is as telling as in her junior novels. . . The animation of a gypsy camp, the freshness of Summer mornings on the open road are caught in Luis Mora's pictures, reproduced in vivid tones to delight young eyes." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 My 12 '40 300w

"Plenty of real Romany atmosphere."

+ New Yorker 16:96 My 18 '40 20w

KAINS, MAURICE GRENVILLE. Grow your own fruit. 434p il $3.50 Scribner

634 Fruit culture (W) 40-27549

"Amateurs and small plot owners will especially appreciate the simple directions and practical advice on the planning, planting, and culture of fruit orchards, on soils, insect and disease control, grafting and budding, storage of fruit, and on protection against frost damage. Separate chapters describe fruits for American gardens and favorable conditions for each. The value of fruit trees in landscaping is stressed. Photographs." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 36:408 Jl 1 '40

"The important value of the book, aside of course from the solid and substantial horticultural background which affords specific directions for all fruit growing operations throughout the year, is its emphasis upon amateur fruit culture."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 17 '40 320w

"By following the suggestions clearly outlined, the average home-owner with a plot of ground available for the cultivation of fruits should be enabled to raise for his own table temperate-climate fruits often difficult to secure in prime condition in stores and markets. . . Furthermore, he can select and grow many choice kinds, which are rarely or never found in the markets, and he can let them remain on the plants until they have reached their proper ripeness and finest flavor—which market fruits often do not have when harvested. . . Numerous excellent illustrations from many sources as well as line drawings illustrate various important procedures."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 2 '40 380w

Wis Lib Bul 36:124 Jl '40

KALEVALA. Heroes of the Kalevala; Finland's saga, by Babette Deutsch; il. by Fritz Eichenberg. 238p $2.50 Messner

398.2 Tales, Finnish 40-34008

"A vigorous retelling of the epic tales that cover the exploits of the robust heroes of Finnish folklore. The action runs swiftly in a salty style with lively conversation, showing Vainamoinen and Ilmarinen as something more than names. The oft-told story of the Sampo is given unusual zest and humor." Horn Bk M

Booklist 37:158 D 15 '40

"Entertainers of old and young, story tellers in libraries, camps or on the lecture platform, know the mine of Northern gold in Kalevala. To have their stories told again to young people by a poet, and one as learned and sympathetic as Babette Deutsch, is a gift to those who amuse or instruct by means of story-telling." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 3 '40 240w

Cath World 152:381 D '40 140w

"Babette Deutsch in 'Heroes of the Kalevala, Finland's Saga,' writes a new version of these epic tales of the North Country and her book is distinguished. There is the spirit and humor in the telling necessary for relating the achievements of such robust heroes." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 30 '41 110w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 16:436 N '40 60w

"A poet herself, Miss Deutsch tells these old stories with sympathy and beauty. Her fluent and lovely prose catches the natural rhythm of the human voice and 'Heroes of the Kalevala' offers valuable aid to the story-teller. The publishers have given the book a format that is dignified and pleasing." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p22 N 10 '40 160w

KALIJARVI, THORSTEN, and CHAMBERLIN, WILLIAM C. The government of New Hampshire. 283p $2.50 Univ. of N.H.

342.742 New Hampshire—Politics and government 40-2940

"A handbook for the student or general reader who wishes to obtain a clear idea of how New Hampshire is governed. An exposition of the general frame as set up under the constitution is followed by an analysis of each office, department, and administrative agency—from the Governor down through the Board of Examiners in Chiropody. There are separate chapters on the county, the town, and the municipalities." New Eng Q

"The book seems to live up to a statement in the Foreword: 'No effort has been made to pass judgment upon the adequacy or inadequacy of any institution. Care has been exercised to avoid controversial issues.'" C. I. Winslow

Am Pol Sci R 34:385 Ap '40 120w

"The book is well planned. . . Especially helpful is the paragraph of Conclusions at the end of almost every chapter, a summing up of the principles, practices, and tendencies described in the preceding pages. . . It is unfortunate that so useful and readable a manual should be marred by frequent inaccuracies in the pages that deal primarily with the history of the State." L. S. Mayo

+ — New Eng Q 13:369 Je '40 440w

KALTCHAS, NICHOLAS STAVROU. Introduction to the constitutional history of modern Greece. 187p $2 Columbia univ. press

342.495 Greece, Modern—Constitutional history 40-34590

Introduction to Greek political and constitutional development within the last hundred years, which shows that the country's political system has been shaped more by external events than by internal ones. The author was a native of Greece and before his death in 1937, was a member of the social science faculty of Sarah Lawrence college. Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Kaltchas' volume appears at a fitting time in the history of Greece, and will surely commend itself to all serious students of Near Eastern history and constitutional development." H. N. Howard

+ Ann Am Acad 213:193 Ja '41 550w

"This is a brilliant essay, undertaking a clear and limited job of historical study and theorizing, adhering rigidly to the outline of work, and accomplished in 172 pages. . . The book displays that kind of lucid objectivity which produces the effect not of chill but of regulated fire." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 33:376 Ja 31 '41 1550w

"A valuable study, not harmed by personal experience, which fills a gap for English readers."

+ Social Studies 32:46 Ja '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 10 '40 310w

KAMAL, AHMAD. Land without laughter. 346p il map $3 Scribner

915.16 East Turkestan 40-7724

A Muslim of Tatar stock, Ahmad Kamal was born in America, and in 1935 realized his lifelong dream of a pilgrimage to the land of his fathers. Journeying by caravan in midwinter thru the Karakorams into Turkestan, he found the territory in which he arrived in revolt against the Soviet rule and joined the bandit general Ma Hsi Jung in his guerrilla campaign. Later, he was arrested by Soviet authorities, and narrowly escaping the execution that befell his companions, he fled into Mongolia and thru the Gobi.

"There is no good reason to doubt that this remarkable story is substantially true. The color may have been laid on a little heavily here and there, for the author is a romantic youth with determination to find himself in romantic situations. . . It is certainly readable and well worth reading just as a good story, and if time and the reactions to it from Central Asia prove that it is factually accurate, it may turn out to be a valuable contribution to our knowledge of the situation in Turkestan, from which quarter almost no dependable information has come since the Russian military occupation of 1934." Rodney Gilbert

+ — Books p16 Mr 31 '40 1050w

"In spite of its slight incredibility, the book is worth reading." J. W. Kirkland

+ — Boston Transcript p1 My 4 '40 270w

"It is a strange book, and strangely fascinating to readers who have the zest to follow through labyrinthine paths of adventure. In a sense it may really be said to be unique —for Ahmad Kamal is surely the only American Muslim of Tatar descent to join the army of today's 'Tataristan!' It is picaresque, swashbuckling, boastful—and sometimes oddly ingratiating. Above all, it is novel and young and daring in its multifarious events, against its background of ferocious anachronism. . . The author's style is sometimes a bit febrile, too. The book has no index, only one photograph, and an inadequate though impressive map. As in all stories of practically solitary exploit and endurance, the reader must accept the narrative as its own assurance of absolutely unexaggerated accuracy." Katherine Woods

+ — N Y Times p4 Mr 31 '40 1400w

"Top-drawer travel adventure."

+ New Yorker 16:76 Mr 30 '40 30w

Sat R of Lit 22:22 Ag 31 '40 400w

Springf'd Republican p8 My 14 '40 650w

Time 35:93 My 20 '40 140w

KAMIAT, ARNOLD HERMAN. Social forces in personality stunting. 256p $2.50 Sci-art pubs.

153.72 Personality. Social psychology. Sociology 39-14233

The thesis of this book is that "most of the physical adults of all races and nations of which history has any record, have been psychologically, that is, intellectually, emotionally and volitionally immature. . . The cause lies in this, that human society has always been essentially exploitative, autocratic and competitive in structure and spirit. . . Wherever this is the case, it issues in arrested and imperfectly integrated personalities." (Pref) Indexes.

"Granted that the rationality of man is too often naïvely assumed, Kamiat certainly does not prove the 'collective paranoia' of men. If he were not constantly leading the charge of the Light Brigade, he might be more convincing. Nor is he always consistent." S. H. Britt

— Am J Psychol 53:158 Ja '40 300w

J Philos 36:501 Ag 31 '39 120w

KANE, HENRY B. Tale of the whitefoot mouse. (Wild world tales) [48p] il $1.25 Knopf

Mice—Legends and stories 40-10160

Factual picture book for grades one to three. It depicts the daily life of a whitefoot mouse from birth thru its first year. The illustrations are full-page photographs.

Booklist 37:40 O 1 '40

"An unusual, attractive factual book." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 27 '41 100w

"Beautiful and unusual photographs, exquisite in detail and masterly in composition, make a distinguished picture book which will be enjoyed at any age. . . It is a genuine bit of natural history in a most attractive form." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:341 S '40 60w

"I think [it] is the loveliest photographic picture book I have ever seen. It required infinite patience to photograph wild mice in their natural setting in attitudes that fit in so perfectly with the simple factual story of their shy life." Lena Barksdale

+ Horn Bk M 17:63 Ja '41 40w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:853 O 15 '40 10w

"The younger children's interest in the life of field and wood will be stimulated by both the story and the many unusually good full-page photographs." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 65:879 O 15 '40 40w

"Remarkable photographs and delicate line drawings make this little nature story unusually appealing." Lena Barksdale

+ Nation 151:454 N 9 '40 10w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele

New Repub 103:844 D 16 '40 30w

"The text, unlike so many conscientious books of this type, has its own distinction. . . It suggests, without terror, the constant quick-witted battle which every wild thing must maintain to survive, and in spite of its brevity it evokes the very feel of the outdoors, a mouse-eye view of grasses and moss, the damp night smells, and the frosty crispness of nights of play under the Hunter's Moon." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p44 N 10 '40 140w

KANTOR, MACKINLAY. Cuba Libre. 136p il $1.50 Coward-McCann

(W) 40-27222

Cuba Libre was the name given to an orphan brought back from the Spanish-American war by an Iowa regiment. For a time he lived and worked and made friends in the little town. During the World war he was reported missing. But two of his old friends re-discover him in Cuba, still working for liberty. They insist on having a celebration with Cuba Libre, and the result is tragedy.

Booklist 36:284 Mr 15 '40

"MacKinlay Kantor is master of the swift, clear stroke, and his picture has a moving and haunting simplicity. This is a sterner, sadder story than his 'Valedictory' last year, for all the happiness of its young romance. But it is a beautiful and suggestive little book, which many of us will remember for a long time." John Patton

+ Books p6 F 25 '40 550w

Reviewed by Ann Springer

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 9 '40 400w

"The Americans' unintentional but patronizing thoughtlessness—which leads to Cuba's death—reduces him to a pathetic figure, not at all the symbol of freedom the author intended. Leaves a bad taste."

— New Repub 102:514 Ap 15 '40 60w

"Mr. Kantor has a way of packing much meaning, emotion and character into his short books, as he does in 'Cuba Libre.' The restraint of his style keys the story low without lessening its effect. But the fact that the newspapers are every day printing similar reports of Cuba Libre's brothers-in-spirit dulls a little the drama of his modest heroism. For all that, the colorful and poignant story is a not unworthy successor in the line of 'Bugle Ann' and 'Valedictory.'" Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 F 25 '40 500w

"A pathetic if thin story of patriotic zeal, with a romance thrown in."

New Yorker 16:90 Mr 9 '40 40w

KAPLAN, ESTELLE. Philosophy in the poetry of Edwin Arlington Robinson. 162p $2.25 Columbia univ. press

811 Robinson, Edwin Arlington 40-30253

In two thirds of the book the author traces the stages of Robinson's intellectual development thru forty years of writing, dividing her analysis into sections in which she considers the specific works. The introductory section is devoted to an outline of the growth of Robinson's mind from the pessimism of Hardy to the idealism of Schopenhauer. Bibliography. Index.

"Miss Kaplan's findings are of great interest, but hers is not the final book on this subject. It is the result of patient study, but what we still need is a book written by an older or a wiser person, and one who has had more years of soaking in Robinson's poetry." John Holmes

Boston Transcript p9 Ja 6 '41 90w

"Estelle Kaplan's title is wisely chosen. She provides a minute, but not boring analysis of the poems that make her book a volume for the student of poetry and the student of philosophy alike." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 17:299 O '40 380w

J Philos 37:443 Ag 1 '40 210w

"Informative, but not disturbing."

New Repub 103:126 Jl 22 '40 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p412 Ag 24 '40 60w

KARDINER, ABRAM. The individual and his society; the psychodynamics of primitive social organization; with a foreword and two ethnological reports by Ralph Linton. 503p $3.50 Columbia univ. press [17s 6d Oxford]

136.4 Ethnopsychology. Society, Primitive. Social psychology. Ethnology—Marquesas islands. Ethnology—Madagascar. Tanala

40-322

"The present study is an important collaborative venture. It brings together in a single volume detailed, first-hand field reports by an anthropologist, Professor Linton, and interpretations of these findings by Dr. Kardiner, an exponent of recent trends in psychoanalysis. The two primitive societies described and analyzed in detail are the Marquesans, a Polynesian people of the Pacific, and the Tanalas of Madagascar. . . The analysis of these two cultures is preceded by a description of the way the concept of basic personality structure in a group is used as a tool for the study of institutions, and is followed by an excellent discussion of how psychoanalytic theories and methods are modified as a result of studies in comparative cultures." (New Repub) Index.

"The book displays an admirably honest and constructive spirit of inquiry. . . The danger of making evaluations based on our own culture Dr Kardiner has pointed out explicitly, and, on the whole, has avoided remarkably well. From the side of social anthropology, he has handled his material competently and has provided an example to those of us who attempt to use psychoanalytic psychology in our own fields. This reviewer gives no indication of the care with which Dr Kardiner has blocked out his problem, and exercised critical control over his method. The book should be read carefully and thoroughly by every anthropologist interested in the psychodynamic side of his subject." Scudder Mekeel

+ Am Anthropol 42:526 Jl '40 1700w

Reviewed by Daniel Katz

Am J Psychol 53:628 O '40 450w

Reviewed by Read Bain

Am Soc R 5:254 Ap '40 1200w

"All is excellently written, and the suggested approach promises to tell us more of the interaction of the psychological and sociological aspects than anything else the reviewer has so far seen." J. S. Plant, M.D.

+ Ann Am Acad 208:240 Mr '40 470w

KARDINER, ABRAM—Continued
Reviewed by Gordon Poteat
Crozer Q 18:79 Ja '41 60w

"The many serious failings of this book do not detract from its being regarded as a significant contribution providing us 'a new vantage point for the critical study of our own culture' (p.487). Dr. Kardiner's work may well serve as a guide for the comparative study of cultures." S. M. Strong
+ — Ethics 50:346 Ap '40 550w

"Dr. Kardiner does not carry his own methods quite far enough. He recognizes that the way people feel—how they love and hate, and feel pride or guilt or shame—is in large part a result of their social environment. But he maintains that the way people think—what they regard as logical, or scientific, or sensible —is independent of social background, although he later corrects himself by saying that 'rationality is attuned to culture.' . . But although he is not immune to some of the difficulties attending work in a new and highly controversial field, Dr. Kardiner's main line of analysis is not only illuminating but an indispensable corrective to certain current theories." H. M. Lynd
+ — New Repub 102:253 F 19 '40 650w

"[This book is] scientific and valuable from the standpoint of scholarship." J. S. Roucek
+ Social Educ 4:144 F '40 200w

KARMAN, THEODOR VON, and BIOT, MAURICE ANTHONY. Mathematical methods in engineering; an introduction to the mathematical treatment of engineering problems. 505p $4 (26s) McGraw

620.833 Engineering. Dynamics. Differential equations. Fourier's series. Calculus, Operational 40-6102

"The authors of this book have tackled the problem of inducing students of engineering to apply the fundamentals of their mathematical training. Starting with an assumed knowledge of algebra, analytical geometry, and 'ordinary calculus', the student is taken through the theory and immediate application of advanced mathematics to numerous specific problems. Many applications are developed in satisfying detail in the text, and others, with answers supplied, are assembled for the cutting of wisdom teeth." (Chem & Met Eng) Index.

"These authors have been notably successful in conveying the physical significance of equations in specific problems and have thus gone far toward their stated goal. A required rigorous college course with this text would have a salutary influence on engineering in this country. The engineer out of school is not likely to have his specific problems solved for him in this book but may well derive profit and even pleasure from working with it." C. K. Lawrence
+ Chem & Met Eng 47:270 Ap '40 280w

"Many will find the book interesting; the scholarly eminence embodied in the combined careers of the authors almost guarantees that result." Hardy Cross + Eng N 125:77 N 21 '40 320w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:37 Jl '40

"There are a number of specific points in which the book is specially to be commended. It is clearly and interestingly written, and the mathematics is well presented and easy to read. There are many excellent problems, with answers at the end of each chapter, and also lists of references. . . Much of the mathematical material is comparatively unfamiliar and yet very useful, suggesting that the book should prove valuable as a reference work as well as a text. Taken all together, this should be a very useful book, not only for the engineer, but for the physicist as well." J. C. Slater
+ R of Scientific Instruments 2:337 O '40 900w

KARPINSKI, LOUIS CHARLES. Bibliography of mathematical works printed in America through 1850 [prepared] with the cooperation for Washington libraries of Walter F. Shenton. 697p 908il $6 Univ. of Mich. [25s Oxford]

016.51 Mathematics—Bibliography 40-8471

"In his Introduction the author says: To give a complete catalogue of mathematical publications in the United States, Canada, and the West Indies up to the end of 1850 and of all those known to have appeared in Central and South America up to 1800 is the purpose of this volume. A number of Spanish-American works after 1800 have been located and cited, but no pretense is made of completeness in this period. He also gives a sketch of the British background, describing various English publications widely used as mathematical texts in America. The Introduction includes a description of the difficulties encountered in locating many of these early publications and a list of some books known to have been published of which no copies could be found." Library Q

"A feature of the book of great value is the degree to which title pages have been reproduced in facsimile as illustrative material. The extent to which it will serve as a reference work for libraries and collectors is obvious; its less tangible value as a source document for the historian of American science and culture, a quality implicit in the author's purpose, becomes apparent through familiarity with its text." L. C. Wroth
+ Books p21 Ag 25 '40 700w

"This monumental and scholarly work will be indispensable to all who are interested in the early development of mathematical instruction and learning in America. The author is well known for his work on the history of mathematics and as a collector of rare mathematical books." L. M. Graves
+ Library Q 10:609 O '40 260w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:48 O '40

"The arrangement is chronological, and subsequent editions are listed in smaller type, following the first. This results in some confusion where slight changes in title took place, but is probably better than giving them a separate listing in the main chronology. . . One excellent feature of the book is the reproduction by line engravings of over half of the titles listed. This is becoming a bibliographical practice of very great value, since it gives a more accurate picture of the title page than any typographical contortions in the text can possibly do. We must take mild exception to the author's statement that this scheme 'introduces a new method' in bibliographical practice. We thought that it was new when we employed it in Sale's 'Samuel Richardson' in 1936—only to learn that Henry Stevens of Vermont had suggested the same idea (applied to library cards) in the '60's of the last century! But it is an excellent idea, and deserves to be widely adopted." C. P. R.
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ja 4 '41 320w

"This book is not only good value for money but is a work to gladden the heart of the bibliographical scholar. Six hundred and ninety seven closely printed large quarto pages stuffed with information by one who has made the subject his lifework and which adds so much new and more accurate information to such predecessors in its field as Greenwood and Martin, as to render their work quite obsolete."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p572 N 9 '40 650w

KASNER, EDWARD, and NEWMAN, JAMES. Mathematics and the imagination; with drawings and diagrams by Rufus Isaacs. 380p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

510 Mathematics. Mathematical recreations (W) 40-27575

A book of popularization in which the authors reveal some of the tricks, some of the flights of fancy, the fascinations, of higher mathematics. Contents: New names for old; Beyond the googol; π,i,e (pie); Assorted geometries—plane and fancy; Pastimes of past and present times; Paradox lost and paradox regained; Chance and chanceability; Rubber-sheet geometry; Change and changeability. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:426 Jl 15 '40

"For all who gamble or play cards, who love puzzles of any sort, who dabble with numbers and their supposed meaning, who wonder about space and time, or who just enjoy a good intellectual workout with no purpose but fun, this is a book for many a day in the country or in a soft chair. It is good to feel the muscles of one's mind becoming supple and the wings strong. Yet this is no stunt book. Dr. Kasner . . . is a guide who can be trusted, even on a journey to infinity. But it is his wit, his joy in his thoughts and the sharing of them that makes the book so fascinating." Gerald Wendt

+ Books p5 Je 9 '40 1100w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 Je 13 '40 1150w

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 6 '40 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '40

"In recent years there have been a number of books devoted to mathematics for the layman. None of those I have read adopts the same approach or covers exactly the same field as the present volume, and none, I think, combines equally well perspicacity with an honest refusal to permit the layman to delude himself into supposing that he understands more than he actually does. Nearly any reader will find occasion for the hardest thinking he is capable of, though what is required is not a previous familiarity with mathematical tools—very little of which is assumed—but the ability as well as the willingness to think in terms of abstract logic. Granted the latter, one is certain to come away from the book with both a genuine knowledge of what various branches of mathematics are about and a considerably expanded imagination." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 151:16 Jl 6 '40 900w

New Repub 103:126 Jl 22 '40 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:48 O '40

"The authors write for the intelligent reader who has had high school mathematics and perhaps a course or two in college. They avoid rehashing old stuff, but present something new and something advanced in a way which will force the reader to recall what he had learned in the past. Their strategy is brilliant in this avoidance of the boredom of repetition. The reader is actually taken to the outposts of mathematics instead of being kept in endless training in the rear. . . The great contribution of the volume is a very convincing demonstration that accurate reasoning does transcend 'common sense' and intuition. Mathematics plus imagination will travel easily in realms quite unreachable by the others." W. M. Malisoff

+ N Y Times p8 Je 23 '40 650w

"There is a great necessity upon each of us to construct his own private wonderland nowadays. Those who enjoy fooling around in the infinitely surprising bypaths of mathematics will find this book a handy guide. It's not hard to read, yet it isn't written for the complete neophyte. Nor is it 'informative,' like Hogben and Bell. Those familiar with the diverting books of Ball and De Morgan will recognize and delight in 'Mathematics and the Imagination.'" Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:114 Je 15 '40 340w

"This book, which lives up to its title in every way, might well have been merely terrifying, whereas it proves to be both charming and exciting. Even minds normally predisposed to shy at precise definitions and the logical derivation of consequences therefrom, can hardly fail to be attracted to so engaging an exposition of what is to be found in the mathematician's chamber of horrors." Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 22:6 Jl 27 '40 600w

"Dr. Kasner is a professor of mathematics in Columbia University and Mr. Newman is a New York lawyer who studied under him and has since made mathematics his hobby. In this joint product they present their subject with verve and humor leading the unsuspecting reader from arithmetic to calculus and non-Euclidean geometry with the greatest dexterity."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:4 Je '40 420w

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 1 '40 400w

Reviewed by Nelson Dunford

Yale R n s 30:210 autumn '40 700w

KATZ, H. W. No. 21 Castle street; tr. by Norbert Guterman. 477p $2.50 Viking

40-33703

The tragic story of the experiences of a family of Galician Jews in Germany, during 1914 to 1933.

Booklist 37:155 D 15 '40

"Many of the characters are described warmly and humanly, although one can guess too easily in advance what is going to happen to them at the end. Some of the episodes are original and read like excellent short stories. Others . . . seem colorless in comparison with other books on the same subject. Yet these weaknesses are not the gravest. 'No. 21 Castle Street' fails as a novel because it lacks the artistic determination, and also the craftsmanship which melts characters, episodes and emotions, however contradictory, into one solid piece." Marianne Hauser

— + Books p14 N 3 '40 700w

Reviewed by H. A. Wooster

Library J 65:874 O 15 '40 80w

"Katz has such a direct, intimate way of pinning people down on paper that one hardly ever loses track of any of the huge number of characters. He writes with a kind of clear-eyed, friendly objectivity that contrasts with the morbid introspection and sentimentality common to most novels about Central European Jews. You make friends quickly with many people, and you almost forget that there is no sustained narrative and no dramatic unity." Harold Strauss

+ N Y Times p28 N 10 '40 500w

"A familiar tale, but Herr Katz tells it poignantly."

New Yorker 16:86 N 2 '40 60w

"I have said this is part of an utterly honest document, and that implies what it must, that there is little art here, no artifice. Material is not arranged in any effective order; it is told as it comes to mind, darting back and forth, full of asides and bitter commentary. When emotion comes it comes suddenly because it cannot be stored for artistic purposes—it starts up like tears to the eye. And there is no philosophy here. . . 'No. 21 Castle Street' is not a novel, nothing as ordered and structural as that. Rather it is a contemporary voice crying havoc." N. L. Rollins

+ Sat R of Lit 23:13 N 16 '40 400w

KAUFFMAN, RAY. Hurricane's wake; around the world on a ketch. 319p il map $3 Macmillan

910.4 Voyages around the world 40-27698

"Voyage of the forty-five-foot ketch Hurricane and her Iowa crew around the world, via the Panama Canal, the Marquesas, New Guinea, the Malay Peninsula, and China." New Yorker

---

Booklist 37:67 O 15 '40

"The book is well illustrated, engaging and unaffected in its writing." John Patton

+ Books p16 D 8 '40 550w

"So many more people have the secret wish to sail the seven seas than ever actually do so that there are always eager readers for the books. This one, though not distinctively different from several others, is good. As the newest, it is the best—at least until the next one comes. Here the reader may vicariously satisfy his yen to 'get away from it all' and head for deep water and South Seas ports."

KAUFFMAN, RAY—Continued
+ Christian Century 57:1215 O 2 '40 140w

"The writing, while undistinguished, is straightforward, without heroics, with sufficient nautical details, and will please a limited audience of readers." H. A. Wooster
+ Library J 65:708 S 1 '40 130w

Reviewed by H. A. Stevens
N Y Times p14 F 2 '41 900w

New Yorker 16:83 S 21 '40 30w

"When the author asked the resident agent of Penrhyn island what he intended to do when he had turned his collection of pearls into cash, he replied, 'I like your style of boat and I might do just what you boys are doing.' The sea-loving reader, when he has finished Mr Kauffman's entertaining narrative, feels pretty much the same about it."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 13 '40 1300w

KAUFMANN, MRS HELEN (LOEB). You can enjoy music. 324p $2 Reynal

781 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation (W) 40-30323

"This book is written for the many who 'wish they knew something about music,' but are afraid they never will." (Introd) The book is divided into three sections. The first deals with pitch, dynamics, rhythm, melody, harmony, counterpoint and form. The second takes up the human voice, the piano, the symphony orchestra, the opera, the ballet, etc. Part three is devoted to composers and their works. Contains a glossary, bibliography, recommended recordings and an index.

"Helen Kaufmann writes clearly, avoiding technical terms as far as possible, and her pages are lighted with pleasant gleams of humor. But she, like all the others, omits the main point; she does not tell the layman flatly and frankly that the only way to understand music is to try to play it." G. W. Johnson
+ — Books p 20 S 22 '40 410w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

"Mrs. Kaufmann makes the subject as unformidable as it is possible to do. She uses a rockbottom minimum of technical terminology and, lest you should frighten easily at the sight of a trade term, she has a glossary of musical vocabulary at the end of her book. . . [She] writes of music with engaging simplicity, as if she were trying to hold the attention of children. She recognizes that there are occasions when she must oversimplify, and she cautions the reader to beware." Howard Taubman
+ N Y Times p9 O 13 '40 600w

Wis Lib Bul 36:135 O '40

KAUS, FRAU GINA. Melanie [tr. by June Head] [Eng title: Devil in green]. 313p $2.50 Modern age [8s 6d Nicholson]

40-31878

Study of jealousy, as evidenced in the character of a rich, young central European widow. She traps a weak, unambitious young philosophy student into marrying her, and then proceeds to exert all her evil propensities. Her husband's unhappiness drives him to seek solace with a wholesome young woman, and the outcome is tragedy.

"'Melanie' is a psychological study of admirable compactness and steadily mounting interest. All characters are expertly drawn, and Melanie herself is etched with undiluted venom." George Conrad
+ Books p16 O 6 '40 380w

"The story is kept from being merely a case history of an hysteric through its sound plot, its splendidly drawn Dr. Heinshimer, and a nice twist at the end. The author has done well in keeping Melanie hateful but never ridiculous."
+ Boston Transcript p1 O 5 '40 150w

"The various characters are adequately conceived and are portrayed with a sense of verisimilitude which carries conviction even to a reader unfamiliar with their peculiarly Teutonic environment." Wilfrid Gibson
+ Manchester Guardian p5 Mr 15 '40 110w

"It is well told, with interesting minor characters; Albert, the young man, though he has nothing but his own weakness to blame for his troubles, holds the reader's sympathy to the end."
+ Nation 151:310 O 5 '40 80w

"A bit forced, but full of suspense; entertaining rather than deep."
New Repub 103:482 O 7 '40 30w

"An excellently constructed study of jealousy." John Mair
+ New Statesman & Nation 19:438 Mr 30 '40 230w

Reviewed by J. S. Southron
N Y Times p7 S 22 '40 800w

"It is a pleasure to come upon a novel in the Continental tradition, like Gina Kaus's latest, in which the ingredients are selected with fine discrimination and a sure sense of what is relevant to the theme. . . The end, precipitated when Albert finds another sort of love in an obscure stenographer, is so strong that it may be considered weak. Apart from this, Gina Kaus writes with a nice sense of proportion and a discernment that is humane even when sharpened with maliciousness." Charlton Ogburn, Jr.
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:13 N 2 '40 420w

"Fräulein Kaus is a penetrating, sophisticated writer, shrewd rather than subtle, who specialises in detailed, unembellished reports on forlorn love affairs. Her constant theme is the battle of the sexes—with diagrams, as it were, to show why it is a losing battle or, at best, a pyrrhic victory. But she is too detached to be dismal. Her books must be well translated: they all have the same clean, queer, medicinal taste, like whiskey." John Marks
+ Spec 164:496 Ap 5 '40 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '40 130w

"Remarkable and thoroughy gripping story. This really is one of those novels which are so exciting that they cry out to be read in one sitting. Yet the excitement arises not out of action but out of the fascination of a psychological problem."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p145 Mr 23 '40 340w

KAWAI, MICHI. My lantern. 244p il pa $2 Missionary educ. movement

B or 92 Japan—Social life and customs

"The author, a graduate of Bryn Mawr, was formerly general secretary of the Y.W.C.A. in Japan. The book tells the story of her life, at home and abroad, with charming pictures of old Japan and an informative survey of aspects of the Christian movement." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 57:250 F 21 '40 80w

Reviewed by A. A. Hunter
Christian Century 57:739 Je 5 '40 420w

"A charmingly contrived book. Each chapter is headed by a delicate etching." M. L. Eglinton
+ Churchman 154:16 Ap 1 '40 170w

KAYE, JAMES ROSS, comp. See Bible. Whole. New analytical Bible

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA (MRS PENROSE FRY). Ember Lane. 363p $2.50 Harper [8s 6d Cassell]

(W) 40-10190

A tale of everyday life mixed with tragedy, the scene of which is Sussex, England. Brenda Light, bringing with her a seventeen-year-old daughter, comes back to an old house where she spent part of her childhood, hoping to regain her sense of values after the death of her husband. The daughter has the dubious gift of second sight, which brings her some unpleasant experiences, and some pleasant ones. But Brenda brings trouble and finally tragedy into the lives of two innocent inhabitants of the village.

Booklist 36:412 Jl 1 '40

"Miss Kaye-Smith's from-the-roots technique is a very admirable thing, stanch and dependable. She herself as a novelist is like a hardy perennial, capable of division annually to create a new and strong-flowering plant. Fantastic 'Ember Lane' takes its place quite properly in the goodly line." F. H. Bullock
+ Books p2 Je 9 '40 650w

"'Ember Lane' is an exceedingly strange tale, and not so satisfying as most of Miss Kaye-Smith's stories. It is too hauntingly convincing to be at all incredible or absurd; but it is not so richly full of the feel of earth, or so robust in its spiritual faith. . . It is a sad tale, keyed to the minor winds of winter—finally serene and often beautiful." Olga Owens
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Je 15 '40 450w

"It has weird overtones and is generally obscure, but the author's narrative power gives it verve and interest. It seems a pity that so great a talent should be recklessly expended."
Cath World 151:634 Ag '40 60w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.
Commonweal 32:193 Je 21 '40 330w

"A few happier moments in the daily existence of the characters, which are excellently portrayed, would have made the story more generally popular. Limited appeal." H. A. Carpenter
Library J 65:500 Je 1 '40 60w
New Repub 103:38 Jl 1 '40

Reviewed by J. S. Southron
N Y Times p7 Je 9 '40 600w

"A ghost story of modern England—[with] complications. . . Miss Kaye-Smith fits them all together very cleverly, and the result is interesting and also curiously grim."
+ New Yorker 16:79 Je 8 '40 60w
Times [London] Lit Sup p181 Ap 13 '40 230w

KEELER, HARRY STEPHEN. Cleopatra's tears. 310p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Ward, Lock] 40-33065

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p30 D 8 '40 100w

"The words roll on and on and on in the now too familiar Keeler manner. The plot is almost completely submerged." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p18 N 10 '40 120w

"Altogether puzzling."
Sat R of Lit 23:20 N 16 '40 50w

"One of the most individual and baffling stories the prolific author has yet written."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '40 240w

KEELER, HARRY STEPHEN. The man with the crimson box [Eng title: Crimson box]. 317p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Ward, Lock]

40-11753

Detective story.

"It's all part of the endless stream of detective material that runs through Mr. Keeler's brain and out at his typewriter, and it should please his loyal fans no end, though some of them may not care for the much too much swearing. As always on these occasions, we advise all and sundry to take a peek at Mr. Keeler's goofy but fascinating stuff, if only for the experience." Will Cuppy
+ Books p14 Je 30 '40 170w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 6 '40 60w

"Hopelessly involved yarn." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p10 Je 30 '40 180w

"Author up to all his old tricks, which, in spite of their exasperating qualities, bear watching by connoisseurs of deductive chronicles. Curious."
Sat R of Lit 22:18 Jl 6 '40 50w

"Harry Stephens Keeler can conjure up more eerie situations than most authors of mystery stories, but he outdoes himself in 'The Man With the Crimson Box.' "
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '40 270w

KEELER, HARRY STEPHEN. The portrait of Jirjohn Cobb. 318p $2.50 Dutton

40-3963

Mystery story.

"This struck us as one of Mr. Keeler's best. The melodic line is clearer this time, and that's something." Will Cuppy
+ Books p14 F 4 '40 140w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p3 F 3 '40 80w

"The story has all the ingenious complications that Mr. Keeler knows so well how to employ, and the end leaves one a little in doubt as to whether this is really the end or whether there is to be a sequel." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 F 4 '40 240w

"More coherent than most Keeler yarns, with customary flights of fantasy and climax that stagger credulity."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 F 10 '40 30w
Springf'd Republican p7e F 11 '40 200w

KEENE, FRANCES, ed. Neither liberty nor bread; the meaning and tragedy of fascism. 388p $3.50 Harper

945.09 Fascism—Italy. Italy—History—Fascist movement 40-33914

A collection of articles on the Fascist movement in Italy written by Italians in exile, writers, teachers, and political figures, who have been opposed to the movement from its beginnings. The materials are grouped under the heads: The rise of fascism; A losing battle; Crushing the opposition; Aspects of life under fascism; Church and state; Fascist economics; Foreign affairs; The defense of the race; The second world war. Among the contributors are: G. Salvemini, I. Silone, G. Ferrero, G. E. Modigliani, M. Ascoli, C. Sforza, and G. Lombroso-Ferrero.

New Yorker 16:102 N 16 '40 70w

"This commentary on Fascist Italy, composed by forty-two Italians in exile, possesses both the advantages and the weaknesses of the symposium. It introduces the reader to a number of prominent Italian intellectuals. It proves with an abundance of documentation that fascism, like the other expressions of the totalitarian states, national socialism and communism, is implacably hostile to free creative thought. . . What one misses in the book are the elements of synthesis and integration. There is no connected thread of narrative covering the development either of pre-fascist or of fascist Italy. And the work suffers from an almost inevitable handicap of migré literature: absence of first-hand knowledge of Italy during the last few years." W. H. Chamberlin
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:19 D 21 '40 650w

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA (shē'lȧ kā'-smĭth')

KEITH, DAVID. A matter of iodine. 313p $2 Dodd 40-6203

Mystery story.

"This agreeable story, recommended to those in search of literate bafflers, won the Red Badge Mystery prize of $1,000. . . 'A matter of Iodine' [is] a natural for fans who want something besides crude shocks. We like to come upon a new author who doesn't use modish rubber stamps." Will Cuppy
+ Books p21 Mr 31 '40 220w

"Mystery is woven in in small strands, rather than appearing full fashioned. The characters are superb and the whole has about it the bewilderment which has, in the past, best been shown by Alfred Hitchcock's 'Thirty-Nine Steps' and 'The Lady Vanishes.' I would like to meet T. S. Weaver again soon. He is highly refreshing." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 30 '40 90w

"The story ties up with the tense situation in Europe just before the outbreak of the war now going on and with the states of mind induced by some of the events of the first World War. It compels attention, not only because it is different, but chiefly because it is an unusually fascinating example of the story-teller's art." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p19 Mr 31 '40 230w

"Starts like winner—good writing, subtly sinister suggestions and all—but brilliant window-dressing can't entirely save rather pedestrian plot. Unusual."
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:18 Mr 23 '40 50w

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Farm workers [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 56p il maps $1; school ed 80c Harper
630 Agriculture—Juvenile literature
(W) 40-27807

"This volume of the Picture Fact Books gives brief but up-to-the-minute information on the role that the farmer plays in American life. Along with the more usual aspects of farm methods and farm problems are mentioned such recent developments as the Food Stamp Plan, the co-operative purchase of farm machinery, and systematic soil conservation. The part that government plays in aiding the farmer is also touched upon. Pictorial charts and a wealth of photographs add to the book's usefulness. For ages ten to fourteen." Library J

Booklist 37:158 D 15 '40
Reviewed by Claire Nolte
Library J 65:1092 D 15 '40 80w

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Library workers [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 56p il $1; school ed 80c Harper
020 Library science—Juvenile literature
(W) 40-27808

Picture fact book on libraries and their function in the community. Gives brief, factual survey of library work as a vocation for young people, outlining the subject in a general way, and including pictures of various aspects of library work.

Booklist 37:158 D 15 '40

"Since all of this information is packed into fifty-one pages, many of which also contain either pictorial charts or photographs, it must of necessity be very much condensed. It is well chosen, however, being of a general rather than a specific nature." Claire Nolte
Library J 65:1092 D 15 '40 100w
Special Libraries 31:443 D '40

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Movie workers [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 56p il $1; school ed 80c Harper
791.4 Moving pictures (W) 40-2236

Brief sketch of the way movies are made and a short section on their vocational aspects. Illustrated with photographs. For children nine to fourteen.

Booklist 36:241 F 15 '40
Boston Transcript p6 D 16 '39 50w

"Distinguished by an abundance of remarkable photographs." Dorotha Dawson
+ Library J 65:125 F 1 '40 40w

"The authors of the Picture Fact Books are pioneers in a new type of presentation of vocational information. They have succeeded where many others have failed in producing vocational literature at the reading level of the average high school pupil. The books are made attractive by the liberal use of pictorial charts and photographs. The information presented in the books is concise, well organized, and as complete as is necessary for introductory vocational reading." G. F. Varner
+ Social Educ 4:444 O '40 70w

Reviewed by H. G. Percey
Special Libraries 31:174 My '40
Wis Lib Bul 36:35 F '40

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Office workers [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 56p il $1; school ed 80c Harper
651.374 Office workers (W) 40-10679

Picture fact book, giving in pictures and brief text information on the historical background, development and present-day opportunities of office work and the people who do it.

Booklist 37:19 S '40

"The book on Office Workers is particularly valuable because of the ethical teaching. Stress is laid not only upon good work in an office but also on personal appearance, integrity, and silence regarding business matters. The book also answers the questions of boys and girls in that it gives the average salaries and opportunities for advancement in clerical work." J. F. Carter
+ Library J 65:596 Jl '40 120w
Wis Lib Bul 36:152 N '40

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Radio workers [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 56p il $1; school ed 80c Harper
621.384 Radio workers (W) 40-11610

Similar in format to the other Picture fact books, this book presents information about the radio industry and its workers. Among the pictures included are several of well-known radio personalities.

Booklist 37:19 S '40
Reviewed by J. F. Carter
Library J 65:596 Jl '40 60w
Wis Lib Bul 36:152 N '40

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Textile workers [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 56p il maps $1; school ed 80c Harper
677 Textile industry (W) 40-2205

Short study of methods of weaving in Colonial days as contrasted with modern textile manufacturing. Contains a brief sketch of training for textile work. Illustrated with photographs. For children nine to fourteen.

Booklist 36:241 F 15 '40

"Indispensable in children's rooms and school libraries." Dorotha Dawson
+ Library J 65:125 F 1 '40 30w

Reviewed by G. F. Varner
Social Educ 4:444 O '40 70w
Wis Lib Bul 36:35 F '40

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Scattergood Baines returns. 307p $2 Harper 40-27091

Sixteen tales of murder, love, high finance, forgery, etc, in which Scattergood Baines solves all the problems and saves the innocent.

Booklist 36:239 F 15 '40

"Mr. Baines is as wily as ever, and as adroit in unmasking the wrong and furthering the right. Although Mr. Baines is basically New England in character, he possesses, as the author observes, 'peculiarities and virtues and meddlesomeness' to be found everywhere in American life. His exploits are designed to regale a wide public, and they do not miss their mark." Lisle Bell
+ Books p11 Ja 7 '40 160w

Reviewed by I. E. Lawrence
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 27 '40 150w

"Coincidence has a mighty long arm in these tales, probability is not much respected, yet there can be no doubt but that the stories are thoroughly effective." Robert Van Gelder
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 14 '40 650w
Wis Lib Bul 36:69 Ap '40

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Valley of the sun. 297p $2.50 Harper
(W) 40-27716

A story of pioneer days in Arizona in the years following the Civil war. The story tells of a man's vision of a fertile land in the desert, of his fights with Indians, and of his great love for a woman.

Booklist 37:92 N 1 '40

"Mr. Kelland has fused a story of the soil and a first-rate yarn of Indians and outlaws and shootin'. It's a full order for any reasonable reader." Lisle Bell
+ Books p10 S 8 '40 340w
Boston Transcript p2 S 7 '40 180w
New Repub 103:426 S 23 '40 50w

"Mr. Kelland has a flair for fast narrative, no matter whether he writes about pioneer days in Arizona or Park Avenue in 1940. He keeps his characters well in hand and, with due allowance for dramatic requirements, makes them behave as men and women would at the time and under the circumstances." E. F. Allen
+ N Y Times p14 S 8 '40 420w

KELLER, DAVID HENRY. The devil and the doctor [il. by Gregor Duncan]. 308p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 40-32082

The doctor had retired, and bought himself a book shop in a quiet Pennsylvania town. On an afternoon of wind and rain a stranger appeared in the shop and the two had tea together. Now the kindly little doctor had wanted all his life to find time to build a stone fence, but had always had to give it up. The stranger, who was a rather well-known personage in disguise—no other than the devil himself—saw to it that the little doctor had his wish.

"A saturate solution of authentic charm completely redeemed from cloying sweetness by the eccentric freshness of the material and the graciousness of the spirit which illumines it." F. H. Bullock
+ Books p4 S 29 '40 1050w

"Pleasantly whimsical stuff, proving that if you give the Devil his due, it pays."
+ New Repub 103:458 S 30 '40 50w

"It's a fantastic tale that Dr. Keller weaves, a gentle satire on the roots of good and the roots of evil and superstition. Obviously he is familiar with the literature of demonology and he uses it to good effect in this book. This indeed is the best part of 'The Devil and the Doctor.' The doctor as lover, husband and father is less successful but this isn't very important. It's his relationship to Goodfellow that holds the attention and that is ably and amusingly done." Rose Feld
+ N Y Times p21 S 29 '40 700w
New Yorker 16:77 S 28 '40 60w
Sat R of Lit 22:20 O 5 '40 350w

KELLER, HELEN ADAMS. Let us have faith. 78p $1 Doubleday
234.2 Faith (W) 40-34297

A restatement of the author's faith in the ultimate ability of man to conquer despair and tyranny.

"This is a long look straight into the future of the world, whatever it may be, through the eyes of faith. It shows something to build on, to build the only sea wall that will surely hold against that 'wave of the future' sweeping over the drowning souls of men."
+ Books p9 D 22 '40 160w

"It is a beautiful message, timely and attractively presented." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 21 '40 90w

KELLY, ERIC PHILBROOK. On the Staked plain; el Llano estacado; il. by Harve Stein. 250p $2 Macmillan 40-7102

This book for young readers combines the appeals of the Western story, detective story, and the story of the hunt for buried treasure.

Booklist 36:369 My 15 '40

"There are two difficulties in the path of the book, both of which Mr. Kelly wished on himself. By putting his mystery so far back that its first clew must be searched for in the '80s, and the final solution found by going back of them to the '50s, the story must continually retreat and begin over, always likely to impede its flow. That the flow keeps up well is to the credit of a strong plot. The second hitch is that the detective is a girl." M. L. Becker
+ — Books p6 My 26 '40 400w

"Although Mr. Kelly in writing for younger readers has made such a conscious effort that his dialogue is wooden and unexpressive, his plot is unusual and good." E. M. Wedrow
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 150w

Reviewed by Miriam Snow
Library J 65:455 My 15 '40 120w
Wis Lib Bul 36:140 O '40

KELLY, JOHN BERNARD. Cardinal Hayes, one of ourselves; an appreciation; with a pref. by Stephen J. Donahue. 178p il $1.50 Farrar
B or 92 Hayes, Patrick Joseph, cardinal
41-871

An appreciative character study rather than a formal biography, of this New York-born prince of the Catholic church.

"This glowing tribute of Fr. Kelly's will some time serve as one of many studies from which will come a detailed and critical study. But the traits which that detailed study will unearth will be the same, we believe, as those painted here enthusiastically by a friend." J. L. Burke
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 11 '41 190w

"The whole structure of the book is reared upon an irreducible minimum of fact, and when one considers the period in which Patrick Joseph Hayes lived, one feels justified in

KELLY, J. B.—Continued
demanding that his biography should be more than an assurance of his undoubted personal sanctity. . . From his long association with our late beloved Archbishop, Father Kelly must be in a position to know far more about him than he has revealed in this book. Perhaps the author feels that it is too early for a definitive biography. If so, then we must question the sincerity of the publishers in bringing out this book as a 'biography' rather than an 'appreciation.' " R. D. Sylvester

Commonweal 33:356 Ja 24 '41 280w

N Y Times p18 Ja 5 '41 350w

"Father Kelly found in Patrick Cardinal Hayes a sincere and devoted friend. The present book records this friendship, which began in days when the deceased prelate was president of Cathedral College. It emphasizes the religious idealism which governed the life of one who, though a Prince of the Catholic Church, remained very simple and kindly. Many who knew him must have felt that he was what older times would have called a 'good neighbor.' This quality of character is well suggested by Father Kelly, who is less concerned with anecdotes of action than with traits of soul. We are asked to consider not what Cardinal Hayes did but who he was." G. N. Shuster

+ Sat R of Lit 23:17 Ja 11 '41 490w

KELLY, SISTER MARY GILBERT. Catholic immigrant colonization projects in the United States, 1815-1860. 290p $3 U.S. Catholic hist. soc.

282.73 Roman Catholics in the U.S. U.S.—Emigration and immigration 39-21125

"This comprehensive, carefully written account of the repeated attempts by Catholics to settle the West without losing their religion throws fresh light upon a relatively neglected feature of the opening of the frontier. It traces the movement of German, Irish, French, and Italian communities along the advancing line of settlement from Maine to Minnesota in a process culminating in the failure in 1856 of the Buffalo Convention's attempt to transplant 100,000 Irishmen to Canada and the West." Am Hist R

"[Certain] lacunae do not detract from the general usefulness of the work. Based upon wide use of local records, immigrant newspapers, and diocesan archives, it provides a welcome antidote to the conventional accounts of Catholic and particularly of Irish immigration which unceremoniously shuffle a predominantly agricultural population into the Eastern cities and leave it there without explanation." Oscar Handlin

+ — Am Hist R 45:973 Jl '40 330w

"The study is thoroughly objective, scholarly and adequately documented." W. C. Lehmann

+ Am Soc R 5:290 Ap '40 70w

KELLY, ROBERT LINCOLN. The American colleges and the social order. 380p $2.50 Macmillan

378 Colleges and universities—U.S. Education, Higher 40-33507

"A study of American colleges from early Colonial days in their relation to society." (School & Society) "The first ten chapters sketch the history of higher education in this country from 1636 to the present time, with some special emphasis on the rise, vicissitudes, and triumphant survival of the liberal arts colleges. The remaining fourteen chapters deal with various current movements and problems, including such topics as academic freedom, publicity and propaganda, the development of the individual student, the improvement of college teaching, experimentation in the colleges, the growing influence of the fine arts, and the relationships between the colleges and the churches and between the colleges and the state." (Survey)

School & Society 52:272 S 28 '40 10w

Springf'd Republican p8 F 4 '41 700w

"This book gives the patient a clean bill of health: no major operation necessary. Which makes it cheerful reading in these days." Max McConn

+ Survey 76:371 D '40 360w

KELSEY, VERA. Seven keys to Brazil. 314p il map $3 Funk

918.1 Brazil (W) 40-35621

The seven keys are the seven localities into which the author divides Brazil, which open vistas of different aspects of Brazil: history, culture, folkways, scenic wonders, etc. Statistics, a long bibliography, and index.

Booklist 37:269 F 15 '41

Reviewed by H. M. Shaw
Books p14 D 15 '40 440w

"This is the most informative book on Brazil that has been published to date and it sets a standard for future books on our great neighbor to the south which will be difficult to equal. The writing plan is unique and Miss Kelsey's three years in Brazil were not wasted." W. E. Barrett

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 18 '41 290w

"A new book on Brazil of surprising interest and excellence. The surprise with which the reader may find himself genuinely absorbed from the first page, and richly informed when the book is finished, is due to the volume's lack of physical attractiveness. . . Its physical impression may well be of something commonplace and probably dull—just another of those books on South America. As a matter of fact Miss Kelsey's text has outstanding freshness, acuteness and breadth of view; her book is both full-packed and full-favored."

+ — N Y Times p12 Ja 12 '41 700w

"This book presents an interesting survey of an interesting country."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 14 '41 750w

KEMMERER, DONALD LORENZO. Path to freedom; the struggle for self-government in colonial New Jersey, 1703-1776. (Princeton hist. of N. J.) 384p il map $3.75 Princeton univ. press [17s Oxford]

974.9 New Jersey—History—Colonial period 40-10873

History of colonial New Jersey in the years 1703 to 1776, describing every administration from Lord Cornbury's to William Franklin's, with the issues which arose in each, and the principal public officials under each governor. The book is the third volume of the Princeton history of New Jersey. Index.

"An interestingly written and scholarly narrative of politics. . . While some points in the narrative might have been more broadly interpreted, Dr Kemmerer has produced a vigorous and often entertaining study, which will interest any mature reader of history as well as the specialist."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '40 1050w

"Readable as well as learned book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p559 N 2 '40 130w

KEMMERER, EDWIN WALTER. Inflation and revolution; Mexico's experience of 1912-1917. 173p $2.50 Princeton univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

332.5 Money—Mexico 40-9995

"Study of one of the most intriguing chapters in the history of Mexico's currency, embracing the period 1912-17. . . Following the departure from the gold standard, to which Mexico had adhered since 1905 . . . Mexico entered upon an era of depreciated paper money. During 1913-14 bank notes were issued in ever-increasing amounts without regard to correspondingly adequate reserves. . . During 1914-16 the political unsettlement grew and, with it, the amount of paper money. . . After December 1, 1916, Mexico once again returned to metallic money and the issuance of flat currency without adequate cover or without cover at all, ceased. Dr. Kemmerer finally discusses the manner in which the Government had found it desirable to revalue contracts scheduled to be paid in paper pesos which had depreciated to the vanishing point. A short but excellent bibliography concludes [the book]." Living Age

---

"On the whole, this volume is tantalizingly disappointing. Many of the most significant parts of the story have already been told by Professor Kemmerer in other places, and, as he points out in this book, Mexican statistics were either nonexistent or else inadequate for any intensive study of inflation along the lines of the analyses that have been made of various European countries since 1920. Many questions that the student would like to ask must therefore remain forever unanswered, but if the reader has not already studied Professor Kemmerer's earlier writings on Mexican monetary policy, he will find this chapter in the long story of inflation highly suggestive." F. C. James

+ — Ann Am Acad 211:229 S '40 380w

"Dr. Kemmerer's invaluable contribution to monetary history should be read not alone by those who are interested in the historical aspects of the question, but by all those who are 'concerned with the relation between currencies and the social and material well-being of a people.'" Max Winkler

+ Living Age 358:489 Jl '40 500w

KENDALL, JAMES. Young chemists and great discoveries. 272p il $2.75 Appleton-Century [7s 6d Bell, G]

925.4 Chemists. Chemistry—History (W) [40-27156]

Lectures delivered at the Royal Institute in 1938 and 1939 by the professor of chemistry of the University of Edinburgh. They are "lectures adapted to a juvenile auditory," and the subject is outstanding discoveries in chemistry made by young men and women in their teens and twenties. Contents: Humphry Davy; Michael Faraday; Some young organic chemists; The chemistry of space and of solutions; Elements—old and new; Some young American chemists. Index.

Booklist 36:259 Mr 1 '40

"It is difficult to discover flaws in this entertaining story, although on one or two occasions it may be felt that Prof. Kendall shows a little indulgence to his young heroes. . . We suspect that if Prof. Kendall had not been an eminent chemist he would have achieved fame as a dramatist, if not indeed as an interpreter of the drama. His lectures were rich in dramatic moments and quick changes. . . This absorbing account of youthful achievement in the realm of chemistry cannot fail to arouse and hold the interest of readers of all ages." John Read

+ Nature 145:123 Ja 27 '40 950w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:20 Ap '40

"It would have to be a pretty thoroughly trained schoolboy to grasp in entirety all the technical descriptions of experiments and theories described here, but even the reader with average high school knowledge will enjoy the informal style of these lectures with their sidelights on some of the human and more humorous aspects of the great." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 16 '40 370w

"The lectures are of high value, not only as character-studies but also as chemical history, for they deal with really great personalities and with a period of unprecedented progress in science."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p707 D 2 '39 180w

KENLY, JULIE (CLOSSON) (MRS W. L. KENLY). Voices from the grass; il. by Henry C. Kenly. 248p $2 Appleton-Century

595.7 Insects—Juvenile literature 40-6715

Dramatically presented studies of some common insects, injurious or beneficial. "We read about spiders, 'strange, fanged ogres with their cold hearts and their bright, fierce eyes,' who really aren't insects at all; of the Florida doodle-bug and its 'oranges' that are really little ants; of the terrible termites; of the firefly, with 'a lamp on its tail, an anesthetic in its fangs, pepsin in its saliva,' of the ventriloquist cricket, that loves its young and fights in a prize-ring . . . and of ants that 'have domesticated more living creatures than man himself.'" (Scientific Bk Club R) For young readers. Bibliography. Index.

"Among American nature-writers for children Mrs. Kenly has made her own particular place, and fills it to the satisfaction of children of an unusually wide range of ages. Whenever she writes of insects or plants, younger children listen and older ones read for themselves as long as the book is before them." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 5 '40 450w

Reviewed by M. B. Hopkins

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '40 230w

"Our eyes and ears will be sharpened to keener interest in seeing gossamer trails of the garden spider's trap, the firefly's lamp, or in hearing the shrill whirr of the dog day cicada and the fiddling of grasshoppers, by the clear descriptions of their habits. Informative, and entertaining, too, are the lively accounts of the home-building of beetles and bees, the amazing industries of ants, and the ferocious contests of crickets." M. A. Whitney

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 25 '40 120w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:853 O 15 '40 20w

"The author's style is clear and easy and she has a faculty of making dramatic the insect lives which she has studied and now accurately reports. Older in style than some of Mrs. Kenly's other nature books, 'Voices From the Grass' will please boys and girls from 12 on. It will give fresh inspiration to those already interested in the subject, and in the case of others will arouse an initial interest in what may prove a congenial and absorbing hobby." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 14 '40 250w

"A new Kenly book has become a 'must' for recommendation to all children fortunate enough to have elders who read aloud to them or who are sufficiently curious about the myriad world of insects to read for themselves about our tiny fellow-creatures."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:4 Mr '40 240w

"Mrs. Kenly has here attempted an entertaining and informative book on American insects. Intended apparently for children, it should hold their interest well; it is unfortunate, however, that in an effort to be 'popular,' the authoress should so frequently have descended to a coy, playful, and selfconscious style."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p414 Ag 24 '40 130w

Wis Lib Bul 36:72 Ap '40

KENNEDY, CHARLES RANN. A repertory of plays for a company of three players. 3v v 3 198p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

822

This is the third and final volume in the playwright's series of plays for three players. As in former volumes the plays are in the classical tradition. Contents: Face of God; Beggar's gift; Isles of the blest.

Booklist 37:214 Ja 15 '41

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p13 D 29 '40 130w

KENNEDY, C. R.—Continued

"In Volume III. of Plays for Three Players, Mr. Charles Rann Kennedy shows less consideration for the actual demands of an audience. Feeding his imagination richly on beauty and holiness, Mr. Kennedy curtails no speeches but seems to put down every thought that occurs to him with no dread of the blue pencil as he and Mrs. Kennedy (Edith Wynne Matthison) are two of the three players. . . Too often the symbolism becomes as confusing as the nomenclature, it being essential for mysticism to be built upon a very precise theological pattern." E. Vr. W.

Cath World 152:630 F '41 160w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '40 200w

KENNEDY, JOHN FITZGERALD. Why England slept [foreword by Henry R. Lucel]. 252p $2 Funk, W.

942.08 Great Britain—Defenses. European war, 1939—Great Britain. Great Britain—Politics and government (W) 40-14799

"The young son of Ambassador Kennedy contributes a cool and factual study of the complex reasons underlying England's failure to rearm during the thirties and traces a warning parallel between our own situation now and England's up to now." (New Yorker) Bibliography.

Booklist 37:33 O 1 '40

Bookmark p13 N '40

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun
+ Books p5 Ag 11 '40 900w

Reviewed by R. H. Phelps
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 17 '40 350w

Cath World 152:126 O '40 230w

"A useful and timely bit of research. The reader will find, along with precise figures of the British war budgets a good deal of sound explanatory comment on the considerations, foreign and domestic, which influenced these budgets. Henry R. Luce contributes an introduction which is a good deal more flamboyant than the author's own quiet and unassuming style." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 31 '40 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '40

Reviewed by W. J. Grace
Commonweal 32:433 S 13 '40 550w

Reviewed by Virgilia Sapieha
Current Hist & Forum 52:6 S '40 550w

Reviewed by Nigel Dennis
New Repub 103:393 S 16 '40 850w

"John F. Kennedy is . . . a little over a year out of Harvard and hasn't yet reached his middle twenties; yet he has written a book of such painstaking scholarship, such mature understanding and fair-mindedness and of such penetrating and timely conclusions, that it is a notable textbook for our times. This reviewer has seen no other discussion of pre-war Britain which sheds more light and generates less heated partisanship than Mr. Kennedy's book. This young man from Boston has a clear-headed, realistic, unhysterical message for his countrymen—and for his elders." S. T. Williamson
+ N Y Times p3 Ag 11 '40 1450w

New Yorker 16:62 Ag 10 '40 40w

Reviewed by J. F. Green
Sat R of Lit 22:20 S 7 '40 490w

"Any one who picks up this modest volume out of curiosity regarding the views of the 24-year-old son of the American Ambassador in London on the British political scene will soon find it worth while to pursue his reading for very different reasons. For this is an extremely able piece of work." Wilson Harris
+ Spec 165:391 O 18 '40 900w

"A startlingly timely, strenuously objective book. . . To Americans who believe that democracy always triumphs because of its moral superiority over fascism, Why England Slept is a warning and challenge."
+ Time 36:64 Ag 12 '40 650w

"'Why England Slept' is a young man's book: it contains much wisdom for older men."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p514 O 12 '40 600w

Wis Lib Bul 36:167 D '40

KENNEDY, MILLARD FILLMORE, and HARLOW, ALVIN FAY. Schoolmaster of yesterday; il. by Howard Simon. (Whittlesey house publication) 359p $2.75 McGraw

B or 92 Kennedy family. Teachers (W) 40-31823

This picture of the life of the country school teacher in the Middlewest covers three generations and the years from 1820 to 1919. Tho the stories and the careers overlap, the book is fairly divided between the experiences of grandfather, father and grandson, the last being the author himself. Grandfather had begun his teaching in Kentucky, but moved later to Indiana where the family has remained ever since.

Booklist 37:115 N 15 '40

"A great many Americans, cherishing the tradition of good yarn-spinning and of the little red schoolhouse, will enjoy this book." W. E. Wilson
+ Books p7 S 8 '40 1000w

"'Schoolmaster of Yesterday' does not quite measure up to its opportunity. Too much of it consists of trite pioneer stories, of the conventionally picturesque picture of our forebears. Yet wherever Schoolmaster Kennedy . . . sticks to his last of describing the schools in which his grandfather and his father and he himself taught, the book is warm, alive and rewarding." Lewis Gannett
+ — Boston Transcript p11 S 13 '40 900w

"Even though the book is by and about schoolteachers it gives an excellent idea of rural life in the Middle West for nearly 100 years. It is filled with anecdotes and experiences, descriptions of daily and social life, games, and all that made up their existence. These are so well told that they make an interesting and entertaining book." F. S. Ambrose
+ Boston Transcript p1 S 28 '40 270w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.
Commonweal 32:453 S 20 '40 650w

New Repub 103:638 N 4 '40 50w

"It would be difficult indeed to find a more complete, more absorbing and human picture of the American rural school and its people. . . Mr. Kennedy had interesting things to report to a reading world which will welcome his account of them. He and his collaborator, Mr. Harlow, have done a good job of producing a fine collection of Hoosier school tales which Edward Eggleston overlooked in his research for his Hoosier school stories." R. G. Doyle
+ N Y Times p1 S 15 '40 850w

"Everything is seen in terms of the good story. It is pleasant, it is honest—and it is dull." Dudley Fitts
Sat R of Lit 22:16 S 7 '40 330w

School & Society 52:240 S 21 '40 50w

Social Studies 31:380 D '40 20w

"The little incidents, the tragedies, the 'big moments' furnish the meat of the book. Like many such stories they lose flavor and color when put in print, but they furnish several hours of interesting reading none the less." M. R. Beard
+ — Social Studies 32:88 F '41 420w

Reviewed by Mrs C. F. Amidon
Survey G 29:633 D '40 360w

Wis Lib Bul 36:165 D '40

KENT, MRS LOUISE (ANDREWS). He went with Christopher Columbus; il. by Paul Quinn. 318p map $2 Houghton (W) 40-32436

The third in this series about famous explorers, of which the first two were He Went

With Marco Polo, and He Went With Vasco da Gama (Book Review Digest, 1935, 1938). This one is about a young English boy who went as deck boy on Columbus' ship, the Santa Maria.

Booklist 37:158 D 15 '40

"The value, and the charm, of the 'He Went With'—books are from the same source; they make history take place now. In this third voyage that is particularly clear. . . It is a rapidly moving, easily remembered novel for twelve-year-olds or older." M. L. Becker
+ Books p14 N 10 '40 320w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 N 14 '40 110w

"The story itself is full of color and drama, with no little dash of intrigue to help matters along. . . And the picture of Columbus and of the life of the period seems clear and true." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 65:926 N 1 '40 150w

"First-rate."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:38 D 7 '40 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 300w
Wis Lib Bul 36:153 N '40

KENT, ROCKWELL. This is my own; with drawings by the author. 393p $3.50 Duell

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-27810

Autobiographical volume covering some ten years of the author's life—from the late 1920s to the present. The starting point is the search for a home site, its discovery in the Adirondacks and the building of the Kents' home there. Other episodes related include the author's local, national and international battles for justice and better government.

Booklist 37:152 D 15 '40

"Mr. Kent's idealism is blatant, bold, cocky and outspoken. I prefer its expression here, in so many words, to its distillate into pictorial abstractions—day, night, peace, et cetera, floating heavily in an atmosphere that may delight the de Beers but does not, I confess, please me. . . 'This is My Own' is eloquent, verbose and oppressively rhythmic. It is at once profane and deeply religious—an artist's determined effort to remind us 'of the essential kinship of all human life.' " F. H. Bullock
+ — Books p8 N 24 '40 850w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist
Commonweal 33:148 N 29 '40 240w

"He writes explosively and abusively, and like a time bomb not to be taken too lightly before it goes off. He sees hope, incidentally for our future only in the state socialism for which he consistently crusades."
Current Hist & Forum 52:4 D 10 '40 150w

"Charged as it is with challenges to democracy, this book is decidedly for the mature reader. Enjoyment is assured by a disarming style syncopated with anecdotes and Americanisms." H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 65:981 N 15 '40 150w

"One gets to the end of this book with mixed sentiments, rejoicing in Rockwell Kent's love for mountains and wilderness, in his physical and moral courage, in his humanity, and in his passion for his art, not rejoicing so much in the clearness of his thinking or in his sense of literary or polemic proportion. A reader might certainly feel that if he or any person or group were in trouble through no fault of their own, Rockwell Kent would help them. He might not feel so sure that Mr. Kent could write out a workable program for an improved democracy. His pictures are better, in this volume, than his prose." R. L. Duffus
+ — N Y Times p45 D 1 '40 1450w
New Yorker 16:91 N 30 '40 80w

"These pages are written with truculence, fervor, and complete honesty. . . There are in this volume, as in the others Kent has written, deeply felt descriptions of nature, bold self-revelations, prose that is lyrical, and prose that crackles indignantly. There is humor, and a gift for sheer story-telling. There is, all told, an affirmation of principles as unshakably American as the mountain in whose shadow its author writes." O. L.
+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ja 11 '41 240w

KENYON, SIR FREDERIC GEORGE. The Bible and archæology. 310p il map $3 Harper [15s Harrap]

220.93 Bible. Whole—Antiquities 41-1075

"The object of [this] volume is to lay before students who are not themselves archæological specialists the principal results of archæological research in their bearing on the Bible. The period covered is about a century—from the excavations of Layard at Nineveh to the point at which research has been suspended by the outbreak of the present war. The attempt has been made to set out these results objectively, and then to assess their value as contributions towards the intelligent understanding and appreciation of the Bible." (Pref) Index.

Bookmark 2:3 Ja '41

"Sir Frederic has added one of his best to the series of volumes from his pen designed to place scholarly data within reach of nontechnical readers. Popular books on biblical archaeology abound, many written from a conservative angle with pitiful dearth of rigid scientific control. This volume is cautious but adequate. Facts of criticism, syncretistic Yahwehism, Hebrew polytheism, faulty Greek text are frankly faced. The author is firm in his faith but does not labor his points. Neither does he leave his reader suspended in uncertainty." C. S. Knopf
+ Christian Century 57:1212 O 2 '40 320w

"The reader is impressed with the candor of the author's statements and with a thoroughness which bespeaks the earnest searcher for the truth regarding his favorite subject. The book contains a great storehouse of information upon a subject that is becoming increasingly interesting to students of the Bible and to the general laity." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 30 '40 450w

Reviewed by L. W. Batten
Churchman 154:18 N 15 '40 270w

Reviewed by I. G. Matthews
Crozer Q 17:312 O '40 480w
Manchester Guardian p7 My 24 '40 200w

"This book should be a valuable discipline for those who are tempted to discredit the historical trustworthiness of the Bible on the basis of the theories of subjective critics. Sir Frederic Kenyon lays his finger on their besetting sin, which he says was 'to form a theory first and then to declare spurious any evidence which does not agree with it.' But the book is much more than an intellectual and historical discipline. With some imagination it can become an exciting adventure into the past."
+ N Y Times p24 Ja 12 '41 400w

"There are many who are anxious to learn how far the Bible is still trustworthy, and Sir Frederic is at pains to show that nothing has happened that 'need disturb the faith of the weakest.' His care to explain and justify the scholarly study of the Bible gives his book a special value at the present day, when the religious situation is attracting earnest attention; for he is virtually going behind the Bible, taking his reader from the Sacred Book to the very human people of flesh and blood among whom it emanated." Stanley Cook
+ Spec 164:598 Ap 26 '40 1050w

"Highly competent and well-balanced volume."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p240 My 18 '40 1000w

KEPPEL, LADY LEOPOLDINA OLIVIA. Blessed Rose Philippine Duchesne; religious of the Sacred Heart and missioner, 1769-1852. 118p $1.25 Longmans

B or 92 Duchesne, Mother Rose Philippine

Biography of the pioneer foundress of the Society of the Sacred Heart in North America. She was a French woman, born in Grenoble in 1769, who came to this country in 1818, and died in 1852.

Reviewed by J. Harrington
+ America 63:640 S 14 '40 130w
Cath World 151:628 Ag '40 400w

"This is a short book of only 118 pages, and it leaves much one would like to know unsaid. . . But Rose Philippine Duchesne appears in the book a woman indeed, and that is the principal purpose of the book, which it satisfactorily fulfills." P. B.
+ — Commonweal 32:450 S 20 '40 220w

KERNAN, WILLIAM CHARLES. The ghost of Royal Oak; il. by Lee. 196p $1 Free speech forum, 117 W. 46th st, N.Y.

335.6 Fascism. Coughlin, Charles Edward 40-7181

"Father Kernan, of the Episcopal diocese of Newark, in radio addresses from a New York station has made vigorous defense of liberty and the American way of life against both fascist and communist subversionists. In particular he has dealt drastically with Coughlin's method of fighting the fires of communism and atheism with the fires of race hatred, anti-Semitism and threatened violence. This book is a revision of those addresses. They are a thoroughgoing denunciation of the 'un-Christian Front' and Coughlinism." Christian Century

Christian Century 57:283 F 28 '40 80w
Reviewed by James Van Zant
Churchman 154:20 Ap 15 '40 90w

"Coughlinism is a disease similar in one respect to athlete's foot. One can never be sure that it is cured. It crops out again and again when the spiritual humidity gets high. Hence, this book will be useful even if Father Coughlin does at intervals expediently remember his piecrust promise to stay off the air." J. L. Adams
J Religion 21:106 Ja '41 90w
New Repub 103:222 Ag 12 '40 20w

KERNER, ROBERT JOSEPH. Northeastern Asia; a selected bibliography; contributions to the bibliography of the relations of China, Russia, and Japan; with special reference to Korea, Manchuria, Mongolia, and eastern Siberia, in oriental and European languages. 2v $26 Univ. of Calif.

016.95 East (Far East)—Bibliography. Eastern question (Far East)—Bibliography. China—Bibliography. Japan—Bibliography. Russia—Bibliography 39-33136

"The 13,884 items in seven main languages (English, German, French, Russian, Chinese, Japanese and Korean) range approximately from ancient times down to the outbreak of war in China in 1937. The material is arranged under four main classifications: Volume I—(1) Asia, the Far East, the Pacific; (2) China; Volume II—(3) Japanese Empire; (4) Russian Empire and Soviet Union in Asia and on the Pacific. The categories unavoidably overlap, but cross references, a detailed table of contents and a subject index make it easy to use the volumes and to spot relevant material. . . This is a 'selected bibliography' in the sense that certain subjects have been omitted and that no effort has been made to exhaust the topics included. . . The range of subjects is broad and covers, among other things, periodical publications, geography and cartography, culture and civilization of China and Japan, history, international relations, economic factors, the colonial revolutionary movement, Japanese nationalism and psychology, Russia in Central Asia, and non-Russians in Russian Asia. Foreign language titles have been translated into English, and the characters of titles (though not of authors' names) are given for Chinese, Japanese and Korean writings. The work is photo-lithographed." Pacific Affairs

"As a pioneer work, Professor Kerner's long-awaited bibliography is invaluable. The area dealt with is of peculiar and rapidly increasing importance. This is the quarter of the globe in which the frontiers of China, Japan, and Russia approach and indeed overlap each other. Yet never before has it been possible to consult one compact guide listing a selection of the rich literature available in the languages of these three countries as well as in English and the other Western languages." Owen Lattimore
+ Am Hist R 45:883 Jl '40 700w

"Invaluable reference work."
+ Foreign Affairs 18:577 Ap '40 50w
Reviewed by Shannon McCune
Geog R 30:515 Jl '40 330w

"Since the Far East is a relatively uncleared frontier of the bibliographical world, this two-volume guide to books and articles on Northeastern Asia is welcome. . . The volumes show various limitations, such as the presence of occasional errors and inconsistencies (though these do not seem to interfere with use of the work) and the absence of an author index (unavoidable because of lack of funds). The main deficiency, however, lies in the omission of significant books and articles in some fields. The section on Sun Yat-sen, for example, lists only nine items (two in Chinese, four in English and three in Russian) and leaves out the biography by Lyon Sharman—probably the best in English—which was published in 1934." L. K. Rosinger
+ — Pacific Affairs 13:111 Mr '40 550w

KERR, SOPHIE (MRS UNDERWOOD). The beautiful woman. 304p $2.50 Farrar 40-11754

Portrait of a beautiful, but utterly selfish woman. As a child Eve was spoiled by her plain older sister, Jenny, who was the practical type, and by her great-uncle, George Pennywine, who brought the girls up. As she grew older Eve's only interests in life beyond her own blonde loveliness were clothes, jewels, and fine houses. Her first husband could not give her these things, so he shot himself in order to leave her his war insurance. Her second husband, a wealthy older man, regarded Eve as a sweet, innocent child and poured out his wealth to keep her happy. When he lost his money Eve divorced him to marry a wealthy art collector.

"The portrait [of Eve] is consistent, and although it is slightly overdrawn, that doesn't keep it from being a vivid and ironic study." Lisle Bell
+ — Books p15 Ag 25 '40 180w

"Purportedly a light novel, 'The Beautiful Woman' has wisdom and charm and a nice skill in blending the two." A. D. Bond
+ Boston Transcript p8 Ag 31 '40 800w
New Repub 103:426 S 23 '40 60w
Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p16 S 1 '40 440w

KERR, SOPHIE (MRS UNDERWOOD). Curtain going up. 334p $2 Farrar
(W) 40-4092

Story of New York theatrical life and a girl who writes a Broadway hit.

"Miss Kerr is not writing from hearsay. Here you will find many a characteristic Broadway specimen—the astute agent, the ubiquitous publicity man, the venerable doorkeeper, the down-at-heel player turned panhandler. Some of them are standard brands, but they have been freshly observed." Lisle Bell
+ Books p11 Ja 28 '40 250w

"An entertaining, workman-like, typical Sophie Kerr novel." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p18 Ja 28 '40 240w

"The conversation of the background characters is almost too authentic to sound natural; they are subtly analyzed and described, but not very thoroughly developed." K. S.
— + Sat R of Lit 21:19 F 3 '40 180w

KESSLER, HARRY L. Jews and world affairs; a study in current Jewish events [with an introd. by Mordecai Soltes]. 158p map $1 Bloch

296 Jewish question. Jews—Political and social conditions 39-24838

"This small volume is intended as a supplementary aid in the teaching of contemporary Jewish history in the upper grades, post-confirmation and high-school classes of modern Jewish schools. It treats briefly the present situation of the Jews in the countries of Central Europe, Soviet Russia and the United States, as well as such specifically Jewish problems as Zionism, anti-Semitism, and the race issue." Survey

"Calm in tone. But the book loses in persuasiveness because its facts seem to be drawn solely from Jewish sources, and from a narrow range of such sources."
+ — Christian Century 56:1346 N 1 '39 60w
Foreign Affairs 18:748 Jl '40 10w

"Mr. Kessler presents no new material, but what he does give is well organized, factual and clear. Now and then a note of bitterness creeps into the pages of his text, an attitude which even the objective reader will be willing enough to understand and condone. It is to be regretted that the impressionable young Jewish student must read so melancholy an account of the fortunes of his people. But he will find a true account in Mr. Kessler's excellent volume. That, after all, is the reason d'etre for the textbook as a tool of education." L. L. Snyder
+ Survey 76:30 Ja '40 200w

KESTEN, HERMANN. I, the king; tr. from the German by Geoffrey Dunlop. 538p $2.75 Alliance bk. [8s 6d Routledge]

Philip II, king of Spain—Fiction [40-13265]

Fictionized biography of Philip II of Spain, the son of the Emperor Charles V. Philip is a grown man of twenty-seven when the book begins; he is an old man, worn out with his own treachery and that of others when the story ends, near the close of the sixteenth century.

"If there is any lesson in these pages, it is a negative one, giving only many models of what to abhor. But a story of the past needs no justification. What it does need is fullness, insight, the power to interest—and these 'I, the King' possesses in full measure." Milton Rugoff
+ Books p3 S 15 '40 1050w

"The book would be more moving if not quite such a quantity of historical data crammed its pages. A word of praise is in order for the excellent flowing translation and, perhaps, a prognostication that 'I, the King' will find its way to Hollywood." M. L. Rossbach
N Y Times p14 S 15 '40 900w

"Highly colored, detailed, full of plot, and written with a keen awareness of the period."
New Yorker 16:81 S 21 '40 50w

"This novel about Philip II of Spain contains little if any more fictions than a good many books called biographies, and its account of Philip II's life and reign seems in some respects better balanced and more scholarly than some others which pose as sober history. Perhaps it would be better if it were more careless of the truth, for the truth is that Philip II was dull. . . The inclusion of so much original source material should give vividness and authority to the book; unfortunately it also weighs it down with fact and contrasts incongruously and sometimes absurdly with the fictional frame." G. M.
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:22 S 21 '40 280w

"Herr Kesten is a little unfortunate in the time at which this translation of his book appears. For there cannot be many at the present moment who would wish to gloat over his dreadfully realistic pictures of the horrors of war, culminating in the sack of St. Quentin. . . The book is well translated, and doubtless a few passages which may seem to a fastidious taste over-gross and violent are faithful renderings of the original. But such a Wellerian absurdity as 'Wittlesbach' and such lapses as 'Ciovita Vecchia,' 'lacky,' 'wiley' and 'yoke' of egg, should not have escaped correction."
Times [London] Lit Sup p643 N 4 '39 360w

KETCHAM, DOROTHY. One hundred thousand days of illness. 477p il $2 Edwards bros.

362.78 Children—Care and hygiene. Social work. Education of children. Michigan. University. Hospital 39-27382

"The 'days' here considered were spent by children in the University Hospital, University of Michigan, and the experience which the social services director and her staff gained from them form the basis of this book. Its central thought is that 'the hospital is a community of learning which brings children and adults in closer touch with realities of health, security in life and occupational change,' and that the child's whole hospital experience should be made to contribute as much as possible, not only to his immediate recovery but also to the development of good physical and mental habits and to general learning." J Home Econ

Booklist 35:300 My 15 '39
J Home Econ 32:184 Mr '40 110w

KETTON-CREMER, ROBERT WYNDHAM. Horace Walpole; a biography. 368p il $3 Longmans [16s Duckworth]

B or 92 Walpole, Horace, earl of Orford 40-33519

This new portrait of Horace Walpole presents the most important aspects of his varied life—his career as a man of fashion; as the composer of a voluminous correspondence; his creation of Strawberry Hill and all it stood for; his literary work; and his career as a politician. Bibliographical note. Index.

"This is a very solid book about a man who has always impressed the world as hollow. . . It would be entirely unfair to convey an impression that the book is dull and merely erudite: it is really facinating; and, while it cannot make us ever love the unique Horace, it certainly does greatly increase our respect for him."
+ Atlantic N '40 230w
Bookmark 2:11 Ja '41

"The richest and most informative of all biographies of this fascinating man. . . The author is careful not to advance any exaggerated claim as to the amount of new material which his book contains. It does not add anything of outstanding importance to our knowledge of Walpole's career. In outline and in most details the pattern remains the same. But one has only to leaf over the pages and glance at the footnotes to see the large number of points at which hitherto unpublished letters have been drawn upon." S. C. Chew
+ Books p2 D 15 '40 800w

"Owing to the kindness of Mr. W. S. Lewis, the editor of the Yale edition of the 'Correspondence,' much new material was made available to Mr. Ketton-Cremer, and adds its interest to this graceful biography. The author is admittedly putting up a defense, but it is one conducted with a quiet good sense that is most effective, and with an admirable smoothness and finish of style." Eric Forbes-Boyd

KETTON-CREMER, R. W.—Continued
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 20 '40 550w

"A straightforward, scholarly life of the eighteenth-century dilettante whose letters, now being issued in a monumental fifty volume edition by the Yale University Press, form an impressive body of source material for the period. . . Unfortunately, the recital of Walpole's achievement as antiquarian, author, politician, and chronicler of his age does not add up to a biography of wide appeal for the average reader. . . Nevertheless some account of his life is a necessary adjunct to the standard edition of the Letters, and libraries which do not have the earlier lives by Austin Dobson or Stephen Gwynne will find this biography useful." R. H. McDonough
+ — Library J 65:807 O 1 '40 300w

"Mr. Ketton-Cremer is sympathetic to his subject, but at the end Horry remains dim and unattractive—the posing, affected son of a great statesman. Nevertheless he is an essential part of the eighteenth-century landscape, and every lover of the period will welcome and enjoy this book, the most scholarly and most interesting life of Horace Walpole ever written." A. J. P. T.
+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Je 3 '40 160w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 151:337 O 12 '40 800w

"Mr. Ketton-Cremer has used the unrivaled W. S. Lewis collection of published and unpublished Walpole material to produce what now becomes the definitive scholarly biography. Without Miss Armstrong's bravura or indeed much art except clarity, candor and good sense, his biography is content with a sober narrating and documentation of Walpole's vivacious career as man of fashion, dilettante, wit, antiquarian and writer." Edgar Johnson
+ New Repub 103:876 D 23 '40 160w

Reviewed by Virginia Woolf
New Statesman & Nation 19:726 Je 8 '40 1600w

"Mr. Ketton-Cremer has brought out his book in a time as tremendous as any of the furious decades through which Walpole passed in unexampled contemplative calm. No such book could be written on the hag-ridden continent of Europe. It takes the English to write what is pleasant, elegant, and detached as his hero hoped to be and seldom in reality was, in a world where things grow ugly, brutal, and related to nameless horror. The reviewer for one is all admiration." Leonard Bacon
+ Sat R of Lit 23:14 N 23 '40 700w

"In writing this extremely readable biography, Mr. Ketton-Cremer has enjoyed the friendship and assistance of that fine scholar and collector of Walpole material, Mr. W. S. Lewis, of Farmington, Connecticut. The Yale edition of Walpole's correspondence which Mr. Lewis is at present occupied in editing is expected to run into about 50 volumes. It is upon the transcendant merit of the best of these letters . . . that Walpole's fame ultimately rests, and Mr. Ketton-Cremer shows very entertainingly the manner in which Walpole's principal correspondents were selected, and, when the need arose, replaced. . . Mr. Ketton-Cremer's portrait of Horace Walpole is subtly and elegantly drawn. It depicts with admirable lucidity the main interests of Walpole's life." Philip Magnus
+ Spec 164:723 My 24 '40 800w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '40 1000w
Times [London] Lit Sup p218 My 4 '40 1250w

"Unflagging vivacity in narrative, a keen psychological insight into the character of his subject, and impeccable good taste make this a notable addition to the literature of biography." S. C. Chew
+ Yale R n s 30:385 winter '41 1250w

KEYES, MRS FRANCES PARKINSON (WHEELER). Along a little way. 83p $1.25 Kenedy [2s 6d; pa 1s 6d Burns]
248 Roman Catholic church—Converts
40-4824

The story of the author's conversion to Catholicism.

"This is [a] simple, childlike story. It is told with directness, brevity and charm. Any open mind must be compelled by this sincere, humble and clear tiny autobiography." T. B. Feeney
+ America 63:51 Ap 20 '40 240w
Cath World 151:766 S '40 170w

KEYES, MRS FRANCES PARKINSON (WHEELER). Fielding's Folly. 435p $2.50 Messner
(W) 40-32618

The story of a marriage between two people of varying cultures, one from Vermont combining energy, breeding and wealth, the other from Virginia, charming, easy, and self-assured.

Booklist 37:155 D 15 '40

"This composed and somewhat leisurely novel makes up in richly observed detail and atmosphere what it may lack for the reader who insists upon pace and suspense." George Conrad
+ Books p17 O 27 '40 320w

"No doubt too much has been said recently about escape literature. But 'Fielding's Folly' is that—a book the reader can live in for a week without coming up for air. It is not only the most lavish of Frances Parkinson Keyes' novels, it is almost certain to prove her most popular—at least with women readers." Margaret Wallace
N Y Times p7 O 27 '40 800w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée
Spec 165:618 D 6 '40 100w

"The author's keen observation of life in many parts of the world enables her to hold the interest of her readers. The local atmospheres of Virginia, Vermont and Hawaii are authentically realized, and the story gains much from surprises in manners, customs and speech which the author is able to handle. Moreover, the motives and character contrasts with which she sets out are true to life."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e N 3 '40 450w

"Mrs. Keyes's novels all sell by the tens of thousands, and we may be sure her new story will please no less her many readers. . . The theme is, of course, an old one, and Mrs. Keyes treats it throughout with a tranquil conventionality of characterization and hardly more startling if abundant incident."
Times [London] Lit Sup p615 D 7 '40 190w

KEYES, MRS FRANCES PARKINSON (WHEELER). The sublime shepherdess. 182p il $2 Messner [7s 6d Burns]
B or 92 Bernadette Soubirous, Saint
(W) 40-27397

A brief biography of St Bernadette of Lourdes, preceded by an explanation of the author's reasons for writing the story and an account of her sojourn at the Clinique Bernadette at Lourdes. Also published without foreword and author's note with title: Bernadette, Maid of Lourdes.

"The story gains great vividness from the fact that Mrs. Keyes spoke with people who knew Bernadette in life. Its beautiful style makes it one of the outstanding examples of hagiography. And there is a touch of tragedy in it too; for it was written while the shadow of war was already falling upon unhappy France." W. H. Dodd
+ America 63:500 Ag 10 '40 300w

"Mrs. Keyes' charming style and felicitous marshaling of material make the book one of the year's outstanding hagiographical contributions." J. A. Toomey
+ America sup iv N 30 '40 90w

Booklist 36:344 My 1 '40

"Despite the charm and delicacy of treatment, there is evident in it no great understanding of mystical experience, and without such penetration it is difficult to make much of the life of St. Bernadette, which was outwardly uneventful."
Books p26 Ap 14 '40 280w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Je 30 '40 140w

Reviewed by Rev. J. L. Burke, S.J.
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '40 300w

"The author has told again the familiar story of Bernadette, as piously and uncritically as it has been told many times before. This telling does not differ substantially from that by Margaret Blanton, except that Mrs. Keyes gives a less detailed account of the 'apparitions' and lays less stress upon Bernadette's suffering in the convent."
Christian Century 57:453 Ap 3 '40 60w

"Because of the popularity of Frances Parkinson Keyes's other books, many readers will meet Bernadette Soubirous, the little saint of Lourdes, for the first time in 'The Sublime Shepherdess,' and they will meet the real Bernadette, a generous, intelligent, young woman; she, who has been the despair of hagiographers, becomes in the novelist's pages what Father Herbert Thurston called her, 'a very human saint.' " D. H. Moseley
+ Commonweal 31:538 Ap 12 '40 300w

Reviewed by R. W. Stewart
Library J 65:596 Jl '40 40w

"There have been many books and articles written about this young woman and about the grotto of Lourdes which became famous because of her visions. None of these, however, has brought to life so vividly the extraordinary personality of this saint."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '40 800w

"Mrs. Keyes's whole treatment of this simple but astonishing story is one that is likely to be as popular with readers outside her Faith as it will be among those who already revere as Saint the little peasant girl of Lourdes."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p187 Ap 13 '40 300w

KEYHOE, DONALD EDWARD. M-day; if war comes, what your government plans for you; il. with charts. 96p pa $1 Dutton

355 Military service, Compulsory. War—Economic aspects. U.S.—Defenses
(W) 40-13502

A somewhat dramatized, popular account of what will happen to the ordinary American citizen—potential soldier, industrialist, housewife, farmer, skilled and unskilled laborer—on Mobilization day and the days immediately following Congress' declaration of war.

Reviewed by R. F. Crandell
Books p4 Jl 21 '40 420w

Reviewed by H. W. Baldwin
N Y Times p11 Ag 18 '40 600w

"Engrossing stuff, despite the rather jingoistic tone."
+ — New Yorker 16:64 Jl 20 '40 40w

Reviewed by P. W. Bidwell
Sat R of Lit 22:17 Ag 31 '40 500w

KEYNES, JOHN MAYNARD. How to pay for the war; a radical plan for the chancellor of the Exchequer. 88p $1 Harcourt [1s Macmillan]

940.53 European war, 1939—Economic aspects. Great Britain—Economic conditions 40-9232

This volume contains the author's proposals first published in three articles in the London Times in November, 1939, here rewritten and amplified. One of the main features of Mr Keynes' plan is that a certain proportion of each man's earnings must be deferred, to be returned to him after the war, a kind of compulsory savings plan.

Am Econ R 30:900 D '40 110w

Reviewed by V. A. O'Rourke
Am Pol Sci R 34:1045 O '40 270w

Reviewed by F. R. Fairchild
Ann Am Acad 211:200 S '40 400w

Bookmark p19 N '40

Reviewed by Walter Millis
Books p14 My 12 '40 850w

Boston Transcript p2 My 25 '40 180w

Christian Century 57:610 My 8 '40 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '40

"This book is very short and is written in language intended for the layman. It has obviously caught the fancy of Mr. Jerome Frank of the SEC, and it is safe to assume that it has caught the fancy of many others in the present Administration. For this reason it is worth reading as closely and as carefully as if it were the draft of a new tax bill in this country. It is not something to condemn out of hand, simply because it is unorthodox and unusual." R. D. Skinner
+ Commonweal 32:151 Je 7 '40 900w

Economist 138:363 Mr 2 '40 1350w

"For the time being discussions of the merits and demerits of the program, persuasively outlined in this book, are rather academic, since the Chancellor of the Exchequer, while accepting much of Mr. Keynes's diagnosis, has turned down his prescription. . . Meanwhile, American readers, even though their own pocket-books are not involved, will be well advised to study this statement of the principles and practice of modern war finance. No layman need fear the difficulties of the subject, for as usual Mr. Keynes writes with a clarity and force which ought to be both a challenge and an example to his fellow-economists." Keith Hutchison
+ Nation 150:571 My 4 '40 1150w

"A timely book with timely ideas, even though Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has just publicly indicated he doesn't think so."
+ New Yorker 16:90 My 4 '40 150w

Springf'd Republican p12 My 16 '40 700w

"Whatever the practical difficulties of this plan—and they are numerous—it is far less inconvenient and inequitable than either inflation or rationing, price and wage control, the only visible alternatives. Americans may well ponder this thesis, for they may soon be confronted with the same choice." D. H. Popper
Survey G 29:560 N '40 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p107 Mr 2 '40 950w

KIDGER, HORACE. Problems of American democracy. 546p il maps $1.68 Ginn

309.173 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Social conditions 40-11805

"For senior high schools. After an introduction on clear thinking, each chapter opens with a statement of its problems followed by factual information. Includes such topics as socialized medicine and technological trends. Well-selected teaching aids." Social Studies

---

Reviewed by David Snedden
School & Society 52:594 D 7 '40 220w

"One may summarize the volume by saying that it effectively presents a tremendous amount of useful information, that it will stimulate thought on many worth while subjects (though the thought is guided only on such black-and-white topics as conservation, peace, and democracy), and that it will step on the toes of no fair-minded American." J. V. Southworth

KIDGER, HORACE—Continued

+ Social Educ 4:445 O '40 700w

Social Studies 31:332 N '40 30w

"Here is a book that is well planned and offers opportunity for discussion, investigation, and consultation. And it makes pertinent factual information interesting. The many varied illustrations bear a relation to the text and are not merely put in the book for window dressing." Harold Gluck

+ Social Studies 32:93 F '41 480w

KIERKEGAARD, SOREN AABYE (JOHANNES CLIMACUS, JOHANNES DE SILENTIO, pseuds). Christian discourses; and, The lilies of the field and the birds of the air; and, Three discourses at the communion on Fridays; tr. with introd. by Walter Lowrie. 407p $6 (21s) Oxford

241 Christianity 41-1735

"The translations of Kierkegaard are being undertaken by various hands, some in England, the rest on the far side of the Atlantic. Dr. Lowrie [who] may be called the captain of the American team . . . is being responsible for the group of works which Kierkegaard wrote between 1847 and his death seven years later. . . 'Christian Discourses,' first published in 1848, are in the same vein as the two 'Edifying Discourses' of 1843. . . Their value lies, indeed, in displaying the pure fire of Kierkegaard's hortatory zeal. Each expounds a text, and it is indicative of his peculiar genius that to every text he dilates upon he succeeds in giving its full poignancy. Dr. Lowrie has added to these 'Christian Discourses' of 1848 two more which Kierkegaard wrote after his third and final 'conversion' in Holy Week of that year." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Wilhelm Pauck

Christian Century 57:1082 S 4 '40 240w

"That the Discourses have a morbid note is undeniable, for Kierkegaard was psychopathic. But they have a personal, penetrating quality that puts Newman to shame and they sometimes rise to superb heights of pure beauty." B. S. Easton

+ — Churchman 154:16 My 1 '40 250w

New Statesman & Nation 19:733 Je 8 '40 210w

"The Discourses are works of the years 1848-9, when their author had reached, or nearly so, his final conclusions as to the nature of Christianity, and its relation to human life. They are not easy reading, as is natural enough since Kierkegaard was easy neither with the world, nor with religion, nor with himself. But one thing is quite certain, the man who wrote them knew more than most about two things indispensable to a true and full and living Christianity—sincerity and faith." J. K. Mozley

Spec 164:532 Ap 12 '40 550w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p192 Ap 20 '40 370w

KIERKEGAARD, SOREN AABYE (JOHANNES CLIMACUS, JOHANNES DE SILENTIO, pseuds). The point of view, etc; including The point of view for my work as an author, Two notes about the individual, and On my work as an author; tr. with introd. and notes by Walter Lowrie. 174p $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

B or 92 40-14009

"This is the fourth in the series of volumes in which the Oxford University Press is furnishing to English-speaking readers a full text of the works of Kierkegaard. Mr. Lowrie's present contribution makes available some of Kierkegaard's own statements of the significance of his literary activity—statements from the close of the brief period during which Kierkegaard had published his whole series of existential-dialectical works. Kierkegaard here interprets his 'authorship' as entirely dominated from the outset by its religious end: 'The whole thought is the task of becoming a Christian.' " Ethics

"What Kierkegaard has to say is often deeply moving, not only because of the beautifully restrained frankness with which he discloses his inner life, but also because of the merciless analysis of the difficulties which a man must encounter in Christendom if as an author, poet and thinker he earnestly wishes to serve the Christian faith." Wilhelm Pauck

+ Christian Century 57:1082 S 4 '40 380w

"The Point of View is so intimately autobiographical that Kierkegaard would not allow its publication in his lifetime, and its fragmentary character has been supplemented by Dr. Lowrie's judicious notes until it will serve well enough for those who are appalled by the bulk of the Journals." B. S. Easton

+ Churchman 154:16 My 1 '40 250w

Reviewed by Marjorie Grene

Ethics 50:375 Ap '40 120w

"The Point of View is written with a charming simplicity which makes it a pleasure to read."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p192 Ap 20 '40 370w

KIERNAN, E. VICTOR GORDON. British diplomacy in China, 1880-1885. 327p $4.50 Macmillan [16s Cambridge]

327.42 Great Britain—Foreign relations—China. China—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Eastern question (Far East) [40-14981]

"This study competently performs the useful service of making available to those interested in China's modern foreign relations the substance of the British documents for the years 1880 to 1885. The author sees his chosen years as a comparatively neglected but portentous time in which China's dependencies were being pulled away and her very existence threatened and in which Far Eastern events did much to shape the emergent groupings of the powers. British policy in this period of tension he assesses as on the whole one of inactivity, not always masterly. The chief concerns of British diplomacy in these years are shown to be the Franco-Chinese hostilities over Annam and Tonking, Korean problems, antiforeign rioting in Canton, and the Far Eastern repercussions of the Afghanistan crisis." Am Hist R

"The author's narration of these affairs is rich in detail, but his plan of presentation is a rather unhappy compromise between the topical and the chronological. . . The author's judgments on points related more immediately to his research are often incisive, but his ventures into broader fields of Chinese history occasionally go astray. . . In general the style and tone of the work are cultivated, ironic, and impartial, but the use of 'we' in references to Britain and the British will jar on the ears of those reared in the faith of historical objectivity." M. E. Cameron

+ — Am Hist R 45:882 Jl '40 450w

"It is in the field of diplomatics that the author has made his contribution. While he has used the chief sources in the Western languages, he would have made his study more comprehensive if he had consulted sources in Chinese and Russian. It might also be pointed out that if the writer had paid more attention to his method of presentation, the reader would have less difficulty in following his exposition." William Ballis

+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:1042 O '40 320w

KILPATRICK, WILLIAM HEARD. Group education for a democracy. 219p $2 Assn. press

370.1 Education. Democracy. Group work (W) 40-14481

"This book is a collection of articles that have for the most part appeared in various educational journals. Most have been more or less revised for inclusion, some to bring them up to date, others to make them fit together in serving the present purposes of publication. . . The book is designed to meet the needs of any who are interested in the education of 'teen-age' young people, whether in the home or in school or in club work. The emphasis accordingly is on the education that goes on among adolescents as they associate together." (Introd) Index.

KIERKEGAARD (kēr′kŭ-yär′)

"Most of the material which appears in this book has been published before as articles in various journals or has been given as lectures in different parts of the country. Only three of the eighteen chapters, apparently, were written specifically for this book. Consequently, although the material has all been revised and edited, there is considerable repetition and a lack of that unity which one might expect. But it is a useful and stimulating book. The chapters on 'How Character Grows' and 'Thinking in Childhood and Youth' will be of special interest to religious educators. I agree with the 'blurb' that the book is 'essential reading, not only for teachers on all levels, social and group workers, and parents, but for all those who are alert to the crucial questions of today and the need for revising and guiding our education to meet the needs of democracy.' " C. T. Holman

+ — Christian Century 57:974 Ag 7 '40 850w

Reviewed by Theodore Brameld
New Repub 103:877 D 23 '40 30w

Reviewed by R. L. West
Sat R of Lit 22:19 Ag 3 '40 800w

School & Society 51:752 Je 15 '40 30w

"The book is readable, clear, and coherently unified in its content. It is simply written, yet lacks the popular dash of a Hutchins. It is a strain on the imagination to think of the Saturday Evening Post publishing any part of it. Teachers and other students of education will read it and profit by it, but even they won't read it with ecstatic delight. Kilpatrick isn't nearly as exciting in print as he is in person." N. H. Dearborn

+ — Survey G 30:92 F '41 360w

KILPATRICK, WYLIE. State supervision of local budgeting [a survey; with a foreword by Howard P. Jones]. 131p pa $1 Nat. municipal league

352.1 Municipal finance. Budget 40-3628

"Tax delinquency and municipal debt defaults have focused attention upon local budgeting and the desirability of enlisting the aid of the state in a supervisory capacity with the hope that local government might be lifted to a high level of efficiency. That the reëxamination of state budgetary supervision in the United States reveals the possibility of and necessity for a more complete allocation of this important function to state supervisory boards is the thesis of this volume. The case examined advocates the extension of state supervision to budget balancing, provision of forms for integrated operation, control of administrative costs, and the relating of financial processes. The tenets of effective supervision set forth include integration of administration, the definition of state responsibility, complete planning, the establishment of standards, and coöperation between state and local officials under democratic control." Am Econ R

"The ideas presented are acceptable and the principles enunciated are sound; but the book because of its nature will be best comprehended by the expert." F. A. Neff
Am Econ R 30:427 Je '40 430w

Reviewed by J. E. Pate
Am Pol Sci R 34:813 Ag '40 430w

KIMBALL, SIDNEY FISKE. Mr Samuel McIntire, carver, the architect of Salem; pub. for the Essex inst. of Salem, Massachusetts. ltd ed 157p il map $12 Southworth-Anthoensen

B or 92 McIntire, Samuel. Salem, Massachusetts—Historic houses, etc. 40-13339

"Undertaken thirteen years ago, this study of the career of a famous craftsman and builder turns out to be a combination of scholarly record and souvenir picture-book of Salem houses. . . Fiske Kimball has deliberately searched the materials in the Essex Institute of Salem, and on the basis of McIntire's original drawings, as well as on the manuscript accounts of certain Salem families, he has strictly limited the number of buildings which can be attributed to this popular architect. He has traced the sources of McIntire's ideas, especially in connection with Charles Bulfinch's innovations and the architectural books which McIntire owned, and he has discussed McIntire's influence. More than half the text is a chronological documentation of McIntire's work in architecture and sculpture." New Eng Q

Reviewed by S. E. Morison
Books p1 Ja 5 '41 480w

Reviewed by Alan Burroughs
New Eng Q 13:726 D '40 900w

"Mr. Kimball has had the great resources of the Essex Institute to draw on, and has made an exceptionally interesting and important contribution to the history of American architecture. He has been able to correct many errors in the list of works ascribed to McIntire, and has documented his story with transcripts of Salem family documents. The invaluable series of books issued by the Essex Institute is thus enriched by these scholarly investigations of the work of Salem's most famous architect." C. P. Rollins

+ Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ja 25 '41 380w

KIMMEL, STANLEY PRESTON. The mad Booths of Maryland. 400p il $3.75 Bobbs

927.9 Booth family 40-7464

Long, detailed chronicle of the famous acting family, the Booths, giving an account of their European background, as well as their lives in this country. The author has spent several years gathering his evidence and provides some new lights on the various members of the family, based upon his findings. Index.

Atlantic Je '40 110w

Booklist 36:363 My 15 '40

"It is the private lives of these noted actors, rather than their public achievements, that Mr. Kimmel understands best, and, although he drags forth family skeletons with vast energy, never once does he leer while he works. His industry has produced a source book that will be standing a long time on the shelves of students of both the theater and Mr. Lincoln." Lloyd Lewis

+ Books p3 Ap 7 '40 1100w

"The author is primarily interested in the Booths from a psychological and historical standpoint which leaves small space for any discussion of dramatic interpretation. Many years have obviously been spent in the collection of source material and no time has been wasted in romancing this straightforward and authenticated record on heredity through three generations. Its value is definitely in this category and as Americana rather than literature." E. V. Wyatt
Commonweal 32:271 Jl 19 '40 750w

Nation 150:634 My 18 '40 50w

"A well balanced, understanding history of the great stage family treated as a unit, but with each member discriminatingly assayed and underlined."

+ New Repub 102:552 Ap 22 '40 60w

" 'The Mad Booths of Maryland' is a characteristically lurid title for a modern biography, but it should be said at once that Mr. Kimmel

KIMMEL, S. P.—Continued
does not force the note. His group biography should please all who have enjoyed Frances Winwar's books or Lyman Beecher's 'Saints, Sinners, and Beechers.' Here is our greatest theatrical saga in its most elaborate form." Edward Wagenknecht
N Y Times p7 Ap 14 '40 1800w

"Brilliant, thorough group biography of one of the most eccentric families in American history."
+ New Yorker 16:99 Ap 13 '40 30w
Pratt p22 autumn '40

"Mr. Kimmel's book is an admirable compilation of all the material that patient research can dig up about the various members of the Booth family. . . The notes printed at the end of the volume are by far the most unusual feature of the book. In these he reports some of the curiosa about the family. It is regrettable that he did not weave the more important of them into the text itself, for they would lend color and interest to it. The history of an eccentric family like the Booths often gains more from the telling of illuminating anecdotes than it does from a straightforward presentation of the facts of births, lives, and deaths." P. V. Stern
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:6 Ap 27 '40 700w

KING, CECIL. H.M.S.; his majesty's ships and their forbears. 328p il maps $4.50 (12s 6d) Studio
359 Great Britain—Navy—History

An informal history of the British Navy told largely thru stories of the ships which from generation to generation have borne the famous names: Revenge, Royal Sovereign, Ajax, etc., and of the naval heroes: Howard, Drake, Nelson, Beatty, etc. The book is illustrated with pictures, prints and drawings from the National Marine Museum and other collections, and also with line drawings in the text showing details, flags, uniforms, guns, etc. Index.

"For sheer entertainment Cecil King's account of the Royal Navy is hard to beat. It is, deliberately, not serious, scholarly history, there is no new material, no original sources are uncovered, albeit the book is packed with information. Rather, the author tells a simple story of great deeds performed by gallant heroes of the sea." P. J. S.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 11 '41 130w

"A most readable history of ships and men that have helped to tighten Britain's century-old grip on the seas. . . Mr. King translates something of the cryptic substance of Jane's annual broadside of Fighting Ships into a non-technical form of applied naval history. The fact that the book brings British naval history up to 1940, and numerous fine illustrations greatly enhance its usefulness to those who wish not only to be entertained but to be informed on the stirring achievements of the Silent Service." H. T.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 16 '41 490w

"Mr. Cecil King, like most Englishmen, loves ships and the sea, and in the intervals of a busy life has eagerly sought out any scrap of information he could find about the Navy. His book, which Admiral Evans in a foreword sums up as full of information and readable equally for the civilian and man-at-arms, is one of the most attractive of naval miscellanies. Arranged chronologically, it deals fittingly with the main tracks of history, and explores many a curious byway of nautical lore." H. W. M.
+ Manchester Guardian p7 O 11 '40 350w

"If he can give no broad picture of his subject, the author collects much curious detail about some of its facets, and provides, for those interested in the matter, a useful table of the forbears of serving warships. H.M.S., moreover, contains a great many excellent reproductions of marine prints and paintings, and stands as a naval portfolio whatever its faults as a history." John Mair
+ — New Statesman & Nation 20:316 S 28 '40 360w
Times [London] Lit Sup p503 O 5 '40 650w

KING, ELEANOR, and PESSELS, WELLMER. Working with nature; with 60 offset illustrations. 181p $1.20 Harper
591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 39-32571

"A book on conservation in which the authors make a strong plea to follow nature's law of keeping things in a proper balance. They stress the interdependence of wild life on soil, water, and plant life. . . Contains an analytical table of contents and an adequate index, also a section, Further aids, p.168-177. Useful in units on conservation. Grades 6-8." Booklist

Booklist 36:241 F 15 '40
Wis Lib Bul 36:72 Ap '40

KING, MARIAN. Elizabeth, the Tudor princess; drawings by Elinore Blaisdell. 190p $2 Stokes
B or 92 Elizabeth, queen of England—Juvenile literature 40-31247

The story of Elizabeth of England from babyhood to the time when she became queen. The book is based on authentic historical records, some of them Elizabeth's letters. For junior and senior high school readers.

Booklist 37:140 D 1 '40

"This tale of a princess whose teens were so tumultuous is straight, non-fictionized biography, telling nothing new to adult enthusiasts, but setting down many things valuable to know on which few children have as yet been informed. I should call it a good book by which an inquiring adolescent could chart a path for calm, future study of a past in which controversy was bitter and prolonged." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 D 8 '40 200w

"This short biography has grafted into it such nuggets of well-chosen source material that they mark it sterling quality. The line drawings for the section headings by Elinore Blaisdell add both significance and charm." M. A. Whitney
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 30 '41 300w

"It is not a fictionized biography but an authentic work. One cannot read it without wanting to continue beyond the place where this book leaves her." D. L. Wood
+ Library J 65:661 Ag '40 160w
Wis Lib Bul 36:150 N '40

KING, RUFUS. Holiday homicide. 275p $2 Doubleday 40-7918

Detective story.

Booklist 37:14 S '40

"Here we have a four-star item from the Rufus King workshop, highly recommended as all-around entertainment." Will Cuppy
+ Books p15 My 12 '40 310w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '40 40w

"It is a puzzling case, and Moon has to resort to some clever extra-legal activities to solve it, but that is all forgiven when he gets his man. We venture to hope that this will not be Cotton Moon's last appearance in Rufus King's detective stories." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 My 12 '40 250w

"Almost brilliant in spots, and has a tang that may make you overlook the slightly dizzy solution."

+ New Yorker 16:96 My 25 '40 50w

"Satisfying."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 My 18 '40 40w

KINGDON, FRANK. John Cotton Dana. ltd ed 175p $3 Newark, N.J. Free public lib.

B or 92 Dana, John Cotton 40-31402

"This Life of the librarian of Newark Public Library is written by the former president of the University of Newark and the publishers are the library and museum of that city. . . He began at the Denver library, and after a few years at the Springfield (Mass.) library, was appointed the librarian of Newark, where he labored over a quarter of a century. He cooperated in founding the city's museum and altogether left a unique record of service and a positive contribution to American life." Churchman

Booklist 37:89 N 1 '40

"The book will naturally be in all the public libraries, and may be read with profit by all; for the promotion of reading was Dana's life's work." A. L. B.-C.

+ Churchman 154:35 O 15 '40 140w

"President Kingdon gives a sympathetic, understanding, appreciative study of the life and work of a man of real significance in the library and the civic life of Denver, Springfield, and Newark. . . It would be no easy task to find a more competent interpreter of the man than President Kingdon, no easy task to find a superbly individualistic character treated with such fairness." H. M. Lydenberg

+ Library J 65:800 O 1 '40 1050w

"A dignified, intimate biography of the late distinguished head of the Newark Library and Museum."

+ Nation 151:585 D 7 '40 50w

"Dr. Kingdon, who is well fitted to understand and interpret a free spirit like John Cotton Dana's, writes his book as 'a case study in the social power of an eager and original intelligence.' It is a rich contribution to the shelf of biographies of men who have made America." L. H. Robbins

+ N Y Times p21 N 17 '40 430w

"The special librarian will find pleasure in Mr. Dana's biography but more particularly will catch the contagion of his vitality as portrayed so well by his biographer." R. B. Rankin

+ Special Libraries 31:431 D '40

Springf'd Republican p7e S 29 '40 1050w

"Dr. Kingdon's biography is sympathetic and understanding. He has written interestingly of Mr. Dana's background and ancestry, and of his many interests and activities. Librarians who have known and respected the professional achievements of this important man, will find here more information than most of them have had about Mr. Dana, and may perhaps understand a little better what made the man and his career." J. M. Flexner

+ Survey 76:372 D '40 200w

KINGSBURY, JOHN ADAMS. Health in handcuffs. 210p pa 50c Modern age

614.0973 Public health—U.S. Medical economics. Insurance, Health 39-28997

Study of the public health situation in the United States at present. Two thirds of the volume contains accounts and interpretations of the National health conference of July, 1938, and the recommendations offered by the federal committees, Senator Wagner's bill, and the hearings on the measure. The opening chapters present the part played by physicians and medical agencies at present. Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by H. M. Teaf, Jr.

Am Econ R 30:210 Mr '40 80w

Reviewed by A. N. Christensen

Am Pol Sci R 34:383 Ap '40 200w

"Lucid, inexpensive, well printed, and of moderate size, the book deserves a wide audience, not only because of its timeliness but also because of its availability. It might almost be said that it could and should be read by every voter." D. W. Orr, M.D.

+ Ann Am Acad 209:227 My '40 450w

Booklist 36:152 D 15 '39

J Home Econ 32:565 O '40 30w

Reviewed by H. H. Darby

Nation 150:368 Mr 16 '40 340w

Reviewed by Joseph Hirsh

Social Forces 18:600 My '40 220w

"One notes a few questionable statements, and of course there are numerous points on which even those who may be in general sympathy with the author's views will disagree with his judgments. But a clear and incisive story of recent events and current programs has been much needed and will be useful to those who want information for themselves and to those who seek material with which to inform and persuade others." M. M. Davis

+ — Survey 76:79 F '40 240w

KINNEMAN, JOHN ALBERTUS, and ELLWOOD, ROBERT SCOTT. Living with others [under the editorial supervision of Howard R. Anderson]. 548p il maps $1.72 Houghton

300 Sociology (W) 39-14585

This high school text in sociology consists of studies of seven institutions: the community, family, state, opinion, industry, school, and church. "The material has been confined strictly to the institutional approach. This is an important consideration because some educators believe we should study problems exclusively. Possibly we should study institutions to learn how problems arise from them." (Pref) References, questions, and problems at ends of chapters. Index.

"The 'institutional approach' could safely present some understanding of the interdependent and interrelated functioning of church, state, economic organizations, welfare agencies, and press in a local community, state, or nation. This the book fails to do. Nor is there much emphasis upon the subtle methods by which institutional controls are imposed. In a few cases no mention is made of the function of a given institution. . . The chapter on the 'Radio, Press, and Motion Pictures' is more plain-spoken than most, and the ones on 'The Democratic Way' and 'Peace and War' are definitely to be commended for their critical analyses of these current problems." M. A. Elliott

Am Soc R 5:310 Ap '40 260w

Reviewed by F. M. Lawson

Social Educ 4:446 O '40 400w

"The style is straightforward and descriptive, enlivened here and there with short case incidents. It is regrettable that there are not more case studies. Many of the generalizations acceptable to adults with wide background in the social sciences are not readily perceived by the meager evidence presented. The previews and exploratory questions to each chapter I consider superior to the summarizing questions and problems at the end of each chapter. . . The book does not merit careful consideration for use by more than average pupils, or as supplementary reference for high school sociology and problems of democracy." V. E. Pitkin

+ — Social Studies 30:378 D '39 260w

KINZEL, AUGUSTUS BRAUN, and FRANKS, RUSSELL. The alloys of iron and chromium; v 2, High-chromium alloys; pub. for the Engineering foundation. 559p il $6 (40s) McGraw

620.17 Chromium alloys. Iron alloys (37-19163)

"This volume is the second and final part of a review and summary of important published

KINZEL, A. B., and FRANKS, R.—Continued
information and available unpublished data on the alloys of iron and chromium. It deals with alloys containing more than 10 per cent chromium and includes data on those materials commonly known as 'stainless' and 'heat-resisting' steels." (Pref) Bibliography. Indexes. For volume one see Book Review Digest, 1938.

"The book is recommended, without reservation, by the reviewer as a 'must have' to any one interested in accumulating a working metallurgical library." H. S. Rawdon
+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:316 Ap 10 '40 650w

"There is no doubt that this volume will prove a very useful addition to the technical library, and as regards the text, there appears to be very little to which exception can be taken. It is a very big undertaking to handle critically the large number of papers now extant in this field, but, nevertheless, the authors are to be congratulated upon the extent of the success which they have achieved. There is an excellent bibliography of the subject consisting of more than five hundred references." W. H. Hatfield
+ Nature 146:506 O 19 '40 1600w

KIPLING, RUDYARD. Brazilian sketches. 115p $2 Doubleday
918.1 Brazil—Description and travel (W) 40-35496

Collection of seven travel essays, each prefaced by an appropriate verse. They include a voyage to Brazil, a visit to a snake farm, impressions of Rio de Janeiro and São Paulo, and a railway climb of two thousand feet. Reprinted from magazines.

"On the whole there is little of international politics and relatively little social interpretation in these seven chapters of an expert tourist's impressions now for the first time made available in book form. Characteristically, Kipling was chiefly engaged in absorbing the look, color, movement, sound, smell, taste and feel of a strange country. His incomparable powers of endowing the commonplace with romantic glamour, of injecting personality into the most humdrum of dynamos or locomotives . . . are here exhibited to the fullest degree." G. F. Whicher
+ Books p2 D 29 '40 460w

"A thoroughly attractive-looking book. It is not so much a travel book as it is straight belles lettres. . . The poems introducing each chapter typify the book and its peculiar impression of 'Road to Mandalay' uncomplicatedness along with a subtle accumulation of unexpected observations and recollections and overtones which, together, make comprehensible Kipling's eminence in English letters." Philip Burnham
+ Commonweal 33:236 D 20 '40 490w

"It is remarkable that these brilliant, intuitive impressions have never been collected before and it is timely that they are published now when the eyes of all Americans are looking to the south of us, to the neighbors on our hemisphere, especially to Brazil, the largest of the southern republics." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p27 Ja 26 '41 330w
New Yorker 16:89 N 30 '40 40w

KIPLING, RUDYARD. Verse. definitive ed 852p $5 Doubleday [25s Hodder]
821 (W) 40-29931

This definitive volume of Kipling's poems contains all the poems which he wrote, and includes thirteen which have never appeared in book form anywhere, and many others which have not appeared in book form in the United States. Poems are printed in the order in which they were written, and table of contents is arranged alphabetically. Index of first lines.

"This is not the place for an appraisal of Kipling's verse, but it may be said briefly that Kipling extended is not as effective as Kipling condensed, and that the final gift that time may derive from his work is a slender volume containing nothing but the pieces of perennial interest and delight winnowed from the huge mass of his temporary and topical verse writing." G. F. Whicher
Books p2 D 29 '40 200w

"This new volume gives us all the chapter-headings written in verse for his stories and novels. Everything is here, and it is a great richness." John Holmes
+ Boston Transcript p9 D 30 '40 650w

"Kipling was not a great poet, and there are not so many things in this stout volume of more than 800 pages which are likely to be read generations hence. There are some, though, that seem likely to be always a part of the English heritage, because of their depth and sincerity of feeling." J. D. A.
N Y Times p2 Ja 19 '41 470w
New Yorker 16:80 Ja 18 '41 20w
Spec 165:560 N 22 '40 200w

KIRBY, REGINALD. Light for today on personal problems. 153p $1.50 Am. Bapt.
252 Sermons 40-7318

A volume of sermons by the pastor of a Baptist church in Melbourne, Australia.

Christian Century 57:418 Mr 27 '40 10w

"In the best sense of the word these excellent sermons are scriptural, expository rather than textual, and never depart from the essential truths that underlie, nurture and determine Christian personality. They reveal a good preacher who is first of all a pastor. Kirby knows people. They also reveal a student of literature whose knowledge of American as well as English letters is sincere and fundamentally sound." R. E. Keighton
+ Crozer Q 17:230 Jl '40 190w

KIRK, SAMUEL A. Teaching reading to slow-learning children; with an introd. by Marion Monroe. 225p il $1.50 Houghton
372.4 Reading. Children, Abnormal and backward (W) 40-6811

Discussion of the reading problems of mentally retarded children, and methods of teaching them. Partial contents: Pre-reading activities for mentally retarded children; Instruction in the initial stages of reading; Increasing efficiency in reading; Reading defects in the mentally retarded; The reading problem of the dull-normal child. Bibliography of children's books suitable for slow-learning children; reading readiness tests; and index.

Booklist 36:394 Je 15 '40

"The volume makes a contribution in an area which has not been covered heretofore. While suggestions in some cases could be more definite and detailed, on the whole they are practical and worth while. Kirk is to be complimented on the production of a book which will fill a definite need for teachers who need assistance in helping slow-learning pupils to read." G. E. Storm
+ El School J 41:231 N '40 600w

KIRKCONNELL, WATSON. Canada, Europe, and Hitler. 220p $1.50 (8s 6d) Oxford
971 European war, 1939—Canada. Canada—Politics and government 40-33515

"The Dominion of Canada entered the war September [1939] with a population which included between two and three million European Canadians. . . In [this book] Professor Watson Kirkconnell examines a cross-section of European-Canadian sentiment toward the issues involved in the present war. His survey covers the months immediately preceding the outbreak of hostilities, and the first month of actual warfare." Canadian Hist R

Am Hist R 46:456 Ja '41 90w

Reviewed by D. P. Myers
Am Pol Sci R 34:1024 O '40 130w

"Mr. Kirkconnell's wide acquaintance with the languages and literatures of recent immigrant peoples, coupled with extensive recent travels in Europe, is employed to good account in his survey of the sentiments of the main European-Canadian groups. . . The author's judgment upon the significance of the Quebec election [in] October hardly does justice to the complexities and contradictions of that campaign. Aside from such minor qualifications one can express only keen appreciation and warm praise for this fluent and compact survey of Canadian war attitudes." Wilfrid Eggleston
+ — Canadian Hist R 21:87 Mr '40 650w
Foreign Affairs 19:262 O '40 30w
New Repub 103:93 Jl 15 '40 70w

"The author is exceptionally well qualified for the analysis he has undertaken. In his survey of conditions in Central and Eastern Europe his judgments are often shrewd."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p274 Je 8 '40 700w

KIRKENDALL, LESTER ALLEN. Sex adjustments of young men; foreword by Percival M. Symonds. 215p $2 Harper

612.6 Sex instruction. Sexual ethics 40-27550

"For 12 years the author counseled boys and young men. From them he gathered information about their common sexual experiences and adjustments from 16 to 25. He writes frankly and with a scientific approach, though without scientific language. Case histories are included; sexual anatomy is omitted." (Booklist) Glossary. Bibliography.

Booklist 36:405 Jl 1 '40

"At the end a glossary and an excellent brief bibliography add to the usefulness of a book which will certainly be valued by group leaders and consultants." H. M. Parshley
+ Books p13 Jl 28 '40 460w

KIRKUS, VIRGINIA (MRS FRANK GLICK) A house for the week ends; with il. by Dorothy Bayley. 252p $2.50 Little

728 Architecture, Domestic. Country life (W) 40-27398

Several years ago the author bought an old house in Connecticut and reconditioned it for a week-end home. The chapters in this book combine the story of her own experiences with practical advice to others who wish to do likewise. At the end of each chapter is an outline of do's and don'ts, lists of equipment, etc. Partial contents: All the comforts of home; And now—for furniture? Week-end housekeeping; Week-end gardeners; Guests, pets and pests; The week-ender's calendar. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:341 My 1 '40
Bookmark 2:5 Ja '41

"A brief listing for a reference library of a week-end house tops off the whole. Surely Miss Kirkus's own book will head such future lists. If grasped firmly in the hand by the hordes now setting out to find a small white house with a view, a brook, an apple orchard, a Dutch oven and L and H hinges (let alone those who already have a house with one or more of these or other virtues) it should encourage, guide, comfort, console and amuse." Mary Ross
+ Books p14 Mr 31 '40 390w

"A sound, sensible book, briskly written, that should please everyone who longs for a home in the country." Margaret Clark
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 30 '40 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '40
J Home Econ 32:566 O '40 80w
N Y Times p5 Mr 24 '40 380w
New Yorker 16:88 Mr 23 '40 30w

"The book is a heartening combination of humor and practicality." Gladys Graham
+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 1 '40 440w

KISSIN, RITA. Raffy and the honkebeest; pictures by Charles E. Bracker. [45p] $2 Messner

40-11709

Picture-story book for young readers. It tells the story of a young giraffe who outran all the other creatures of the jungle, and won his final laurels when he raced an automobile—and won.

Booklist 37:19 S '40

"Elephants, gazelles and monkeys are especially handsome in these color plates, but I like the giraffes best. They really seem to move; it is a tricky book, and its tricks are pleasant and invigorating." M. L. Becker
+ Books p11 N 10 '40 250w

"The pages are beautifully planned with good type and with strong lines and plenty of action in the drawings of animals of the African veldt. The animals, trees, and plants are tinted with soft, lovely water colors. There is humor in the expressions on the animals' faces, and in the story. . . The book will probably be a favorite with ages five to eight. Recommended." Marion Farquharson
+ Library J 65:769 S 15 '40 110w

KISSNER, JAKOB, ed. Foldboat holidays. 316p il $2.50 Greystone

797.12 Canoes and canoeing. Canada—Description and travel. U.S.—Description and travel (W) 40-27521

The "foldboat" is a modern adaptation of the Eskimo kayak first used by vacationers on European rivers, now being introduced into America by the editor of this volume and others. In addition to chapters on the technique of foldboating, there are personal narratives of vacations on the Connecticut river, in the Adirondacks, in Maryland, Delaware and Kentucky, on the rivers of the middle and far West. Index.

Booklist 36:396 Je 15 '40
Bookmark 2:6 Ja '41

"The cult of the collapsible 'yacht'—far be it from the layman to continue the alliteration and call the foldboat a canoe—is spreading in this country, and here is the first guide to this still new sport. The foldboat seriously looks like a canoe; it is seriously advertised as a 'folding cruiser' and referred to as a 'yacht'; and you can have a grand time with it, once you have learned how."
+ Books p16 Ag 25 '40 170w
Wis Lib Bul 36:124 Jl '40

KLEIN, MRS ALICE M. (CAMPBELL). Civil service in public welfare; a discussion of effective selection of public social work personnel through the merit system. 444p $2.25 Russell Sage

351.1 Civil service—U.S. Social work 40-5796

"The extension of civil service into the realm of public welfare has brought problems to the foreground in the program of the social worker demanding a clear and workable knowledge of a hitherto vaguely understood field. The book is divided into two main parts. Part one, dealing with the functions and procedures of civil service, is intended to serve as an introduction to civil service history and practice. Part two, 'Where Social Work and Merit Systems Meet,' considers in detail those points where civil service affects the realm of public welfare. An appendix outlines the standards for a state merit system of personnel administration." (Am J Pub Health) Bibliography. Index.

KLEIN, A. M.—Continued

Reviewed by I. V. Hiscock
Am J Pub Health 30:1239 O '40 650w

"The second part of the volume is devoted to a consideration of the points at which civil service procedure particularly touches public welfare. . . This part does not entirely live up to the excellence of the first part, for its discussion of such matters as adjustment of professional and labor union concepts and adjustment to conditions imposed by government employment needs further development to be of great value. The whole of the book would be improved by more exploration and discussion of the philosophy and basic concepts of both social work and civil service as contrasted with the techniques of the two. Important interrelationships in philosophy are yet to be explored in these fields." J. P. Clark
+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:1006 O '40 550w

"The book is presented as a 'first word . . . a springboard' which 'may stimulate interest,' but it appears to be much more than that. Continuous study and experimentation are necessary, but here is a solid foundation on which to build." Alden Stevens
+ Survey 76:215 Je '40 280w

KLINGBERG, FRANK JOSEPH. Anglican humanitarianism in colonial New York. 295p $3 Church hist. soc, 4205 Spruce st, Philadelphia

266.3 Society for the propagation of the gospel in foreign parts, London. Indians, Treatment of. Slavery in the U.S. 40-33059

The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel was an important Anglican agent for bringing Christianity to Colonial New York. From their records Professor Klingberg, of the University of California at Los Angeles, has chosen the ones which show the work of the Society in helping the Indians and Negroes. Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 57:1383 N 6 '40 250w

"Dr. Klingberg has not only produced from the mass of material some valuable generalizations, but he has given us a narrative clear and succinct and embellished with liberal quotations from the sources. This splendid scholar has furnished a book which should open the eyes of those who dismiss the church's contribution as trivial and insignificant." E. L. Pennington
+ Churchman 155:20 Ja 1 '41 200w

"The book contains many interesting items of fact, which one can fit into his own picture. The value of the book is greatly enhanced by the inclusion of three notable S.P.G. sermons in full. The student will rejoice in the very full index." I. S. Kull
+ Social Studies 32:88 F '41 550w

KLINGEL, GILBERT C. Inagua; which is the name of a very lonely and nearly forgotten island; il. from phot. taken by the author. 385p map $3 Dodd

917.296 Inagua (island). Natural history—Bahamas 40-35141

An American naturalist and a companion, while on a scientific collecting trip, were shipwrecked on Inagua, an island on the outer fringes of the Bahamas. The companion had to return home, but the author remained for some time making observations on the island fauna. His account of his scientific work is interspersed with stories of the island natives and his own hardships. No index.

Booklist 37:173 Ja 1 '41

"An excellent first book, I might say books, for this volume is several in one. I can think of no class of general reader who will not find a good deal in it to his taste. . . There are passages of exceedingly good, impersonal writing, which are worth reading and rereading. But again and again we are led with keen interest up to some creature or situation only to be blocked by digression, either personal or factual. I found myself constantly saying, 'Go on, go on, what did it do then?'" William Beebe
+ — Books p19 N 24 '40 550w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p9 D 31 '40 460w

"There is the essayist's touch in [the author's] contemplation of wind and tide and the island's slow building, fine evocation in his picture of the land-crabs' migration and of the marvels beneath the sea. And his writing has beauty to match his mind's perceptiveness. This is not a book to be classified too rigidly. Any one who loves nature will simply read it with delight." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p2 F 2 '41 850w

Reviewed by C. H. Pope
Sat R of Lit 23:18 Ja 25 '41 550w

KLINGSBERG, HARRY. Doowinkle, D. A. 282p $2 Dial press
40-32619

"Short stories of court room cases with John Doowinkle, one of the assistants in the District Attorney's office, playing in the limelight. Doowinkle was a shy, studious little man whom every one was inclined to bully. His hobby was astronomy, which he practiced in his backyard of nights." N Y Times

"All in all it is light reading and if you hanker for some Tutt and Mr. Tutt, here is some of the flavor." F. H. Pardee
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 24 '40 170w

"Compact and clever." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p18 S 1 '40 190w

"Interesting."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 S 7 '40 40w

KNEVELS, GERTRUDE. Death on the Clock. 273p $2 Doubleday 40-30402

Detective story.

"A fast and readable puzzle not quite so homespun as most of these tales narrated by lovable spinsters. Miss Knevels scares you at the start and leaves you fairly horrified with continuous wickedness. On page 221 is a list of eight important questions for ambitious amateurs." Will Cuppy
+ Books p10 S 1 '40 190w

"The mystery is a puzzling one, with suspects and motives galore, and the suspense is maintained to the very end, but there are times when the narrative might have been less confusing." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 Ag 25 '40 290w

"Enough hair-raising ingredients for several stories. Although not too well mixed they offer pungent dish for them as likes creeps. Extra spooky."
Sat R of Lit 22:18 S 7 '40 40w

KNIAGEVITCH, LYDIA. Lights vanished; il. by Woodi Ishmael. 229p $2.50 Snellgrove

B or 92

A Russian exile, now living in New York, reviews her past life in a series of flashbacks. She was born in Siberia more than seventy years ago. Her family owned gold mines and her early life was one of ease and comfort. At ten she went to live with an aunt in Moscow, and as she grew up she met many of the great men in artistic circles. During the Russian revolution she helped as long as possible in hospitals, but was finally forced to make her escape and came to America.

"This simple, unpretentious book is precious, like so many memoirs written by women of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. It tells of a life the like of which we shall never see again." Sonia Tomara
+ Books p33 D 8 '40 300w

Christian Century 58:191 F 5 '41 120w

"Her book is a collection of sketches from many-sided experience, and it has an individual, and admirable, character of its own."
+ N Y Times p51 D 1 '40 550w

KNIGHT, CLIFFORD. The affair in Death valley. 270p $2 Dodd 40-34071

Detective story.

Booklist 37:176 Ja 1 '41

"Heavy casualties and sufficient bafflement in this 'horrid drama,' as the narrator calls it." Will Cuppy
Books p24 N 17 '40 90w

"An absorbing story with a tricky solution and plenty of desert atmosphere." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p32 N 24 '40 160w

"Very good grade."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:46 D 7 '40 50w

KNIGHT, CLIFFORD. The affair of the Circus Queen. 287p $2 Dodd 40-7706

Detective story.

Booklist 36:413 Jl 1 '40

"Plenty of color aboard the circus ship and much solid puzzling in the plot. Solemn and sinister." Will Cuppy
Books p16 Ap 28 '40 150w

"All circus backgrounds are fascinating, but this one takes the cake, for it travels by boat between Far Eastern ports. And the mystery is a fine one." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '40 80w

"'The Affair of the Circus Queen' is one of the very best of the Huntoon Rogers stories and a new triumph for Clifford Knight." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 28 '40 250w

"Novel variation on nautical species of crime yarn. Manila and islands of Pacific make exotic background for high tension tale. Good."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ap 27 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '40 200w

KNIGHT, EDGAR WALLACE, ed. What college presidents say. 377p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press
378 Education, Higher. Colleges and universities—U.S. 40-6812

A symposium of the opinions of more than 200 college presidents during the past 100 years. The quotations, taken from addresses, reports and occasional articles, are arranged under the following groupings: the college presidency; the purposes of higher education; the weaknesses of higher education; organization and administration; faculty relations; obligations to society.

Reviewed by M. M. Willey
Ann Am Acad 210:178 Jl '40 460w

"It is incredible that so many bright men (for many of them were above the average in sagacity) should have allowed themselves to say so many ordinary things. But one must remember that a card index will make any subject dull. Here in this volume we have a file or cemetery of clippings kept by an industrious educator." J. E. Park
— Boston Transcript p1 F 3 '40 80w

N Y Times p18 F 4 '40 400w

"What College Presidents Say is a highly interesting, and, in a sense, a thoroughly disheartening, book. . . What else can be said of the carefully weighed utterances of the executive managers of nearly two thousand public-service institutions, not so much because of the diversities of opinion shown of the basic purposes of those institutions, as because of the nearly universal habit of those managers of using only vague, equivocal and excessively romantic generalizations in designating such purposes?" David Snedden
+ — School & Society 52:637 D 14 '40 400w

Reviewed by E. V. Hollis
Social Forces 19:133 O '40 500w

"The book has enough substance to justify it on historical and practical grounds, and is more useful because Prof Knight has attempted to state problems rather than suggest solutions. His study was made under the sponsorship of Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching with funds allocated by the Carnegie corporation of New York." E. N. Jenckes
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 27 '40 1500w

KNIGHT, ERIC (RICHARD HALLAS, pseud). The happy land. 351p $2.50 Harper 40-4886

Story of life among the Yorkshire colliers when the mines shut down, describing the slow, gradual descent of self-respecting people as they use up their savings and descend to the labor camps and even prison.

Booklist 36:306 Ap 1 '40

Bookmark 2:13 Ja '41

"This is a big filled out novel of Victorian richness. . . And all these people and this story are of the stuff of literature." F. T. Marsh
+ Books p2 Mr 3 '40 750w

"There is not much that could be called plot, but of forceful character-drawing there is plenty, and a thorough grasp of what happens to common, ordinary, everyday people when the economic dyspepsia of the present time forces them to accept pauper status in the place of relative independence." L. B. Salomon
+ Nation 150:426 Mr 30 '40 380w

"It would not be a Yorkshire book if it were sentimental. But Thora's love stories—her strong love for her family that leads her to the verge of shame for their sakes, her richer woman's love for Ferrell—are as delightful as Thora herself. 'Song on Your Bugles' was good. 'The Flying Yorkshireman' was a piece of admirable Yorkshire fooling. This is basically and in every way better. A stout-hearted and forward-looking book, splendidly written." J. S. Southron
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 3 '40 800w

"This is more than a hard-luck story; Mr. Knight's characters are real people and meet their trials in different ways. A warm, human tale."
+ New Yorker 16:89 Mr 9 '40 50w

"Mr. Knight appears to be in a valuable minority of one. Memory is faulty; at the moment I cannot recall any other novelist of the English scene who has written about unemployment on its own terms, or on what he conceives to be its own terms. 'The Happy Land' is not entirely successful; but . . . [he] has tackled an extremely difficult subject with at least a partial success. His book is an important book; I think it will turn out to be a memorable book, and I hope it will have a wide reading, which it deserves." George Dangerfield
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:15 Mr 9 '40 490w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 24 '40 430w

Time 35:75 Mr 4 '40 100w

Wis Lib Bul 36:100 My '40

KNIGHT, ERIC (RICHARD HALLAS, pseud). Lassie Come-home; il. by Marguerite Kirmse. 248p map $2 Winston
(W) 40-11708

Story of a prize collie belonging to a Yorkshire boy from a humble home. When the family went on the dole, Lassie was sold to a wealthy man and taken hundreds of miles away to Scotland. But Lassie had still kept her loyalty to a boy in England. She escaped from the kennels in Scotland and after gruelling hardships, made her way back to her first home.

Booklist 37:19 S '40

"Altogether this is a book that takes some beating." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 Jl 21 '40 650w

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 17 '40 130w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 D 19 '40 200w

"Among the dogs we remember by name, like Bob, Son of Battle, and Grayfriars Bobby, Lassie, golden collie of Yorkshire, will surely have a place. For the instinct that urged her to travel four hundred miles as the crow flies, far more by the way she went, unerringly back to the home and duty that called is a wonderful power to contemplate... The artist who made the pictures knows dogs as well as the author." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:345 S '40 100w

"A dog story that will be welcomed by twelve-year-olds to adults, and worthy to stand with Terhune's. Attractive binding, lovely map endpapers showing Lassie's wanderings, colored frontispiece and twenty-eight grey illustrations by Marguerite Kirmse." Maude Adams
+ Library J 65:596 Jl '40 140w

"There is no sentimental nonsense here, no humanizing of a dog's desires and instincts, but rather a fine restraint which equals the love and understanding which have gone into this story, and the book is all the more moving because of that quality. It is moving, too, because it is a story of beautifully drawn characters, courageous and honorable in adversity, and almost as inarticulate in their affections as their dog. It seems strange that a child of working people in these times should have been so unconscious of poverty as was Joe, but this is the only false note in [the] book." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 7 '40 470w

KNIGHT, KATHLEEN MOORE. Death came dancing. 277p $2 Doubleday 40-6299

Detective story.

Booklist 36:384 Je 1 '40

"There's more killing in the carnival atmosphere, lots of suffering, much suspense on the straightaway, and a surprising solution. Miss Knight's situations are thimble-rigged and none the less exciting. Don't go elsewhere to have gooseflesh about a misunderstood heroine." Will Cuppy
+ Books p19 Ap 14 '40 180w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '40 60w

"There is nothing spectacular about Elisha's methods; he relies mainly upon his native shrewdness and his knowledge of human nature, and he always gets his man and gives his public a few hours of pleasing entertainment." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 14 '40 180w

"Nice, detailed story written with skill and malice."
+ New Yorker 16:100 Ap 13 '40 60w

"Macombers Capecodderies go well in tropical scenery, and there's plenty of emoting and well thought-out sleuthing. Excellent."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ap 20 '40 40w

Time 35:92 My 6 '40 40w

KNIGHT, KATHLEEN MOORE. Rendezvous with the past. 272p $2 Doubleday 40-30403

Mystery story.

Booklist 37:117 N 15 '40

"A speedy, suspenseful offering, to be taken with a grain of salt and shudders as required." Will Cuppy
+ Books p16 S 8 '40 130w

"Lots of unpleasant people and some nice ones, along with a neatly tangled trail. I hope Margot has another case to handle, soon." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 21 '40 90w

"The Crime Club selection for September is a roundly interesting story... It's a well-built and well-written novel above the average in the whodunit class." Kay Irvin
+ N Y Times p21 S 8 '40 180w

"Presenting most venomous family in recent months, including murderous twins. Sleuthing nothing extra but yarn moves at dive-bomber speed. Admirable."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 S 21 '40 40w

KNIGHT, KIM. Feuders' gold. 256p $2 Dodge 40-34426

Western story

"Readers who crave fighting should get their fill in his rough, ready and entertaining opus of frontier life at its worst. There's romance, too." Will Cuppy
+ Books p10 D 29 '40 60w

"The name of Kim Knight is new to us, but he has written an excellent tale and written it with a sure skill that betokens an experienced hand." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p21 D 15 '40 170w

KNIGHT, M. FORSTER. See Forster-Knight, M.

KNIGHT, MARJORIE. Alexander's birthday; il. by Howard Simon. 120p $1.50 Dutton 40-12420

Second story for young readers about Alex, the stuffed horse, whose first appearance was in Alexander's Christmas Eve (Book Review Digest, 1938). Here Alexander and his two friends, Aloysius the clown, and Penney the Scotch soldier, join Alexander on a journey to the North Pole to spend the latter's birthday with Mr and Mrs Santa Claus.

"A pleasant little read-aloud story for the very young, the colored pictures are simple and bright for very young lookers-over." M. L. Becker
+ Books p5 Ag 4 '40 140w

"Here in an easy-to-handle sized book is a delightful little story for four to eight-year-olds, made especially so because it involves three of the things that children love the best: toys, birthdays and Santa Claus." M. E. Prim
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 17 '40 170w

"Does not seem so carefully done as the first book. This is less entertaining, though it has some of the same charm as its predecessor. . . The pictures, as in the first book, are drawn by Howard Simon; they are colorful and spirited. Children from eight to ten (especially those who read the first book) will welcome this story." Josephine Smith

+ — Library J 65:661 Ag '40 140w

"The story is worked out with a logical attention to detail and an enjoyment on the author's part that results in convincing make-believe. 'Alexander's Birthday' is a gay and friendly little tale that will be a pleasant addition to the list of Christmas stories for the young children. It reads aloud well and the illustrations in black and white and color have liveliness and humor and illustrate with spirit each incident in the tale." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p11 S 1 '40 280w

Reviewed by F. G. Wells

Sat R of Lit 23:6 N 16 '40 40w

KNOLLENBERG, BERNHARD. Washington and the revolution. 269p $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Washington, George. U.S.—History —Revolution. Gates, Horatio. Conway, Thomas (W) 40-35489

"The librarian of Yale University, citing sources which future historians can scarcely dismiss lightly, argues that Gates was a first-class officer and fully deserved the credit for Saratoga, that there was no Conway cabal, that Washington was responsible for the disaster at Fort Washington and later at Brandywine but attempted to pass the onus off on others, and that the Continental Congress supported Washington loyally and wisely despite personal characteristics which made the commander-in-chief an extremely touchy individual to handle." (Christian Century) Index.

Atlantic Ja '41 180w

Booklist 37:214 Ja 15 '41

"Mr. Knollenberg has written a challenging book. Sometimes he fails to quite convince, but he has, nevertheless, supported his assertions by sound evidence and logic. He has probably altered for good the approach to this side of the American Revolution. He writes forcibly and well. The charges made against past historians are harsh, yet the spirit is not that of the muckraker. . . The book deserves a wide reading by those who would know better the story of Washington and his times." Avery Craven

+ — Books p5 D 29 '40 1150w

"Knollenberg's conclusions differ so sensationally from those of practically all biographers who have preceded him, especially in his rehabilitation of Gates, that they will be widely resisted. But the scholarly research which underlies his volume makes it a remarkably impressive piece of work. Incidentally Knollenberg does not share in the current enthusiasm for Benedict Arnold."

+ Christian Century 57:1519 D 4 '40 180w

"If Bernard Knollenberg's Washington and the Revolution does not start a war among the historians it will be only because there is already enough conflict on hand to suit the most ardent militarist without re-fighting the American Revolution. His 'reappraisal' of that period is packed with academic dynamite." T. N.

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 20 '40 350w

Reviewed by D. F. Lucas

Library J 65:652 Ag '40 220w

Reviewed by W. E. Woodward

Nation 152:78 Ja 18 '41 850w

"Mr. Knollenberg's treatment of the alleged cabal headed by General Thomas Conway and implicating General Horatio Gates and a group of Congressmen will be important for future historians of the period. He concludes that the Conway Cabal is a myth, and that there was no great plot against Washington. He is also judicious enough to admit that perhaps the entire controversy is shrouded in impenetrable mists, but insists that in that case the jury of readers must not hold anyone guilty. It is in this spirit of judicious weighing of historical evidence that the whole book is written, and the result is a valuable contribution to scientific historical writing." M. R. Werner

+ New Repub 104:155 F 3 '41 700w

"Mr. Knollenberg has certainly not written a new biography. Probably the very conscientiousness of his scholarship will scare off the general reader. He has, however, indicated the need for a new analysis of Washington's life and suggested the lines it might follow." R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p1 D 15 '40 1400w

New Yorker 16:90 N 30 '40 50w

"Mr. Knollenberg's book is valuable as an antidote to much of the 'patriotic' history that is written. It is, in itself, neither definitive nor conclusive. Each of the case studies here suggested requires more exhaustive treatment than Mr. Knollenberg has given it, and other aspects of the story—the Lee treason, for example, or the relations of Washington with the Continental Congress and with the war Governors, are yet to be told in full. In the end, it is safe to say, such investigations will not seriously impair the towering character of Washington, but rather humanize it." H. S. Commager

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:5 D 21 '40 900w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 D 7 '40 1100w

Time 36:60 D 23 '40 700w

KNOOP, FAITH YINGLING. Quest of the cavaliers; De Soto and the Spanish explorers; il. by William Merritt Berger. 202p $2 Longmans

B or 92 Soto, Hernando de. America—Discovery and exploration 40-10866

Biography of Hernando De Soto, describing both his life in Spain and in the New World, as well as providing a survey of the whole era of the Spanish conquest and exploration in the Americas during the first half of the sixteenth century. For readers of twelve and over. Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

"There have been biographies of De Soto for young people, but none of them have interested me as this historical setting of his time has done. . . The book is like those excellent works for supplementary reading with which schools overseas are so richly provided, yet it is completely American because it takes place in the days just before the real America's dawn. It is history brought to boys and girls in a form they will not refuse." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Je 23 '40 380w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '40

"The conquest of Peru and Mexico by the Spaniards is portrayed less sanguinely and brutally than usual. . . The facts are not dryly told and the whole book is interesting reading, considered either history or biography. The pages and print form a pleasant appearing book, to which the pen drawings by William Berger, used as chapter headings, add materially. The book should appeal to boys of twelve." J. F. Carter

+ Library J 65:455 My 15 '40 150w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Library J 65:855 O 15 '40 40w

"It was never a pretty story, this record of men greedy for gold and power, and the author has handled it with a detachment which emphasizes the treachery, the oppression and brutality of the conquerors. But de Soto was no worse than any of them, and better than some, as his championship of Atahualpa proved, and in his case this is a record of courage and endurance as he pushed his way across the wilderness. There is no attempt here at personal characterization, but rather a factual and interesting account of great value to young people for its inclusiveness and integration of events." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 28 '40 350w

KNOOP, F. Y.—Continued
"To be highly recommended."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:38 D 7 '40 20w

"The book's material is accurate but it is poorly organized and therefore may prove confusing to younger readers. There are appealing illustrations at the head of each chapter but the book suffers from the absence of maps. There are too few moments of excitement and adventure, and too few of the incidental narratives which make straight history palatable to younger readers." M. L. Pfaelzer
— + Social Studies 32:94 F '41 100w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '40 240w

KNOX, JOHN CLARK. Judge comes of age. 353p il $3 Scribner

B or 92 Lawyers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 40-33160

After twenty-two years on the Federal bench, the senior judge for the Southern district of New York has written his autobiography. It is a witty, forthright account of his life from his birth in 1881 in Waynesburg, Pennsylvania, to the present. Index.

"While reading Judge Knox's book is profitable to a reflective mind, it is not pleasurable. In the course of his work the judge comes out strongly against the political rascalities and economic idiocies which are rampant in our public affairs, and as strongly against the flagitious practices prevalent among labor leaders, which those in control of our public affairs have abetted. His clear vision of what the end of all this must be, and his power of equally clear statement about it, make the reading of this book almost imperative—though, again, not for pleasure." A. J. N.
+ — Atlantic F '41 250w

Booklist 37:136 D 1 '40

"Judicial propriety, as well as other considerations, doubtless has prevented him from telling of many matters which might be interesting, but he tells enough. Indeed, for a judge, what he has to say is rather astonishingly frank and full of absorbing detail. The result is warm-hearted, occasionally witty, and thoroughly ingratiating—the life story of a sound citizen, a good judge and an urbane gentleman whose years on the bench have not robbed him of the human juices." Stanley Walker
+ Books p5 O 13 '40 1200w

"The reminiscent jurist is generous. To the mind's eye he has opened a word picture gallery which his long experience has constructed. In it are arrayed, vividly but not appealingly, the faithful portraits of almost unnumbered celebrities in politics, in misdemeanors of varying degree, and in crimes against government both national and state. It is a story of accomplishment. No one less courageous, and surely no one less honest and sincere, could have set down, truthfully and modestly, a record of his own life work." F. L. P.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 N 7 '40 500w

Commonweal 33:188 D 6 '40 90w

"As a veteran grand juryman the present reviewer found 'A Judge Comes of Age' an absorbing and, needless to say, most enlightening book. Perhaps I come to Judge Knox's pages already prejudiced in their favor. Yet I think not, for I am convinced that all laymen are intensely interested in the mysterious, yet only seemingly mysterious, workings in that field in civic living in which they may at any time find themselves. In Judge Knox they will find not only a true legal philosopher but also a trustworthy guide and friend." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p4 O 20 '40 1000w

"This book and others in its general category should be read by the layman. It is clear that the average citizen has no intention of familiarizing himself with the rudiments of legal procedure. . . Read the methods of procedure laid down for the control of prosecutors and courts? Not on his life. He might more easily be led to read Blackstone's 'Commentaries.' At least, he could ask for them at a public library. Here, then, is one excellent reason for recommending such a book as Judge Knox's. It is, first of all, accessible. And it is considerably more interesting than a lease." J. R. Parker
+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 N 2 '40 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '40 1000w

KNOX, ROSE BELL. Cousins' luck in the Louisiana bayou country; il. by Manning de V. Lee. 258p $2 Macmillan
(W) 40-33455

The Petite Amateur was a small newspaper published in the 1880's by a group of young cousins living on a Louisiana sugar plantation. This story is based on the paper, excerpts from which are included in the book. It begins with young Denee, waiting on her father's plantation, to meet her young Uncle David, her senior, by just four years. The story closes with an exciting race, won by a strange jockey.

Booklist 37:221 Ja 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p28 N 10 '40 280w

"This is fresh material and it makes good reading." Lena Barksdale
+ Horn Bk M 17:57 Ja '41 80w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:850 O 15 '40 40w

"The author knows the country; but the many characters and, at times, abrupt and uneven style make the book more difficult to read than some of her former ones. It should be enjoyed by some eleven to thirteen-year-old readers." A. D. Martin
+ — Library J 66:35 Ja 1 '41 130w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Nation 151:456 N 9 '40 10w

"The story will probably be read first for its account of good times, the escapades of Denee and her cousins, but what will remain, will be a picture of a way of life, gone now, and therefore all the more worth recording. The abundance of plantation living, the children's friendly feuds with the servants, their own squabbles, chiefly over their pets, their expeditions around the countryside, the great climax of the year when the sugar cane gave up its richness, are all re-created in a story which catches as well the special beauty of marsh and bayou." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 D 8 '40 350w

KOBLER, JOHN. Some like it gory; a postgraduate course in the art of murder. 329p $2.50 Dodd

364 Murder. Crime and criminals 40-11093

Chapters on crimes, murders and murderers, some of them familiar stories, others little known. Bridge table murders, new methods of solving crimes, murder trials, and women poisoners are among the subjects. The chapters are brief and written in a sprightly manner.

"Connoisseurs of the art of murder will find 'Some Like It Gory' diverting and highly entertaining. And no wonder! For here, sprawled before the reader, is as choice a collection of messy homicides as even the most sanguine addict can hope for—some old, some new, but all written and seasoned with sprightly wit and humor." S. G. Kling
+ Books p13 Ag 25 '40 600w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '40 100w

"For those who 'like it gory' this is, needless to say, a beguiling treasure box of entertainment. Prospective readers should be warned, however, that this book falls considerably below the highest standard for entertainment of this kind. That standard, as set in this country by the late Edmund Pearson and recently by Janet Flanner, is very high indeed."

+ — N Y Times p6 Je 23 '40 550w

"This is a book for realists who are addicted to well-written stories of what really happened."

+ New Yorker 16:72 Je 29 '40 50w

Sat R of Lit 22:18 Je 29 '40 40w

KOHLER, PAULINE. The woman who lived in Hitler's house [Eng title: I was Hitler's maid]. 216p $2 Sheridan [2s 6d Long]

B or 92 Hitler, Adolf 40-31075

Purports to be an account of the daily life at Hitler's mountain home, Berchtesgaden, as told by a German woman who once worked there as a servant.

"The information is lurid, and so is the author's style."

— Books p16 S 8 '40 170w

"It is all very horrific in the best manner of the pulps and will titivate the morbid who will be so absorbed in the 'human drama' that they will forget to question its authenticity. As for us, we feel more hopeful for the fate of Europe if a junge Frau like Miss Kohler can pull the wool over the eyes of the guardians of Hitler's sanctum." M. C.

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 24 '40 110w

KOHLER, WOLFGANG. Dynamics in psychology. 158p $2.50 Liveright

150.4 Psychology. Memory. Perception 40-8732

"These chapters contain a discussion of psychological theory and its function in psychological work. The way in which I interpret the relation between theory and factual research is exemplified by two instances. The first introduces Faraday's views into the theory and investigation of perception, the second applies the same concepts to problems of memory." (Pref) The book is based on the Page-Barbour lectures, delivered by the author at the University of Virginia, in 1938. Index.

Reviewed by R. E. Perl

Books p22 Ap 28 '40 380w

Reviewed by Livingston Welch

N Y Times p4 Ag 18 '40 450w

Pratt p4 autumn '40

Reviewed by Ethel Kawin

Survey 76:344 N '40 360w

KOHN, HANS. Not by arms alone. 161p $1.75 Harvard univ. press

940.51 World politics. History, Modern 40-35828

"A collection of 'essays of our time.' Some of the chapters were originally papers which Prof Kohn delivered before philosophical and historical societies. They deal with such topics as the totalitarian philosophy of war, academic freedom, problems of central Europe and the case for a world federation of democracies. In the last few chapters Prof Kohn makes a plea for a concentration of 'all our intellectual and moral resources' upon the problem of 'freeing our people from the lack of understanding, from the illusions and fears, that shackle them and make them undecided, hesitating and panic-stricken instead of resolute and far-sighted.'" Springf'd Republican

Booklist 37:267 F 15 '41

"Few men are better qualified than Dr. Hans Kohn to help us face the problems of our time. For he combines erudition with philosophical balance, and achieves lucidity without any sacrifice of thoroughness. Do not be misled by appearances; although the book is slim, it is richer in substance than many a ponderous treatise; although it is composed of detached essays, it has perfect unity of spirit and treatment; although it hails from Harvard, it is written in a language 'understanded of the people.'" Albert Guerard

+ Books p4 D 22 '40 550w

"We warmly recommend this book to liberals who seek reassurance." C. J. Friedrich

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 11 '41 450w

"While all the essays are rewarding, the ones which deal with the historical background of the present situation are particularly valuable." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 151:568 D 7 '40 1100w

"These essays are much more than a tract for the times. They are the distillation of a scholarship both broad and deep, the unique product of a mind steeped in the cultural tradition of Europe, invigorated by the stimulus of the new world with its hope and its vitality. The style carries its burden of scholarship with lightness and ease and the book is enormously readable, 'popular' in the best sense of the term. The essays which deal particularly with the cultural heritage of western Europe and with the human values associated with democracy are written with charm and grace and with eloquence." Paul Birdsall

+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 Ja 4 '41 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 180w

Reviewed by W. H. Shepardson

Survey G 30:88 F '41 260w

KOLODIN, IRVING, ed. The critical composer. 275p $2 Howell, Soskin

780.072 Music—History and criticism 40-10140

A collection of excerpts from the critical writings of Berlioz, Wagner, Schumann and others. The excerpts are arranged according to the subject and include material on Palestrina, Beethoven, Mozart, Bach, Chopin, and many others.

Booklist 37:9 S '40

New Repub 103:198 Ag 5 '40 50w

"The compilation is instructive and illuminating." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p4 Je 9 '40 650w

"The book contains little real musical criticism. Mostly it is a collection of impressions —witty, romantic, and bitter, which composers have written between their intervals of composing." Katharine Scherman

Sat R of Lit 22:10 Jl 6 '40 380w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 Je 1 '40 700w

KOLODIN, IRVING. The Metropolitan opera, 1883-1939 [foreword by W. J. Henderson]. 2d ed 646p il $3.75 Oxford

792.4 Opera. Metropolitan opera company. New York (city). Metropolitan opera house 40-27332

"A continuation of the history through the 1939 season, a list of performances from 1935 to 1938, and the correction of errors constitute the revision of a book first [published in 1936 (Book Review Digest, 1936)]." (Booklist) Indexes.

Booklist 36:329 Ap 15 '40

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 31 '40 480w

"In the second edition, just brought out, Mr. Kolodin has carried his narrative through the season of 1938-39, with pungent comments on the present million-dollar drive to save the opera house. . . Whether or not one agrees with the author's contention, the taking of sides does not injure the ultimate reference value of his book; for it is next to impossible,

KOLODIN, IRVING—Continued
living through an age and participating in it as actively as Mr. Kolodin, to present a social panorama without touching on the controversial. This he has done in a dignified and forceful manner which makes one respect, if not always endorse, his opinions." Robert Lawrence
+ Forum 103:267 My '40 550w

"There is brief and just appraisal of tendencies in these recent seasons—of what has and has not been achieved in repertory, personnel, orchestra, staging. But, as before, the bulk of the writing is an excessively detailed statement of everything that happened, involving endless unimportant details of casts and including trivialities of reviewers' gossip." B. H. Haggin
+ — Nation 150:786 Je 29 '40 210w
New Repub 103:198 Ag 5 '40 40w

"Mr. Kolodin's book is not a dry listing of the succeeding steps in the growth of opera in the square, dull-looking building known as the 'Met,' but it is a delightful threading together of human interest stories—a long march of glittering personalities whose attainments have added glamour to the musical history of the whole world." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p17 Jl 28 '40 950w

KOMROFF, MANUEL. Magic bow. 362p $2.50 Harper
Paganini, Niccolò—Fiction
40-27734

Romanticized story of the life of the great Italian violinist, Paganini. The novel begins in 1800, when Paganini was eighteen, poor and unknown, and follows the course of his career thru the Napoleonic wars, until he had won both fame and fortune.

Booklist 37:91 N 1 '40

"Manuel Komroff has compounded an imaginative and swift-paced romance. It has the swirling color of the picaresque novel, and the same sense of story. For Mr. Komroff is first a story-teller, whose efforts are to amuse and excite, rather than to confess, inform or illuminate. Paganini is an excellent theme for his talents." Milton Lehman
+ Books p 10 O 20 '40 700w

Reviewed by F. A. Boyle
Library J 65:874 O 15 '40 90w

"The author has not devised his novel specifically for music lovers. Indeed, some of them no doubt will object to the considerable liberties he has taken in his characterization. But the book will appeal to lovers of romantic fiction who enjoy a well turned, colorful story with a hero in the romantic tradition." Drake de Kay
N Y Times p7 O 20 '40 600w

"On the pretty side."
New Yorker 16:110 O 19 '40 30w

"It is a spirited, glowing book, one of the most readable and charming in its category that has appeared for some time." Robert Littell
+ Yale R n s 30:xii winter '41 150w

KOOS, LEONARD VINCENT, and others. Administering the secondary school. 678p $3.25 Am. bk.
373 School administration and organization. Education, Secondary (W) 40-5981

Contains chapters on the program of studies, vocational program, health program, guidance program, on selecting teachers, on buildings and grounds, and on administering finance. Index.

"Administering the Secondary School presents, in scholarly yet simple and readily understandable fashion, all the data necessary for the successful direction of a modern high school in any plan of school organization. Such is the scope of content of the treatise that the administrator, in whatever stage of his career and whatever the status of his school district, can be guided in the discharge of his responsibilities." H. C. Hunt
+ El School J 41:227 N '40 1000w

"This volume, because of its distinctive features and qualities, should find a prominent place in the literature on secondary-school administration. By drawing on their own experience and by interpreting the findings of research, the reports of practices in schools of various sizes, and the results of surveys, such as the National Survey of Secondary Education, Koos and his collaborators have presented a book which should make, if it is studied by administrators in service and students in training, a significant contribution toward the improvement of practices in administering secondary schools." D. L. Simon + School R 48:547 S '40 900w

"The entire volume offers convincing evidence of the authors' familiarity with widely recognized general treatises, the most recent comprehensive investigations, and the educational periodicals relating to the field of secondary education. The professional standing of the authors is also reflected in the sane balance of theory and practical experience presented in each unit. By articulating much of the best of the recent work in this field of study in a systematic treatment of the problems of secondary school administration, they have rendered a real service. The book deserves, and doubtless will receive, a hospitable reception." John Rufi
+ Social Educ 4:370 My '40 500w

KOZIK, FRANTISEK. The great Debureau; tr. by Dora Round. 376p $2.75 Farrar Deburau, Jean Gaspard—Fiction
(W) 40-27273

"Jean Gaspard Debureau (whose real name was Jan Kaspar Dvorjak) was born at Kolin in Bohemia on July 31, 1796. He went to France, where, at the beginning of the 19th century, he became the greatest pantomime actor of the day with the whole of Paris at his feet. But a time came when he was forgotten by all." (Publisher's note) This fictionized account of his life was the Czechoslovakian winner in the all-nations prize novel competition.

"One becomes a little tired of the galaxy of great names lugged into the book on every occasion, and is tempted to feel that the author would have done well to stick more closely to his clown."
Atlantic Je '40 80w
Booklist 36:306 Ap 1 '40
Bookmark p13 My '40

"This cannot have been an easy portrait to tackle and yet, even through the language barrier, a perfectly understandable figure emerges. 'The Great Debureau' is a special kind of romantic tale as successful in its own way as Feuchtwanger's 'Jew Suss.'" Iris Barry
+ Books p4 Mr 3 '40 650w

"Mr. Kozik's novel is notable for its charm, the light, fresh touch of the writer, and for the sympathetic portrayal of an appealing character. The author is never guilty of heavy pathos or of encores in tremulo; yet the reader laughs and suffers with the little clown from his maltreated boyhood to the day when his triumphs are over." Olga Owens
+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 2 '40 600w

"For the adult reader who enjoys biography and history romantically interpreted." A. C. Hansen
Library J 65:166 F 15 '40 90w
New Repub 102:321 Mr 4 '40 50w

"Here is a wholly delightful novel. Call it historical, biographical, or a novel of character. It scores on all points. Written in a simple, direct style, it is rich in ingredients that make the reading of fiction a pleasure. Pathos, tenderness, a knowledge of human nature weighed in the scales of charity, the face of a whole epoch drawn with sympathy and understanding; above all, love toward humankind—all these are here to compensate for the tragic and unnecessary cruelty of life depicted in realistic measure." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 3 '40 1200w

New Yorker 16:90 Mr 9 '40 30w

"Most of the book is both substantial and imaginative, and from those pages Debureau emerges in a manner not easy to forget. 'The Great Debureau' would be a better novel if the author had been content with his hero and bothered less about the times." Richard Lockridge

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:12 Ap 27 '40 420w

KRAMER, SIDNEY. A history of Stone & Kimball and Herbert S. Stone & co; with a bibl. of their publications, 1893-1905; pref. by Frederic G. Melcher. 379p il $4 Univ. of Chicago press; ltd autog ed $10 Black Cat

655.4 Stone, Herbert S., & company, Chicago. Publishers and publishing 40-10064

History of a Chicago publishing firm. "The plan of this book is simple. The Bibliography, although prepared first, is presented last, as documentation and reference material. It is preceded by a group of thirty-two plates illustrating bindings, decorations, title-pages, and types used in the books and magazines of Stone & Kimball and Herbert S. Stone & Company, and the posters designed to advertise the publications. The History, illustrated with portraits and reproductions of autographs, is largely a running account of the publishing adventures of Herbert Stuart Stone, Hannibal Ingalls Kimball and Melville E. Stone Jr., between 1893 and 1905." (Introd) Index.

Booklist 37:7 S '40

Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '40 110w

Nation 151:158 Ag 24 '40 60w

"Sidney Kramer performed tireless research in assembling the material for his study and, as a result, his 'History of Stone and Kimball' is more than an account of a publishing venture; it approaches a picture of a literary period. The very amount and richness of material has, to a certain extent, defied organization, and has resulted in places in reiteration and a slowing of pace. It is nevertheless interesting and valuable and the bibliography in its wealth of details is excellent." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p17 Je 16 '40 950w

KRANOLD, HERMAN. The international distribution of raw materials. 269p $3.50 Harper [15s Routledge]

380.9 Commercial products. Economic policy [38-14433]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

"The most valuable part of the work is the wealth of statistical material, interspersed (perhaps somewhat too generously) in the text, but chiefly contained in a seventy-page appendix. It would probably enhance the value of the book if one or several maps could be added showing the geographical distribution of raw materials, if the statistical data could be brought up-to-date (the book was written in 1937), and if foodstuffs were treated more extensively. The work should be a valuable source of information for the specialist; while for the general reader it is a stimulating survey of one of our most pressing problems." Alexander Böker

+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:171 F '40 400w

Reviewed by J. A. D. Haas

Harvard Business R 19:245 winter '41 460w

"The Appendix of carefully and conservatively (with the exclusion of doubtful private statistics) selected and prepared statistical tables on the production, pricing, and international trade in important raw materials offers not only material support for the author's argument but is in its compact and judicious collation very valuable to anyone working in international economics. On the whole, the book seems to us to deserve a good reception also by the American interested public." Herbert von Beckerath

+ J Pol Econ 48:132 F '40 1100w

"As is the case with any study written in contemplation of war, the event itself produces contingencies unforeseen by the author. Dr. Herman Kranold's book entitled International Distribution of Raw Materials serves, none the less, as a valuable introduction to the raw material problem faced by both belligerents and neutrals in the present conflicts raging in Europe and the Far East. More than that, it raises a number of important questions related to the peace settlements which must inevitably follow." Brooks Emeny

+ Pol Sci Q 55:133 Mr '40 600w

KRAUS, RENE. The private and public life of Socrates; tr. by Barrows Mussey. 387p $3 Doubleday

Socrates—Fiction 40-5287

Fictionized biography of Socrates which is also a "political and social allegory illuminating the present in the light of the past." (Publisher's note)

"The smarty-smarty twists tend to disappear as soon as we are well into the story. Here is the rich, familiar tapestry of those days, brought to life many times before, but seldom more vividly. . . Mr. Kraus brings his antique world very close to us. Xanthippe becomes understandable and pitiful, and Pericles really takes off the helmet he wore to hide his baldness. A great number of minor characters, Plato among them, have their moment of life." Lorine Pruette

+ — Books p5 Mr 17 '40 950w

"Let us admit this Socrates does not come off. Socrates was the first modern man, hence far ahead of Mr. Kraus. But then one comes to realize how essentially a mystery the man has become through the creative wizardry of his disciple, and how hopeless it is to try and unscramble him from Plato. At least this is an attempt not lacking in either charm or carefulness. Compared with the debunking antics of another recent author who tries to unmask Socrates as a fascist, it provides healthful mental exercise. Will no one try a third and not wholly implausible way—a really disagreeable Socrates in the guise of Georges Sorel?" George De Santillana

— + Commonweal 31:495 Mr 29 '40 350w

"Intent on interpreting the past to the present, the author interposes the atmosphere of the present between the reader and the subject. Doubtless his 'facts' are correct, but a 'straight' biography would seem preferable."

Nation 150:430 Mr 30 '40 70w

"Mr. Kraus is in no position to tell us secrets. He can merely elaborate upon facts already known and embellish them imaginatively, which is, in fact, what he does and, on the whole, well. . . There is much drama here, and much that is praiseworthy, in spite of all debatable points." John Cournos

+ — N Y Times p8 Mr 17 '40 850w

New Yorker 16:107 Mr 16 '40 50w

Sat R of Lit 22:20 Ap 27 '40 420w

"Mr. Kraus's book is first and last a clever book. It manages to tell a familiar story with an air of strangeness and suspense, an ancient story with a compellingly modern accent, a moral story with an unusual alternation of high seriousness and light-hearted sophistication. Much of the book, moreover, is solid history, as solid as the available often fragmentary and contradictory sources of our knowledge will permit it to be; scratch its surface in many places, and it will bleed pure Xenophon, Plato, or Aristophanes. But its cleverness will often conceal, from all but the initiate, the artful interweaving of the purely fictional threads." R. B. Levinson

KRAUS, RENE—Continued
+ Yale R n s 30:204 autumn '40 650w

KRAUS, RENE. Winston Churchill; a biography. 366p il $3 Lippincott

B or 92 Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer (W) 40-27786

A full length, sympathetic biography of the British prime minister. The author, born in France of French and Austrian parentage, is the author of several historical biographies, and, before the Nazi invasion, was counselor to the Press department of the Austrian government.

Booklist 37:136 D 1 '40

"Only great biography would be really adequate to the life of Winston Churchill; yet even the dullest book about him would still be interesting. Mr. Kraus is not, it seems to me, a great biographer; he is workmanlike, competent and not without a shrewd insight into his torrential subject, and the tremendous drive and brilliance of the extraordinary career which he describes supply the rest. Until the final accounts are cast up, the end is known and perspective is available, this is all one could reasonably ask. And it is quite enough." Walter Millis
+ Books p4 N 24 '40 1000w

Christian Science Monitor p18 D 6 '40 700w

Commonweal 33:261 D 27 '40 50w

"All in all, Rene Kraus has turned out a commendable job. While the momentous events of the last few years occupy comparatively little space, the biography on the whole is a painstaking, important work." Norman Cousins
+ Current Hist & Forum 52:3 N 26 '40 1100w

Reviewed by R. B. Rankin
Library J 65:981 N 15 '40 170w

Reviewed by Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
N Y Times p4 D 1 '40 1150w

"Mr. Kraus has done his research work conscientiously and, as far as the past is concerned, his information is quite accurate. The only trouble with him, as a biographer and historian, is that he allows sometimes his present passions and sentiments to tamper with the facts. Coming events, with him, cast their shadows not before them, but behind them. The men he dislikes today can never have been right yesterday. At times, towards the end, his book becomes a political pamphlet, which no biography should ever be, but when the evil spirit does not come upon him, he is a good and reliable chronicler." André Maurois
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:6 N 9 '40 1000w

"Though not pretending to be definitive or scholarly, the book is interesting, informative, and bold." George Woodbridge
+ Survey G 30:88 F '41 480w

Time 36:80 N 4 '40 1200w

KREDEL, FRITZ, il. Glass flowers from the Ware collection in the Botanical museum of Harvard university; insect pollination series. 58p $1.50 Harcourt

580.74 Harvard university. Botanical museum. Ware collection of Blaschka glass models of flowers. Artificial flowers. Fertilization of plants. Insects 40-27756

Description of the unique collection of glass flowers in the Ware museum, at Harvard university, with some biographical material on the Bohemian workers, the Blaschkas, father and son, who made the flowers. Sixteen colored plates are included.

Booklist 37:112 N 15 '40

Christian Century 57:1179 S 25 '40 40w

"A memorial to a remarkable achievement in scientific, artistic, philanthropic collaboration, and a gift book appropriate to many occasions."
+ Commonweal 32:495 O 4 '40 100w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Repub 103:803 D 9 '40 650w

KREY, MRS LAURA LETTIE (SMITH). On the long tide. 642p il $2.75 Houghton (W) 40-33586

This historical novel follows the career of Jeffrey Fentress from his grandmother's home in Virginia, first across to Tennessee with his father, thence to New Orleans and finally to Texas where he and others from the United States fought for Texas' independence.

Booklist 37:155 D 15 '40

"Mrs. Krey's two novels illustrate in their differences the growing seriousness of the writer today. 'And Tell of Time' [Book Review Digest, 1938] was a delightful account of family life in a new land, but 'On the Long Tide' goes deeper into the sources from which the strong tide of the nation swells. It was probably a more difficult book to write, and is possibly not quite so successful, but it has a strong claim upon our interest, for here are the men and women of America in action, determining the course of American living." Lorine Pruette
+ Books p4 N 10 '40 1050w

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 28 '40 550w

Churchman 154:39 D 15 '40 20w

"Mrs. Krey's people lack passion, their motivation is shadowy and without urgency, and it is doubtful if anyone has ever managed to write of such a violent place as Texas early in the nineteenth century with so much dull placidity. Far from gilding the lily Mrs. Krey has clothed it in a Mother Hubbard." Harry Sylvester
— Commonweal 33:156 N 29 '40 300w

"There is a richness of character and plot, woven against the Spanish background of Mexico, that carries half of this historical romance, but in the latter half too many words and too much history make the story stagger and sag into a long slow ending. Well written and good history withal." Katharine Shorey
+ — Library J 65:874 O 15 '40 130w

Nation 151:485 N 16 '40 130w

"'On the Long Tide' is a book that must be reckoned with. It is rich, solid, colorful, authentic; it has all the sober virtues. Nevertheless, inexplicably, it somehow fails—does not quite bring to life either the people or the period. . . Its characters move with the light of history upon them, but they themselves are pallid and shadowy." E. H. Walton
+ — N Y Times p7 N 10 '40 800w

"If you like novelized American history, you'll probably like this."
New Yorker 16:95 N 9 '40 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 10 '40 700w

KRISTAL, FRANK ALBERT, and ANNETT, FRED ANZLEY. Pumps; types, selection, installation, operation, and maintenance. 339p il $3.50 McGraw

621.6 Pumping machinery 40-27762

"In this book it has been the purpose of the authors to produce a work that would be useful to everyone interested in pumping problems. To this end, considerable space has been given to a description of the types and designs of pumps available and in a general way to the applications for which they are suited. Some of the most important applications, such as boiler feed, deep wells, sumps, and sewage, have been treated each in a separate chapter. Although the general field of pumping equipment has been completely covered, no attempt has been made to include every type of special pump available, because new designs and variations of old ones are being produced constantly." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:112 N 15 '40

Reviewed by G. L. Montgomery
Chem & Met Eng 47:882 D '40 150w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:52 O '40

KRISTOFFERSEN, EVA M. The merry matchmakers; a story of Sweden; pictured by Hedvig Collin. 95p $2 Whitman, A.
40-32144

The life and customs of modern Sweden, presented in a story about Tillia and Ollie Jonsson, twins, whose father's trade was matchmaking. For children of eight to ten.

"Although somewhat lacking in spontaneity and originality, with a limited plot interest, this book, with its illustrations by Hedvig Collin, will make pleasant reading for children eight to ten." J. E. Stromdahl
+ — Library J 65:926 N 1 '40 70w

"An American boy or girl will be glad to make the acquaintance of these Swedish young people, and the illustrations have vivacity and gay color."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 60w

KROLL, HARRY HARRISON. The keepers of the house. 413p $2.50 Bobbs
(W) 40-27157

Long novel of Mississippi just before and during the Civil war. The central character is Lett Capers, illegitimate son of the owner of the great plantation upon which he grows to manhood. Until he grew up Lett was unaware of his paternity, but he was always rebellious. During the Civil war he had his revenge, when he helped the Yankees burn the mansion house, and later gained possession of it himself.

Atlantic Je '40 90w

Booklist 36:264 Mr 1 '40

"Gentlemen, and ladies all, I give you a miracle: a book about the South, 'before the war,' with never a touch of nostalgia. But do not think that then it must be a conventional leftish picture, with all the values reversed and the common man become heroic and fine, the aristocrats craven and corrupt. . . If now and then Lett seems a little too intelligently informed of economic problems inherent in the situation, this can only be a very minor complaint against a swift-moving and penetrating story of a period in our history that has seldom been approached with so much attempt at realism." Lorine Pruette
+ — Books p5 F 25 '40 750w

"The book may be sound history, but it is something less than satisfying as a novel." Harold Strauss
+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 3 '40 650w

"There are some flaws in the book. Its story is not always compelling; sometimes it is overdrawn; sometimes its characterization falters, but a truth emerges from it which is too much lost and which needs to be understood." Jonathan Daniels
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:15 Ap 13 '40 400w

KUCK, LORAINE E. The art of Japanese gardens. 304p il $5 Day

710.952 Gardens—Japan. Landscape gardening
40-14245

"The art of gardens has had an integral place in the history of the Japanese people, as in that of the Chinese before them and through the ages back to at least two thousand years ago. And it is so that this art is studied and presented in this beautiful and richly informative book. . . With a deft and always interesting touch, Miss Kuck weaves into her tapestry the men who made the gardens, the background of their work, the philosophy which animated their artistic conceptions, and the actual composition of the gardens themselves." (N Y Times) Selected bibliography. Index.

"To ninety-nine out of every hundred Americans, whose conceptions of Japanese gardens are made up of six parts stone lanterns, eight parts curved bridges and one part distorted dwarf trees, Miss Kuck's admirable volume will be first a surprise and then a progressively delightful revelation. For here is a masterly and absorbing picture of the true art of which we have heard so much and know so little, a record and interpretation as forthrightly clear as it is steeped in the history and rich symbolism of the Orient." R. S. Lemmon
+ Books p13 S 15 '40 120w

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 12 '41 550w

KUEHNELT-LEDDIHN, ERIK R. VON, and KUEHNELT-LEDDIHN, CHRISTIANE (GOESS) VON. Moscow 1979. 337p $2.75 Sheed
40-33587

In 1979 nearly the whole of Europe had come under the terrible rule of Bolshevik Russia, while America, still independent, remained Catholic with a Filipino pope residing in San Francisco. The story concerns an American who had emigrated to Russia, where he had risen to a high position as a producer. Secretly he was, however, a Catholic missionary, combating the materialistic philosophy. He eventually is discovered and is executed for his faith.

"Except that the bolshevist leaders are made rather sillier and more inept than one can believe, this story of terror and sanctity is hideously credible. Like the writings of Leon Bloy and Georges Bernanos, it is the product of authors profoundly Catholic, deeply resentful of the principles upon which our materialistic and egalitarian society is founded. . . It is hard to see whom this novel can please other than the detached, cultivated agnostic for whom alone every aspect of the human soul, and every invention of the human imagination, is interesting. Catholics are likely to find it infuriating; Protestants, being concerned with conduct rather than the soul, will find it bewildering. Yet this is a convincing painting of the society to which pure materialism leads." Lewis Galantiere
Books p14 N 3 '40 550w

"The reader sensitive to shocks and horrors will hardly persevere to the end of the volume; but it has all been written with a purpose; for the author is attempting a picture of what the world will become if man, to the best of his ability, excludes God from human affairs and sets loose Anti-Christ."
Cath World 152:504 Ja '41 350w

Living Age 359:492 Ja '41 40w

"Conceding that it is all wild fantasy, the reader who knows something about present-day Russia yet gropes for some logical relation between the reality of 1940 and the projection to 1979. But there isn't any. The authors have isolated one element in the Soviet picture, and have, it seems to this reviewer, misunderstood even that. They have failed to grasp that though it talks the language of materialism, Bolshevik Russia has a mysticism of its own, already tending to congeal into a sort of revealed Leninist faith." Eugene Lyons
Sat R of Lit 23:19 Ja 4 '41 600w

KUHLMAN, AUGUSTUS FREDERICK, ed. See American library association. Committee on archives and libraries. Archives and libraries

KUMMER, FREDERIC ARNOLD (ARNOLD FREDERICKS, pseud). Courage over the Andes; il. by Armstrong Sperry. 251p $2 Winston

Poinsett, Joel Roberts—Fiction 40-32983

Adventure story, with a background of historical facts. It is the story of an American boy's experiences in South America during the War of 1812. He meets with Peruvian pirates, escapes, and travels three hundred miles thru Chile to reach the United States consul. For readers of high school age.

Booklist 37:221 Ja 15 '41

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 65:855 O 15 '40 10w

Reviewed by Marian Herr
Library J 65:1093 D 15 '40 110w

"All in all, Mr. Kummer's book is representative of adolescent adventure at its best—it is robust and vigorous, despite its adherence to accurate detail." F. G. Wells
+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 N 16 '40 200w

KUNHARDT, MRS DOROTHY. Pat the bunny. [18p] col il $1 Simon & Schuster 40-33936

"A book for the very littlest children. . . When Paul and Judy pat their bunny, on the opposite page is a nice white bunny with real wool for little readers to pat. There's a doll picture with a real squeak in it. And when Judy looks in the mirror, believe it or not, there's a mirror on the next page! . . All pictures are colored." Springf'd Republican

"It is a little darling, this pink book for a pre-reader, the find of the season." M. L. Becker
+ Books p11 N 10 '40 80w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:842 D 16 '40 30w

"Unabashedly neither literary nor artistic in the strict sense this volume, just the right size to fit into very small hands, is one of the most direct means imaginable for making the non-reading age book-conscious." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p11 D 22 '40 200w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 90w

KUNKEL, FRITZ, and DICKERSON, ROY ERNEST. How character develops; a psychological interpretation. 274p $2.50 Scribner

137 Personality. Character. Psychology, Applied 40-27399

"A simplified explanation of the psychological system founded by Dr. Künkel and known as the 'We-psychology.' The child's personality is interpreted in terms of his egocentric qualities which have to be broken before he can attain maturity. Egocentric child types are classed as the clinging vine, the star, the Nero, the shell, and others, all of whom must reconstruct their attitudes before reaching objective 'we' relationships. Sometimes involved reading." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 36:337 My 1 '40

"If the case-study illustrations seem somewhat superficial and if such symbols as the black and white giants and dwarfs seem a bit forced, it must be admitted that the total effect of the book is clarity, simplicity and hope." M. H. Bro
+ — Christian Century 57:608 My 8 '40 750w
Churchman 154:38 My 15 '40 120w

"Upon the whole this is a useful book; but it suffers, as do the writings of many of the Europeans of the various 'analytical' schools of psychology, by an effort to find a single key to the human problem and by a special terminology which is used to express its distinctiveness. Further, the authors attempt, as do some of the other Europeans, to make a classification of individuals into types. This is of doubtful usefulness. . . This book should be used for what it is—one useful approach to the problem of character development and one significant contribution to understanding individuals and helping them to find their way positively and triumphantly." H. S. Elliott
+ — J Religion 21:106 Ja '41 430w
Springf'd Republican p10 S 12 '40 490w

KURTZ, ALBERT KENNETH, and EDGERTON, HAROLD ASAHEL. Statistical dictionary of terms and symbols. 191p $2 Wiley [12s Chapman]

310.3 Statistics—Dictionaries 39-22451

"Approximately 2,000 items are defined in the Dictionary. The definitions are brief but complete; their accuracy and their general acceptability are attested by the fact that an advisory committee of 30 prominent statisticians reviewed the book before publication." Harvard Business R

"The reviewer in testing for completeness discovered nothing of consequence missing, and many uncommon terms were noted. The definitions are usually sharp, clear, and satisfying."
+ Am Soc R 5:467 Je '40 110w

Reviewed by C. A. Bliss
Harvard Business R 18:518 summer '40 120w

"This volume seems to have been very carefully prepared, and it was checked by an advisory council of outstanding scientists representing most of the fields of application. And yet the reviewer anticipates that there will be reluctance on the part of many to give up pet usages for those now labeled 'preferred.' . . One wishes that the authors had stated more explicitly the criteria by which they determined their preferences, since this might give more weight to the recommended terms and result in a more uniform adoption of them." M. J. Hagood
+ — Social Forces 18:288 D '39 250w

KVITKA, GRIGORII FEDEROVICH. Marusia; tr. by Florence Randal Livesay [and Paul Crath] from the Ukrainian; introd. by Lord Tweedsmuir. 219p $2 Dutton 40-27274

Translation of a Ukrainian peasant classic. The theme is young love brought to a tragic ending by the death of the bride-to-be.

Booklist 36:306 Ap 1 '40

" 'Marusia' is another primitive version of the old legend of Death and the Maiden. It captures all the poignancy of such a tale, embellished with sharp and telling detail proper to the particular Ukrainian setting. Were it not for this addition of realism and truthfulness, the story would seem needlessly cruel and the values by which these characters live would seem unnecessarily harsh and barren. As retold here in translation, it has the brilliance and sadness of a fine and simple song." Iris Barry
+ Books p4 F 18 '40 450w

" 'Marusya' scarcely falls within the category of fiction, as we understand the word today. It is indeed a sort of ballad in prose, primitive in theme and romantic in mood, very much in the Ukrainian tradition in spirit and style. There is something almost medieval in the love story of Marusya and Vasyl; it is one of the endless variations of love unto death. . . It is clear that style should matter here. The translation, however, is not uniformly successful. There are too many rough edges which might have been put right with a little intelligent editing." John Cournos
+ — N Y Times p2 F 18 '40 600w
New Yorker 16:82 F 17 '40 20w

"The delightful language and the quaint customs of these people, like the duties of the matchmakers, the wedding ceremonies of the villagers, the church and home life, blend into the story to enhance its interest and show the author's love for and knowledge of his subject."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 7 '40 180w

KYNE, PETER BERNARD. Dude woman. 280p $2 Kinsey 40-4887

Western story.

Booklist 36:384 Je 1 '40

"This is a rousing tale, with hearty people in constant action, elegant scenery and lots of amusement, expertly built." Will Cuppy
+ Books p20 Mr 17 '40 90w

"The story is entertaining, and some of the characters are as salty as Mr. Kyne's old Cappy Ricks and his friends." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 3 '40 190w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 31 '40 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Ag 17 '40 60w

L

LA FARGE, CHRISTOPHER. Poems and portraits. 63p $1.25 Coward-McCann 811 40-33319

"Mr. LaFarge's 'Poems and Portraits' are mostly made up of personal and pastoral loves. His private emotions, though they have had to be recollected in a time without tranquillity, seem to have been tranquil enough. His stream, strictly contained, has known only 'petty torrents.' It is as an American that he is troubled; it is the rivers of America, no longer at flood, whose subsiding most disturbs him. . . He is aware of his country, of its past and its present, and aware, too, that in its future lies his fortune. He is indeed so thoroughly an American that he feels no need to be 'tempestuous in his statement of it.'" Nation

Atlantic D '40 130w

Booklist 37:134 D 1 '40

"To readers who enjoyed Christopher La Farge's long novel in verse, 'Each to the Other,' the present collection of his lyrics may appeal. The verse novel, however, held its audience chiefly because of the story it told. Here, apart from a few facile nature poems that are conventionally pleasant writing, there is little that adds anything to the considerable body of excellent nature and human portraiture to be found in good contemporary poetry. . . The book as a whole represents the work of a sincere appreciator, not a creator, of poetry."
+ — Books p17 N 3 '40 120w

Reviewed by John Holmes
Boston Transcript p9 N 4 '40 110w

"It seems to me that the present book of 27 poems contains some of the most beautiful and moving pieces that Mr. La Farge has published. It is an uneven book, especially as to style. As to that, it should please all readers for Mr. La Farge starts in a semi-classical vein, goes on with a group of poems somewhat in the manner of MacLeish and Fearing, and closes with a group which embraces free and fixed forms. But after such program pieces as 'Honeysuckle' and 'Morning and Evening' are disposed of there is little to find fault with and much to praise." John Ritchey
+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 S 28 '40 440w

Reviewed by J. P. Bishop
Nation 151:340 O 12 '40 240w

"Apparently the volume was pushed into print by the publishers, to follow up a very salable verse-novel of a few years ago. But Mr. La Farge would have been wiser to save these exercises and work them into the texture of his next verse-novel. For though they serve to keep his talent flexible, they cannot stand without a narrative interest. They are clear, pictorial, varied in rhyme and meter, clever in epithet, versatile in their imitativeness—but no more than that." Elizabeth Atkins
+ — Poetry 57:273 Ja '41 230w

LA FARGE, OLIVER. As long as the grass shall grow; photographs by Helen M. Post. (Face of America) 144p $2.50 Alliance bk.
970.1 Indians of North America. Indians of North America—Pictures, illustrations, etc. (W) 40-27492

Discussion of the present-day situation of the Indians of the United States under the administration of the Department of the interior's office of Indian affairs. The book is copiously illustrated with photographs, showing phases of Indian life. The author is president of the American association of Indian affairs.

Atlantic Jl '40 160w

Booklist 36:380 Je 1 '40

"For those who already know and love Indians the book will be heart-warming and provocative as a trip to the Indian country. For those who do not it will serve as an eye opener to the reality of the red man's life and his mores in the year 1940. The picture drawn by the two able collaborators is, of course, incomplete, partial and highly selective, for a book of 140 pages cannot cover more than a fraction of the still living tribes and their histories, either in words or in documentary photographs. But it is an intelligent and fair selection as well as an imaginative one." E. S. Sergeant
+ Books p6 My 12 '40 1000w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 My 3 '40 1050w

"Twenty years ago this book would have disappeared unnoticed into dusty files. Today it is a moving document of a great national problem, a definite contribution to the literature of an awakening social conscience." H. B. Kane
+ Boston Transcript p1 My 25 '40 420w

Nation 150:786 Je 29 '40 50w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p1 My 5 '40 1250w

New Yorker 16:91 Ap 27 '40 50w

"Indians are traditionally picturesque, and feathered headdresses are handsome material for photographs, but fortunately all the best pictures in the book are not those depending on these decorative accessories. It will be interesting to see what Miss Post does when she leads her camera away from Indians and into other worlds. After such a successful collaboration of writer and photographer it is regrettable that the captions are less so." Margaret Bourke-White and Erskine Caldwell
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:11 My 11 '40 850w

Reviewed by A. W. Hoopes
Social Studies 31:374 D '40 420w

Time 35:96 My 20 '40 390w

Wis Lib Bul 36:111 Je '40

LA FONTAINE, JEAN DE. Fables; tr. by Margaret Wise Brown; il. by André Hellé. 40p $1.50 Harper
398 Fables 40-32641

Seventeen of the fables translated into simple prose and illustrated in gay colors by a French artist.

Booklist 37:94 N 1 '40

"The brilliant colors of these large pictures catch the eye of a little child, even too little to read; and when he listens to an older person reading in this book, he is, without knowing it, making one of the major literary discoveries of childhood." M. L. Becker
+ Books p10 O 27 '40 160w

LA FONTAINE, J. DE—Continued
"The book will delight children because of its simple prose and appealing pictures, whose figures and scenes suggest a child's own animal toys and blocks." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 11 '40 150w

"These illustrations have long been familiar to French readers. It is a distinct service to make them available to a wider circle of children." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:435 N '40 30w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin
Library J 65:926 N 1 '40 80w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:844 D 16 '40 20w

LAMB, HAROLD. The march of the barbarians. 389p maps $3.75 Doubleday

950 Mongols—History (W) 40-7966

History of the Mongol tribes of Central Asia from the days of Genghis-Khan, thru the thirteenth century depredations of his sons and grandsons, who ruined the civilization of a great part of the then civilized world. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:382 Je 1 '40

" 'The March of the Barbarians' achieves in the end a rare combination of first-rate scholarship with the art of blowing the breath of life into the inert and dusty accounts of half-forgotten pages. Where the original has a color and vitality of its own . . . the author has not hesitated to introduce them verbatim." Milton Rugoff
+ Books p3 Ap 28 '40 1100w

"Mr. Lamb makes the most of the melodrama, studding his story with bizarre bits from Marco Polo, Friar John Carpini and William of Rubruk's narratives and the Persian chronicles. Despite a somewhat pretentious bibliographical afterword, he writes for laymen, and sometimes as a layman. His account gives little evidence of familiarity with the geography of central Asia or with the resources of modern Chinese scholarship." Lewis Gannett
+ — Boston Transcript p11 Ap 25 '40 700w

" 'The March of the Barbarians' is, to my mind, Lamb's greatest work. There are a vigor and range of language, a breadth of vision, an epochal sweep that are too seldom found in histories. I defy any reader to come away from the book without a feeling of awe at the vastness of Mongol operations, and without a deep admiration and respect for the author's erudition and literary ability." P. J. Searles
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '40 850w

"Greater care, greater caution in the use of the devices of popularization, would make for firmer history, and at the same time, given the gain in clarity, for swifter readability as well." Isidor Schneider
New Repub 102:768 Je 3 '40 600w

"A series of ejaculations in jargon detract from the first few pages of Mr. Lamb's new book. After twenty pages, however, the grammar, phraseology and diction improve considerably; but the semi-poetic, prophetic, biblical style goes on, at times a bit monotonously. . . But he has a good sense of humor upon occasion. . . It would be unfair to subject a work such as this to historical criticism, for it is obviously intended to be a tale that will do for the northern Asiatics what the sagas did for the northern Europeans. . . 'The March of the Barbarians' is not only the most ambitious of Mr. Lamb's many projects, but also the most scholarly, in spite of which it may have a goodly quota of readers." Lloyd Eshleman
+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 28 '40 1150w

"In the course of more than twenty years' work on the Asiatic nomads, Mr. Lamb has learned almost everything a historian needs to know except how to sound impressive. At first glance one would say that anything that reads so easily must have been easy to write. This vivid, slap-dash narrative, as streamlined as a special correspondent's report in yesterday's newspaper, seems merely to skim at top speed over the colorful surface of the centuries. . . If you want scholarship, there's an excellent and discriminating critical bibliography at the back of the book. But even without it, this short, popularly written, apparently negligent volume is the most accurate and intelligent account of the Mongols available in English." Garrett Mattingly
+ Sat R of Lit 22:5 My 4 '40 850w

" 'The March of the Barbarians' gives a wide circle of readers an interesting and a vivid description of the Mongol invasions, sudden and cruel, ruthless and irresistible, in their onslaught. The author keeps close to his sources, which he knows well and uses with skill; there is no irrelevant or invented detail." N. Toll
+ Yale R n s 30:199 autumn '40 1100w

LAMBERT, MRS CLARA (BREAKEY). The story of Alaska; with pictures by C. H. De Witt. [38p] $1 Harper

917.98 Alaska—Juvenile literature (W) 40-27787

Pictures and text combine to show for young readers the life and resources of Alaska.

Booklist 37:140 D 1 '40

"A factual book which will be welcomed by schools for the younger children." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:435 N '40 30w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:846 O 15 '40 30w

"It is interestingly written in language that a child of eight can understand and has an age interest up to twelve. While this book should be supplemented by one giving the story in more detail, it is splendid as an introduction to Alaska." D. L. Wood
+ Library J 65:983 N 15 '40 110w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Nation 151:455 N 9 '40 20w

New Yorker 16:126 D 7 '40 60w

"Excellent." Raymond Holden
+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 N 16 '40 30w

Wis Lib Bul 36:168 D '40

LAMBERT, REITA (MRS A. F. NEVIN). Hometown angel. 272p $2 Macrae Smith co. 40-4501

Story of the gullible small-town girl who comes to New York innocently bringing a cargo of homemade jelly. She and her small inheritance are immediately engulfed by a childhood friend, a budding young actress. But the ending is happy for all concerned.

"A Broadway fable in the lightweight division." Lisle Bell
Books p16 F 11 '40 70w

Reviewed by M. P. Johnson
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '40 70w

N Y Times p23 F 11 '40 180w

Wis Lib Bul 36:100 My '40

LAMPING, SEVERIN, and LAMPING, STEPHEN, eds. and trs. Through hundred gates, by noted converts from twenty-two lands. (Religion and culture ser) 308p il $2.50 Bruce pub.

922.2 Roman Catholic church—Converts 40-2061

"Forty-one important stories of conversions, contributed from all parts of the earth, are offered in this volume. . . They have been written by men and women who in some way or other have held a place of distinction in the public eye: authors, thinkers, diplomats, teachers, professional workers in various fields, artists, poets, and representatives, too, of the world of sports. Many of the writers are internationally known and their names significant to millions of people. Racially, we are here admitted into the intimacy of a Pentecostal group, reflecting in a striking way the universality of the Catholic Church." (Pref) Contains one short chapter of bibliographical data.

"The itineraries are naturally diversified. They are all interesting and instructive. One wishes though that the Fathers Severin and Stephen Lamping in this admirable work had not condensed the narratives to an average of six pages." D. M. O'Connell

+ — America 62:528 F 18 '40 100w

Cath World 151:377 Je '40 260w

"It is rare and spectacular that the priestly twins, Severin and Stephen Lamping, should also be brothers in the religious order of Friars Minor. It is spectacular and commendable that forty-one autobiographical sketches of converts should have been compressed into one volume. The biographies themselves are anything but spectacular. There is a fine introductory exposition by the compilers, on the doctrine of the soul of the Church. Then, with admirable restraint, with frankness and charm, the converts tell their short but wondrous stories of Divine Grace and human generosity." Johanna Doniat

+ Commonweal 31:419 Mr 1 '40 240w

LAMPREY, LOUISE. The story of cookery; il. by Arthur Townsend Lougee. 262p $2 Stokes

641.509 Cookery—History (W) 40-27648

Traces the evolution of the art of cooking from primitive to modern times. There are chapters on: The first cooks; Feast days; The medieval kitchen; The castle hall; Queer things to eat; Taverns; Wilderness cookery; The herbalist; Famous cooks; The literature of cookery; Great-grandmother's cook-books. For junior and senior high schools or adults. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:40 O 1 '40

"The book is filled with fascinating bits of information on the origin of terms and customs, and here and there are recipes from the far corners of the earth. It will answer many questions of school children. Easy enough for an eleven year old, it will be useful through the high school years." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 65:714 S 1 '40 150w

"Many aspects of an art too often underrated are presented in this useful book, which brings that overworked term of romance to a subject which really deserves it." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 N 24 '40 280w

LAMSON, DAVID ALBERT. Once in my saddle. 289p $2.50 Scribner

40-32083

Fourteen short stories, the first ten of which are all closely related. They are based on the author's own boyhood memories of Canada, and deal with an American-born farm family living on a ranch in northern Alberta. Of the four remaining stories, one dates back to the Civil war; another features the underground railroad; the third has the same background as The Grapes of Wrath; and the last strikes out against the Nazi system.

Reviewed by George Conrad
Books p12 S 29 '40 370w

New Repub 103:702 N 18 '40 80w

" 'Once in My Saddle' is completely different from anything that [the author] has written previously. In particular, there was no hint in his two earlier books of the warm, homely, very spontaneous humor which distinguishes the majority of Mr. Lamson's tales. . . [It] is a good, vigorous, colorful book, frankly popular but very appealing. It seems likely that Mr. Lamson has more such books in the offing." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 S 29 '40 600w

LANCASHIRE lad; the misadventures of Albert, Wallace the lion, Herbert the 'oly terror, and others, as narrated by Pat O'Malley and il. by George Price. 39p $1.50 Howell, Soskin

817 40-9560

"Humorous poems conveying an original brand of nonsense and acquainting Americans with Lancashire dialect have been recited on a radio program by Pat O'Malley. . . The poems to which Mr O'Malley gives the full flavor of dialect and an appropriate narrative zest are the work of several authors. A selection of these nonsense creations is [here] published." Springf'd Republican

"Those followers of the Alec Templeton radio program who have listened with delight to Pat O'Malley's droll ballads in Lancashire dialect, will want to own this attractively printed selection of the ballads. It includes some of the choicer exploits of 'Erbert Pinwinkle, that 'orrendous offspring who makes Baby Snooks seem in comparison an Elsie Dinsmore. . . Adding to the attractiveness of the book are the illustrations by George Price, whose fantastic drawings are well known to readers of the 'New Yorker.' "

+ Books p19 N 3 '40 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '40 390w

LANCASTER, BRUCE. For us, the living. 556p $2.75 Stokes

Lincoln, Abraham—Fiction (W) 40-33786

Long novel of pioneer days in Indiana and Kentucky. The story belongs partly to Hugh Brace, the worthwhile son of a worthless settler, and partly to the young Abe Lincoln. This story closes where Sherwood Anderson's play, Abe Lincoln in Illinois, begins.

Booklist 37:155 D 15 '40

"The background has reality and Hugh himself is more of a character than most leading juveniles. But the book does get pulled two ways and the bigger snake swallows the less. Even when you are most interested in Hugh Brace, you know that Lincoln is just around the corner. And, with all Mr. Lancaster's skill at background and gift for vivid detail, the story ends up by being Lincoln's and Hugh as the admiring friend, looking on. In spite of which, the book will be read, and deserves to be. It lacks the drive and unity of 'Guns of Burgoyne,' but it is solid work and this seems to be a Lincoln year." S. V. Benét

+ — Books p2 N 3 '40 550w

"It is refreshing to find faith in mankind expressed so simply. The pioneer has suffered from exaggerated treatment by American writers. . . Lancaster has taken care to show that men come from many molds. . . The whole book is worked with homely threads, brightening an already vivid pattern: there are scattered snatches of forgotten songs, local superstition and folk-lore, recipes and tall stories. The reader drops in constantly for an appetizing 'dish of conversation.' The entire approach is amazingly refreshing; reading 'For Us the Living' is an adventure in America." J. E. Tobin

+ Commonweal 33:154 N 29 '40 750w

Reviewed by R. D. Minnich
Library J 65:923 N 1 '40 170w

Nation 151:485 N 16 '40 40w

"It is no exaggeration to say that 'For Us the Living,' as a simple human document, rings truer than anything which has yet been written in fictional or dramatic form about Abraham Lincoln." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p5 N 3 '40 950w

New Yorker 16:93 N 23 '40 120w

"Historically, we know very little of the early adolescence of Lincoln. Mr. Lancaster can give his imagination full play in building on the slender stock of proved facts, and he does so. The result is a picture of frontier life which, though not without inaccuracies and omissions, is clear, well-colored, and convincing; and a portrait of the gangling, groping young rail-splitter, surveyor, and Indian-fighter which has vitality and strength." Allan Nevins

LANCASTER, BRUCE—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 N 2 '40 950w

" 'For Us the Living' is a fine study of the growth of an individual, but it is even more successful in its portrayal of the growth of a frontier and of a people. Mr Lancaster has got under the skin of these people and he makes the reader one of them. The dialog and descriptive detail are remarkable."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 10 '40 470w
Wis Lib Bul 36:168 D '40

LANDGREN, MARCHAL E. Years of art; the story of the Art students league of New York; introd. by Walter Pach. 267p il $4.50 McBride

707 Art students league of New York. Paintings, American. Sculpture 41-815

Sketches the history of the Art Students League of New York City, the first independent art school in America, founded sixty-five years ago, and brings together some of the most notable works of many of its members. Index.

Reviewed by L. B. Bloch
Living Age 359:591 F '41 450w

"Landgren carefully documented his book, and in his account of one of the nation's oldest and most noted art schools he has caught the flavor of the decades through which the league has existed. New York of sixty-five years ago becomes a real thing, and the league, in moving from lower Fifth Avenue to Fifty-seventh Street, has been part of the growth and the movement of the city itself. And, as the book effectively demonstrates, it has been a significant force in making New York the cultural center it now is." Frank Caspers
+ N Y Times p4 D 15 '40 320w

"In the limited space of a small book of which more than half the pages are devoted to illustration, only a brief and factual record is possible. This is fully given, and it is useful for reference. The flavor of this eminently liberal enterprise has in the main to be read between the lines and divined from the illustrations." F. J. M. jr.
Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 18 '41 270w

LANDIS, PAUL HENRY. Rural life in process. 599p il maps $3.75 McGraw

323.354 Sociology, Rural. U.S.—Social conditions 40-31406

"Emphasizing the effect of contemporary social forces on personality, institutions and problems of rural society in the United States, this text integrates and interprets rural life from a functional point of view, presenting it throughout in a cultural perspective." (School & Society) Author and subject indexes.

Booklist 37:84 N 1 '40
School & Society 52:208 S 14 '40 40w

"A book to arouse the interest of the student and to incite him to thought about the problems involved. Dr. Landis, has produced a clear and interesting picture of contemporary rural society and the social problems which it faces." Dwight Sanderson
+ Survey 76:341 N '40 210w

LANDIS, PAUL HENRY. Social control; social organization and disorganization in process. 507p $3.50 Lippincott

301 Sociology 39-7919

"Dr. Landis' book is an elementary text which deals primarily with the agencies of social conformity. . . Social control is conceived as occurring both through associations definitely organized for regulatory purposes and through diffuse sociocultural forces. The elaboration of this point of view runs through brief summaries of the workings of various social institutions and more diffuse regulatory patterns." Am J Soc

"Landis' book can be readily adapted for use in courses introductory to sociology as well as for courses in social control. It should prove to be a stimulating and teachable text." R. K. Merton
+ — Am J Soc 45:936 My '40 440w

"The Landis book is disappointing. . . It is difficult to say just what is wrong with the book. It is well documented (almost five hundred names are cited) and is very well written—simple, clear, and interesting. I would take few exceptions to anything he says, but it does not seem to get anywhere. Perhaps the concept of social control itself is the explanation of Landis' failure." Read Bain
— + Am Soc R 4:733 O '39 470w

"The book is written with one eye on the interest of the reader and the other on the clarity of its organization. On the debit side, the question may be raised if the book does not take in a bit too much territory. Possibly it may be criticized for not being specific enough, but there must be general agreement upon its value as an introductory treatment of a highly important field of sociological study." J. H. S. Bossard
— + Social Forces 18:443 Mr '40 440w

LANDON, KENNETH PERRY. Siam in transition; a brief survey of cultural trends in the five years since the revolution of 1932. 328p map $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [10s 6d Oxford]

959.3 Siam

"The book discusses political trends since the revolution of 1932, discusses causes of the revolt, describes the leaders and sets forth the results; the economic trends are completely reported besides the ethnic, educational, medical, artistic and religious fields. One of the most interesting chapters is that dealing with the character of the Siamese themselves, with a full discussion of crime, woman's place in society and family life as a whole." (Living Age) Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 57:453 Ap 3 '40 70w
Foreign Affairs 19:264 O '40 10w

"To those of whom Siam—now officially known as Thailand—is some vague and distant Land of the White Elephant, this volume is a revelation; students of Oriental affairs will find it invaluable."
+ Living Age 358:589 Ag '40 290w

"Landon's work is a definite contribution to our knowledge of the new Asia which is emerging as the mailed fist of the European empires seems to be giving away in the face of Asia's home-made conceptions of power politics." C. C. Zimmerman
+ Pacific Affairs 13:372 S '40 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p474 S 14 '40 360w

LANG, HARRY. 62: biography of a union [introd. by David Dubinsky]. 222p $3 Undergarment & negligee workers' union, 873 Broadway, N.Y.

331.881872 International ladies' garment workers' union. Local 62. Clothing trade 40-7865

"A historical record of Local 62 of David Dubinsky's famous Ladies' Garment Workers, the largest all-woman local in the world." (Commonweal) "The story of a union is necessarily a story of its leaders, as the author suggests. In this case the story at times centers around Samuel Shore, the builder of local 62. Shore wasn't the founder of this unit, but was called to its assistance in its early days when its opponents threatened to engulf it." (Springf'd Republican)

"'62' is both good labor history and good reading." J. C. Cort
+ Commonweal 31:479 Mr 22 '40 390w

"A spirited and unusual presentation of the annals of a labor union."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 N 1 '40 550w

LANGE, DOROTHEA (MRS P. S. TAYLOR), and TAYLOR, PAUL SCHUSTER. An American exodus; a record of human erosion. 158p il map $2.75 Reynal

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. Agriculture—U.S. Agricultural labor (W) 40-27041

Photographs and brief pertinent text showing conditions in the deep South, the Dust Bowl and California in the late 1930s. "All photographs, with the few exceptions indicated, were taken by Dorothea Lange. Responsibility for the text rests with Paul Taylor. Beyond that [the] work is a product of cooperation in every aspect from the form of the whole to the least detail of arrangement or phrase." (Foreword)

Reviewed by W. S. Hopkins
Am Econ R 30:384 Je '40 1000w
Booklist 36:213 F 1 '40

Reviewed by R. F. Crandell
Books p5 Ja 21 '40 550w

Reviewed by Daniel Aaron
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 420w

"A book of magnificent and heart-rending pictures and brief but poignant text. It might be a set of illustrations for The Grapes of Wrath, or for the whole social and economic complex from which the author of that terrible and true novel selects a single family as his principal theme."
+ Christian Century 57:114 Ja 24 '40 240w

"Both the text and the many photographs of An American Exodus' are excellent; together they provide a vivid story in brief space of the nature and extent of the disaster, and of the measures, so far very inadequate, with which it has been met." Margaret Marshall
+ Nation 150:77 Ja 20 '40 500w

"The combination of talents that has produced 'An American Exodus' could scarcely have been improved upon. Paul Taylor, who for years has been the outstanding authority on agricultural labor in California, has supplied a running commentary that is wholly characteristic of the man: quiet, scholarly, dispassionate, unassailably accurate. The photographs by Dorothea Lange are beyond praise; indeed they are so good that the text is really not essential." Carey McWilliams
+ New Repub 102:218 F 12 '40 1550w

"Whether or not you have read 'The Grapes of Wrath' you will find it hard to forget this material of 'human erosion.'"
+ N Y Times p4 D 24 '39 240w
New Yorker 15:63 Ja 6 '40 50w

Reviewed by M. J. Hagood
Social Forces 18:598 My '40 370w
Springf'd Republican p6 F 12 '40 330w
Time 35:79 F 12 '40 100w
Wis Lib Bul 36:25 F '40

LANGER, WILLIAM LEONARD, ed. See Encyclopaedia of world history

LANGHAM, JAMES R. Sing a song of homicide. 307p $2 Simon & Schuster

40-33106

Detective story.

"When a mystery makes you forget your troubles, we figure it's a good one, and such a tome, it struck us, is 'Sing a Song of Homicide.' The mood is merry, with just enough bodies to add a grim note—not that the author regards murder as a serious matter." Will Cuppy
+ Books p18 O 20 '40 140w

"Mr. Langham, who has the rare gift of employing humor without overdoing it, has given us a story that is a puzzler from start to finish and a detective who is hard-boiled without being offensive." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p33 O 20 '40 170w

"Good enough reading for a gray day."
New Yorker 16:112 O 19 '40 50w

"Especially good."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 N 2 '40 40w

LANSDALE, ROBERT TUCKER, and others. The administration of old age assistance. 345p $3.75 Public administration

331.25443 Old age pensions 39-16381

This volume is the product of one of a series of studies initiated by the Committee on Public Administration in 1936, dealing with the administration of the emerging social security program. "In this study an attempt has been made to discover the best practice achieved to date in the administration of old age assistance and to describe and analyze this experience for the benefit of those who are responsible for planning or administering state and local programs. . . At the outset of this inquiry it was decided that it was better to study a small number of states intensively than to try to cover a large number more superficially. Twelve states were chosen: California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Massachusetts, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, Washington, and Wisconsin." (Authors' pref) Index.

"Those responsible for the planning and administering of state and local programs will find this a useful source of information." I. V. Hiscock
+ Am J Pub Health 30:292 Mr '40 170w

Reviewed by C. M. Rosenquist
Am J Soc 46:629 Ja '41 90w

"The book is not a manual for old age assistance administrators, but a survey of the diverse practices followed in twelve states in different sections of the country. The states included were selected mainly because they were thought to be most likely to have developed practices worthy of emulation, and the data presented were gathered through extensive field visits. Many of the practices described are criticized freely, and there is no hesitancy in making recommendations. But the book is never dogmatic, and even critical judgments are expressed temperately." E. E. Witte
+ Am Pol Sci R 33:1087 D '39 650w

"Gradually the literature of public welfare grows—and improves. Here is a book that should be on the shelf of every serious student of the subject. Indeed it is, to this reviewer, the most illuminating study of recent American administrative practice yet to appear in book form." H. M. Cassidy
+ Survey 76:340 N '40 460w

LANSING, MARION FLORENCE. Liberators and heroes of South America; il. by Paul Quinn. 320p map $2.75 Page

920.08 South America—Biography. Statesmen, South American (W) 40-34398

In this book of biographical sketches "the method has been to treat each hero separately in order to make the individuals stand out clearly, but to fit all together so that a continued account emerges." (Pref) Contents: Before the liberators; Miranda, forerunner of independence; San Martín, savior of the South; Four heroes of the South: Moreno, Artigas of Uruguay, General Belgrano of Argentina, Bernardo O'Higgins of Chile; Bolívar, the great liberator; Two northern patriots: General Sucre, Santander of Colombia; National heroes of Brazil: Tiradentes, José Bonifacio, Dom Pedro I, Dom Pedro II; Two nation builders: Unánue of Peru, Sarmiento, schoolmaster president of Argentina. Index.

Booklist 37:243 F 1 '41

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 30 '41 80w

LANSING, M. F.—Continued

"Some of the subsequent history is included, as is introductory material on the Incas. Emphasis is on the historical events, although personal details are given and there is some discriminating evaluation of the men. Much of the material is not readily available elsewhere in such detail." Alice Monroe

+ Library J 66:34 Ja 1 '41 120w

"Written primarily for high school age, it is a book of substance and style which will doubtless interest older readers as well, for the story of South American freedom is one to interest citizens of all ages of this American country, for it has its roots deep in our own revolution." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 8 '40 360w

LARKIN, JOHN DAY. Trade agreements; a study in democratic methods. 135p $1 Columbia univ. press [5s Oxford]

337 U.S.—Commercial policy. Tariff—U.S. 40-8373

"This is the first of a series of small volumes on the international economic relations of the United States to be issued under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Division of Economics and History. . . This first volume bears on a major issue in American economic foreign policy at the present time. It discusses the procedural side of the reciprocal trade agreements policy. Much of the argument over the renewal or nonrenewal of the Trade Agreements Act takes the form of questioning as to whether this particular method of dealing with foreign trade relations and adjusting tariff rates is suitable for our form of government. . . These questions were put to Dr. John D. Larkin, and in this little volume he gives his answers to them." (Foreword) Index.

"The book was prepared and published during the controversy over the second three-year extension of the trade agreements act, but it has a continuing interest and value because of this program in the present political campaign and still more, because of its possibilities as a contribution to the ultimate adjustment of international relations." P. S. Peirce

+ Am Econ R 30:616 S '40 270w

"The book is written in the popular style of the propagandist. Fortunately, since accuracy has not been sacrificed, the majority of thoughtful students of international economic relations will welcome this type of propaganda." Carl Kreider

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:826 Ag '40 210w

LARRIMORE, LIDA, pseud. See Turner, L. L.

LARSSEN, PEDAR. Landlubber; il. by Worden Wood. 151p $1.75 Macmillan

40-33281

A present-day whaling ship is the scene of this story. The captain's grandson stows away on the ship and finds himself in difficulties with the Norwegian crew. Older boys.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 D 22 '40 240w

"The book's chief value lies in its picture of modern whaling methods. The plot is the same old one about stowaways, with the sailors' superstitions about the jinx that has come aboard. . . The story seems to me difficult to follow at times, partly because of the dialect used by the Norwegian seamen, and partly because the style is not always clear. Not recommended." Marian Herr

— Library J 65:1045 D 1 '40 100w

Reviewed by Miriam Snow

Library J 65:1045 D 1 '40 100w

"Ship relationships are accurately pictured with no place for rosy romance. Good stuff." Robert Van Gelder

+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 N 16 '40 40w

"This story of modern whaling has the thrills of bygone days."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 240w

LARSSON, RAYMOND ELLSWORTH. Weep and prepare. 168p $2.50 Coward-McCann

811 40-32256

Collection of poems by an American poet, selected from his work during the years 1926 to 1939. His method of writing derives from Ezra Pound, and his content has a definite Catholic mystic tendency.

"Nature to Mr. Larsson is largely a matter of sound effects; but it is something of an abuse to crowd them all into one season. The book's concluding 'Good Friday Music' is Larsson at his best. Here is singular beauty in composition sustained by exalted religious mysticism. It is perhaps the finest poem with a religious theme written in our time (superior to the cold intellectual symbols of Eliot's 'The Rock')—an impassioned, highly dramatic work. . . With a musical score to do it justice, this choral might be an outstanding work adapted to radio, or presented in public concert. I hope that some day lovers of poetry and music may have the pleasure of hearing it." Ruth Lechlitner

+ — Books p27 O 27 '40 750w

" 'Weep and Prepare' is highly individual, extremely 'religious' and a good deal too fancy for the average taste either in poetry or devotion. By average, I mean a level of knowledge and religious faith to be found in people who will wish to have that level raised or at least maintained by the reading of contemporary poetry. Larsson is a poet who combines religion, surrealism, highly-colored imagery, free form, the utmost earnestness, and explanatory notes at the back of the book." John Holmes

Boston Transcript p11 O 7 '40 100w

"While admitting that my personal prepossessions are in favor of traditional verse patterns, I must add that I can at all events understand what is being sung, that I recognize the great technical skill displayed, and that, above all, I was time after time deeply stirred by the poet's austere passion. If this work had no other interest—and it has a great deal—it would at least show that it is perfectly possible to be thoroughly modernist in manner and thoroughly Catholic in thought and feeling." T. M.

+ Cath World 152:241 N '40 300w

"Larsson professes to have become a Catholic poet. It is a Catholicism for which he has suffered much and will suffer more. As a matter of fact these poems speak, to anybody who will take the trouble to understand them, of the bleeding feet and the stones of pilgrimage. The poet has a great affection for the stars and the sea, but it is the love of one who knows them as good things he will never know. Their rhythm is in his verse, but it has become the rhythm of renouncement. Go gently when you meet a poet like this. For he will be remembered." G. N. Shuster

+ Commonweal 33:35 O 25 '40 430w

"Raymond Larsson is one of the poets whose awareness of this state of things can be noted in all his work. His new book is a spiritual migration. . . His pilgrimage becomes more and more mystic and profoundly Catholic." Eugene Jolas

+ Living Age 359:194 O '40 360w

"The most that a profane critic can say of the experience recorded in these poems is that it is convincing. Larsson persuades us to believe in his belief. . . Larsson's virtues are the Christian ones, of which the first is humility. His will is simple and his heart contrite. He has not the vigor of the great religious poets, nor, though he knows the discovery of death in the seed, their overwhelming sense of mortality. He has a subtle sadness, which is moving, but might be more so if he had not so soon cast off the times in which we live for the timelessness of a saint's contemplation." J. P. Bishop

New Repub 103:563 O 21 '40 850w

"In spite of his fidelity to innovations in technique and ritual in religion, Mr. Larsson achieves styles rather than a style. His lines, even when they are most persuasive, somehow combine the acrid idiom of Pound, the suspended cadences of MacLeish, the dissonant juxtapositions of Eliot, and (occasionally) the tricky typography of Cummings. . . To separate Mr. Larsson's voices from the voices of his familiars is not easy, and when it emerges it is still—although this is the author's third volume—no more than 'promising.' What it promises is further technical experiment rather than a victorious struggle with material, a set of musical variations rather than intellectual convictions." Louis Untermeyer
Sat R of Lit 22:43 O 12 '40 400w

LA RUE, MRS MABEL SCUDDER (GUINNIP). Cats for the Tooseys; pictures by Kurt Wiese. 40p $1 Nelson

39-31686

"A lively time in the family of the Tooseys results when the seven little Tooseys, as well as many neighbors brought cats in response to Mrs. Toosey's suggestion that they were in need of some cats for the rats and mice. They are finally relieved of the over-abundance of cats by the miller who said he was greatly needing cats at his mill for the 'millions of mice.' . . For grades 1-3." Wis Lib Bul

---

"The Toosey family is . . . crazy and charming. I like them so much I would like this book even if it had no cats, which is far from the facts." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 Ja 28 '40 250w

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 20w

"Children enjoy a succession of cat catastrophes when they are not to be taken seriously and the tribulations of the Toosey family are very amusing to 7, 8 and 9 year olds. Unlike 'Buttons,' by Tom Robinson and Peggy Bacon, which is a true cat portrait drawn from life, 'Cats for the Tooseys' is a bit of hilarious nonsense. Kurt Wiese's lively pictures showing cats in action in every conceivable place and manner add to the fun of the book."
+ N Y Times p10 F 11 '40 360w

New Yorker 16:96 My 18 '40 20w

"Quite funny."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:34 D 2 '39 20w

Wis Lib Bul 36:32 F '40

LASKI, HAROLD JOSEPH. The American presidency, an interpretation. 278p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Allen, G]

353.03 Presidents (United States). U.S.—Politics and government (W) 40-14262

"A scholarly analysis and interpretation of the supreme political office in the United States by an Englishman privileged to observe its workings from near at hand and with the benefit of criticism of American friends. A penetrating study and a keen estimate of the Presidency, indicating the traditions, conventions, and laws in their relationship to the Cabinet and the Congress, and particularly to the people themselves. The author's liberal viewpoint gives emphasis to the handling of the office during present incumbency. In his opinion, eleven American presidents have been extraordinary men, and the record in the making of foreign policy is a remarkable one." Library J

"In spite of its incompleteness, The American Presidency is as thought-provoking an evaluation of American political practices as has been published in the United States in recent decades. Although more limited in scope, it takes its place along with the works of de Tocqueville and Bryce as an acute analysis of American political institutions." S. C. Wallace
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1197 D '40 1500w

"It is a pleasure to record that Harold Laski has written a well-rounded, penetrating, lucid exposition of the American presidency. It is stimulating, suggestive, corrective. . . This book is good reading for both expert and amateur. It should be absolutely required reading for those obviously uninformed persons whose primary conception of critical analysis of the President's office is to shout 'dictatorship.' " Harvey Pinney
+ Ann Am Acad 212:254 N '40 600w

Booklist 37:6 S '40

Bookmark 2:4 Ja '41

Reviewed by Walter Millis
Books p1 Ag 4 '40 1250w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 Ag 2 '40 650w

"This book is a stimulating, forceful and penetrating analysis of American institutions. The author show unusual sympathy with our governmental difficulties, and he is never dull. To any anti-socialist, also, he has been exasperatingly prophetic. Under the fire of his logic, even the bitterest enemy of planned economy would be forced to retreat on some fronts." G. G. Bacon
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 3 '40 900w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 57:1078 S 4 '40 900w

Reviewed by George Catlin
Columbia Law R 40:1288 N '40 2000w

Reviewed by J. J. O'Connor
Commonweal 32:333 Ag 9 '40 390w

Foreign Affairs 19:256 O '40 30w

"Altogether a fascinating presentation of the most important part of our political system, keenly evaluated and interesting new observations are advanced." R. B. Rankin
+ Library J 65:452 My 15 '40 170w

Living Age 359:91 S '40 110w

"As a piece of living political analysis Mr. Laski has done nothing better; he draws on his wide knowledge of American constitutional and legal history and close personal acquaintance with current politics, and his position as an English 'Radical' gives him an advantage, for he takes in his stride ideas that seem revolutionary to most minds trained in the conservative American tradition."
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 7 '40 350w

"Mr. Laski's interpretation of the Presidency is worthy of the importance of his subject." Lindsay Rogers
+ Nation 151:136 Ag 17 '40 1550w

Reviewed by Leonard Boudin
New Repub 103:193 Ag 5 '40 1300w

"It is one of the best books ever written about the institutions of another country by a foreign observer. It combines to a very unusual degree detached observations with inside knowledge. Mr. Laski's knowledge of the literature of American thought and institutions is profound. His grasp of the working of the Presidency is only possible to one who knows the inside of the White House and has been the close friend of several of the most famous members of the Supreme Court." Kingsley Martin
+ New Statesman & Nation 19:562 Ap 27 '40 650w

"The time is opportune for a study of the Presidency but whether Mr. Laski has made the most of the opportunity is another question. He is always challenging, and he has not failed in this respect in this volume. But he has rarely been vague, confusing and contradictory. His book is, candidly, somewhat of a chore to read. Doubtless many readers will find his last chapter, 'Concluding Observations,' considerable of a strain and some could vainly work from now until election day to translate its meaning into one-syllable thought. . . Resolved: That vice shall be abolished and that virtue shall prevail. It is hard to avoid the impression that Mr. Laski has been cutting

LASKI, H. J.—Continued
paper dolls for a government house of cards." S. T. Williamson
— + N Y Times p5 Ag 4 '40 1600w

"A lucid, reasonable, and humane study—a classic in a field which boasts few classics, and one of that line of extraordinary analyses of our political life (I think at once of Bryce, de Tocqueville, and André Siegfried) contributed by Europeans." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 16:54 Ag 3 '40 1500w

"Mr. Laski's book is within its limits admirable. It does not cover some aspects of Presidential leadership of the nation at large. It fails to treat adequately the large subject of war powers and their ultimate effects. It neglects the relation between the President and the courts. But the topics it does cover—party leadership, Cabinet, Congress, foreign affairs—are discussed with scholarship, insight, and expertness. Many stimulating ideas, some of them entirely novel, are struck off. Mr. Laski has never written a more readable book and his penetrating treatment of a complex subject will be read with pleasure by a large audience. And, since our unhappy outlook is for larger and more numerous crises, his prescription of a stronger Presidential leadership—a more continuous Presidential pioneering—is likely to remain sound for the indefinite future." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 22:5 Ag 3 '40 2250w

"The substance of this book was given as lectures in the University of Indiana, and if they have a few of the faults of reprinted lectures, they have many more of the merits of a living, individual appeal that comes from their original form. But that audience was an American audience; the many allusions and historical examples with which the argument is enriched were probably, in most cases, intelligible to the politically-minded Hoosiers. But they will not be equally intelligible to the British reader; and, it might be added, that a good many minor slips in dates and an occasionally excessive compression of style are blemishes, if only minor blemishes, while not all of Professor Laski's examples prove (in my opinion) what they purport to prove. But the main themes of this book, the central character of the Presidency, its unifying force in American institutional life, its deep psychological hold on the American people's imagination are brilliantly worked out." D. W. Brogan
+ — Spec 164:531 Ap 21 '40 900w

Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 11 '40 1050w

"Professor Laski has carried through his purpose with admirable knowledge and insight and with the incisive brilliance of expression for which he is so justly famous. Despite his long association and great familiarity with the United States and with American political life, Professor Laski is ever aware that he views with English eyes an office which is the particular product of American forces, shaped by American history and peculiarly responsive to American needs." J. P. Clark
+ Survey G 29:444 Ag '40 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p214 My 4 '40 600w

Wis Lib Bul 36:134 O '40

Reviewed by H. C. Mansfield
Yale Law J 50:534 Ja '41 220w

"This is an informed, thoughtful, and timely study of a unique office." F. W. Coker
+ Yale R n s 30:160 autumn '40 1250w

LASKI, HAROLD JOSEPH. Danger of being a gentleman, and other essays. 270p $2.75 Viking [7s 6d Allen, G]

320.4 Political science—Addresses, essays, lectures 40-27158

"The gentleman who gives his name to Mr. Laski's volume of essays is the generic English gentleman who has ruled the British Empire for a couple of centuries, by the author's estimate. . . The final chapter in the volume is Mr. Laski's glowing tribute to a great American gentleman, citizen and jurist, the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, written for his eighty-ninth birthday in 1930. In-between, the author gathered half a dozen papers ranging over a wide area of political science and politics, from the big question of nationalism and the future of civilization which troubles so many minds today, to the highly specialized problems of the committee system as it operates in English municipal government." N Y Times

---

"In spite of the great diversity of the fields covered on the relatively few and very handsomely printed pages, this book will be read with delight and profit by scholar and general reader alike." Hans Kohn
+ Ann Am Acad 210:180 Jl '40 600w

Booklist 36:261 Mr 1 '40

"Professor Laski's book, like any of his previous works, makes delightful reading and does not need the apology the author so courteously offers in the preface for having these disjointed essays printed in a volume. They are unified by the erudite and fascinating personality of Harold Laski himself." R. Vambery
+ Books p2 F 4 '40 500w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones
Boston Transcript p1 F 3 '40 1100w

Canadian Forum 20:94 Je '40 200w

Foreign Affairs 18:747 Jl '40 10w

"It is too bad that [the] one essay, The Danger of Being a Gentleman, should have been the first of a series, and the title-piece of an otherwise solid volume." L. B. Bloch
+ — Living Age 357:594 F '40 110w

Reviewed by J. A. Hobson
Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 5 '40 450w

"This collection of random essays offers an excellent introduction to the subject of Harold Laski. It is like his conversation in that it ranges adventurously in space, and scale. . . Taken by themselves, the essays in this ideal introduction to Laski aren't exactly world-shaking in their importance. . . Obviously, there is no way of reviewing the matter presented by such a diverse Laski in the little space at my disposal: one can't equate Justice Holmes with the Durham County Council for neat synoptic treatment. The student of Laski's manner, however, can note the sources of the man's strength and weakness as a philosopher using the King's English. Like all courteous men Laski gets away with murder." John Chamberlain
Nation 150:214 F 10 '40 500w

"The clarity and the fairness with which Professor Laski presents his arguments are a model of political writing; the intellectual honesty and lucidity with which he approaches his subjects are a model of political thinking." T. C. Worsley
+ New Statesman & Nation 19:114 Ja 27 '40 420w

"It goes without saying that even in his most technical moments Mr. Laski's brilliant style illuminates and animates the story." Simeon Strunsky
+ N Y Times p5 F 18 '40 700w

New Yorker 15:63 Ja 27 '40 30w

"This short collection of essays will not provide anything new for those who already know their Laski in his major works, such as the 'Grammar of Politics.' It is, however, a useful introduction to Mr. Laski in his complex activities. . . There is in this volume not much trace of the militant Marxist Laski. . . Perhaps Mr. Laski is in a sense swinging to the Right again, or at any rate coming back to certain traditional ethical values which are hard to adapt to an uncompromising acceptance of the doctrines of Marx as they evolved on this earth." Crane Brinton
+ Sat R of Lit 21:16 F 10 '40 300w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 25 '40 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p2 Ja 6 '40 700w

LASKI, HAROLD JOSEPH. Where do we go from here? 192p $1.75 Viking

940.53 Fascism. Democracy. Europe—Politics. Revolutions. European war, 1939—Influence and results. European war, 1939—Great Britain (W) 40-27811

In the three parts of this work Mr Laski reviews the causes and meaning of the present war, examines the nature of Fascism and its development in Germany and Italy, and finally, in a section entitled What are we to do next? he points out the course Great Britain must follow after the war and the social revolution that he feels must be an inevitable prologue to victory.

Booklist 37:151 D 15 '40

"Two questions likely to arise in the minds of those who have read Mr. Laski carefully in the past are not answered here. The first concerns the technique of transferring power from one class to another except by violence; his idea here for a 'revolution by consent' is more eloquent than it is convincing. The second concerns the immediate and concrete steps by which socialism could win the war. Beyond general statements of its probable effect on the morale of the British people, on the discipline of Hitler's victims and on the Realpolitik of the Soviet Union, Mr. Laski does not go." Joseph Barnes

+ — Books p6 N 17 '40 1150w

"So long as the author confines himself to stating the case for labor in the past two decades, he does so with remarkable shrewdness and lucidity. The same may be said of his examination of the fascist State. But when it comes to exploring the future, his absorption in faults of the past appears to impose needless limitations upon his vision." H. J. S.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 10 '41 600w

"The author of this volume has given us, apart from his argument, an example of compact statement and simple language which to read is delightful. . . A more meaty, thought provoking book would be hard to find. We may not go all the way with the author, we will certainly profit greatly by him." Clifton Macon

+ Churchman 155:19 Ja 1 '41 450w

Current Hist & Forum 52:4 D 10 '40 140w

Reviewed by Géza Schütz

Library J 65:981 N 15 '40 260w

"Mr. Laski's learning and his power of persuasion are too well known to need any comment. This is the best statement on the issues of the war yet to come out of Britain. It is written by a member of the National Executive of the Labor Party. That party is a major party, and it is the rising one in Britain. To it, far more than to Mr. Churchill's magnificent leadership in the great crisis of June, July, and August, the visible awakening of Britain and the animation of its resistance nave been due." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 151:452 N 9 '40 1100w

New Repub 103:711 N 25 '40 1750w

"Professor Laski has never written with more brilliance than in Where Do We Go From Here? His conclusion is the same as that of Mr. Williams and the weakness the same too—that the technique of organising the revolutionary war is by no means obvious at this stage." Tom Paine

+ — New Statesman & Nation 20:364 O 12 '40 200w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 16:90 N 9 '40 1850w

"The volume contains a brilliant analysis of the meaning and essence of fascism, together with an important discussion of India. The whole book is written with that clarity and brilliance for which the author is already famous." J. P. Clark

+ Survey G 30:40 Ja '41 430w

Time 36:85 N 11 '40 450w

"Mr. Laski's essay is an unconvincing argument for a somewhat indefinite objective."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p491 S 28 '40 240w

LASSAIGNE, JACQUES. Toulouse Lautrec. See Toulouse-Lautrec Monfa, H. M. R. de

LATHAM, ROBERT. Improve your business letters. 188p $2 Humphries

651.75 Commercial correspondence 40-27275

Advice on better expression in business letters, and suggestions for different types of business communications. The appendix contains a list of frequent inaccuracies of dictation, and a list of unusual addresses for persons of rank.

Booklist 36:321 Ap 15 '40

"Both the content and proper form for various kinds of letters are discussed concisely and simply."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 50w

LATHROP, DOROTHY PULIS. Presents for Lupe. [40p] il $2 Macmillan

(W) 40-33937

"In a very beautiful picture book we have the story of a red South American squirrel and the gifts brought to her to make her feel at home in a strange land. The toys, pottery, and glass are tiny glimpses of South America, perfect in design; and the warm colors in the drawings bring the exquisite little creature to vivid life." Library J

Booklist 37:178 Ja 1 '41

"One gets, in fine, large color plates, an alluring amount of information about South America. . . The lithographs are stronger than in 'The Little Mermaid.' . . To see Lupe, red and furry, holding down her property with her paw, is to see a live squirrel, spunk and all. The various offerings are shown with fidelity that recommends the book to schools with Latin-American projects." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 10 '40 270w

Churchman 154:4 D 15 '40 30w

"The South American fruits and handicrafts are beautifully shown in Dorothy Lathrop's lovely pictures." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:29 Ja '41 90w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:846 O 15 '40 50w

"This is a story-picture book which will delight the hearts of little people and will give them a sympathetic love for pets. The illustrations are perfect, rich in color and action, and reveal Miss Lathrop's love for animals. This is a book of enduring values. Highly recommended." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 66:84 Ja 15 '41 110w

"Lively pictures in three colors." Lena Barksdale

+ Nation 151:454 N 9 '40 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 120w

LATIMER, JONATHAN. Dark memory. 339p $2 Doubleday

40-6912

Story of a scientific expedition in the Belgian Kongo and what happened to several of the younger men when a beautiful woman joined the party.

"A full-bodied and heady piece of fiction. Mr. Latimer makes the tropics vivid without dragging you through a tangled underbrush of tropical prose." Lisle Bell

+ Books p17 Ap 14 '40 420w

"If this sounds like stock melodrama it is not the fault of the author, who is able to make the most blood-and-thunder things

LATHROP (lā'thrŭp)

LATIMER, JONATHAN—Continued
sound matter-of-fact. His characters might be people you know, and their talk is just as real and much more amusing, especially when they are a little drunk." C. D.
+ N Y Times p18 Ap 21 '40 270w
New Yorker 16:94 Ap 20 '40 60w

"If you like your hero manly; your heroine beautiful and lusty; your villain according to tradition; your subsidiary characters interesting; your locale glamorous; and your descriptions vivid and convincing; then plotless 'Dark Memory' will leave pleasant memories." Linton Wells
Sat R of Lit 22:18 Jl 27 '40 450w
Times [London] Lit Sup p409 Ag 24 '40 220w

LATOURETTE, KENNETH SCOTT. Anno Domini; Jesus, history, and God. 248p $2.50 Harper

270 Church history. Jesus Christ. Civilization, Christian 40-34187

A survey of the influence of Jesus on the quality of life in the twenty centuries since his death. The book is divided into four periods: the first five centuries, the years from 500 to 1500, from 1500 to 1800, and from 1800 to the present. In each the author shows how Jesus' teachings and the facts of his life and death have influenced men in social, intellectual, political and philosophical ways of thinking and acting. Index.

Booklist 37:131 D 1 '40

"Misgivings about the validity of Professor Latourette's philosophy of history do not lessen our respect for his scholarly labors. He is both an accurate historian and a devoutly religious person, and to his credit it must be said that he never perverts history in the interests of his religious convictions. Rather, they are an interpretative garment with which he seeks to adorn the historical scene that his thorough scholarship has reconstructed. And a reader who does not approve of the garment may strip it off without serious detriment to the factual information over which it is spread." S. J. Case
+ — Books p32 D 1 '40 650w
Reviewed by R. C. Miller
Churchman 154:17 D 1 '40 200w

LATTIMORE, ELEANOR FRANCES. Story of Lee Ling. 114p il $2 Harcourt

(W) 40-27699

Lee Ling, a shy little Chinese girl, spent her time helping her mother and caring for her baby sister. She did not go to school partly because she was too shy, partly because her parents were too poor to send her. When danger threatened her little sister Lee Ling overcame her shyness, and as a result, was sent to school for a year by the Big Noses (white people).

Booklist 37:75 O 15 '40
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 O 13 '40 240w

"Miss Lattimore again brings to young readers an understanding and real picture of Chinese child life, for she knows it well." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 30 '40 240w
Churchman 154:34 D '40 20w

"An atmosphere of reality and a natural childlike charm of characters, distinctly mark this author's work. . . A companion book to Little Pear, similar in format with many delightful drawings." Maude Adams
+ Library J 65:769 S 15 '40 180w
Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:848 O 15 '40 20w

"The picturesque details of Chinese village life are woven into a narrative which has the same easy intimacy, the same clarity and simplicity of style which have made Miss Lattimore's books so popular with children in the early stages of reading, and it is generously illustrated with drawings in her crisp, effective manner." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 O 27 '40 290w
Reviewed by F. G. Wells
Sat R of Lit 23:6 N 16 '40 90w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 120w
Wis Lib Bul 36:152 N '40

LATTIMORE, OWEN. Inner Asian frontiers of China. 585p maps $4 Am. geographical soc; $4 (25s) Oxford

915.1 China—Boundaries 40-10240

"In space this book covers a very great part of Asia; in time it ranges from Peking man and the Stone Age to the fourth decade of the twentieth century. Not breathlessly, but in a manner relatively leisurely, the Lattimores proceed, geographically speaking, from the bend of the Yellow and the confluence of the Han and the Yangtse rivers in all directions: southward to the jungles where dwell those who have not yet become Chinese; eastward and northeastward to Korea and through Manchuria; northward and northwestward through the Mongolias—Eastern Inner, Inner, and Outer—to Siberia, across the marginal lands which at once unite and divide plains and steppes . . . northwestward and westward across marginal lands, steppes, deserts, oases, suboases, mountains, and plateaus of western Mongolia, Turkestan (Chinese and Russian), and Tibet. Here in part is a history of China, of the Chinese people, of their dynasties, and of their society." Am J Soc

"Eleven diagrammatic maps prepared by draftsmen of the American Geographical Society, an eighteen-page Bibliography, many notes and citations, and an adequate Index render additionally useful this epoch-making volume, not the least attractive aspect of which is the author's unusually generous acknowledgments of aid received from his predecessors and colleagues in the field." H. F. MacNair
+ Am J Soc 46:390 N '40 500w
Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 Ap 25 '40 360w
Foreign Affairs 19:264 O '40 20w

"Mr. Lattimore's volume is especially important for its fertile suggestiveness, its wealth of conceptual and hypothetical data. For this reason alone, it is destined to exert a profound influence on scholarship in its field." T. A. Bisson
+ New Repub 103:635 N 4 '40 1100w

"The argument is heavily weighted with theory, and ideas advanced as hypotheses occasionally reappear in the developing argument with the force of fact. Although the treatment is often repetitive and the style sometimes diffuse, the book stands upon merits which far outweigh any incidental weaknesses. For me, Inner Asian Frontiers of China is the most stimulating book on the Far East in a decade." C. M. Wilbur
+ Pacific Affairs 13:498 D '40 1450w
Times [London] Lit Sup p559 N 2 '40 500w

LAUGHLIN, CLARA ELIZABETH. So you're going south! (to the South Atlantic states) and if I were going with you, these are some of the places I'd suggest. 639p il map $3 Little

917.5 South—Description and travel
(W) 40-27844

In style and format similar to Miss Laughlin's other "So you're going" books, this is a guide to the five southern Atlantic states: Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. The book is based on travel by private automobile but much of its information is equally suitable to travelers by other means. Index.

LAUGHLIN (lŏck'lĭn)

Booklist 37:173 Ja 1 '41

"Miss Laughlin is performing a real service in these practical little American guide books."

+ Books p10 D 15 '40 160w

Cath World 152:509 Ja '41 110w

"Miss Laughlin manages to make her travel books not only highly useful as guides but also entertaining and instructive. This volume, for example, is full of human interest touches which give its wealth of historical facts a setting of genuine charm." J. Van Z.

+ Churchman 155:35 Ja 15 '41 90w

"A real guidebook, inviting, informative and practical."

+ N Y Times p22 D 15 '40 320w

LAUGHLIN, CLARA ELIZABETH. So you're seeing New England! and if I were going with you, these are some of the places I'd suggest. 560p il map $2.50 Little

917.4 New England—Description and travel (W) 40-27493

Guidebook to New England, similar in style and format to the author's European guidebooks. She considers routes from New York, and then describes the country, state by state. Appendices contain further details: Rail-auto plan; The Merritt parkway; Seasons for travel in New England; Boys' or girls' camps; Food in New England; Booklets you'll find helpful; American vacations; Old New England houses open to the public; A few of New England's hostelries. Maps. Short bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:381 Je 1 '40

Books p13 S 1 '40 250w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 70w

Cath World 152:509 Ja '41 110w

Reviewed by Jonathan Daniels
New Eng Q 13:530 S '40 420w

"Clara E. Laughlin calls this New England volume a 'little book,' and begs her readers to consider it only as an 'introduction' to that rich and varied holiday region. Be it said at once that it is a most excellent introduction and a remarkably thoroughgoing guide. Naturally, some things are left out, but the scope, diversity and keen interest of what is put in call for high praise."

+ N Y Times p5 My 19 '40 210w

"In her familiar, informative, and slightly coy style, Miss Laughlin guides us through all six states. . . Photographs, but no maps."

New Yorker 16:100 My 11 '40 30w

"Miss Laughlin's style is lively and anecdotal, but what she undertakes to tell is told sympathetically and discerningly and with entertaining ramifications. . . Even a New Englander, well acquainted with his region, will enjoy following Miss Laughlin from town to town." E. N. Jenckes

+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 18 '40 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 36:125 Jl '40

LAURIE, ALEXANDER. Soilless culture simplified. (Whittlesey house garden ser) 201p il $2.50 McGraw

631.58 Plants—Soilless culture. Growth (plants) 40-27400

Exposition of the fundamentals of soilless culture of plants by the professor of floriculture at Ohio State university. "The object of this volume is to present the actual status of the subject; to disabuse the average person, the enthusiastic gardener or the commercial grower of false notions; and to discuss the real possibilities that the field of chemical plant culture promises. . . Although this book deals with methods of growing plants without soil, the fundamentals of growth in soil are first discussed, because the practices involved are similar and their thorough understanding is essential." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 36:339 My 1 '40

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley
Books p14 My 26 '40 300w

Reviewed by W. H. Clark
Boston Transcript p13 Ap 11 '40 210w

J Home Econ 32:566 O '40 100w

"The book ends with a chapter on soilless gardening for the amateur, and in bold relief is the author's own conclusion that as a hobby it is an interesting and absorbing subject, but that it is not yet ready for development on a large scale by commercial growers who need to look beyond the novel. . . If this book assists the reader to view in clearer perspective the role of organic matter in relation to the growth of plants, no mean service will have been performed." W. G. Templeman

Nature 146:633 N 16 '40 850w

LA VARRE, WILLIAM JOHANNE. Southward ho! 301p il $3 Doubleday

918 South America—Description and travel. Central America—Description and travel (W) 40-27093

Incidents of travel adventure in South and Central America which for twenty years or more the author has explored in search of treasure and novelty.

Booklist 36:236 F 15 '40

"At least one strange or exciting episode occurs in every one of the book's twenty-seven chapters. Many of them hinge in some way on modern treasure hunting, from tin to quinine. Every one is good reading, and the book is well illustrated with fifteen photographs."

+ Books p28 Mr 3 '40 300w

"The author has a more observing eye than the average tourist, a flair for the picturesque and the unusual that makes him an entertaining raconteur. He never goes very far beneath the surface." E. B. Schriftgiesser

+ Boston Transcript p13 Ja 19 '40 300w

Reviewed by Beryl de Zoete
New Statesman & Nation 20:525 N 23 '40 310w

"A harvest of tales, gathered at many times and places and among strange peoples, and interestingly illustrated with his own photographs. It is a dramatic and diverting collection, which runs a wide gamut of adventure, observation and character, and which is touched with a light humor here and there."

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 21 '40 650w

New Yorker 15:72 Ja 20 '40 20w

"This is undoubtedly one of the thinnest contributions to synthetic adventure that it has been this reviewer's misfortune to encounter to date. Mr. La Varre writes with the same lack of imagination that he apparently uses in mapping out his travel itineraries; his preoccupation with the obvious is equalled only by his blindness to the actual lives of the people he encounters." J. H. S.

— Sat R of Lit 21:20 Mr 9 '40 180w

Reviewed by B. P. Adams
Survey G 29:257 Ap '40 150w

Time 35:84 Ja 22 '40 70w

"The book which Mr. La Varre has written is well illustrated by photographs taken by himself and is entertaining enough. At best, however, it is a collection of travel incidents, entirely ephemeral in character. Lacking in any real descriptive power, superficial in content as it is undistinguished in style, it is a piece of good but light reading and is possibly an admirable book for boys. Mr. La Varre's dislike of guide-book information is never balanced by any great depth in his personal impressions of the people he has met or the things he has seen."

LA VARRE, W. J.—Continued
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p426 Ag 31 '40 650w
Wis Lib Bul 36:97 My '40

LAVERY, SIR JOHN. The life of a painter. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 277p pl $4.50 Little [18s Cassell]

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-27494

Autobiography of an eminent British portrait painter. After a few pages on his family and early life in Ireland, the story begins with his youth in Glasgow, his struggles to earn a living and become a painter, his sojourn in Paris. Later chapters deal with his rise to fame, his friendships, family and travels. The plates grouped at the end of the book are reproductions of the artist's works.

Booklist 36:382 Je 1 '40

"The Whistler chapter is altogether a jewel. But all of Sir John's chapters, though a bit wanting in dates and other details, are richly interesting, frank and full of color. The one on Lady Lavery is touching in its sincere emotion. 'I cannot understand to this day,' he says, 'what Hazel saw in me—she said I reminded her of Harry Lauder.' Perhaps what she saw was just the person revealed in this book, a lovable Irishman of talent." Royal Cortissoz
+ Books p6 My 19 '40 1300w

"It is a question whether painters ought to write autobiographies. Most of them have said their say in paint, and their operations in an unfamiliar medium are apt to be flat and unprofitable. As a rule, the better the book the worse the artist. But Sir John Lavery is an exception. He advertises neither himself nor his art; and the combination of candour and modesty he achieves is disarming. That the earlier chapters are much more interesting than the later, is not his fault; but simply reflect the fact that young John Lavery is a much more engaging person than Sir John Lavery, R.A. LLD." W. G. Constable
+ Boston Transcript p1 My 11 '40 650w
Nation 151:38 Jl 13 '40 60w
New Repub 102:866 Je 24 '40 50w

"'The Life of a Painter' is a casual, informal patchwork that lacks a skeleton or orderly plan, for the author skips about in space and chronology with the errant unconcern of a Mexican jumping bean. One must be nimble to follow him and the impression grows that he must have rambled to a 'ghost' who failed to coordinate the very interesting material. But even though it is a loosely connected melange of opinion, anecdotes and reminiscences, the tale marches with life, color and vivacity." E. L. Tinker
+ — N Y Times p5 My 12 '40 1350w
New Yorker 16:99 My 11 '40 30w

Reviewed by Oliver Larkin
Sat R of Lit 22:14 Je 29 '40 330w

"Sir John's memoirs are a continuous delight. He writes of his life with perfect candour, and his pages are packed with good stories. His pages on Irish politicians are not without a certain importance, for he knew some of the Irish leaders at the time of the Treaty intimately, and what he writes about their activities in London just before the Treaty was signed differs in a few small but interesting details from the commonly accepted version of events."
+ Spec 164:296 Mr 1 '40 90w

"Whenever a painter takes pen in hand he runs the risk of the back-handed compliment that he can write better than he can paint. It would not be true to say this of Sir John Lavery, R.A., but it is certainly true that he has written an autobiography of exceptional interest; simple, direct and racy in style, and frank in self-revelation to the point almost of embarrassing the reader."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p77 F 10 '40 850w

LAVINE, HAROLD. Fifth column in America. 240p $2.50 Doubleday

335 Propaganda. Communism—U.S. Fascism (W) 40-34629

"Study of the activities of fascists, near-fascists, and communists that are the inner threat to democracy, by the editorial director of the Institute for Propaganda Analysis." Bookmark

Booklist 37:148 D 15 '40
Bookmark p16 N '40

"The usefulness of Mr. Lavine's book at this time is obvious. While leaders call for unity the Fifth Columnists of his book are attacking the core and center of the nation's social, economic and political life. More is at stake than the possible infraction of a few laws that may be on the statute books now or at some future time. If the Fifth Columnists succeed, as Mr. Lavine says, 'the nation will simply disintegrate.'" O. W. Riegel
+ Books p5 Ja 12 '41 1150w

"Here we have a very interesting book which, from one point of view, and for all its shortcomings, is recommended to the general public as a provocative treatment of what kind of active and unscrupulous work is being done by enemies in our midst. . . 'This is the Problem' is one of the best analyses known to the reviewer of 'fifth column' techniques. From a scholarly point of view, several definite objections can be raised against Lavine's treatment." J. S. Roucek
+ — Commonweal 33:356 Ja 24 '41 460w

"This book should be added to a library making a considerable collection of propaganda literature. For the smaller library, sufficient material can probably be found in periodicals." L. R. Etzkorn
Library J 65:981 N 15 '40 210w

"Swift, semi-humorous journalism, but much of the data is familiar."
New Yorker 16:89 N 30 '40 60w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ja 11 '41 550w

"Mr. Lavine, who is the editorial director of the Institute for Propaganda Analysis, seems to have a better understanding of the deeper lying problems of the Fifth Column danger than a good many other Fifth Column writers. His compact explanation of the strategy of psychological terror is clear enough to be understood by every American, regardless of his political education. The 'Fifth Column in America' is a book no American should miss." Werner Guttmann
+ Survey G 30:40 Ja '41 200w

LAVINE, HAROLD, and WECHSLER, JAMES. War propaganda and the United States; pub. for the Institute for propaganda analysis. 363p il $2.75 Yale univ. press

301.1523 Propaganda. European war, 1939— Propaganda. Public opinion—U.S. (W) 40-27576

Review of the propaganda used by various countries to swing the tide of opinion of the United States to their side in the present war. The authors contrast methods used in the last war with the present technique in order to throw more light on modern methods. The book is put forward under the patronage of the Institute for Propaganda Analysis. Index.

Reviewed by H. S. Foster, Jr.
Am Pol Sci R 34:1025 O '40 480w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Ann Am Acad 212:247 N '40 650w
Booklist 36:424 Jl 15 '40
Bookmark p18 N '40

"An exciting book in an unexpected and possibly unintentional way. . . Some of the book reads like précis of yesterday's newspaper stories. Yet in terms of the contemporaneity of the problem with which the authors cope, the book is a brave attack on the evidence at hand; it confesses the limitations of present knowledge, it refrains from predicting the future, and it raises questions." O. W. Riegel

+ — Books p3 Jl 7 '40 1200w

"There is a certain muddlement throughout this book, as throughout most of the emanations of the Institute for Propaganda Analysis, which started out so bravely to make issues clear for us. The authors try their best, but they cannot escape their own preconceptions. And one of their profoundest preconceptions is a conviction, which they occasionally deny in words and then make crystal clear by reiterated attitudes, that propaganda is making the major decisions of America today." Lewis Gannett

— Boston Transcript p13 Je 19 '40 1150w

Reviewed by Carlton McNaught

Canadian Forum 20:219 O '40 850w

Cath World 151:638 Ag '40 140w

"The men who have turned out this book for the Institute for Propaganda Analysis are to be congratulated on having crammed so much factual material, with so small an amount of personal editorializing, into the space. As a reporting job, this is superbly done. Many of the facts revealed will surprise even those who think they are fairly well informed as to what has been happening along the propaganda front." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 57:856 Jl 3 '40 650w

"This is a book which everyone should read who imagines that he has a clear picture of what is happening in the world today... Everyone who would read the news intelligently should read this book, since the day may soon come when the reading of such books will be treason." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 154:19 Ag '40 330w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

Reviewed by C. O. Cleveland

Commonweal 32:293 Jl 26 '40 200w

Foreign Affairs 19:256 O '40 20w

"This book is a prophylactic against emotionalism. . . Probably the outstanding weakness of the book is that it schematizes the division of opinion too rigidly. . . But the fact remains that to write and publish such a book at this particular moment is a public service. Many individuals whose emotions have carried them off into weird countries of the imagination here have a guidebook which will direct them back to the land of sanity." C. H. Grattan

+ — N Y Times p3 Je 30 '40 1400w

"A clean, thorough job."

+ New Yorker 16:68 Jl 13 '40 60w

Social Studies 32:42 Ja '41 170w

"A slickly written, epigrammatic, rather loosely organized book. . . War Propaganda and the United States is a pretty good job of isolationist propaganda itself."

— Time 36:71 Jl 8 '40 380w

LAW, BERNARD A. Fighting planes of the world; with an introd. by Al Williams; compositions in color by Barry Bart. 66p $1 Random house

629.13 Aeronautics, Military. Airplanes (W) 40-27649

Sixty-five colored illustrations and accompanying text depict the military types of planes used by fifteen different nations. For older boys.

Booklist 37:40 O 1 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 Ag 25 '40 200w

"This is a very attractive volume. . . 'Fighting Planes of the World' is worth buying as a handy reference text and will be a sure-fire gift for any air-minded boy." W. E. B.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ag 31 '40 100w

"The information, although brief, is of the type to interest older boys, and the illustrations are marvelous. Can be used as a picture book for younger children, although the information is for seventh and eighth grades. Large picture book size. Recommended." M. W. Farquharson

+ Library J 65:879 O 15 '40 70w

"It is a valuable handbook in the world of today when the influence of air power upon history is inscribed in the daily headlines." H. W. Baldwin

+ Sat R of Lit 22:11 S 21 '40 70w

LAWES, LEWIS EDWARD. Meet the murderer! 339p $3 Harper

364 Murder. Crime and criminals. New York (state). Sing Sing prison, Ossining (W) 40-34927

By means of citing cases with which he has had personal contact Warden Lawes of Sing Sing prison describes many murderers and their reactions during their last days and in the Death House.

Booklist 37:212 Ja 15 '41

"Warden Lawes presents his case in this book by telling stories about murderers. These are in his familiar vein—anecdotal, chatty, informing but not very penetrating. He has the story-telling abilities and insight into personality of a first-class police reporter, not of a psychologist or wise physician. . . He has contributed little, of course, to the scientific approach to the causes of crime and to measures of prevention. But he has helped to sustain an atmosphere favorable to these." W. D. Lane

Books p26 D 1 '40 750w

"With the ease and acumen to which we are accustomed in his writing Mr. Lawes passes interesting and suggestive knowledge on to us in the records which fill his latest book."

+ N Y Times p30 N 17 '40 600w

"Absorbing."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:46 D 7 '40 40w

LAWRENCE, JACK. When the ships came in [il. by John O'Hara Cosgrave, II]. 308p $2.50 Farrar

818 Reporters and reporting. Shipping—New York (city) 40-27609

A collection of stories and anecdotes gleaned from the author's seven years' service as ship news reporter for the New York Evening Mail. Mr Lawrence's period of service covered the years from about 1910 to 1917, years which featured the news stories of the Titanic, the Lusitania, the Deutschland.

"It is a book of nostalgia, a memoir of happy, daffy bibulous days and nights. And it contains some good stories and some flashes of shrewd observation. Veteran ship news men, among all journalists, seem to speak most fondly of the good old days, even when in all truth those good old days were distinguished by low pay, long hours and a vast amount of tedium mixed with the romance. Mr. Lawrence is no exception. He has written a loving memoir, and through it all he has kept his feeling of affection for the sights and smells, the people and the work, of the New York water-front." Stanley Walker

+ Books p4 Ag 4 '40 1100w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 27 '40 750w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 Jl 31 '40 900w

New Repub 103:150 Jl 29 '40 60w

"This book will probably attract you most strongly through mirth and oddity and a company of strange and vivid personalities moving in colorful events; but there are big news stories here, coming in from the sea. The reminder of the burning of the Volturno is brief but haunting." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 28 '40 600w

LAWRENCE, JACK—Continued

"The stories are gilded by distance now and their points made sharper by contrast. Many of the ends that were then left floating have been tucked in by time; and the result is one of the season's best books of tales."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 17 '40 250w

LAWRENCE, JOSEPHINE. But you are young. 330p $2.50 Little

(W) 39-29459

In this story of Kelsie Wright, the author pictures the sad plight of young lovers in lower middle-class American life during depression years. With five in her family dependent on her sixteen-a-week, Kelsie loses one hope of marriage after another until finally Clark Hamer, with equal responsibilities, helps her to find one way out of the impasse.

Booklist 36:177 Ja 1 '40

Bookmark p12 Mr '40

"'But You Are Young' is a fine, thoughtful novel, which skillfully exposes a canker familiar in American life. Nor does one need to limit it geographically, for the clan of Kelsies is international." Rose Feld

+ Books p4 Ja 7 '40 950w

"In spite of being far more interested in conditions than in character study, this writer manages to make all her people far more than mere illustrations of her points." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 6 '40 750w

Reviewed by M. D. Waddington

Canadian Forum 20:28 Ap '40 300w

"To her task, which is not simply the creation of a piece of artistry but is also an attempt to throw light and unriddle riddles, Josephine Lawrence has brought the ability to present characters that are real, warm, and touching, and a deft and easy style." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 13 '40 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '40

"Josephine Lawrence exemplifies the rightness of the advice of all professionals to young writers: to write of what they know. Miss Lawrence, whatever the artistic merit of her book, has not been a newspaperwoman in Newark all these years to no avail."

+ Forum 103:vi F '40 280w

"Sociologically interesting, this novel has character. Loria's young bitterness and the between-sittings conversations of the manicurists are amusing, and if the selfishness of the escapists is extreme, the shabby discomforts of the home were certainly something from which escape was desirable." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 27 '40 180w

"'But You Are Young' is continuously interesting and even absorbing. By all rights it ought to be a dismal and depressing story, this black-and-white record of sordid shifts and recurrent domestic crises. Why it is not must remain a trade secret in the possession of Miss Lawrence." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 7 '40 550w

New Yorker 15:61 Ja 6 '40 60w

"This is a study of an economic problem, well observed, and done with more humor than bitterness." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 21:10 Ja 6 '40 550w

"As a parable, the book is certainly not cheerful—but it has humour, honesty and feeling. In its small way, it is thoroughly effective." John Marks

Spec 164:340 Mr 8 '40 80w

"Although the situation seems extreme, the author's skill in description and dialog gives animation to the portrayal of Kelsie Wright, her unemployed relatives and her men acquaintances."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 21 '40 120w

"If the writing were as sensitive as it is honest, this novel would do more than suggest the miasmal human pathos and selfishness inherent in its material."

+ — Time 35:67 Ja 15 '40 80w

"In spite of an easy competency which never swerves towards an unexpected remark or away from petty incident, Miss Lawrence does manage to convey something of the poignancy of frustrated youth, and it is youth in particular to whom this story will appeal."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p113 Mr 2 '40 210w

Wis Lib Bul 36:49 Mr '40

LAWRENCE, THOMAS EDWARD. Oriental assembly; ed. by A. W. Lawrence. 291p il map $3 Dutton [10s 6d Williams & Norgate]

915.67 East (Near East) (W) [39-20270]

This volume contains a collection of the miscellaneous writings of the author of The Seven Pillars of Wisdom (Book Review Digest, 1935). It is edited by Lawrence's brother and includes all such writings he expects to present to the public with the exception of an essay, Crusader Castles. Contents: Diary of a journey across the Euphrates, Illustrations to the diary; The changing East; The evolution of a revolt; The suppressed introductory chapter for Seven Pillars of Wisdom; On Eric Kennington's Arab portraits; The war photographs.

"This is an essential item in every collection of Lawrentiana. . . Perhaps most interesting of all—there is the wonderful collection of no less than a hundred and nine 'war photographs' supplementing Lawrence's narrative of the Arab revolt." S. C. Chew

+ Books p12 Ag 11 '40 1000w

Reviewed by Barker Fairley

Canadian Forum 19:159 Ag '39 700w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 1 '39 320w

Reviewed by F. N. Doubleday

Current Hist & Forum 52:56 S '40 430w

Foreign Affairs 19:262 O '40 20w

"The Lawrence legend itself gains from the slightest fragments in this book, for if genius manifests itself in snatches we have ample evidence here that the legend was built on a firm foundation." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 4 '40 800w

New Yorker 16:63 Ag 10 '40 30w

"Lawrence's writing, particularly as evidenced in 'Seven Pillars of Wisdom,' is of a high order. In these random pieces he showed the same facility with the English language. True, his diary was but a series of hasty notes, often written by the side of the road, but they retain a vitality that is remarkable. His more highly polished essays are just as alive, and in beauty of language they approach the classics." Stuart Lillico

+ Sat R of Lit 22:11 Ag 24 '40 700w

Time 36:70 Ag 5 '40 430w

Times [London] Lit Sup p309 My 27 '39 800w

LAWSON, ROBERT, il. Just for fun; a collection of stories and verses. 64p $1 Rand McNally

40-32981

Collection of four stories and nine poems for young readers. Contents: Auntie Grumble meets the wizard, by C. J. Sharp; Jonathan Bing does arithmetic, by B. C. Brown; The pelican, by M. P. Meigs; The wogg and the baggle, by L. E. Richards; The man with the bag, by Padraic Colum; More about Jonathan Bing, by B. C. Brown; St Valentine, by Eunice Tietjens; Story tell, by L. E. Richards; The little dragon, by Constance Savery; Planting a tree, by N. B. Turner; Jonathan Bing dances for spring, by B. C. Brown; Penguins, by Anne Brewer; The piping on Christmas Eve, by F. P. Jacques.

Cath World 152:381 D '40 30w

"Robert Lawson's pictures are always a delight and here in this volume are a generous number of them in his best style."
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 28 '40 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:445 N '40 30w

"Most libraries will have some of the material in other places, but the book seems worth buying just for the illustrations. It will appeal to children from eight to ten." E. G. Mullan
+ Library J 65:879 O 15 '40 100w

"Moderate in price, this is a volume that will be popular and useful in libraries and good for family reading aloud." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 O 6 '40 240w
Wis Lib Bul 36:169 D '40

LAWSON, ROBERT. They were strong and good. [68p] il $1.50 Viking
(W) 40-27700

The illustrator of The Story of Ferdinand (Book Review Digest, 1936) writes a brief story of his ancestors for three generations in this country, illustrating the story with black and white drawings.

"May foster a pride in one's own forebears, but would seem to have limited appeal to children."
Booklist 37:75 O 15 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p9 S 29 '40 340w
Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 30w

"In the few words between his very worth while drawings, Mr. Lawson conjures a whole American saga." E. V. W.
+ Cath World 152:373 D '40 130w

"This artist, whose work is always distinguished, has given to young Americans and their elders, not only a beautiful picture book but a timely reminder that they too must be 'strong and good'; must give their best to their country and keep America strong and free." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 11 '40 280w
Commonweal 33:121 N 22 '40 60w

"The touch is a light one—you can trust Robert Lawson to bring his glinting humor into play—but none the less is the book a bit of social history out of the family album." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:437 N '40 120w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:846 O 15 '40 30w

"Through simple text and a great many excellent illustrations, Robert Lawson has passed on to us the impressions he gained of his forebears during childhood. The result is an exceptionally acceptable book for the younger children about the kind of people who helped to make the United States a great nation." J. E. Stromdahl
+ Library J 65:926 N 1 '40 90w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Nation 151:454 N 9 '40 20w

"This story of Mr. Lawson's forebears, which is told with a lovely simplicity, a friendly humor, and a sincerity that stirs the emotions, awakens in boys and girls who look at the pictures and hear or read the text a feeling of possession and of pride. . . Out of all the books designed to teach boys and girls the meaning of democracy and to encourage patriotism that are being hurried to press today, this one is likely to make the deepest impression on children." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 N 10 '40 250w
New Yorker 16:126 D 7 '40 80w

"Unusual and distinctive." Katherine Ulrich
+ Sat R of Lit 23:8 N 16 '40 50w

LAZARSFELD, PAUL FELIX. Radio and the printed page; an introduction to the study of radio and its role in the communication of ideas. 354p $4 Duell
791.4 Radio (W) 40-27610

Report of a survey, based on interviews with radio listeners, and dealing with the conflicts and relations between radio and the printed word and their economic, educational, sociological and political implications. Index.

Reviewed by M. M. Willey
Ann Am Acad 213:190 Ja '41 600w
Booklist 37:8 S '40

"Even against a different background this would be an important book, providing a veritable conspectus of research in the entire field with which it deals: an account of studies finished, work in progress, and research which ought to be undertaken. It summarizes not only most of the research that Dr. Lazarsfeld's office has done since 1937, but almost every other reputable study that contributes to the problem. This book does not solve the problems that it raises, but it does bring to bear upon their solution as much good evidence as now exists, and it makes no bones about stating as clearly what is not known." F. A. Gutheim
+ Nation 151:277 S 28 '40 420w

"This is written in social-research jargon and loaded with statistical tables, but that doesn't matter; it's a book that blazes a trail in the study of radio and its rôle in the communication of ideas."
+ New Yorker 16:55 Ag 31 '40 60w
Scientific Bk Club R 11:2 Ag '40 460w

LAZARUS, SIDNEY. Why can't I fly? il. by the author. [60p] $1.25 Scribner 40-27401

"A simple explanation about the airplane is given in this picture-story book. Children of five and up can understand the text and the full page pictures." Library J

Booklist 36:348 My 1 '40

"The information is elementary, for the book goes only to very small boys. The pictures would be better if they were more buoyant, but they get the facts straight as far as they go." M. L. Becker
Books p5 Jl 14 '40 150w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 S 30 '40 90w

"Told with an appreciation of the wonder of the little child for this magic bird—the airplane—it is more than just an account of man's efforts to conquer the air. This book is easier than the Petershams' Story Book of Aircraft and one will supplement the other." R. W. Stewart
+ Library J 65:354 Ap 15 '40 100w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:846 O 15 '40 30w

LEA, FANNY HEASLIP. Nobody's girl. 213p $2 Dodd 40-31528

A New England tea-room with a beautiful garden is the setting. Ellie, the daughter of the widowed owner of the tea-room has to decide between two men—one an impetuous Irish lad, who had proved fascinating but undependable, and the other a quiet, thoroly fine man to whom she was engaged.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p23 O 6 '40 190w

"Here is an interesting and perceptive picture of almost completely suppressed antagonism, fear and jealousy, with a surface of placid beauty. . . Miss Lea keeps you guessing and does it with skillful wit and penetration." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p7 D 22 '40 360w

LEA, F. H.—Continued

"Satire, humor, and romance are blended in the author's character portraiture of an independent and honest but exuberant girl who takes risks in having her own way."

Springf'd Republican p7e S 29 '40 360w

LEA, FANNY HEASLIP. There are brothers. 306p $2 Dodd

(W) 40-4664

This story of four brothers living in a New England manufacturing town is a study of four characters, revealing family similarities along with differing individual characteristics.

"A compact and dramatic narrative." Lisle Bell

Books p14 Mr 10 '40 250w

"Good story. . . In the society of books it ranks among the bourgeoisie and it has the substantial virtues of its class: a solidly constructed plot, fully drawn characters, rapid action that never lets the reader down, and some really excellent dialogue. It has no literary graces, but it does fulfill its function, to entertain, in a very satisfactory manner." Margaret Clark

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 9 '40 200w

"Several of the quarrel scenes are fairly well done, and the story is not uninteresting, although it leaves one without any desire ever to meet again with any of its characters." L. M. Field

N Y Times p18 Mr 3 '40 550w

Sat R of Lit 21:20 Mr 9 '40 240w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 21 '40 350w

LEACOCK, STEPHEN BUTLER. The British empire; its structure, its unity, its strength [Eng title: Our British empire]. 263p maps $2 Dodd [7s 6d Lane]

942 Great Britain. Great Britain—Colonies. Imperial federation (W) 40-9343

Description of the British Empire and its component parts. The author recommends as a basis of world peace a federation of the Empire, France, and the United States. Lists of reference books at ends of chapters. Index.

Booklist 36:410 Jl 1 '40

"This timely and entertaining book would be still more timely if Mr. Leacock had added a final chapter on the British armed forces and dispositions for imperial defense." Geoffrey Bruun

+ Books p9 Je 2 '40 600w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 8 '40 110w

Reviewed by J. R. Baldwin

Canadian Hist R 21:315 S '40 240w

"Mr. Leacock writes neither as humorist nor professor nor Canadian but as a very bland and courteous Britisher. The most valuable feature of his book is the table of the British Commonwealth of Nations in all five continents." E. VR. W.

Cath World 151:629 Ag '40 480w

Reviewed by J. J. O'Connor

Commonweal 32:154 Je 7 '40 230w

Foreign Affairs 19:262 O '40 20w

Reviewed by Ramsay Muir

Manchester Guardian p6 S 13 '40 270w

"Professor Stephen Leacock, best known to the broad public as a humorist, surveys the achievements of the British Empire with the love of a Canadian proud of the traditions within which he lives, and with the mellow wisdom of a man matured by study and thought and a rich sense of humor, rare in scholars. His book is packed with material, but it is presented in a form easily digested by the general reader." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 150:758 Je 22 '40 360w

New Repub 103:62 Jl 8 '40 50w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p3 Je 2 '40 850w

LEACOCK (lē'kŏk)

"Briskly written, with an undercurrent of Mr. Leacock's good-natured humor."

+ New Yorker 16:94 My 25 '40 30w

"Mr. Leacock writes informally and easily, letting his humorist self pierce pleasantly through his economist and political scientist self. His history, statistics, and geography are all pleasantly seasoned and agreeably served. . . His tone may be a bit offensive to American readers not already predisposed to love the English. It is the tone of a sweetly reasonable Kipling: the 'Recessional,' adapted to the manner of the after-dinner speech." Crane Brinton

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:7 Je 22 '40 340w

"In spite of some prejudices and in spite of his natural sympathies with Britain, Mr Leacock has written a cheerful document on his subject. He is more successful than many exponents of the same opinions. Perhaps that is because he does not write as a serious historian laboring an apology, but simply as an admirer of England, inclined to see the best in its history and convinced it really needs no apologies, in the past or in the present." D. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Je 14 '40 600w

"A simple, hopeful act of patriotism, quickly thrown together, it has a nice old man's blandness over skeletons in the imperial closet, a nice old man's bright readiness with encyclopedic information. Told in the manner of a genuinely charming speaker at a banquet of the English-Speaking Union."

Time 35:94 My 27 '40 180w

"History, the account of the development of the good old way, takes the first place in the book. Mr. Leacock is not a remarkably accurate historian. . . But his treatment of the broad lines of imperial history (in a chapter of less than fifty pages) is brilliant and stimulating, and will suggest several unfamiliar ideas to English readers."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p435 S 7 '40 1200w

LEACOCK, STEPHEN BUTLER. Laugh parade. 326p $2.50 Dodd

817 (W) 40-33971

A collection of reprinted pieces by the famous Canadian humorist and professor of economics. Contents: What I don't know about the drama; Frenzied fiction; "We have with us to-night"; Why I am leaving my farm; The man in asbestos: an allegory of the future; Getting by at college; The errors of Santa Claus; With the photographer; Eddie the bartender; The perfect salesman; Homer and humbug, an academic discussion; Back to the bush; The doctor and the contraption; The awful fate of Melpomenus Jones; Number fifty-six; My Victorian girlhood; The hidden secret of the city; The Mariposa bank mystery; The sit-down strike in my parlour; When men retire; This strenuous age; How I succeeded in my business; Winsome Winnie: or, Trial and temptation; Abolishing the heroine; The reading public. A book store study; How to lose money (for amateurs); My fishing pond; While you're at it; The wizard of finance; The arrested philanthropy of Mr Tomlinson; On the need for a quiet college; Turn back the clock; First call for spring; Hand me down that book; What I read then—what you read now; L'Envoi in praise of the Americans.

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p39 D 8 '40 480w

Springf'd Republican p8 N 5 '40 390w

LEAF, MUNRO. John Henry Davis. 57p il $1 Stokes

40-30567

John Henry Davis was a perfectly normal boy, with the added charm of being able to think. In simple text and picture the author shows J. H. D. giving object lessons to a tough, small boy in the art of being both normal and gentle.

"Munro Leaf may go down to history as the man who made morals attractive to the American child. One after another our boys and girls take these funny books, chuckle over the advice because the pictures that go with it are so absurd, and find themselves agreeing with what he says because it strikes them as sensible. . . This is not slipping over a moral on a boy; it is showing one in action. It is also showing thought at work, and that's not a bad idea." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 S 15 '40 370w

"The author's spontaneous clever manner of teaching the young is almost missing but children from four to seven years of age will probably enjoy and profit by the book. The drawings in black and red are amusingly suited to the text and the book's size is practical for library use." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 65:813 O 1 '40 70w

LEALE, JOHN. Recollections of a tule sailor, with interpolations by Marion Leale. 312p il maps $3 Fields

B or 92 San Francisco bay 39-30892

"Captain Leale spent the greater part of his life in the shoal water and giant cat-tails, called tules, of San Francisco Bay. He traveled more than a million miles over it, as ferryboat captain; and in this posthumous autobiography there is a philosophy of a man who loved the smell of the sea and yet was too fond of the land and people on its shores to stay away long from the ideal combination. He knew the people who rode back and forth from the city that fire and earthquake devastated, and became a practising psychologist." Sat R of Lit

"His book is an intensely personal affair, spiced with anecdotes and stories of the forty years in which the captain piloted ferries to and fro. . . All this is told frankly and unaffectedly, much as a man might yarn to a circle of friends who liked to hear him talk. His daughter has supplemented her father's jottings with bits of connective tissue in the way of text where necessary, keeping herself in the background however, and allowing the captain to tell as much of the story as possible. The result is a book of simon-pure San Franciscana, the sort of recreation of a bygone day available only in such first-hand records."
+ Books p16 F 18 '40 250w

"The story is a first-hand account of ferryboating that has never before been told, and will never be surpassed, for the era is no more." L. C. H.
+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 D 23 '39 100w

LEBEDEFF, IVAN. Legion of dishonor. 314p $2 Liveright

40-32861

A tale of the first European war and of a group of deserters from the armies of both sides who for several weeks inhabit a ruined castle in No Man's Land.

Books p8 S 15 '40 100w
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 17 '40 40w
New Repub 103:286 Ag 26 '40 50w

"Although the plot is cut to pattern, and the love scenes strike one as rather stilted and most of the characters fall into familiar types, the author, a former Czarist officer, has shown skill in his narrative development, keeping up his suspense to the end. Patriotism and idealism are implicit in the tale, but there are several scenes of a scabrous nature which might better have been hinted than described." D. De K.
— + N Y Times p24 S 22 '40 550w

"A wild romance of the World War, with that curious verbal atmosphere which surrounds translations and books written by authors to whom French comes easier than English—slightly stilted in phraseology and full of epigrams that don't quite come off in the secondary tongue." F. P.
— Sat R of Lit 22:20 S 14 '40 180w

LEDERER, EMIL. State of the masses; the threat of the classless society. 245p $2.50 Norton

335.6 Totalitarianism. Socialism. Europe—Politics. Proletariat 41-1040

"Dr. Emil Lederer, noted German economist and professor of economics in the New School for Social Research (the University in Exile), finished the manuscript of this volume a week before his death on May 29, 1939. It was prepared for publication by Virginia Todd Venneman, and the Foreword is by Hans Speier. This is a learned and philosophical study of present-day society, the gradual breaking down of social groups, and the emergence of the totalitarian or mass-state. As examples, the author cites the situation as it exists in Italy and Germany, with special emphasis on the latter." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Sigmund Neumann
Am Pol Sci R 34:1222 D '40 850w

"It is a turgid affair, a posthumous publication, the work of a refugee German professor, telling little that one does not already know, and what little it does tell is of no great value. . . Going through a book like Mr. Lederer's is a tedious business, and as unrewarding as it is tedious."
— Atlantic N '40 180w

"There are certain undeveloped hints in this book as to how to insure ourselves against the subversion of the democratic process by open or concealed facists but they are not sufficiently concrete to be helpful. . . A surprising and pleasing feature of this book is the clarity of its prose. Whether this is due primarily to Dr. Lederer who composed it in English, or to the editorial assistance of Virginia Todd Venneman who prepared it for publication, those acquainted with most German writing on this and similar subjects will be properly grateful." Sidney Hook
+ — Books p38 D 1 '40 1000w

"That modern dictatorship, especially the Nazi regime in Germany, rests on 'amorphous masses,' constantly kept at a high emotional pitch by propaganda, and deprived of the social groupings in which men usually find expression for differentiated tastes and ideas, is the original and stimulating thesis of this book." W. H. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 26 '40 800w

Reviewed by G. A. Briefs
Commonweal 33:25 O 25 '40 1600w

"A well-constructed thesis, but suitable only for the larger public or college library." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 65:708 S 1 '40 130w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 151:341 O 12 '40 750w
Social Studies 32:47 Ja '41 60w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 29:517 O '40 650w

LEE, CHARLES. An almanac of reading. 133p il $1 Coward-McCann

028 Books and reading (W) 40-34118

Literary diversions by a literary critic of The Boston Herald. The book is divided according to the months of the year. Each section contains suggestions for reading appropriate to the season as well as a literary quiz.

"When you've gone around the calendar with Mr. Lee you realize that you have ranged far in time and space and subject-matter, in a varied felicity."
+ N Y Times p34 O 20 '40 310w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '41 80w

LEE, CLARENCE PENDLETON. The unwilling journey. 303p $2.50 Macmillan 40-27159

As a boy of ten Richard Hanna's world was Matthews, Arkansas—a settlement consisting of the general store, in which his father worked, four houses and the railroad station. Richard's world expanded a little when his parents moved to Pine Bluff. Here the story leaves him at the end of his first year at high school and with the prospect of going to college on his inheritance from Aunt Zulie.

Booklist 36:264 Mr 1 '40

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p11 Mr 10 '40 400w

"The lack of action in 'The Unwilling Journey' is compensated for by the food for thought it offers to anyone interested in pondering the meaning of life, and the right of human beings to happiness. The answer provided is not a cheerful one." Sue Walcutt
Boston Transcript p1 F 17 '40 230w

New Repub 102:322 Mr 4 '40 40w

"This is a percipient little novel, touching on the quick of its matter. It's easy reading, as good writing should be, and engaging and brief." F. T. Marsh
+ N Y Times p7 F 18 '40 850w

"The Arkansas local color is shrewdly indicated—dust and heat and floodwater now and then. A pleasant, friendly tale."
+ New Yorker 16:82 F 17 '40 50w

"Compared with the first part of 'The Unwilling Journey,' Mr. Lee's picture of Pine Bluff is more of a candid-camera shot than a portrait, more of a map than a rendering which takes into account the past and the traditions which its settlers brought from the eastern part of the country. But this section of the novel is a skillful extension of 'Main Street,' macadamized during the years of Coolidge prosperity. And all of 'The Unwilling Journey' is warm with feeling for wanderers in a land without landmarks and without guideposts." Frank Daniel
+ Sat R of Lit 21:6 F 17 '40 450w

LEE, JOHNATHAN MURRAY, and LEE, MRS DORRIS MAY (POTTER). The child and his curriculum. 652p il $3 (15s) Appleton-Century 372 Education of children. Child study
40-4461

"This book was written for the teacher who is interested in the child of elementary school age and in the curriculum best suited to that child. This teacher may be in a large city school or a one-room rural school; one with many years of experience or one who is in training; one who is planning only for a class, or one who is sharing, as a member of a curriculum committee, the responsibility for planning for many." (Pref) Part One is a study of the growth, personality, interests and learning of the individual child; part two is a discussion of the growing child in modern elementary schools. Index.

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '40 10w

"The volume is scholarly, well written, easy to read, and full of human interest. It offers definite and practical help to those who desire better understanding of the elementary-school child and who seek to build a curriculum best suited to his needs." J. K. Norton
+ El School J 41:150 O '40 750w

LEE, LAWRENCE. The tomb of Thomas Jefferson. 45p $1.50 Scribner 811 40-32257

Volume of short poems by the editor of The Virginia Quarterly Review. Some of the poems have been previously published in magazines. The title poem was read as the Phi Beta Kappa poem at the College of William and Mary on December 5, 1939.

"One of the most hopeful features of contemporary poetry is its return to the simple subjects which have inspired poets all down the ages: the sweetness and strength of natural and elemental things, and the inspiration to be drawn from the great men and great deeds of the past. These are the subject matter of this volume, and they are treated with great dignity and simplicity."
+ Atlantic N '40 180w

"It has been a recurrent characteristic of Lawrence Lee's poetry that it has something to say. This latest volume, published at a moment when men are attentive to one thing only, has something to say to that attention, and something worth saying. It is no business of the poet to instruct the world on the specific terms of its problems; but he can speak the enduring truth he knows with an accent that takes direction and intensity from the travails of the moment. That is the accent that persists through the poems in this book." David Morton
+ Books p10 S 1 '40 460w

Reviewed by John Holmes
Boston Transcript p11 S 3 '40 410w

"If there is any criticism of Mr. Lee's work as a minor poet of distinction it might easily be that he tends toward a narrow pattern of ideas." John Ritchey
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 O 12 '40 250w

Time 36:123 O 14 '40 360w

LEE, MAURICE WENTWORTH. Anti-chain-store tax legislation. 80p pa $1 Univ. of Chicago press [pa 6s Cambridge]
658.873 Chain stores. Taxation. Industry and state—U.S. 39-30749

"Professor Lee concludes his study with the terse and emphatic recommendation that 'all chain-store-taxing statutes of whatever type be repealed at the earliest possible moment.' Limiting his comment to state legislation, he has made out a formidable case. The attack is concentrated primarily upon the social and economic undesirability of this type of statute, but the author also assails existing measures as ill-considered and ill-adapted to effect their avowed purposes, laying their burdens more heavily upon local and sectional chains and upon those which depend on a large number of small, low-margin-of-profit outlets." Harvard Law R

"For a review of the details of chain store taxation, the study is recommended. It should be kept in mind, however, in reading it that the author apparently writes with a preconceived notion that there should be as little regulation of this form of corporate organization as possible." J. W. Manning
Am Pol Sci R 34:164 F '40 350w

Reviewed by P. H. Wueller
Harvard Business R 19:253 winter '41 250w

"Mr. Lee's monograph is both timely and deserving of circulation."
+ Harvard Law R 53:166 N '39 180w

LEE, MRS RUTH WEBB. Sandwich glass; the history of the Boston & Sandwich glass company. 526p il map $10 The author, 21 Edgell rd, Framingham Centre, Mass.
748 Boston and Sandwich glass company. Glassware 40-1055

"In presenting an account of Deming Jarves, founder of Sandwich glass, Mrs. Lee has endeavored to 'unearth facts and fragments and at the same time expose myths and legends that have sprung from the desire of well-meaning souls to please collectors with agreeable answers to their questions.' The history of the concern is traced from its inception in 1825 through its rise and decline down to its final closing in 1907. Most of the book, however, deals with descriptions of the various wares made during those years, illustrated by some 200 excellent full-page photographs." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"In 'Sandwich Glass,' a sumptuous volume, with hundreds of superb illustrations, the author has done much more than compile an authoritative collector's guide. . . For lay readers, the romantic story of the beginnings of a major American industry . . . is at last told as it deserved." Edwin Lefevre
+ Books p16 Mr 24 '40 700w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:7 Ja '40
Special Libraries 31:342 S '40

LEEDS, STANTON B. These rule France; the story of Edouard Daladier and the men around Daladier. 367p il $3 Bobbs

923.2 Daladier, Edouard. France—Biography. France—Politics and government. Statesmen, French (W) 40-5859

An American who has lived in France for sixteen years gives his impressions of some of the Frenchmen most in the public eye from 1872 to 1939. The chapters are grouped under five headings: the politicians; the personalities; the financiers; the publicists; and the fighters. Index.

"If the promises of the title were kept, this book should be required reading. . . Unfortunately, between promise and achievement there are two little slips: lack of knowledge and lack of skill. If it be true that Mr. Leeds has lived for sixteen years in France, that demonstrates the superb insularity of his mind. His misreadings of French history are impartially distributed over the centuries. . . Even in contemporary history he is very shaky. . . Factual errors are not the worst faults; more objectionable are the confusion in every chapter, and the vagueness even of the true stories. It would be impossible for any reader to get a definite conception of Daladier, his beliefs and his career, from these incredibly muddled pages. A great pity, indeed: for Mr. Leeds might have something important to tell. He is a wholehearted convert to the gospel of L'Action Francaise and its friends." Albert Guerard
— Books p17 Mr 10 '40 1000w

Discussion by the author
Books p20 Mr 24 '40 330w
Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 1 '40 400w

"When a country is at war it is only honest to give some weight to the views of the men who foresaw the war and it cannot be denied that the nationalist point of view implies a complete logical structure which must be recognized and understood by its opponents. This book shows that view at its best in the author's treatment of the historical background; at its worst in certain personal attacks such as that on Leon Blum, which is openly offensive: at its silliest when an irrelevant worldliness permits Mr. Berry Wall, Dekobra, Cecile Sorel, the painter Domergue to lend an appearance of superficiality to a book which on the whole escapes it." C. G. P.
+ — Commonweal 31:458 Mr 15 '40 220w
Foreign Affairs 18:754 Jl '40 20w
Nation 150:430 Mr 30 '40 70w
New Repub 102:417 Mr 25 '40 30w

"To a volume bearing so forthright a title as Mr. Leeds's a reader has every right to turn with great expectancy. . . What is peculiarly offensive are the author's innuendoes that that which is compassionate, humanitarian, social-minded in the contemporary scene is false to the spirit and the credo of France. Perhaps he has not been seeing enough of the many French men and women who judge otherwise." Leo Gershoy
— Yale R n s 29:823 summer '40 300w

LEEMING, JOSEPH. From barter to banking; the story of the world's coinage and money. 138p il $2 (8s 6d) Appleton-Century

332.4 Money (W) 40-6922

Concise story of the world's coinage and money from the time of the primitive system of barter, when furs and skins were the medium of exchange, to the present-day usages. An appendix gives values of foreign and colonial moneys. Grades five to eight. Index.

Booklist 36:348 My 1 '40

"The account is interestingly presented, and is given in the usual clear style of the author."
+ Wis Lib Bul 36:152 N '40

LEES, HANNAH. Women will be doctors. 271p $2 Random house 40-27495

A pretty woman interne determines to prove to herself and the men doctors on the hospital staff that women make just as good doctors as men. Romance and an emergency at the hospital both aided her to prove her point.

Booklist 36:383 Je 1 '40

"Miss Lees tells a good story . . . and she sets it in a scene which most people find interesting, if only because our ordinary contact with hospitals is from the outside in."
+ Books p8 My 26 '40 550w

"This would be a good story for any young woman planning to enter medicine to read."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '40 120w

"The romance is on the routine side; the hospital stuff is nicely popularized for readers who never tire of hearing what goes on behind the doors marked 'No Admittance.' "
New Repub 102:737 My 27 '40 50w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p23 My 19 '40 290w

"The medical details, as usual, are interesting."
New Yorker 16:92 My 25 '40 50w

"All of this story takes place within the hospital, the same hospital we have seen so often of late. But this time the picture is painted without distortion or sentimentality. Miss Lees knows her hospitals and her doctors, and she writes of both with refreshing naturalness and honesty. 'Women Will Be Doctors' is an interesting and well-written first novel." M. S. U.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 Je 1 '40 360w

LEFFINGWELL, ALBERT (DANA CHAMBERS, pseud). She'll be dead by morning! 251p $2 Dial press 40-30531

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p17 Ag 25 '40 140w

"This is Dana Chambers at his best—not to be missed." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p8 Ag 31 '40 80w

"A satisfactory story of its kind." Kay Irvin
N Y Times p16 S 1 '40 190w

"Well written and soothingly active."
+ New Yorker 16:56 Ag 31 '40 30w
Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 24 '40 40w

LE GRAND, pseud. See Henderson, L.

LEHMANN, PAUL. Forgiveness; decisive issue in Protestant thought; with a foreword by Reinhold Niebuhr. 234p $2 Harper

234 Forgiveness. Theology. Barth, Karl 40-8163

"The central contention of this volume is that forgiveness is today the decisive issue in Prot-

LEHMANN, PAUL—Continued
estant thought. With the emergence and persistently vigorous thinking of Karl Barth, the Reformation emphases upon grace and forgiveness have once again been brought into clear focus. Barth and his allies are challenging the Protestant communion to recover the doctrine of forgiveness, rooted in God's grace, which was lost to the descendants of the Reformers because of the effects of the Enlightenment." Crozer Q

"The young Elmhurst professor, serving as a fellow of Union Seminary, studied with serious intent and produced a work that is truly challenging to the Protestant world. Storing his references and footnotes in the back of his book next to a very workable index, Dr. Lehmann has combined the earnest sincerity of Christian piety and an objective scholarship that gives profundity and clarity to the eight chapters." A. L. Murray
+ Churchman 154:20 Jl 1 '40 190w

"Theologically, it is an interesting study. It gives us a clear window through which to look into certain rooms in the minds of such thinkers as Schleiermacher, Ritschl, Barth, and Brunner. Religiously, however, the volume is apt to leave one, particularly the liberal, quite cold." G. W. Davis
+ — Crozer Q 17:224 Jl '40 700w

LEISER, CLARA, tr. Refugee. 308p $2.50 Prentice-Hall

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. Refugees, Political 40-14878

Personal account of the experiences of two Aryan Germans of the working class, who after terrible hardships in Germany, escaped and came to this country, bringing their small son.

Reviewed by J. H. Barnett
Ann Am Acad 213:203 Ja '41 500w
Booklist 37:134 D 1 '40

"Such a book, quite frankly, is heart-breaking to read, the more so when written, like 'Refugee,' without frill or artifice. Indeed, no artifice could make more poignant, for example, Elli's telling about coming home from the police prison, soon after her husband's first arrest, with Hans's soiled linen. . . Not that the book is a record of unrelieved horror. If it cannot be read for entertainment, still it should be read. For it makes us understand that Nazism is an evil to guard against not only as long as it has active adherents, but as long as there are those who, like the discouraged Germans of the 1930's, would 'give it a chance,' or even as long as there are those who are not wholeheartedly aligned against it. And it makes us think of the little boys whose parents didn't escape." D. M. Young
+ Books p18 S 29 '40 550w

"Their story is not one for readers who do not like to be disturbed. There is cruelty in it, injustice, daily dreariness. No one can want to read the book except in the unquenchable faith that knowledge will contribute to the dawning of a better day."
Christian Science Monitor p11 S 28 '40 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '40

"It must have taken much courage to write the book, for it doubtless meant the re-living of an experience which most men and women would prefer to forget. Yet the reading of it, perhaps, should be a duty; for only by reading such books may we inform ourselves of the true nature of Nazi horror, whose menacing tentacles reach out toward all free men. This book is not a literary masterpiece, and it is something more than a mere human document." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p12 S 29 '40 800w

"The style is simple, factual, unadorned; it reads like a letter to a friend. For sheer horror Hans's description of the insane, perverted tortures indulged in by the concentration camp officials is the high pitch of the book, but even more heartbreaking is his wife's story of the gradual nervous and physical collapse brought on by the more subtle kind of Nazi torture." K. W. S.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 S 28 '40 390w

Reviewed by G. H. Saenger
Survey 30:92 F '41 250w

LEMAITRE, GEORGES EDOUARD. André Maurois. 128p $2 Stanford univ. press [9s Oxford]

B or 92 Maurois, André 39-30899

An interpretative study of this modern French writer and his works by the professor of Romanic languages at Stanford University. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:176 Ja 1 '40

"Professor Lemaître has written a useful account of M. Maurois's life and works, of which the main virtue is that it relates the work which we enjoy to the person whom we do not know so well."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p352 Jl 20 '40 500w

LE MAY, GERALDINE. Story of a dam. 68p il $1.50 Longmans

627.8 Norris dam, Tennessee—Juvenile literature. Dams 40-27651

The librarian of the Library school of Emory University has written this concise account of the building of the Norris dam and the work of the Tennessee valley authority for readers in grades five to seven. Copiously illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 37:41 O 1 '40

"The price is high for a book whose audience will be limited." Dorotha Dawson
Library J 65:813 O 1 '40 30w
Social Studies 31:378 D '40 10w

"Miss Le May's little volume is entirely factual and a new realization of the drama and engineering skill of such a feat as the Tennessee Valley authority project should result. The many illustrations have been selected with evident care and are handsomely reproduced."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 27 '41 230w

"Miss LeMay is a librarian and speaks from first hand knowledge for she had a job with the T. V. A."
+ Wis Lib Bul 36:143 O '40

LENANTON, MRS CAROLA MARY ANIMA (OMAN). Alfred, king of the English; il. by E. Boye Uden. 246p $2 Dutton [6s Dent]

Alfred the Great, king of England—Juvenile literature 40-32134

Story of the boyhood of King Alfred, describing in detail his journey to Rome when he was six years old. It is told as if by his faithful follower Denewulf, who is only a few years older than Alfred. For young readers.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Ja 26 '41 260w

"In general [the author] keeps to modern speech, in which her prose style is neat, graceful, and graphic. She has written a notable book for schoolboys and schoolgirls, and one which many grown-ups will find worth reading. It is a romance worth telling and well told." J. M.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 27 '39 320w

"Carola Oman tells the story of a great man and a great English king with imagination, accuracy and grace of style, and there is a fine sincerity in her writing which makes a far-away past real and appealing." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 12 '41 460w
Times [London] Lit Sup sup ii D 16 '39 80w
Wis Lib Bul 36:154 N '40

LENGYEL, EMIL. The Danube. 482p il maps $3.75 Random house [16s Gollancz]
914.96 Danube river (W) 39-27920

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

Bookmark p8 Mr '40

"In conveying a sense of the history of the Danube valley, unceasing as the river current itself, Mr. Lengyel is particularly adept. His style might be easier. It smacks of the guide-book now and then, but this is a mechanical fault that does not apply to his way of thinking, which is always lucid and connected. A good index adds to the book's reference value." E. B. S.
+ — Boston Transcript p3 Mr 2 '40 420w

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 5 '40 550w

"If the Danube belongs to the dumb creation, Mr. Lengyel manages to maintain a steady stream of cliches on its behalf long enough for even the strongest lips to turn wan. The result is a work that deserves the epithet 'colourful' if ever a book did. Into its pages are packed, hugger-mugger, without proportion or plan, snippets of hectic history, ancient and modern, side by side with gruesome legends and pearls of the guide-book style (how are the Baedekers fallen!) and occasional notes on the present plight of the countries concerned. But these latter oases, alas, are minute and rare, and all between stretches a desert of purple sand, which almost entirely obliterates the real significance of the Danube for our generation, the essential developments which have taken place on its banks and the problems which have to be solved there." John Lehmann
— + New Statesman & Nation 19:283 Mr 2 '40 480w

"The book is written in a vivid and bright journalistic style which may be irritating for some English readers. Some phrases ring false. . . There are also small inaccuracies arising from the picturesqueness of the style. These are, however, minor and possibly academic points."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p82 F 17 '40 850w

Reviewed by Josef Hanc
Yale R n s 29:628 spring '40 650w

LENROW, ELBERT. Reader's guide to prose fiction; an introductory essay, with bibliographies of 1500 novels. 371p $3 Appleton-Century
016.823 Fiction—Bibliography (W) 40-27223

"A publication sponsored by the Commission on secondary school curriculum of the Progressive education association. The novels are topically classified and have rather long descriptive annotations. Indexed by author and title. Bibliographical data includes language of original edition, translator, publisher, date, and paging, but not price. Not limited to secondary school guidance of reading, though planned for that; librarians needing a subject list of fiction will welcome it." Booklist

---

Booklist 36:275 Mr 15 '40

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 6 '40 60w

Pratt p3 autumn '40

"This Guide does not of course take the place of such standard works of reference as Helen Keller's Reader's Digest of Books or Baker and Packman's A Guide to the Best Fiction, but it is of real value not only for the special groups for which it was prepared but to teachers and students of cultural history and contemporary civilization, adult education groups and workers, librarians, and indeed to all readers and students of fiction." J. M. Gambrill
+ Social Educ 4:446 O '40 650w

Wis Lib Bul 36:95 My '40

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). Blueberry Corners. 209p il $2 Stokes 40-30539

A household in the Connecticut hills a hundred years ago is the scene of this story for boys and girls. Parson Griswold and his wife and their many children were a happy family, altho comforts were few and luxuries unknown. The coming of the first train to the Naugatuck Valley and Becky's determination to observe Christmas are the high lights of the book.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p13 N 10 '40 350w

"Lois Lenski's [is a] lovely new book." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 30 '40 200w

"Well done, but a conservative children's story. Drawings by the author are excellent."
+ Churchman 154:34 D 1 '40 20w

"Miss Lenski, writing with her informed historical background, will reach younger children than have usually read her books of this kind." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:349 S '40 130w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin
Library J 65:661 Ag '40 160w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:851 O 15 '40 50w

"This is a jolly story of a big family in the Connecticut hill country in 1840, accurate in historical content, as are all the books of this author. Her own black-and-white drawings contribute charm and humor." E. W. Steele
+ New Repub 103:844 D 16 '40 40w

"Becky's determination that Christmas should come to Blueberry Corners brought about the first celebration of that festival her Puritan household had ever known, and makes a fine chapter for reading aloud at Christmas time. This is a kindly, genuine and human story that girls and boys from 8 to 12 will enjoy." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 N 17 '40 250w

"Written for somewhat younger children than Miss Lenski's previous books with an early New England background, it is perhaps her most appealing."
+ New Yorker 16:128 D 7 '40 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 100w

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). The little train [il. by the author]. unp 75c Oxford
(W) 40-276[illegible]1

Picture-story book for pre-school children, about the workings of a railroad train.

Booklist 37:19 S '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p32 N 10 '40 150w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 27 '41 110w

"Lois Lenski's Little Train is the kind of matter-of-fact picture book that brings satisfied joy to the multitude of eager little boys who have insatiable curiosity about big mechanical things. The big brothers of these boys, when they were little, put their emphatic stamp of approval on Miss Lenski's Little Auto." Lena Barksdale
+ Horn Bk M 17:63 Ja '41 50w

"This book will answer parents' requests for a book about familiar objects to read aloud to a four-year-old child. Numerous black and white drawings. Excellent make-up." Marian Herr
+ Library J 65:769 S 15 '40 60w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:842 D 16 '40 40w

LENGYEL (len'gyel)

LENSKI, LOIS—Continued

"'The Little Train' is more nearly picture book size than the earlier volumes. The drawings have action and humor and charm, they show details so plainly that the little child will find them eminently satisfying, and they are beautifully reproduced in clear, soft blacks and grays and a warm brown which delight the eye. A book that school and public libraries will want and one that the 4- to 7-year-old will take to his heart at once." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 O 6 '40 260w

LENT, HENRY BOLLES. Flight 17; il. by Doris and George Hauman. 96p $1 Macmillan

629.13 Aeronautics, Commercial—Juvenile literature (W) 40-34202

Describes step by step a trip by transport plane from New York city to Chicago, including not only the trip and the plane but also the airport, with its weathermen, air traffic cops, and radio beams. For ages eight to ten.

Booklist 37:140 D 1 '40

"Ever since 'Diggers and Builders' in 1931, I have been suggesting Mr. Lent's plain, simple little books to parents of little boys who want, more than anything else in a book, plain and simple facts about things that work. He has thus satisfied early cravings on the subject of derricks, trains, ocean liners, tugboats and fireboats. He now takes off on a transport plane. The method is the same; it would be hard to improve it for this special audience." M. L. Becker

+ Books p13 N 10 '40 210w

"An up-to-the-minute informational book, attractively presented in concise text and clear drawings." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 11 '40 90w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:853 O 15 '40 30w

Reviewed by Sonja Wennerblad
Library J 65:927 N 1 '40 100w

Reviewed by Raymond Holden
Sat R of Lit 23:21 N 16 '40 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 250w

LEOPOLD, RICHARD WILLIAM. Robert Dale Owen; a biography. 470p il $4.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Owen, Robert Dale 40-34930

"Mr Leopold's subject was the eldest son of Robert Owen, who made a fortune in the early stages of industrialization in England and used it to further social reforms. Although born in Glasgow, Robert Dale Owen came to this country as a young man, to take part in his father's experiment in applied socialism at New Harmony, Ind., and he spent most of his life here after that." Springf'd Republican

"This is clearly a definitive biography—thorough, scholarly, objective, discriminating, intelligent, and well written. It tells us everything that we need to know about Owen; it tells a great deal that is new about New Harmony, the freethought movement, labor and the labor press, Indiana politics, and spiritualism. It is a model biography of a figure whose claim to rescue from oblivion is dubious." H. S. Commager

+ — N Y Times p3 D 15 '40 1400w

Social Studies 32:48 Ja '41 20w

"A well-balanced volume, primarily for serious readers which deserves to be classed among the really worth-while biographies of the lesser people who made the last century what it was." D. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 6 '40 600w

LERMAN, LEO. Leonardo da Vinci, artist and scientist; il. by Robert Ball. 312p $2 Bobbs

B or 92 Leonardo da Vinci—Juvenile literature (W) 40-32278

This biography of Leonardo da Vinci portrays him as a genius, chiefly in the fields of science and art. For readers of twelve to fourteen. Index.

"This is not just one more life of Leonardo; it is a concise stimulating biography taken from a viewpoint attractive to young people—say in the later teens." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ja 26 '41 320w

"Will be read with intense interest and enjoyed to the utmost by every youngster, whether artistically gifted or scientifically minded."

+ Cath World 152:510 Ja '41 250w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p12 N 27 '40 140w

"Much has been said in recent years of his work in flight, so that young people interested in aviation should enjoy this excellent book. It is written in an agreeable style and recounts the most important events in his career." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:446 N '40 50w

"The story is rather slow moving, having too many details of Leonardo's career. There are many quotations from his diary but no reproductions of his paintings. The style of writing is for the younger child but the author presupposes an understanding of Italian history and conspiracies during the period of the De-Medici's power which only an older reader would have. Many times the clarity of the plot is lost in unimportant incidents. The illustrations for the chapter headings are made by Robert Ball and though they are charming and reflect the spirit of the times, they do not give to the boy or girl reading of Leonardo da Vinci what photographs of the art of the period or Italy would. The book should interest the reader in the art of the Middle Ages but it contains no paragraphs of the paintings of Perugino, Botticelli, Raphael or even of the rising young Michelangelo, though it does tell of their rivalry in painting the same battle scene." Julia Carter

Library J 65:813 O 1 '40 240w

"A workmanlike biography of one of the most astounding men who ever lived. Good reading."

+ New Yorker 16:130 D 7 '40 20w

LE ROSSIGNOL, JAMES EDWARD. From Marx to Stalin; a critique of communism. 442p $3 Crowell

335.4 Communism 40-31408

Study of the basic ideas of Marxism, criticized in the light of historical developments since the writing of Das Kapital. The book also includes a sketch of Marx's life and personality, with some account of Soviet social and economic conditions. The author is dean of the College of business administration in the University of Nebraska. Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. D. Lewis
Am Pol Sci R ~~34:1~~224 D '40 650w

"This is the work of a widely read and completely fair-minded author. It makes easy reading and is rich in material; it gives numerous excerpts on all important points of the Marxian doctrine, from Marxian and post-Marxian writings as well as from critical comments; it gives a lively and detailed account of the political history of Marxian national and international movements; and it may be used with advantage for general information as well as for quotations from numerous scattered publications." Eduard Heimann

+ Ann Am Acad 213:204 Ja '41 550w

"Scholarly and very readable book." K. M Chworowsky

+ Christian Century 58:25 Ja 1 '41 1050w

"The work is solidly documented (there is an excellent bibliography at the conclusion) and, although the chapters are brief, the reader will find workmanlike, handy descriptions of such Marxian conceptions as dialectical materialism, the labor theory of value, the theory of surplus value." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 12 '40 360w

"Though LeRossignol's four hundred pages furnish the reader with abundant quotations from the Marxist literature, the reader finishes the book without a definitive vision of what Marxism really means to us and future generations. In this voluminous book we miss any serious discussion of how Marxism will influence the freedom of the individual, how it will accommodate itself with the values of family and nation or with the intellectual and artistic traditions." C. O. Cleveland
Commonweal 33:33 O 25 '40 240w

"Whatever his purpose, Mr. LeRossignol has written an excellent 'examination and criticism of communism.' There is nothing particularly new in the volume, but its virtue lies in the clear exposition of 'Marxism' and an evaluation of its strengths and weaknesses. The material is excellently organized and the basic theses of socialism are treated with dialectical directness." L. B. Bloch
+ Living Age 359:186 O '40 1800w
School & Society 52:176 S 7 '40 20w
Social Studies 31:378 D '40 20w
Springf'd Republican p12 N 27 '40 500w

LESLIE, SHANE. Mrs Fitzherbert. 394p il $4.50 Benziger [15s Burns]

B or 92 Fitzherbert, Mrs Maria Anne (Smythe). George IV, king of Great Britain [40-10469]

"Although for fifty-four years of her long life Mary Anne Smythe, known to history as Mrs. Fitzherbert, occupied the place nearest the orbit of the Prince of Wales (later George IV) in the galaxy of his attachments, and although contemporary chronicles, gazettes and diaries found her every move worthy of record, she has been the subject of only two biographies. . . In the present biographical study, Shane Leslie, descended from Minney Seymour, her adopted daughter, draws upon family archives, court documents and other closely guarded source material to substantiate the reality of the secret marriage and to make Mrs. Fitzherbert emerge as the 'honest woman' she was in contrast to the Perditas and adventurous peeresses who at some time or other engaged the heart of His Royal Highness." N Y Times

"[Mrs Fitzherbert's] story, here fully told for the first time, is an enthralling one, and it throws much light on the England of the Regency and the years immediately before and after. Shane Leslie is descended from Mrs. Fitzherbert's adopted daughter. This book is obviously a labor of love in the well documented case it presents for the clearing of her reputation. Because of his family connection and because of the passage of time, documents and letters long preserved in inviolate secrecy have been made available to him. He has woven a fascinating account from them." Mason Wade
+ Books p20 Mr 10 '40 950w

"Mr. Leslie has gathered all the significant material—much of it newly available—and has written a fair, serious, and excellently documented biography."
+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 7 '40 250w

"Mr. Leslie's industry is admirable, but his arrangement and comment are inadequate—which he candidly admits—and tendentious. The religious repercussions of the royal romance direct his judgment, and one of his main purposes seems to be to remove any lingering aspersions that time and Whig statesmen may have left on a Catholic lady's morals." Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 18:650 N 4 '39 470w

Reviewed by Frances Winwar
N Y Times p5 F 11 '40 800w

"There can be no doubt that this book is the most informative life of Mrs. Fitzherbert that we have ever had, or are ever likely to wish for. For all that, it is not a very interesting work. . . Mr. Leslie has throughout made rather clumsy use of his material. The book is badly proportioned and has no index. It is written with an irritating slovenliness." Christopher Hobhouse
— + Spec 163:592 O 27 '39 850w

"As a coherent narrative, 'Mrs. Fitzherbert' has obvious shortcomings. As a repository of notes for future reference and a portrait gallery of contemporary types and oddities, one can recommend the book to every student of that particular period."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p576 O 7 '39 2300w

LESTER, KATHERINE MORRIS, and OERKE, BESS VIOLA. Illustrated history of those frills and furbelows of fashion which have come to be known as accessories of dress; drawings by Helen Westermann. 587p $10 Manual arts

391.4 Costume. Fashion. Jewelry (W) 40-31572

Contents: Accessories worn at the head; Accessories worn at the neck, shoulders, and waist; Accessories worn on the feet and legs; Accessories worn on the arm and hand; Accessories carried in the hand; Accessories used on the costume. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:63 O 15 '40
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p10 Ja 5 '41 420w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

"The student of the history of dress or design will of course find the book particularly rich in suggestions."
+ J Home Econ 32:633 N '40 70w

"The book will inevitably find its way onto the working bookshelf of every costume and scene designer, as well as into the library of everyone who finds delight and inspiration in its picture of the follies and foibles of La Comédie Humaine."
+ Theatre Arts 24:911 D '40 880w

LESTER, MURIEL. Dare you face facts? 125p $1.25 Harper

261 Sociology, Christian 40-9542

"The facts to be faced are all the conditions that make the world the kind of place it now is, with its poverty, ignorance, quarrelsomeness and stupidity, and also its human and divine resources. The people who are invited to face it are those who call themselves Christians and those who, whatever they call themselves, claim to be well meaning and really want to help more than hinder the progress of humanity." Christian Century

---

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
Books p10 Jl 28 '40 300w
Christian Century 57:675 My 22 '40 110w

"It is one of the best books for dead-in-earnest but well-balanced people that has appeared for a long time. Her pacifism is a fire burning on every page and he who is not yet ready to accept the Christian pacifist position had better leave the book alone." H. J. S.
+ Churchman 154:34 Je 15 '40 100w
Wis Lib Bul 36:123 Jl '40

LESTER, REGINALD MOUNSTEPHEN. Weather prediction. 256p il $4.25 Chemical pub. co. [10s 6d Hutchinson]

551.5 Weather forecasting [40-29126]

"An importation from Britain, written by an army major and Fellow of the Royal Meteorological Society, this book is naturally concerned chiefly with weather observations

LESTER, R. M.—Continued
affecting the British Isles. There are, in addition, however, many references to climatology in other parts of the world, including North America. . . A knowledge of sky signs, in conjunction with a study of daily synoptic charts, is recommended as a primary requisite in the study of weather, with special attention given to cloud types." Scientific Bk Club R

"Anyone who reads through Major Lester's book will acquire a considerable knowledge of the facts which have been accumulated concerning the weather, but he will also unfortunately acquire some rather questionable ideas. . . The statements to which objections are here raised take up relatively little space in the book, but they leave the impression that the vigorous use of a blue pencil would have improved Major Lester's book considerably." D. Brunt
+ — Nature 146:818 D 28 '40 850w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 19:731 Je 8 '40 400w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:50 O '40

Scientific Bk Club R 12:2 Ja '41 470w

Times [London] Lit Sup p343 Jl 13 '40 80w

LESTER, RICHARD ALLEN. Monetary experiments; early American and recent Scandinavian. 316p il $3.50 Princeton univ. press [16s Oxford]

332.4 Money. Currency question 40-1400

"In the past, as at the present dislocations whether caused by war or depression have been met by various experiments with the medium of exchange. [This monograph contains an] exposition of two groups of these plans by a professional economist. The first section deals with the early American efforts to develop its monetary system. The result is an interesting account of colonial economic history. The second section describes recent monetary policies of the Scandinavian countries as they have battled depression." (Boston Transcript) Index.

"This is a readable account of a number of instances in which unorthodox monetary measures appeared to produce good results, and of several cases in which orthodox monetary procedures appeared to produce bad results. . . A few minor errors in the text are doubtless due to careless proof-reading, but the author surely merits at least mild censure for uncritically presenting from a secondary source a table purporting to show the percentage depreciation of colonial currencies in terms of the British pound sterling, in which the figures for depreciation include such mathematical impossibilities as 295 per cent, 463 per cent, 950 per cent, etc." L. H. Seltzer
+ — Am Econ R 30:422 Je '40 480w

Reviewed by D. H. Leavens
Am Hist R 45:847 Jl '40 340w

"Excellent book. . . Beginning with the Playing-Card Currency of French Canada, the author gives a clear presentation of the leading currency experiments in the American Colonies. While his sources are extremely varied, he has combined them very well, and pleasantly enough he has not hesitated to bring in a number of quite humorous quotations. . . Professor Lester has previously written about the Swedish experiences with 'managed money,' and in this book he again writes a very thoughtful story on this so widely publicized subject. . . For a change, the monetary policies of Norway, Denmark, and Finland are not forgotten. That is a refreshing thought, and one which should add importance to his good work." E. T. H. Kjellstrom
+ Ann Am Acad 209:235 My '40 460w

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 20 '40 120w

LESTER, RICHARD ALLEN, and KIDD, CHARLES VINCENT. The case against experience rating in unemployment compensation. 60p pa $1 Industrial relations counselors

331.25444 Insurance, Unemployment 39-25966

"This attack on what has been defined as 'the American contribution to the theory of unemployment insurance' is a companion document to The Case for Experience Rating in Unemployment Compensation and a Proposed Method, by Herman Feldman and Donald M. Smith [Book Review Digest, 1939]. To this reviewer Messrs. Lester and Kidd seem to have made the better case. In spite of poor organization the major points in their argument are clear: The purposes ascribed to experience rating are inconsistent with each other when practical methods are devised for effecting them." Am Econ R

"The authors have marshalled effectively most of the arguments ever presented against experience rating, and have added some of their own. Since the issue has been raised and pressed by a number of firms which have been able to stabilize employment, it is well to have attention called to the difference between economies for individual firms and the economics of an industrial system." E. W. Bakke
+ Am Econ R 30:210 Mr '40 450w

"While pointing to several weaknesses in the arguments for experience rating the authors leave themselves open to criticism by taking a rather unrealistic view of the way employers actually respond to the stimulus of a pay-roll tax reduction." C. A. Myers
J Pol Econ 48:617 Ag '40 130w

Reviewed by Martin Saxe
Pol Sci Q 55:154 Mr '40 250w

LE SUEUR, MERIDEL. Salute to spring [and other stories]. 191p $2 Int. pubs.

40-10297

Volume of short stories by a Middlewestern writer, dealing for the most part with the struggles of the American proletariat. Contents: Corn village; No wine in his cart; Fable of a man and pigeons; A hungry intellectual; The girl; Annunciation; Biography of my daughter; The dead in steel; Tonight is part of the struggle; "Farewell my wife and child and all my friends;" Salute to spring; I was marching.

"Miss LeSueur is in some respects the most intense and self-consciously workmanlike artist proletarian literature has produced, and if the limitations and bigotry of that literature often serve only to throw her own work into relief, she has positive virtues enough to remind us that an artist's will and fiber can be more important than the sources from which they are drawn." Alfred Kazin
+ Books p7 Je 9 '40 950w

"Few writers today are quite as intense as Miss LeSueur and few are as well equipped to write out the theme that has become a program. Miss LeSueur brings to her material a rare sensitivity and affection; perhaps because she is a woman, she has managed to give her people an emotion that is clear and at once understandable." Milton Lehman
+ New Repub 103:361 S 9 '40 300w

New Yorker 16:83 Je 1 '40 60w

Time 35:92 Je 17 '40 60w

LETTERS from the Corsican; a series of communications from Napoleon Bonaparte to Adolf Hitler. 179p $2 Vanguard

940.53 European war, 1939-. Hitler, Adolf 40-32404

Twenty-two letters purporting to have been written by Napoleon to Hitler. Their subjects are various: the unity of Europe; the English gentlemen; the value of science; how to conquer America; the mud of Munich; etc.

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes
Books p10 Ja 12 '41 310w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Boston Transcript p1 S 28 '40 150w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 23 '40 320w

Living Age 359:391 D '40 150w

"Luckily the Fuehrer, who, by his own confession, is the 'hardest' man Europe has produced in centuries, is notoriously lacking in the sense of humor; so the imaginary letters of an imaginary Bonaparte would, in any case, be lost on him. The general reader, however, will enjoy the spectacle of the Fuehrer being taken for a ride and, incidentally, derive some hope from the shrewd conclusions derived by the anonymous author." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p3 D 8 '40 550w

"Urbane, farsighted, and apparently quite in character."
New Yorker 16:78 O 5 '40 50w

"Letters written in just such a shrewd, satirical, patronizing style as the Corsican might have used. It is an interesting contribution to that steadily growing volume of wishful thought and prophetic deduction by which democratic writers are trying to kill Hitlerism with the typewriter and printing press." M. E. Tracy
Sat R of Lit 22:20 O 19 '40 360w

LEVANT, OSCAR. A smattering of ignorance. 267p $2 Doubleday

780 Music. Musicians (W) 40-27094

Six long essays, partly autobiographical, partly on music and musicians, actors, and others who have played a part in the author's life or impinged upon his consciousness. The chapter entitled My life: or the story of George Gershwin, describes in witty fashion the friendship between Gershwin and the author. The latter attained national prominence for his clever work on the radio program Information, Please.

Booklist 36:234 F 15 '40

"Essentially Levant is an entertaining fellow, even in his most serious moments, and entertainment is the basic quality of his book. . . He has included enough wit and malice and pleasantry to satisfy the most voracious appetite for the private lives of the notables whose names go up in lights. . . The drama of Gershwin's career has been retailed almost too frequently since his untimely death, but Mr. Levant lends such personal warmth to it, such sure technical knowledge of the musical composition as observed by a fellow worker who basked in Gershwin's spirit, and such wry humor of the type Gershwin and Levant obviously enjoyed together and with a peculiar gusto of their own, that one may only welcome this chapter as the best account to date of Gershwin's life." William Soskin
+ Books p4 Ja 14 '40 1400w

"[The author] reveals himself in every page. He is by turns elated and accomplished, depressed and derivative, deliciously humorous and pathetically pompous. Because of these revelations, 'A Smattering of Ignorance' is in reality a series of personal essays by Oscar Levant on Oscar Levant and Oscar Levant's career and friends. But the frankness, vigor, and tenacity of the book makes it one of the most refreshing comments on American music I have read. It is not a searching analysis: it is rather an autobiography of a young man in the mill of American music." Roy Lamson, Jr.
+ Boston Transcript p11 Ja 18 '40 400w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 17 '40 370w

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '40

"Excellent and interesting shop talk." Philip Burnham
+ Commonweal 31:309 Ja 26 '40 700w

Reviewed by Robert Offergeld
Forum 103:267 My '40 160w

"This book isn't bad fun, and to say that the author sounds like a perfect heel is not to malign it either, for that is an impression Oscar Levant cultivates deliberately and with anxious care. . . Whether he likes it or not, he is a necessary ambassador between the lay world and that 'state of music' Virgil Thomson was trying to talk about while actually giving the impression of talking about something else. The kind of ambassador whose main object is to give his opposite number a hotfoot, it is true; but he has stuff to bring over, and can bring it. A little more of that, a little less confusion over the difference between a wit and a wise-cracker, and he could do something about ignorance beside smattering it." Otis Ferguson
+ — New Repub 102:283 F 26 '40 370w

Reviewed by Howard Taubman
N Y Times p12 Ja 21 '40 600w

"Mr. Levant, having up and written himself a book, places me in the traditionally embarrassing reviewer's position of liking both book and author. . . As 'A Smattering of Ignorance' is only incidentally about music, even a musical analphabetic like myself may dare to comment on it without too much fear of self-exposure. When it does touch upon music per se, the result is perfectly understandable and hugely delightful to the layman—which means, I suppose, that it's deficient in critical significance. But, for the most part, this is a book of comic myths in which many of the leading characters happen to be musicians. . . While the book is brilliant, it is not as brilliant as Mr. Levant's conversation: he is a dinner-table, not a library-table, wit." Clifton Fadiman
+ — New Yorker 15:61 Ja 13 '40 1150w

Pratt p23 autumn '40

Sat R of Lit 21:21 Mr 9 '40 150w

Reviewed by H. G. Percey
Special Libraries 31:174 My '40

"The book has much of the 'Information, Please' quick-witted but flashy statement, and is not always in good taste. . . A Smattering of Ignorance is undeniably fluent and readable and replete with amusing turns of thought, however innocent it may be of literary quality." Montefiore
+ — Theatre Arts 24:220 Mr '40 600w

Wis Lib Bul 36:97 My '40

LEVIN, ALFRED. Second Duma; a study of the Social-democratic party and the Russian constitutional experiment. 414p $3 Yale univ. press [14s Oxford]

947.08 Russia. Gosudarstvenna͡ia duma. Russia—Politics and government 40-8406

"The Second Duma, which was in session during the first six months of 1907, was an important episode in the revolutionary process which began with the 'first revolution' of 1905 and the First Duma of 1906 and culminated in the great revolution of 1917. . . This very detailed study, the first in English on such a scale from the original sources, gives a thorough analysis of the revolutionary forces and parties as of 1907." Christian Century

---

Reviewed by F. T. Epstein
Am Hist R 46:403 Ja '41 700w

Christian Century 57:582 My 1 '40 120w

Nation 151:430 N 2 '40 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p427 Ag 31 '40 110w

LEVIN, MEYER. Citizens. 650p $2.75 Viking (W) 40-7246

Fictionized version of the slaying of the ten steel mill strikers in Chicago on Memorial day, 1937, when the police prevented the striking steel workers from establishing a picket line before the plant. The author has included the stories of the ten workers who were killed during the riot.

LEVIN, MEYER—Continued

Atlantic My '40 110w

"If there is on the American scene a more vital issue than that dealt with in 'Citizens' I do not know of it. It may be said to contain within itself more than a small clew to the question of America's future. To be sure, the facts involved have repeatedly been presented in elaborate technical reports, but it remains the novelist's job to clothe the facts with flesh, give them emotional dimensions, bring them, in short, to life. This Meyer Levin has done lavishly and well. No writer would come to such a theme without bias, but not many I dare say could present it with so few overtones of rancor or bitterness." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p4 Mr 24 '40 1000w

"Mr. Levin's book is by no means flawless. The dreary analyses of the academic sociologist overemphasize the naivete of Mitchell, some of the characters never come alive, and some of them are stock. A little more earthy humor would have helped relieve the almost unbroken seriousness of 643 pages, and sometimes the style seems flat. But not often, and these are insignificant faults which Mr. Levin will surely overcome. He has meantime given us a novel that can stand proudly and securely with Steinbeck's." Ann Springer

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Mr 30 '40 1100w

Canadian Forum 20:124 Jl '40 800w

"'Citizens' is an absorbing book. One reads to the end of its 650 pages. Yet as a whole it has the interest and power of good reporting rather than of fiction. It tends to fall apart because the character of Dr. Wilner is not sufficiently well realized to weld it together. One feels that, consciously or not, the objective in inventing the character of Dr. Wilner was not so much to create a character as to educate the public; Dr. Wilner is Mr. Levin's pupil, and parts of his progress take on a primer-like quality. At times the writing goes soft after the fashion of so much didactic 'left' writing of the past decade." Margaret Marshall

+ — Nation 150:515 Ap 20 '40 600w

"Meyer Levin has done a remarkable thing: single-handed, and without forewarning in his previous work, he has struck the shackles of photographic realism from the strike novel. He has risen far above the pedestrian writers who during the depression sought merely to document what happens during a strike, who by accident stumbled upon and adopted a limited, simple-minded, impressionistic technique." Harold Strauss

+ N Y Times p2 Mr 31 '40 1200w

"Mr. Levin handles his facts like a realist. . . [He] is full of social and even biological theories, which he threads into his book to illuminate and make significant the detail of his story. . . So important is his subject matter that the reader will temporarily lose sight of Mr. Levin's obvious shortcomings as an artist in the realization that here is meaningful and arresting content, handled with intellectual conscientiousness." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 16:73 Mr 30 '40 490w

"'Citizens' is not a novel of character, for the author does not create any vivid and rounded characters. His eye for detail is reportorial. His treatment of politics is vague, and disorientated. He speaks of having written this kind of a book in order to lessen the chance of reaching false conclusions, but he reaches no conclusions of any consequence. It is pretty much a book of dull discussions." J. T. Farrell

— + Sat R of Lit 21:11 Mr 30 '40 750w

"A good reporter and a capable novelist, Mr Levin calls on both talents to give a thoughtful and disturbing version of a labor tragedy that shook the nation and gained the attention of Congress."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 31 '40 900w

Time 35:88 Ap 8 '40 110w

LEVINE, ALBERT JULIUS. Current psychologies; a critical synthesis. 270p $2.75 Sci-art pubs.

150.19 Psychology 40-6094

"In this book the author in an effort 'to resolve a distressing miscellany of psychological facts and theories into a workable synthesis' makes the following 'classification of schools of psychology . . . (1) The Neurological (classical or scientific) school; (2) The Gestalt school with its topological orientation; (3) The Purposivist school; (4) The Freudian school comprising (a) Freud, (b) Jung, (c) Adler, (d) Rank.' " cf. Pref.

"In the reviewer's opinion . . . the volume is not at all on the plane of either the earlier Heidbreder or the Woodworth text. The chapters on 'The Freudians' and 'The Freudian Dissentients' seem to be the best, although quite possibly the reviewer would not think so if he knew as much about these systems as he does about the others. Behaviorism, functionalism, stimulus-response theories and all else which cannot be classified as psychoanalytic, purposive, or gestaltish are forced under the weird heading of 'The Neurological School.' Perhaps the book will be sufficiently damned when it is said that only about twenty-five names of contemporary psychologists appear on its pages." P. R. Farnsworth

— + Am Soc R 5:680 Ag '40 160w

"The justification for the present volume on contemporary schools of psychological thought is that it brings this subject up to date and emphasizes similarities and differences of opinion a little more than has been done in the past. The author has a clear style, but lacks the power of condensation that Woodworth manifests in his work." Livingston Welch

N Y Times p16 My 5 '40 600w

LEVISON, JACOB JOSHUA. The home book of trees and shrubs; with an introd. by Samuel J. Record. 424p il $5 Simon & Schuster

635.976 Landscape gardening. Trees. Shrubs 40-8799

"A layman's guide to the design, planting, and care of the home grounds, with information on lawns, woodlands, flower borders, garden accessories, and the identification of trees." Subtitle

---

Booklist 36:409 Jl 1 '40

"The author writes from thirty-five years' practice as a landscape forester. Consequently he knows his subject from deepest feeding rootlet to top-most twig and he imparts his lore in one of the most easily understood and helpful specialized gardening books we've encountered for a long time. . . His generous accompaniment of illustrations is especially well selected and reproduced. They help visualize point after point in the necessary steps of landscaping that turn a mere house into a home and a chaos into a well-ordered garden." Richardson Wright

+ Books p9 My 26 '40 650w

"Many excellent horticultural books are published monthly in America, but seldom do we find one quite so satisfying and inspiring as Mr. Levison's volume on trees and shrubs. In this work the author—who has spent his whole life in the study and care of trees as forester and university lecturer—has happily combined the practical and esthetic phases of his subject." F. F. Rockwell

+ N Y Times p5 Je 9 '40 320w

LEVITSKY, LOUIS MOSES. A Jew looks at America. 107p $2 Dial press

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. Jews in the U.S. 39-32114

"A well known Pennsylvania rabbi examines the status of the Jew and his role in American life." (New Repub) "What Rabbi Levitsky does is to take America as the type and symbol of our contemporary democratic civilization and show how perfectly the Jew fits into this society. His long training in democracy, his love of freedom, his trust in education, his family tradition, his deep-rooted moral sense, his instinct of religion, all these are the very materials out of which democracy must be built. There can be no question of the Jew's adaptation to American life nor of his invaluable contributions to it. Nor can there be question of the Jew's part and place in that New World commonwealth of which we like to think America the prophecy." (J Religion)

"I do not recall that the word 'anti-Semitism' appears in this book. In the nine essays there is no discussion of this ugly theme of prejudice and persecution. Even in the reference to Hitler there is exclusive emphasis on the fact that Hitler is not a Jewish but rather a world-problem. Yet this little book is as complete and convincing an answer to anti-Semitism as I have ever seen." J. H. Holmes

+ J Religion 20:317 Jl '40 230w

New Repub 102:769 Je 3 '40 30w

LEWIS, EDWIN. A philosophy of the Christian revelation. 356p $3 Harper

231.73 Revelation. Christianity—Philosophy 40-34100

The author finds that the question of "revelation" is again becoming central in Christian thinking:—that is, the claim of Christians that God is revealed to man thru Christ. His book, devoted to a consideration of this claim, is in three parts: "The first part endeavors to present the claim respecting Revelation. The claim is approached from the standpoint of 'a philosophy of the word.' . . The second part of the book considers the problems arising out of the general claim. Those problems are necessarily metaphysical, philosophical, epistemological, psychological, and, as respects the alleged Virgin Birth of Christ and his Resurrection, if nowhere else, scientific as well. The third part considers to what extent the Revelation may be able to do what it has always done—maintain itself in an ever-changing scene." (Foreword) Indexes.

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr

Books p30 N 17 '40 500w

"Through all [his] difficulties I believe that Lewis is struggling with a profound truth: Christian thinking is conditioned by the historical acts of God in nature, in Christ and in the Christian fellowship. Just because the problem of formulating this truth is so crucially important it is cause for sadness that Lewis' solution should be stated in such confused and dogmatic terms. We can sympathize with his own struggle, the marks of which are here on every page, but surely one who finds Christian truth so difficult should state more accurately the views of other Christians who also have their struggles, and who find other interpretations of the gospel more intelligible and meaningful." D. D. Williams

— + Christian Century 57:1513 D 4 '40 900w

"The book is beautifully and persuasively written, and no one who would understand neo-reactionism at its best can afford to miss it." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 155:20 Ja 1 '41 270w

LEWIS, MRS FAYE CASHATT. Doc's wife. 198p $2 Macmillan

B or 92 40-9187

The autobiography of a doctor's wife, who was also a doctor in her own right. The two graduated from the same medical school and settled in a small Iowa town. "Doc's wife" answered the phone for him, rattled over country roads in the model T in order to help him professionally, and adjusted her housekeeping to the erratic hours as well as she could, and incidentally preserved her sense of humor.

Reviewed by Mary Ross

Books p9 Jl 14 '40 400w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 40w

Churchman 154:35 Ag '40 70w

"As a picture of small-town life, her story is as good as 'Main Street.' "

+ New Repub 102:681 My 20 '40 60w

N Y Times p3 My 12 '40 360w

"In spite of herself Fay Lewis emerges from her pages as much the most interesting phenomenon in the book. Because she has none of the novelist's flair for dramatic emphasis either of character or of event, you may be a little bored at times. But the chances are that it will hold you by its forthright human quality and unconscious revelation of a thoroughly likable woman in whom intelligence, humor, and honesty combine with tonic effect." M. S. U.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:19 Je 22 '40 280w

LEWIS, HERBERT CLYDE. Spring offensive. 223p $2 Viking

40-7421

A young American boy, out of a job and jilted by his girl, manages to join the British army fighting in France. The night before the beginning of the spring offensive he wanders off into no-man's land, is caught in a barrage and wounded, hides in a shell hole, and finally is killed. The story follows alternately his thoughts and those of a small group of people at home—his mother, his old employer, his best friend, his lost sweetheart.

Booklist 36:383 Je 1 '40

"Mr. Lewis's unpretentious and lucid parable . . . has quality and a modest importance. It is one of your whispering novels—quiet, very, very suggestive, with a craft that is mostly undertone. It has more than its share of conventional emotion, and it does not come off completely, true; but as a tour de force which blends fantasy and thoughtful realism it has moments of such high good feeling, humor and sense that it gives the reader a certain happiness." Alfred Kazin

+ Books p2 My 26 '40 900w

"In our opinion Mr. Lewis's 'Gentleman Overboard' was the best novelette of a decade. . . Compared with Mr. Lewis's other story, this one is less effective. Judged alone, it is a forceful and beautifully written tale, a compact, satiric and original argument against the futility of war. You had better read it."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '40 130w

"This may be just the moment for thousands of Americans to read Mr. Lewis' moving and vitally significant little story." E. G. Eastman

+ Christian Century 57:1055 Ag 28 '40 370w

"Another anti-war sermon and a good one, written in the gentlemanly sort of prose that never raises its voice."

+ New Repub 102:650 My 13 '40 50w

"Mr. Lewis writes really first-rate prose and his book makes a powerful impact. He has no answers, there is only the problem—the most desperate problem of these years." Robert van Gelder

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 28 '40 1000w

"A cleverly contrived tour de force, with undertones that will have meaning for all Americans."

+ New Yorker 16:90 My 4 '40 80w

"The book is a supreme piece of oversimplification. It is an expression—perhaps one of the last—of the dream-world in which American hopefuls have been living, confident that the complex realities that face us are reducible to simplicity if only our reasoning is sufficiently amiable." C. O., Jr.

— Sat R of Lit 22:20 Jl 6 '40 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 7 '40 700w

LEWIS, LLOYD. Myths after Lincoln [with a new pref. by Carl Sandburg]. [rev ed] 422p $3.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. Booth, John Wilkes 40-27652

"Some revision, new material relating to Booth and additional source material as well as a preface by Carl Sandburg differentiate this from the original edition [Book Review Digest, 1929]." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 37:72 O 15 '40

"It is not only the most entertaining of all the books concerned with Lincoln, but also an almost incomparable example of history presented with full perception of the comic elements which appear in the most serious events."

+ Books p29 S 29 '40 60w

LEWIS, MICHAEL ARTHUR. England's sea-officers; the story of the naval profession. 307p il $3 Norton [10s 6d Allen, G]

359 Great Britain—Navy—Officers [40-10720]

Study of the origins, growth from earliest times, and present conditions of the naval profession in England. The author, who is professor of history at the Royal Naval college at Greenwich, does not consider personalities, but devotes his work to the admiral, the captain, the engineer, the surgeon, the paymaster, etc. Index.

"It is a book to please two sorts of readers: those interested in the naval profession, and those who would explore the workings of the English mind. Its naval interest is obvious, and nowhere, I surmise, does the British mind function in more characteristically British fashion than when it busies itself (or, rather, permits itself mildly to be concerned) with that typically British institution, His Majesty's Navy." R. F. Armknecht

+ Books p23 Mr 31 '40 440w

Times [London] Lit Sup p370 Je 24 '39 600w

LEWIS, SINCLAIR. Bethel Merriday. 390p $2.50 Doubleday [9s 6d Cape, J]

(W) 40-27224

Story of a young girl's theatrical career from her days of high school dramatics, thru her experiences in a summer theater and on the road with a touring company, to her first rehearsals for a Broadway comedy.

"The story of this touring company is told with definitive mastery of narrative technique; the author successfully sustains an excitement on the reader's part and yet writes with a gentleness which one does not associate with Mr. Lewis. This new simplicity of approach is in no way soft or sentimental; it is rather the work of a matured artist writing about the kind of people and the kind of work he really loves. This is a fascinating novel, and a very acute study and presentation of the upper, middle, and lower levels of that strange, self-conscious race, the strolling players of the world."

+ Atlantic Ap '40 260w

Booklist 36:284 Mr 15 '40

"Like many others who have been branded as crass realists, Sinclair Lewis is incurably romantic. His readers enjoy the pleasure of recognizing the areas of life he has explored so scrupulously, sympathize with his hopes, and applaud or resent his disillusions. The heat of the resentment that his novels have sometimes occasioned is in itself a measure of the closeness of his observation; and the tendency he naturally deplores of persons and places to rise up and assert that they were his models, even when they repudiate the resulting portrait, is proof, if proof were needed, of the actuality of his work." Mary Ross

+ Books p3 Mr 24 '40 1700w

Reviewed by Ann Springer

Boston Transcript p8 Mr 23 '40 850w

Cath World 151:250 My '40 380w

"On the whole, the novel belongs in the big line of 'Main Street,' 'Babbitt,' 'Arrowsmith,' 'Dodsworth,' 'It Can't Happen Here,' rather than in such lesser branches as 'Mantrap,' 'Work of Art,' or 'The Prodigal Parents.' In fact, like 'Dodsworth,' it is more likable than most of the author's books, because it has more human warmth." L. A. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 22 '40 370w

"The plot of 'Bethel Merriday,' like most of Lewis's plots, counts for little. Indeed it is weaker, perhaps, than is usual with him. His heroine's 'love-life' is in spots about as improbable as anything you can imagine. But if you like Lewis, you will forgive all that. His philosophy also seems to have mellowed a little. Less cracks, more gentle kidding seems to be the ticket, which may be a result of the author's growing older, may be the result of his love for the stage. In any case, a pleasant book." H. L. Binsse

+ — Commonweal 31:477 Mr 22 '40 600w

"This novel is one of Lewis' poorer books. There will be a temporary demand because of the author's prestige. Cautious purchase recommended." H. A. Carpenter

— Library J 65:257 Mr 15 '40 80w

"Mr. Sinclair Lewis, as usual, knows his stuff, and he presents it with the expertness of an old hand; his writing is as slick and smart as ever. But unquestionably 'Bethel Merriday' would be a better novel if he had curbed his tendency to over-expansiveness and exercised a more drastic control of his material." Wilfrid Gibson

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 29 '40 390w

Nation 150:401 Mr 23 '40 200w

"'Hearts and Flowers' tinkles through our memories as we close the book and muse on Mr. Lewis' achievement. He has mingled the shapes and sounds of real life with grease paint and treacle, and made a story to delight the soft-boiled hard guy." Edgar Johnson

New Repub 102:413 Mr 25 '40 600w

"Bethel Merriday is incurably kindly, and gentle satire is perhaps the feeblest of all literary forms. Mr. Lewis is a skilful craftsman and distinguished reporter, and has put up as nice a set of targets as any satirist could desire. It is a pity that he has refrained from knocking them down." John Mair

New Statesman & Nation 19:436 Mr 30 '40 750w

"A novel full of figures and empty of life is 'Bethel Merriday.' One can time Bethel's arrivals and departures, entrances and exits perfectly; but no memorable person comes in or goes out; it is a stock novel of stock theatre." P. M. Jack

— + N Y Times p2 Mr 24 '40 1350w

"'Bethel Merriday' is first-rate light reading, full of the old greaselight-and-footpaint appeal, stuffed with the precise detail of which Mr. Lewis is a past master, and centred in a pleasant heroine who is appealing if not quite real." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 16:83 Mr 23 '40 800w

"'Bethel Merriday' is one of the least successful and least satisfying novels that have ever come from an author of deservedly high reputation." B. R. Redman

— Sat R of Lit 21:7 Mr 23 '40 900w

Reviewed by John Marks

Spec 164:498 Ap 5 '40 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 24 '40 1000w

"The reader will note that Sinclair Lewis' mellowness sometimes goes maudlin, that his asides on the renaissance of the stage through college and summer theatre companies are more enthusiastic than thoughtful, that about half his characters are themselves straight out of stock, and that as a novel the education of Bethel Merriday is neither so close-knit nor so serious in import as was that of Martin Arrowsmith. But the reader must likewise note that this is not the sour and rickety work of an old self-imitator but a buoyant tale with neither claims nor pretensions to being a profound work of art."

+ — Time 35:97 Mr 25 '40 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p157 Mr 30 '40 850w

LEWIS, W. ARTHUR. Economic problems of to-day. school ed 191p $1.25 (3s 6d) Longmans

330 Economics

"Though written primarily for schools, this clear and well-informed little book will serve as an admirable introduction for the general reader to the economic problems of the present day. The various solutions of the questions connected with production, distribution and unemployment are considered, mainly in the light of recent British experience, and an account is given of the economic policies of Russia, Germany, France and the United States. Short bibliographies at the end of each chapter enhance the value of the book in its avowed role as an introduction to further study." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by J. E. Moffat

Am Econ R 30:905 D '40 190w

"The reviewer felt, as he was reading this book, that he was listening to the lecture in simple, understandable language; that the author was lending his enthusiasm to the thesis he was trying to present. The book should have a wide circulation in the secondary schools and the public at large." E. A. Lissfelt

+ Social Studies 32:92 F '41 240w

"It would be very hard to speak too highly of Mr. Lewis's achievement, and it is to be hoped that the inauspicious moment of its appearance will not prevent its having the success which it deserves." H. M. C.

+ Spec 164:816 Je 14 '40 320w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p319 Je 29 '40 100w

LEWIS, WYNDHAM. America, I presume. 298p $2 Howell, Soskin

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. National characteristics, American 40-30267

A portrait of America in the winter of 1939-1940 as seen by a visiting Englishman. Under a slight guise of fiction—the narrator is an English soldier, Major Corcoran, who with his American-born wife is on a lecture tour—the book discusses the American scene, American society and politics, American attitudes toward themselves and others.

Atlantic N '40 130w

" 'America, I Presume' has the casual charm and formlessness of many British plays that do not stand transplanting to Broadway. The author of 'Tarr' and 'Apes of God' has not found anything very shocking to say about us. He has found more hostility to the English than he expected and he has tried to understand this. Probably he would have less hostility to report were he writing at this moment, when Churchill's sturdy figure has blotted out most of our images of a little man with an umbrella." Lorine Pruette

Books p22 S 29 '40 600w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 S 25 '40 60w

"Latest British satirist to give patient Uncle Sam a good going over is Wyndham Lewis. Writing as an over-ultra British major, Mr. Lewis has spent a year in the United States, during which he has managed to unearth an extraordinary number of unpleasant things about the country, its ways and its inhabitants. Interspersed among the criticism is a meager sprinkling of commendations. But the book has a clever, fast style and much of Mr. Lewis's criticism is founded in solid fact." J. G. H.

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 14 '40 280w

"Whether or not his delicate position as a visiting English writer—and hence a propagandist suspect—is to blame, Mr. Lewis seems to be pulling his punches. His first-rate wit makes the book extremely amusing in spots, but as an analysis of the American scene it is sketchy, often based on superficial observation and a reworking of clichés. It is to be hoped that Mr. Lewis will stay here longer and give us another book on ourselves. He is a writer whose considered opinion ought to be helpful."

+ — Nation 151:400 O 26 '40 110w

"When Mr. Lewis uses the word 'American,' the reader is occasionally tempted to ask him if he knows what he is talking about. Within his narrow limits, however, Mr. Lewis has something to say. He is sometimes shrewd, often amusing. In two chapters—Provincial Decay and If I Were A British Agent—he discusses certain changes which, in his opinion, America is now undergoing, and certain other changes which England must shortly undergo. If you juxtapose the two chapters you will find them extremely speculative but also most suggestive. They throw, as it were, a little sunlight on the future. They might almost be said to justify the whole book." George Dangerfield

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:14 S 7 '40 500w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 S 7 '40 1350w

"Some of it is obvious, some misfires, a good deal is so good it inspires keen regret that it is not a great deal better. Taken as a whole, America, I Presume can be guaranteed neither to bore nor blindfold any U.S. reader."

+ — Time 36:64 S 2 '40 370w

LEWISOHN, LUDWIG, and LEWISOHN, MRS EDNA (MANLEY). Haven. 340p $2.75 Dial press

B or 92 40-35056

"[This] is the history of a honeymoon in the form of a diary, with Ludwig and Edna Lewisohn writing their separate entries—what happened, what they said, what they thought, what they thought of each other. The entries present the same events, but [with a] difference in point of view, in emphasis and emotional reaction." Books

"As a personal record and revelation, 'Haven' is marked by sincerity and a glow of beauty." Lisle Bell

+ Books p27 O 27 '40 370w

"Ludwig Lewisohn, one of the finest stylists in American literature, writes without taste and without perspective of his difficulties as man and as artist." Lewis Gannett

— Boston Transcript p9 O 25 '40 50w

LEYSON, BURR WATKINS. Flight training for the army and navy; introd. by Alexander P. de Seversky; foreword by G. de Freest Larner. 283p il map $2.50 Dutton

629.13 Aeronautics, Military (W) 40-27863

"A manual for pilots and aircraftsmen based on the official curricula of the army air corps and naval air service." (Subtitle) The book does not tell how to fly an airplane; it is an introduction to military and naval aviation. Gives qualifications and requirements for the service. No index.

Booklist 37:213 Ja 15 '41

"Although the technical material can be found in other recent books, this is simply written with good diagrams easy to follow. The photographs are poorly reproduced. While the book is not a complete handbook of flight, as the jacket claims, it is adequate as an introduction to this very technical subject. Intended for those old enough to fly it will be of interest to boys of fifteen and up." Eleanor Kidder

+ — Library J 66:85 Ja 15 '41 150w

LEYSON, BURR WATKINS. Photographic occupations; choosing your career in photography. 178p il $2 Dutton
770 Photography (W) 40-31921

Survey of the outstanding fields in photography for readers who are considering it as a possible career. Partial contents: Press photography; Advertising photography; Commercial photography; Portrait photography; Motion-picture photography; Newsreel photography; Medical and surgical photography; Photographer-war correspondent; Color photography; Aerial photography; Military photography; Nature study photography.

Booklist 37:94 N 1 '40

"Twenty-one excellent chapters each dealing with a different branch of photography. The excellent photographs will inspire the amateur. This book may be placed in both children's rooms and young people's collections." R. W. Stewart
+ Library J 65:881 O 15 '40 110w

"Mr. Leyson's long and diversified experience in the field of photography makes this little volume of considerable practical value to those who are looking to the camera for a livelihood."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 7 '40 120w

L'HOMMEDIEU, MRS DOROTHY KEASBEY. Rusty, the little red dachshund; il. by Marguerite Kirmse. 56p $1.50 Lippincott
(W) 40-33798

Picture-story book describing the adventures of a little red dachshund who ran away from home to improve his mind, and his long day of excitement with his friends the rabbit, the duck, and the little white rooster.

Booklist 37:221 Ja 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Ja 26 '41 200w

"Charming pictures of the satiny-skinned dachshund." E. W. Steele
+ New Repub 103:842 D 16 '40 30w

LIBELLUS de medicinalibus Indorum herbis. See Cruz, M. de la. Badianus manuscript

LIDA. The kingfisher; pictures by Rojankovsky; tr. by Lily Duplaix. [32p] $1 Harper 40-6905

A kingfisher and his mate lived on the banks of a small brook. This story for young readers describes their life and that of their young, thruout the seasons until the parents died. The book is the latest in the Père Castor series.

Booklist 36:348 My 1 '40

"Rojankovsky's bright pictures and decorations give a vivid sense of the changing outdoor scene." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:163 My '40 60w

Reviewed by Marian Herr
Library J 65:454 My 15 '40 60w
Wis Lib Bul 36:155 N '40

LIEBERMAN, ELIAS, 1883-. Man in the shadows. 102p $2 Liveright
811 39-24483

Collection of verse, most of which has been previously published in periodicals. "Dr Lieberman's social conscience attacks 'man's inhumanity to man' with the verbal skill of the classic satirist who has full control of his medium and impales an object of hate on a perfect epigram." (Living Age)

"Elias Lieberman's third volume is a distinct advance over his earlier volumes, and is compact of an ardent personal sentiment and a feeling for other people." Alfred Kreymborg
+ Living Age 358:295 My '40 150w

"Mr. Lieberman has a commanding virile quality, although he asserts too loudly and too often that the world of dreams is far superior to the world of reality. It is when he deserts this theme to observe and reflect upon the objective world that he gains his greatest effectiveness." M. J. Prussing
+ — Poetry 56:221 Jl '40 140w

"A highly readable book of poetry. . . Without exception, the poems in this book express ideas compactly and with effectiveness."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 3 '40 140w

LIEFERANT, HENRY, and LIEFERANT, MRS SYVIA (SALTZBERG). United they stand. 256p $2 Dutton
(W) 40-4095

Describes the everyday lives of the seven members of an American family, composed of Susan and Matthew Van Linden, and their five daughters.

Booklist 36:398 Je 15 '40

"A narrative of family life, of appealing warmth and everyday reality. It depicts the sort of situations which could arise in any family, and is agreeably lacking in melodramatics. We think it the best novel this team has produced." Lisle Bell
+ Books p16 F 11 '40 220w
Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '40 100w

"There are depths of judgment and feeling under the light surface of this pleasant book. . . Altogether [it] provides an agreeable evening's reading." C. D.
+ N Y Times p7 F 4 '40 280w

LIFAR, SERGE. Serge Diaghilev; his life, his work, his legend; an intimate biography. 399p il $5 (21s) Putnam
B or 92 D͡iagīlev, Serg͡ieĭ Pavlovīch. Ballet
(W) 40-33124

"Comprehensive biography of the great ballet master by a dancer who was his protégé—in effect, a gossip history of the European arts during the first thirty years of the century." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 37:136 D 1 '40

"The present volume is made up of two books. One is a chronicle of Diaghilev's life and varied enterprises. Though admirably documented and reinforced by the excellent interpretation which Mr. Lifar's career in the dance makes possible, this portion of his work surveys ground long familiar and adds little of overwhelming importance to what we already know. But, in the second of his two books, Mr. Lifar has given us something far more arresting and, perhaps, historically, more valuable. This is an account of Diaghilev—the man and the creative artist—predicated upon the closest personal relationship and professional collaboration. It is to Mr. Lifar's credit that this account, though written in reverence and enduring affection, provides us with a genuinely credible portrait—the portrait of a genius and a failure. . . Because the man was in many ways great and in other ways ignoble, much of Mr. Lifar's book is as painful to read as it must have been to write. But, as a whole, it is an extraordinary and a significant document, and no student of the civilization and culture of yesterday can afford to ignore it." Lloyd Morris
+ — Books p18 N 24 '40 650w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 33:130 N 22 '40 390w

"Those who care about the Russian Ballet will read Lifar's book in spite of any or all reviews. Few others will buy a five-dollar book which is a monumental agglomeration of factual misinformation, repetitious quotes from well-known books now in print, startling omissions, and maddening technical errors. But the book does also contain information that can be found nowhere else, and a running commentary by a protege of the great man which, though it is by turns waspish, hysterical, unreliable, is also on occasion extremely penetrating and even touching." Lincoln Kirstein

— + Nation 151:481 N 16 '40 850w

"In the second part of the book . . . the meticulous noting of petty intrigues, the settling of private feuds, and a smirking, pretty-pretty, love-in-the-mystical note, hardly make pleasant reading, while the 'intimate' details of the author's relations with Diaghilev . . . are revolting not merely in themselves, but also by reason of the clumsiness of Mr. Lifar's pen. Under these circumstances, the translator's task must have been arduous in the extreme, and no wonder his version lacks distinction—though on the whole it is a trifle less trite than the original Russian text." V. Nabokov

— New Repub 103:699 N 18 '40 800w

"The place to be filled by a new life of Diaghilev is stated in this book's subtitle and explained by its author's career. This is an 'intimate biography,' and the well-known dancer Lifar writes from the vantage point of his own training under Diaghilev and his association with the last years of the impresario's life. It is a full and interesting recital which is peopled with other celebrities as well as those whose work was confined to the ballet, and it is illustrated with a number of portraits and dance scenes. . . This book offers a really rich addition to one's ballet library."

+ N Y Times p14 N 24 '40 500w

"A fascinating work, touched with that slight lunar immodesty you may have learned to expect from Russian artists."

+ — New Yorker 16:103 O 12 '40 60w

"Mr. Lifar has had access to Diaghilev's private papers, and, though the greater part of the story is well known, they enable him to shed new light, especially upon the early years of his life and upon his activities as an art critic. These chapters are the best part of the book. For when Mr. Lifar himself enters the story the narrative becomes clouded with subjective emotions. . . Yet, odd as this may seem to Mr. Lifar, the resulting portrait of Diaghilev will strike the average reader as that of a singularly unpleasant man with hardly any redeeming qualities." Dyneley Hussey

+ — Spec 166:17 Ja 3 '41 350w

Theatre Arts 24:911 D '40 250w

"The bibliomania of Diaghilev's last years, the sympathetic portrait of Stravinsky, the attempts to recall Nijinsky from the darkness of his mind, the description of Cecchetti in his old age, the author's own artistic and intellectual development are additional sources of interest in an important book whose chief defect is a faulty design, which was perhaps inevitable in the light of the author's youth and relationship to his subject."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p632 D 14 '40 1000w

LIGHTY, MRS MARGARET, and BOWMAN, LEROY EDWARD. Parenthood in a democracy; the origin and history of a large urban federation of parents and an interpretative analysis of its objectives and methods in education and organization for family life in a democratic society; with a foreword by William H. Kilpatrick. 236p $1.50 Parents' inst, inc, 9 E. 40th st, N.Y.

371.103 United parents associations of New York city. Parent and child 40-1025

Part one, by Margaret Lighty, is a history of the United parents associations of New York city; part two, by Leroy E. Bowman, is an analytical study of the parent education and organization movement. The book closes with a biographical sketch of Robert E. Simon, founder of the United parents associations and its leader for fifteen years.

Reviewed by R. S. Cavan

Am J Soc 46:632 Ja '41 200w

Booklist 36:208 F '40

"Should be a valuable book for parents' study groups throughout the country." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p13 Ja 14 '40 450w

Boston Transcript p1 F 17 '40 10w

N Y Times p21 F 11 '40 370w

"The book should prove useful and informative on the shelves of all interested in community organizations." S. M. Isaacs

+ Survey 76:83 F '40 450w

LIGUTTI, LUIGI G., and RAWE, JOHN C. Rural roads to security; America's third struggle for freedom. (Science and culture ser) 387p il maps $2.75 Bruce pub.

323.354 Sociology, Rural 40-6958

A statement of an agrarian philosophy of life, written from the Catholic viewpoint. "The authors call for a multiplication of small land holdings and a lessening of our highly centralized and corporate type of industry with its accompanying proletarianism. The volume seeks to avoid an extreme view, the authors disclaiming the position of 'those who demand for the good of society, a clear cleavage either in favor of agrarianism to the exclusion of industrialism or industrialism to the exclusion of agrarianism.' " (Cath World) Selected bibliography. Index.

"All in all, the volume is well worth the perusal of anyone. It is encouraging indeed to see the addition to the long-neglected field of Catholic rural literature." E. S.

+ Cath World 151:244 My '40 420w

"The volume . . . marshals many facts and some figures, charts and pictures. Readers could have been saved much time and the temptation to skip pages had the authors avoided repetition and given more thought to organization. Yet here we have it, the presentation of a new way of living with arguments and testimony for it. It should be read and pondered." Mark Rich

+ — Christian Century 57:736 Je 5 '40 650w

" 'Back to the Land' is more than a wishful slogan for the solution of America's domestic ills. It is developing into a realistic and well-defined part-time and subsistence farming program that should have the support of every socially-minded American. It should be a major concern of public and private colleges and universities in all sections of the country. After reading 'Rural Roads to Security,' it is difficult to think of the successful application of the principles of the encyclicals, the reconstruction of the American social order, or the saving of American Democracy in other terms." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ Commonweal 31:535 Ap 12 '40 1100w

Reviewed by John O'Grady

Survey 76:307 O '40 310w

Wis Lib Bul 36:96 My '40

LILLY, MRS JEAN (MCCOY). Death thumbs a ride. 252p $2 Dutton

40-2005

Detective story.

"Fair to middling opus." Will Cuppy

Books p9 Ja 21 '40 140w

"Jean Lilly does an excellent job of writing as a man (maybe she is a man hiding under a pen name), and her detection is clear and above board. She has a large cast of characters and manages to make every one live, in spite of a few typecastings. On the whole, lively and interesting." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '39 70w

"The story is rather vague in spots, and it moves a little too slowly until the closing scene, which is exciting enough to make up for these deficiencies." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p7 D 31 '39 200w

LILLY, JEAN—Continued

"Fair enough if you don't mind being thwarted."

New Yorker 15:63 Ja 6 '40 40w

"So long as you keep track of all plots involved its O. K., but that's a pretty tough job. Intricate."

Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 20 '40 40w

LILLY, MRS JEAN (MCCOY). A hundred Tuftys; pictures by Tibor Gergely. [32p] $1.50 Dutton

40-13278

Picture-story book for pre-school age. It describes what happened when a little boy named Barry had his favorite toys photographed, and Tufty the bear sneaked in an order for one hundred pictures of himself.

"The story rests on the special interest little children take in a 'regular photograph'; it is not (usually) vanity, but a sense of the magical, the marvellous, in looking into a big black box and seeing one's own self afterwards on paper. That hundred copies is a good touch; do you remember when you looked at every one of the dozen with an underlying hope that the next might be just a little different? Slight as the book is, it has a good foundation." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Jl 14 '40 260w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins
Library J 65:661 Ag '40 130w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 110w

LIMOUZE, ARTHUR HENRY. Homeland harvest. 211p $1; pa 60c Missionary educ. movement

266 Missions 39-13839

"Dr. Limouze depicts the story of home missions, the motives, work and economic undergirding, and pays tribute to missionaries. This story [relates] the development of religion in our great Middle and Far West, with that of the railroads, prairie lands and politics. The task of home missions is great and the cost large, but the enterprise, he shows is bearing much fruit." Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p7 Mr 30 '40 80w

"The author writes out of full knowledge and gives us a story which is colorful and moving; it has the fascination of a book of fiction. In fact, it is the most interesting home missions document which I have read for many a year." W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 17:158 Ap '40 70w

Reviewed by A. G. Baker
J Religion 20:209 Ap '40 160w

LIMPUS, LOWELL M. History of the New York fire department; with a preface on the ancient art of fire fighting, by John J. McElligott. 380p il $3.50 Dutton

352.3 New York (city). Fire department. Fire extinction 40-27276

The New York fire department had its beginning in December, 1731, with the arrival of two new Newsham fire engines from Europe. This narrative history of the department is a record of the changes in fire fighting apparatus and methods down to the year 1939. Contains a list of commanding officers of the department, a bibliography, and an index.

Booklist 36:300 Ap 1 '40

"The book has an entertaining preface by Commissioner McElligott on fire fighting in ancient Rome; valuable appendices and an index. If a New Yorker does not appreciate fire fighting and fire fighters before he reads it, he will before he finishes it." Allen Raymond

+ Books p18 Ap 21 '40 800w

"In our opinion this book certainly belongs in the New York city schools and in the hands of the millions of Americans who call New York city their own, and who from a distance like to become acquainted with details about 'the big city.'" W. A. Reilly

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 16 '40 300w

"The book is brought up to date in a well-ordered manner. Many anecdotes concerning famous fire-fighters in action enliven the historic data, and more than one middle-aged reader will experience nostalgic thrills at the references to the fire horses of a past generation." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p2 Mr 17 '40 700w

New Yorker 16:107 Mr 16 '40 30w

LIMPUS, LOWELL M. Twentieth century warfare; how modern battles are won and lost. 205p $1.75 Dutton

355.4 Military art and science. Tactics 40-6043

"This book is written for all those interested in the military art—for the soldier, the student of military science, the man in the street and the armchair strategist. It codifies and summarizes in non-technical fashion the general rules and principles which are universally recognized by military experts. It outlines the basic professional knowledge which every soldier should possess. The author . . . is military editor of a great newspaper and his work has been widely syndicated. He was formerly managing editor of the Army and Navy Journal and he has frequently contributed to various service publications." (Publishers' foreword) Index.

Bookmark p19 N '40

Boston Transcript p8 Mr 23 '40 100w

New Repub 102:386 Mr 18 '40 60w

"The book is mainly informatory and explanatory and every layman if he would understand the mechanics of land warfare should have it on his shelf." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p36 D 8 '40 180w

"Easy to read and apparently sound."

+ New Yorker 16:64 Mr 2 '40 30w

LIN, YU-T'ANG. With love and irony; il. by Kurt Wiese. 291p $2.75 Day

895.1 (W) 40-33972

Collection of witty and urbane essays on a multitude of subjects, by the author of The Importance of Living (Book Review Digest 1937). Partial contents: The English and the Chinese; The Americans; The Chinese and the Japanese; Captive Peking; Crying at the movies; Mickey Mouse; Buying birds; My library; Confessions of a vegetarian; Funeral notices; Freedom of speech; King George's prayer; The coolie myth; The lost mandarin; In defense of Chinese girls; A suggestion for summer reading; Basic English and pidgin; The future of China.

Booklist 37:171 Ja 1 '41

"Dr. Lin is, I think, at his best when he is actually exhibiting his own varied sense of the goods of life, its modest pleasures, its comforts even—for he burns here with a small pleasant flame. The love and irony of his title are familiar affection and cozy humor. He is less good when he attempts, as he frequently does, philosophical generalizations. But his specific observations and appreciations are pointed, sensible and engaging. This book exhibits Lin Yutang's special talent, and one in an excellent tradition, one almost as vanished as that 'Lost Mandarin' class about whom Dr. Lin writes with such nostalgia and grace. It is the talent of the very human essayist, who avoids or has never known transcendental flights of feeling or thought. . . The celebration of the little goods by the Little Critic are a continuous reader's pleasure, communicated in excellent English. One kowtows. For kow-towing, as Dr. Lin points out, has hygienic values." Irwin Edman

+ Books p1 N 17 '40 950w

"An inconsequentially charming book." Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p11 N 19 '40 60w

Reviewed by Harry Sylvester
Commonweal 33:285 Ja 3 '41 330w

Reviewed by Eleanor Van Alen
+ Current Hist & Forum 52:1 D 24 '40 480w

"Only the product of an ancient civilization with both a classical and a modern educational background could have written these essays." Eleanor Van Alen
+ Current Hist & Forum 52:5 F 13 '41 150w

"Every type of reader will find some of these essays to his taste. Recommended." J. A. Sohon
+ Library J 65:981 N 15 '40 60w

"From piquant representations of the golden mean (in vegetarianism, for example!) to praise of the comic strip as moral commentary, from a fable on Japanese aggression to a delightful dissertation on the arrangement of books in one's library ('to classify them is a science, but not to classify them is an art'), even in excoriating phrase sometimes and invitation to argument, a dancing mind leads us on a road of varied and leisurely individual charm. Lin Yutang has the essayist's gift of flinging out a witty generalization with an enliveningly questionable relevance." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p4 N 17 '40 1150w

"Dr. Lin is fairly well convinced that 'too much thinking will bring about man's destruction.' There is nothing destructive in 'With Love and Irony,' and one can well understand why intransigent Young China, whether Right or Left, should feel that Dr. Lin is just a fraction too urbane for these unurbane times." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 16:99 N 16 '40 350w

"This book is something new. New, because the title expresses the book, which is written with love and irony. New, because out of China comes a work that is almost French in feeling, bearing the French stamp of delicate irony, of a beautiful and subtly disguised bitterness, of inverted insult, of compliments which contain not a thorn, like a rose, but a dagger that tears the veil from the false sophistication which we have been conditioned into accepting." Stuart Cloete
+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 N 30 '40 650w

LINCOLN, ABRAHAM. Life and writings; ed. and with a biographical essay by Philip Van Doren Stern; with an introduction, Lincoln in his writings, by Allan Nevins. 863p $3.75 Random house

B or 92 (W) 40-27241

Selection from Lincoln's speeches, letters, dispatches, and other writings, prefaced by a biographical section, and an introduction by Allan Nevins. "The principle of selection used has been to include all those items which are of biographical interest or of historical importance. . . A survey of Lincoln's life has been included in order to give the background needed to understand the full import of his writings." (A note on the text) Subject index.

Booklist 36:281 Mr 15 '40

"A selection of letters, addresses and public papers that is selective and comprehensive; it constitutes the best introduction to Lincoln that is available." H. S. Commager
+ Books p4 F 11 '40 470w

"This is probably the best book with which to begin the study of Lincoln, who was a great writer as well as a great man, and who wrote about himself better than anybody else has ever done."
+ Books p16 Ag 18 '40 50w

Reviewed by Louis Kronenberger
Nation 150:574 My 4 '40 650w

"Mr. Stern's biographical essay, 'The Life of Abraham Lincoln,' is followed by a very thorough chronology, and, together with a selection from the available Lincoln papers, forms a compact, distinct contribution of great value to the general reader." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p17 Ag 4 '40 700w

"Really worth while."
+ New Yorker 66:82 F 17 '40 40w
Time 35:88 Mr 11 '40 80w

LINCOLN, JOSEPH CROSBY. Out of the fog. 360p $2.50 Appleton-Century

(W) 40-14670

Mystery story with a Cape Cod setting.

Booklist 37:14 S '40

"A tedious yarn." Lisle Bell
Books p11 Ag 18 '40 80w

"It is good to find an Uncle Jerry holding forth with acid comments in 'Out of the Fog.' We wouldn't want Lincoln to neglect, in his new interest in mysteries, the genuine old Cape Codders he depicts so sympathetically. The other characters of his new novel are nice folks, but Uncle Jerry is the real thing." Margaret Clark
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 24 '40 320w

"Once more this popular regional novelist demonstrates his skillful craftsmanship in a tale of village life that moves along with well sustained suspense toward a climax we are confident will not disappoint our hopes. The homespun characters are portrayed convincingly and the moral issues solved in a spirit nicely blended of early Roman civic virtue and modern Anglo-Saxon practicality." D. DeK.
+ N Y Times p16 S 8 '40 410w

"Joseph C. Lincoln has proved in thirty-eight volumes that he can spin a good yarn. The thirty-ninth, 'Out of the Fog,' is a pretty good yarn too. It has all of the dry humor, the salty Cape Code characters, the general readability which his readers now have a right to expect. For good measure 'Out of the Fog' adds both mystery and romance." G. G.
+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 O 26 '40 230w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 13 '40 240w

LINDAHL, ERIK ROBERT. Studies in the theory of money and capital. 391p $3.50 Farrar [10s 6d Allen, G]

330.1 Economics. Capital. Money [40-12682]

Translation of three studies on economic theory by a Swedish economist. Part one, which is new, is a study on the methods of analyzing disequilibrium; parts two and three, which date from 1929 and were formerly available only in Swedish, consider the subjects of monetary and capital theory. Index.

"Despite some slips in translation—witness the substitution of 'produced' for 'consumed' in the fourth line of the last paragraph on p. 142 —the book is eminently readable. It is both weighty on its own account and representative of a school which Americans all acknowledge they know too little about. No American theorist can afford to neglect it." A. G. Hart
+ Am Econ R 30:584 S '40 430w

"This is one of the really important books on money that have appeared in recent years. It is not likely to appeal to the casual reader, but no serious student of monetary theory can afford to be without it." C. R. Whittlesey
+ Ann Am Acad 210:169 Jl '40 600w
New Statesman & Nation 19:50 Ja 13 '40 90w

"All English students of economics will rejoice in the opportunity of studying in their own language the development of Professor

LINDAHL, E. R.—Continued
Lindahl's thought on realistic dynamic theory which involves the discussion of problems connected with money, interest and the trade cycle."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p23 Ja 13 '40 70w

LINDBERGH, ANNE SPENCER (MORROW) (MRS CHARLES AUGUSTUS LINDBERGH). Wave of the future; a confession of faith. 41p $1 Harcourt

901 Civilization. European war, 1939- (W) 40-33024

"In this short homily, Mrs. Lindbergh suggests that even 'those barbarisms I oppose from the bottom of my heart' in Italy, Germany, and Russia may be symptoms of a new world struggling to be born and that we too must face this new world, not by attacking the totalitarians but by domestic reform conceived in the spirit of our fundamental principles." New Yorker

"A book which will give pause to those who feel that we are moving unavoidably in the direction of war, and fresh courage to those who believe that we can still do our part 'short of war.'" Edward Weeks
Atlantic N '40 300w

Discussion by Helen Everitt
Atlantic D '40 140w
Booklist 37:151 D 15 '40

"Mrs. Lindbergh writes better than her husband, but her soothing words are still in the language of appeasement. One can only hope that it will be possible to do as Mrs. Lindbergh suggests, reform democracy at home while ignoring the rest of the world. Meanwhile one wishes Mrs. Lindbergh would make clear what she means by reforming democracy. Marshall Petain is reforming it too." Irwin Edman
Books p2 O 20 '40 850w

"Here is a subtler, less dogmatic more persuasive statement of the philosophy expressed by her father-in-law, the pacifist Representative Lindbergh, in the early years of the last war, which has been echoed, mingled with dubious overtones, in the younger Lindbergh's speeches. And Anne Morrow Lindbergh is what neither of the Lindbergh men have been: a poet, an artist with words." Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 O 4 '40 360w

"Mrs. Lindbergh writes so beautifully and sensitively, despite her modest disavowals, often expressing what one has felt but not been able to formulate, that it is hard not to succumb to her charm. But in this book she has a strange thesis in spite of her claim to be merely trying to state the problem. . . Yet one must sympathize with the difficulty of finding one's bearings in a world so fantastic that, as she says, at the moment of reading of invasions and bombings of cities, one tells one's children not to use the front entrance to the house for fear of disturbing a mother robin nesting in the cornice above." Gwenyth Grube
Canadian Forum 20:322 Ja '41 350w

"The little book does not go very far, but it is sincere, and it is distinguished by the literary style and the cultural background which mark all Mrs. Lindbergh's work."
+ Cath World 152:508 Ja '41 220w

"All the more important at the present moment because not wholly acceptable to the American people in their sudden preoccupation with armaments and conscription are the messages that have recently been delivered by Charles and Anne Lindbergh. Sufficiently different in both style and substance to warrant the belief that they represent two independent processes of thought, they are nevertheless in substantial agreement. . . The affirmative thing that Anne Lindbergh says is worth enough to make it stand in spite of any criticism of details. That central affirmation is that, whatever may be the military problems and necessities of the hour, there is a whole range of realities which these do not touch. The old order is gone. Even Mr. Churchill openly says so."
Christian Century 57:1334 O 30 '40 1000w

"It was unnecessary to read far before the unhappy outcome had been made completely obvious. Mrs Lindbergh does agree with her husband. No more need be said. Her prose is, as before, prose of distinction—a delight to the eye, on the tongue. But what is she saying? Can one trust her reasoning? And so one arrives at the conclusion that beauty of prose, a prose which is rooted in poetry, is not enough." M. W.
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 23 '40 360w
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '40

"Her prose is clear, chiseled, cadenced—almost classic. It is a very sweet thing indeed to read in a day when the great questions are being written of in turgid, often illiterate journalese. . . Such simple, clear prose seems to have the force of sweet reason. Surely it reflects a mind equally balanced, equally orderly, equally compassionate. How could it be otherwise? And yet, it seems to me, now that I have put Anne Lindbergh's book down—it is otherwise with her." Clare Boothe
+ — Current Hist & Forum 52:3 N 7 '40 1350w

"This confession of faith by the wife of America's most articulate isolationist, Col. Lindbergh, will probably be one of the most widely debated titles of the year. It is exquisitely written. To many, its premise 'The wave of the future is coming and there is no fighting it' bespeaks defeatism and Fascism. To others it is hard-headed realism and Americanism."
Current Hist & Forum 52:32 N 26 '40 60w

Reviewed by L. B. Bloch
Living Age 359:384 D '40 80w

"When a Socialist argues that we should stay out of the war and put our own house in order, we know what he means by order and we respect his point of view. When the wife of Charles Lindbergh talks of a gain in spiritual values, and particularly when her only specific remark about the new life is one about lowering our standards of living, we have a right to be suspicious of what she means by 'reform.' Vagueness plus left phrases equals demagogy. 'Nazism is invincible' plus 'we must give up your high standard of living' equals appeasement. These are big bad words to use in connection with Mrs. Lindbergh's genteel essay, but I let them stand." Margaret Marshall
Nation 151:336 O 12 '40 390w
N Y Times p2 N 3 '40 500w
New Yorker 16:103 O 12 '40 60w

"A little book written with calm, rich and finely modulated expressiveness of phrase. . . Mrs Lindbergh expresses honestly her belief in ideals and her sympathy with reform, but it would be necessary to have her hopes supplemented by concrete details before their likelihood of contributing to progress could be assayed. In short, the constructive part of her essay tends to become somewhat indefinite."
Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '40 600w

Reviewed by Norman Angell
Survey G 29:558 N '40 1150w
Wis Lib Bul 36:166 D '40

LINDLAHR, VICTOR H. Eat—and reduce! 194p il $2.50 Prentice-Hall

613.2 Diet. Corpulence 40-1792

A well-known radio broadcaster outlines the safe way to reduce, and illustrates his suggestions with stories of overweight people he has known. Contains an outline of his own tested diet plan, calorie tables, and an index.

"A highly entertaining volume, but whether of scientific validity or not I cannot say."
Boston Transcript p5 D 16 '39 90w
J Home Econ 32:113 F '40 40w

LINDMAN, MAJ JAN (MRS MAJ LINDMAN-HULTEN). Flicka, Ricka, Dicka and the girl next door. [27p] il $1 Whitman, A.
40-10779

Picture-story book about three lively little Swedish girls and the lonely little girl next door, who had such beautiful clothes, but no playmates.

"A good little anecdote put into large, gay colored pictures. The text is handset monotype, 24 point, the pictures reproduced by lithographic offset. The book breathes innocence and goodness from every page." M. L. Becker
+ Books p5 Jl 14 '40 350w

"This is the second easy story about the three little girls who made their first appearance in 'Flicka, Ricka, Dicka and the New Dotted Dresses.' Like the other books, it will delight children of pre-school age when read aloud and is excellently planned for beginners to read to themselves." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 O 20 '40 110w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 120w

LINDSAY, HOWARD, and CROUSE, RUSSEL. Clarence Day's Life with father made into a play; with an introd. by Brooks Atkinson. 208p il $2.50 Knopf
812 (W) 40-27161

Play based upon Clarence Day's book of the same name. It presents a comedy of family life in New York city in the 1880s.

Booklist 36:261 Mr 1 '40
Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p21 Ap 28 '40 110w

"Mr. Lindsay and Mr. Crouse have been faithful to the character of Father and have strung together the incidents which best represent it. But for the reader who has not seen the play much of the impact of this turbulent family life is lost. The play is useful as a record, but it is not the thing. Clarence Day's own book is best for that. Here, one suspects, it is the players and the playing." A. S.
+ — Boston Transcript p1 F 24 '40 120w
Dramatic criticism by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 150:336 D '39 450w
Christian Science Monitor p6 Ag 18 '39 360w (Dramatic criticism)

"This is an altogether delightful comedy. Whether or not it completely visualizes Clarence Day's well known book I am unable to say, as I have never read it; all I can say is that it stands firmly on its own feet as dramatic entertainment." Grenville Vernon
+ Commonweal 31:118 N 24 '39 270w (Dramatic criticism)
Dramatic criticism by J. W. Krutch
Nation 149:560 N 18 '39 500w
Dramatic criticism by Stark Young
New Repub 101:169 N 29 '39 250w

"The authors of the play, Mr. Crouse and Mr. Lindsay, deserve great praise for the skill with which they have turned narrative essays into drama without loss of flavor and with, if possible, a heightening of interest." H. S. C.
+ Sat R of Lit 21:8 N 18 '39 550w
Reviewed by Jack Johnson
Springf'd Republican p2e Ag 27 '39 2000w

"Father is a shade more graceless, Mother a shade more silly than they seemed in Clarence Day's pages, yet the essence of that epic family is there; laughter and alarm attend its diurnal round." Rosamond Gilder
+ Theatre Arts 24:13 Ja '40 360w (Dramatic criticism)

Wis Lib Bul 36:65 Ap '40
Reviewed by G. R. Kernodle
Yale R n s 30:421 winter '41 310w

LINDSAY, MAUD MCKNIGHT. Jock Barefoot; pictured by Jane Linton. 177p $1.50 Lothrop 39-25439

"Jock was a fun-loving orphan but when the laird of the castle threatened him with his cane, he disappeared; at the same time the Good little people of the Fairies' glen started playing pranks on the villagers. Jock's friends finally enticed him back, and the antics of the fairies were thus explained. An amusing story for imaginative children. The scene is Scotland of long ago and the author has combined successfully fantasy with realism. Large type. Grades 4-5." Booklist

Booklist 36:266 Mr 1 '40

"Imaginative."
Sat R of Lit 21:26 N 18 '39 20w
Wis Lib Bul 36:143 O '40

LINDSTROM, DAVID EDGAR. The church in rural life. 145p pa 85c Garrard 261 Country church. Sociology, Rural 39-31173

"This volume, written by a professor of rural sociology in a college of agriculture, presents the substance of eight lectures to town and country ministers at Garrett Biblical Institute in the summer of 1938. At the core of Professor Lindstrom's thought is the idea that all institutions, but particularly the church, must work tirelessly for stabilizing economic and social security for the farmer, which stabilization is essential if the best in rural and national life is to be preserved. He traces trends in land use, group life, institutions, organizations, government relation to farmers, farmers' relation to community, rural-urban relations, and challenges the church to understand these changes and conditions and act as an integrative force in rural communities." Christian Century

"The book cannot fail to be a helpful educator not only for rural ministers—for its content is by no means restricted to their interests—but for church laymen as well. Other community leaders would profit from its reading. There are questions for discussion after each chapter and a well-selected list of references." Lowry Nelson
+ Am J Soc 46:263 S '40 350w
Am Soc R 5:155 F '40 60w
Christian Century 57:22 Ja 3 '40 80w
Social Forces 18:615 My '40 80w

LINTON, RALPH, ed. Acculturation in seven American Indian tribes. 526p $4 Appleton-Century
970.6 Indians of North America—Culture. Acculturation 40-3756

"Acculturation comprehends those phenomena which result when groups of individuals having different cultures come into continuous first hand contact, with subsequent changes in the original culture patterns of either or both groups." This book comprises accounts of seven Indian tribes of North America, contrasting aboriginal and present-day modes of life. Contents: The Puyallup of Washington, by M. W. Smith; The White Knife Shoshoni of Nevada, by J. S. Harris; The southern Ute of Colorado, by M. K. Opler; The northern Arapaho of Wyoming, by Henry Elkin; The Fox of Iowa, by N. F. Joffe; The Alkatcho Carrier of British Columbia, by Irving Goldman; The San Ildefonso of New Mexico, by William Whitman; Acculturation and the processes of culture change, by Ralph Linton; The processes of culture transfer, by Ralph Linton; The distinctive aspects of acculturation, by Ralph Linton. Bibliography. Index.

LINTON, RALPH, ed.—Continued

"The major merit of this volume rests with three excellent chapters by Dr. Linton. In only the broadest sense do they editorialize or generalize the findings of the case studies. They rest very lightly on the evidence presented. With the major exception of Dr. Goldman's study of the Alkatcho Carrier and minor exceptions elsewhere, it is only here that the volume comes to grips with the essential material of the subject, the actual social processes by which cultures are transformed rather than the historical environment in which the transformation occurs." L. H. Fisher

+ — Ann Am Acad 210:183 Jl '40 460w

"The eight anthropologists who contribute to this volume (including the editor, who is also the author of three interpretative chapters) approach the data as scientists, not as sentimentalists or humanitarians. Their work will be valuable to all serious students of the fundamental processes of social change."

+ Christian Century 57:219 F 14 '40 80w

"This volume of over five hundred pages, bearing on the American Indians, especially as regards non-Indian cultural contacts, is perhaps the most authentic and most extensively documented book yet issued on the subject." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 154:20 Ap 15 '40 160w

"Though this book is primarily for the professional anthropologist, it has value for all who are interested in Indians, for it gives one of the most objective pictures yet drawn of the present condition of the tribes discussed. Most of those who write of the Indian of today stress the breakdown of aboriginal custom and the resulting demoralization; in this book it can be seen to what an extent the Indian has adapted himself to the situation thrust upon him by white aggression."

+ Nation 150:430 Mr 30 '40 200w

Reviewed by Fred Eggan

Social Forces 19:116 O '40 270w

LIPPMANN, WALTER. Some notes on war and peace. 47p 50c Macmillan

940.314 European war, 1914-1918—Peace. European war, 1939—Peace 40-5625

"In the brief compass of about 5,000 words and with his usual clarity of style, Mr. Lippmann presents the not unfamiliar thesis that the Allies won the World War by economic organization and lost the peace because they did not extend that organization to include Germany. The moral for the present war and the next peace (if the Allies are in a position to play any important part in fixing its terms) is obvious." Christian Century

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 27 '40 60w

Christian Century 57:453 Ap 3 '40 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '40

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '40 270w

LITSEY, EDWIN CARLILE. Stones for bread. 284p $2.50 Caxton printers

40-1702

Somber tale of two human derelicts, brothers, living in a tumble-down cabin on the edge of a Kentucky town. As long as Jody was able to work they managed to make a poor living on their little place. When Jody died things went from bad to worse with poor Martin.

"A grim and curiously compelling story."

+ Books p12 O 6 '40 200w

"'Stones for Bread' is probably life, it is possibly literature, but it leaves the reader with the sensation of having spent the night in an airless room." E. G.

— + Canadian Forum 19:398 Mr '40 110w

"This novel comes from Kentucky; you'll find the same folk in every state in the union. But this novel offers no solution. It's a plain tale by way of running narrative and description. . . Mr. Litsey's only intention is to tell their story as human beings." F. T. Marsh

N Y Times p6 Ja 14 '40 650w

"Exceptionally graphic in description of poverty, suffering and human wretchedness, 'Stones for Bread' fails to impress the reader as to its objective. . . The author concentrates unduly on the details of wretchedness and its benumbing effect on his principal character."

— + Springf'd Republican p7e F 25 '40 170w

"Author Litsey slops over a few times. But few books have matched his for its communication of utter loneliness, its sensuous clarity, its grave and unforced pity, the unpremeditated purity of its telling."

+ — Time 35:76 Mr 4 '40 110w

LITTEN, FREDERIC NELSON. Air trails north. 244p $2 Dodd

39-25956

"This is a boy's book of adventure, and is concerned with the exciting doings of Salty Tarr, a sea-captain's son who lives in Texas and gets a chance to fly over the tundra country of Alaska." Boston Transcript

"Exciting enough for adult consumption. A good book."

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 2 '39 50w

"Though rather impossible and sensational, the reader is impressed by the author's understanding of a boy's reactions to sympathy and unkindness, as well as by his knowledge of various branches of flying and the hazards of air trails in the far north. Recommended for grades seven to twelve." Sonja Wennerblad

+ — Library J 65:260 Mr 15 '40 130w

LITTEN, FRAU IRMGARD (WUST). Beyond tears; introduction and epilogue by Pierre Van Paassen; foreword by his grace the Archbishop of York; pref. by W. Arnold-Forster [Eng title: A mother fights Hitler]. 325p $2.75 Alliance bk. [7s 6d Allen, G]

B or 92 Litten, Hans. Germany—Nazi movement 40-32665

Chronicles the brave, five years' struggle which the author went thru in the hope of rescuing her son, Hans, from the clutches of the powers of Nazi Germany. Frau Litten is the daughter of a university professor; her husband was a greatly respected professor; and the family had considerable influence. When Hans, a lawyer, was put in a concentration camp because of his fearless defence of the down-trodden, his mother visited him, sent him parcels, sent letters in code, and defied his captors ceaselessly. After he died of torture Mrs Litten went to London, but continued to stand up to the Nazi government.

Booklist 37:114 N 15 '40

"This is the saddest story I have read for a long time. But it is also a story of human courage—a courage so great and beautiful that it seems notorious because it could not be broken. Irmgard Litten's book is a book of suffering, but not of defeat. And this is why it carries a great message." Marianne Hauser

+ Books p5 S 22 '40 900w

Reviewed by H. S. Leiper

Churchman 154:20 O 15 '40 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '40

Reviewed by O. B. White

Commonweal 33:130 N 22 '40 300w

"In reading the simple narrative of Frau Litten's personal struggle with the Nazi authorities the reader learns more about life in Nazi Germany and the mind of Nazi officialdom than from any scholarly or learned exposition." G. Warburg

+ Manchester Guardian p2 S 6 '40 500w

"Rudolf Olden, who went down two weeks ago in a torpedoed refugee ship, once said that Litten was 'a Franciscan character.'

Saints have gone out of fashion; legends are suspect. Yet one cannot help applying the word saint to the hero of 'Beyond Tears'; and the story of his martyrdom, told as it is with severe restraint, has the primary unpremeditated force of a legend in which the old struggle between Good and Evil is once more made contemporary and real." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 151:304 O 5 '40 950w

"Told with amazing restraint, it is one of the most shocking documents yet to come out of Germany."

+ New Repub 103:566 O 21 '40 50w

Reviewed by Brian Howard
New Statesman & Nation 20:162 Ag 17 '40 1000w

"'Beyond Tears' is lacking in any grace of style. It is a stark, factual record, based on letters and unforgettable memories, stripped of the emotionalism which one could both expect and forgive. Its very reticence, however, is a telling point in its favor. Because this story is told so simply and undramatically its impact is the more pronounced." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p9 O 6 '40 950w

"Irmgard Litten relates the facts with an almost frightening objectivity. There is not a sentimental word; every line truly comes out of the tranquillity beyond tears. Her dialogues with the Gestapo officials give in addition a rare insight in the souls of Hitler's tools." Franz Hoellering

+ Sat R of Lit 22:10 S 28 '40 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p394 Ag 17 '40 650w

LITTLE, CONSTANCE, and LITTLE, GWENYTH. Black corridors. 269p $2 Doubleday 40-31453

Mystery story.

Booklist 37:138 D 1 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p18 O 20 '40 90w

"The story piles up much too much trivial chatter and lightsome comment for its grim situation. And it leads somewhat disconnectedly to surprise and romance at the end." Kay Irvin

N Y Times p22 O 13 '40 150w

"Blonde nurses get a taste of a blunt instrument in this very light but amusing story of murder in the private wing of a hospital. . . This will do for any spare hour and a half."

+ New Yorker 16:112 O 19 '40 60w

"Good hunting."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:38 O 12 '40 40w

LIVINGSTONE, DAVID. Some letters from Livingstone, 1840-1872; ed. by David Chamberlin; with an introd. by Reginald Coupland. 307p il map $4 (12s 6d) Oxford

B or 92 41-1115

"A collection of some seventy of David Livingstone's letters, most of them never before published. . . The letters begin on the eve of Livingstone's first departure for Africa and continue through his three great journeys (and the visit from Stanley) and many-sided activities to within a year of his death. . . Gaps in the direct chronicle are well filled in by the editor's 'Biography in Dates' at the book's beginning. And there is a bibliography as well as excellent footnotes." N Y Times

---

Reviewed by P. H. Williams
Commonweal 33:355 Ja 24 '41 310w

"Rather surprisingly, [these documents] make such good reading that they are of equal interest to student and to general reader." Leonard Barnes

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 20 '40 500w

"The man himself is in these letters. And this is a good time to make a new acquaintance with Livingstone."

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 19 '41 600w

"Livingstone could write letters. Indeed, like many gruff unsociable fellows, he was capable of quite warm affections through the post. These letters were well worth collecting, and if they send some readers back, in search of an anodyne in these distressful times, to the voluminous and forgotten Livingstone literature of Victorian days, so much the better." D. C. Somerville

+ Spec 165:98 Jl 26 '40 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p336 Jl 13 '40 330w

LLEWELLYN, RICHARD. How green was my valley. 495p $2.75 Macmillan [8s 6d Joseph, M]

(W) 40-27043

"A rich and full story of a mining family in a South Wales valley from the late seventies or early eighties to the beginnings of the present century, a family chronicle set down in our own day by old Huw Morgan, young Huw when the valley was green, who has lived to see it grow black and to be driven away by the desolation it bred." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"The life of Welsh coal miners in the days of Victoria would seem to be a grim, uncomfortable theme for a modern novel. But in Mr. Llewellyn's telling it is a story as noble as it is simple and strong. It is a beautiful story, too, told in words which have Welsh music in them."

+ Atlantic Mr '40 70w

Booklist 36:214 F 1 '40

Bookmark p12 Mr '40

"Looking back on the book, with all its vivid scenes and glowing characters, it is impossible not to respond with ardent respect alike for its contents and its author. There is savagery here as well as a profound love for mankind and for nature: there is tenderness and indignation and deep pity." Iris Barry

+ Books p3 F 11 '40 1000w

"So accustomed have we become to reading of the oppressed worker as something morally, mentally and physically less than life size that these men and women, with their courage and lusty humor and independence come as a novelty. They have their bad seasons to be sure, hard times come to them, but good times, triumphs, expansive celebrations also." Pamela Taylor

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 10 '40 310w

"Mr. Llewellyn in one book has done more than all his predecessors to show the English what Wales really is, giving us with tingling vivacity, quenchless spiritual force, the prose epic of a nation. . . The whole book is atingle with life, rising again and again to scenes terrible, laughable or pathetic—noble without melodrama, wistful without mawkishness." Gilbert Norwood

+ Canadian Forum 19:329 Ja '40 750w

"The author writes with a fine artlessness which conceals art, with a simplicity which is essentially subtle, with a plentiful use of reticence and suggestion well adapted to the telling of his story." J. McS.

+ Cath World 151:247 My '40 390w

"Sometimes a novel makes so memorable an impression that we seem to have lived with its people; we cherish them in our memories as we do the persons we have actually known, for moments of sentimental or amused recollection, or as the material of wisdom. Of the novels which give this impression How Green Was My Valley is a remarkable example." Ralph Goodale

+ Christian Century 57:184 F 7 '40 500w

"Many books may be read before another is found to warm the heart, wet the eyes, and satisfy the intelligence with a job well performed as does Richard Llewellyn's 'How Green Was My Valley.'" W. K. R.

LLEWELLYN, RICHARD—Continued
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 24 '40 700w

Churchman 154:34 Mr 1 '40 160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '40

Reviewed by B. E. Bettinger
Commonweal 31:349 F 9 '40 1000w

"A notable novel. . . A story full of healthy sentiment with comedy and tragedy intermingled, but without the gloom of the usual Welsh novel. A beautiful prose style, clear and simple. Recommended to all libraries, large and small, and deserves to be a best seller." G. W. Hill
+ Library J 65:117 F 1 '40 150w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 O 3 '39 300w

"Without sugar-coating any part of the life it depicts, 'How Green Was My Valley' leaves a good taste in the mouth. It is a poetic novel from beginning to end." L. B. Salomon
+ Nation 150:221 F 10 '40 480w

"The book seems to fall off in vigor toward the end; that is because the conservative and defeated Huw is out of sympathy with the village and because the Morgan family is broken up. The one weakness, and it is a real one, is in that finish; it does not have the intensity which the worth of the theme and its sadness demand. But meet the Morgans; they're grand people." Ralph Bates
+ — New Repub 102:219 F 12 '40 900w

"How Green Was My Valley is a fine piece of narrative and will probably have considerable success; but to claim that it is 'a novel that will make history' is going a good deal too far. . . Mr. Llewellyn's book is the finest wish-fulfilment I have read for a great while, and as long as would-be saints and heroes live on boiled eggs in lonely bed-sitting-rooms, it is bound to have many admirers. But it does, after all, appeal only to the emotionally discontented, while the novels that really make history must appeal to dissatisfied minds." John Mair
— + New Statesman & Nation 18:494 O 7 '39 550w

"'How Green Was My Valley' is a remarkably beautiful novel of Wales. And although it follows stirringly in the romantic traditions, there is the resonance of a profound and noble realism in its evocation, its intensity and reach of truth." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p3 F 11 '40 1200w

"The Welsh are a greatly gifted race, one of their most notable talents being oratory, the most effective means yet devised by man for saying simple things in a long-winded manner. 'How Green Was My Valley' is a very Welsh book, in its defects no less than in its qualities." Clifton Fadiman
+ — New Yorker 15:77 F 10 '40 650w

"This full-bodied, full-flavored novel is romantic and frankly sentimental, but its romanticism embraces much earthly realism and its sentimentality has bone and muscle with which to make itself respected." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 21:5 F 10 '40 1200w

"In episodes brilliantly seen and told, tender, grim, bizarre, and often violent, the story of the mining family is set out, from the first Golden Age when men had sovereigns to spend, to the final day when Huw must leave the valley. Each character is clear, because each is seen simply: but it is a profound simplicity. The goodness and strength of Huw's father grip the reader with an almost physical force. This is intuitive writing, direct and passionate. . . This is so much the sort of book I like, and the sort of writing I best understand, that I am afraid of over-praising it. But when every allowance for partiality has been made and small faults of over-emphasis noted here and there, it is obvious that here is a real talent with a new voice and a new vision." L. A. G. Strong
+ Spec 163:524 O 13 '39 360w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 11 '40 750w

Time 35:76 F 12 '40 400w

"A first novel and a very remarkable one—vivid, eloquent, poetical, glowing with an inner flame of emotion. . . To write from the heart, to measure experience in love and sorrow, to bear witness to the nobility or the idealism of men—this is not the sort of thing a serious novelist tries to do nowadays. It is what Mr. Llewellyn does, however. His story makes a direct and powerfully sustained appeal to our emotions, and is in fact deeply and continuously moving."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p575 O 7 '39 750w

Wis Lib Bul 36:69 Ap '40

"Mr. Llewellyn has done much to restore one's faith in the English language, and bring the ring of metal back into a medium that was becoming softened, cheapened, and polysyllabified. I think the late H. W. Fowler, author of Modern English Usage, would have read him with approval, and new hope." Robert Littell
+ Yale R n s 29:viii spring '40 290w

LLOYD, ARTHUR YOUNG. The slavery controversy, 1831-1860. 337p $3 Univ. of N.C. press [14s Oxford]

326.973 Slavery in the U.S. 39-19293

Study of "the slavery controversy as a part of the sectional struggle preceding the War Between the States." (Pref) Partial contents: Period prior to 1831; The extreme abolitionist attack; Southern defense; Historical and Scriptural justification; Economic justification; Social justification; The political significance of the abolitionist attack. Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by T. C. Smith
Am Hist R 45:663 Ap '40 200w

"Mr. Lloyd's study is based upon a thorough examination of the controversial literature on the subject, and his presentation is as dispassionate as could be desired by the most 'authoritative' of the 'scientific' historians; but his conclusions will hardly be acceptable to the prevailing school. . . The majority of Mr. Lloyd's readers will probably not agree, but the reviewer is of the opinion that until the 'scientific' is substituted for the abolitionist point of view by the writers of American history, the 'road to reunion' will not be so rosy as it has been pictured. The author of this volume has performed a valuable service in presenting the problem for those who wish to consider its economic and sociological aspects from a broadly human point of view." T. P. Abernethy
+ — Ann Am Acad 207:245 Ja '40 320w

"This book is a thoroughly bad piece of work. It is bad not only because it is wrong-headed, incomplete, inaccurate and written in a style that can be described only as deplorable, but because it states as facts what are merely assumptions and dresses up these assumptions in the deceptive habiliments of scholarship. It is not so much a history of the slavery controversy as an ill-natured attack upon the abolitionists for having created that controversy." H. S. Commager
— Books p19 F 25 '40 900w

"An American of today has a feeling of unreality as he reads the pages of Arthur Young Lloyd's book, 'The Slavery Controversy.' . . But for the author's scholarly detachment, his careful documentation, and the 36 pages of selected bibliography, one might be inclined to doubt its authenticity. . . The author has produced a fine study. Readers will profit by the compactness of his writing, the thoroughness of his research, and the penetrating quality of his interpretation." L. B. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 28 '40 1350w

"Some careful reappraisals and historical shadings do as a matter of fact illuminate this volume, but hardly in the total quality or clear focus that would justify its basic claims. Rather it is an accurate, and for that reason, a welcome documentation of the defense of slavery; new not in the substance of the arguments, but in tracing the interaction of the various phases of the sectional controversy between the North and the South." Alain Locke

+ — Survey G 29:196 Mr '40 260w

LLOYD OF DOLOBRAN, GEORGE AMBROSE LLOYD, 1st baron. The British case; with an introduction by Viscount Halifax. 93p 50c Macmillan [pa 9d Eyre]

940.5311 European war, 1939—Causes. Europe—Politics. Great Britain—Foreign policy 40-4275

Brief résumé of the present war issues, from the British point of view, as it appears to the author. No consideration of the point of view of the Labor or Liberal case is given.

"Lord Lloyd puts the case for England, and he does it well. But he does not say anything essentially new." Hans Kohn

+ — Boston Transcript p1 F 17 '40 80w

Christian Century 57:251 F 21 '40 10w

Foreign Affairs 18:568 Ap '40 60w

"Lord Lloyd is widely respected, not only for the independence with which he blamed the Government's surrender over Munich, but also for the sincerity and consistency of his Tory convictions. . . . Nobody blames Lord Lloyd for holding these opinions or for stating them. But to give his book the title 'The British Case' would suggest to his readers abroad that he is stating the opinions that are generally held in this country, and it would give the impression to many strong supporters of the war here who do not share those opinions that this book represents the mind of the Government. Both impressions would be unfortunate."

Manchester Guardian p3 D 12 '39 300w

New Repub 102:737 My 27 '40 70w

"As lofty, straightforward and succinct a presentation of the British case as could be wished."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p726 D 16 '39 360w

LOCKEY, JOSEPH BYRNE. Essays in Pan-Americanism. 174p $2 Univ. of Calif. [12s Cambridge]

327.7 Pan Americanism. U.S.—Foreign relations—Latin America. Latin America—Foreign relations—U.S. 40-849

Volume of essays reprinted from various sources. Contents: The meaning of Pan-Americanism; Diplomatic futility; The Pan-Americanism of Blaine; Blaine and the first conference; An aspect of Isthmian diplomacy; Toledo's Florida intrigues; Shaler's Pan-American scheme; Bolívar after a century; Pan-Americanism and imperialism.

"The volume is not a systematic, unified treatise on Pan-Americanism; but all of the eight usually unconnected articles can reasonably be regarded as having a bearing on the general theme. The treatment is generally judicious and scholarly, with a slight eulogistic fervor in evidence in the article on Bolívar." A. J. Lien

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:612 Je '40 220w

Reviewed by R. F. Behrendt

Ann Am Acad 209:242 My '40 600w

Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 18 '40 500w

Foreign Affairs 18:763 Jl '40 10w

LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES, and LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. The Norths meet murder. 309p $2 Stokes

Detective story. (W) 40-27108

Booklist 36:239 F 15 '40

"Start the new year right with this civilized and exciting volume." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 D 31 '39 210w

"New York readers will be pleased to know that the Norths, Jerry and Pam, have become involved in a murder. And those of you who have yet to meet the Norths will welcome them with open arms." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '39 70w

"The murderer is fairly obvious, nor is his alibi ever very convincing, but the book's excellent characterisation and the humour of the writing make it a real success." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 29 '40 120w

"A good mystery, and readers around the Village will feel right at home."

+ New Repub 102:190 F 5 '40 50w

"This book is for those who like a good crime puzzle brightened with frequent flashes of humor." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p7 D 31 '39 170w

"For those who seek reason in the midst of madness."

+ New Yorker 15:64 Ja 6 '40 70w

"Delightful."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 13 '40 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 11 '40 180w

Time 35:68 F 5 '40 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p173 Ap 6 '40 160w

LOCKWOOD, MYNA. The violin detectives; pictures by the author. 48p $1 Oxford 40-32437

The adventures of an Italian-American boy and his three American boy pals who form a gang of "G men violin detectives," find a missing scroll from an Amati violin, and learn quite a lot about violins in the process.

"While the plot may seem a trifle impossible, this is a nice story of boy life in a big city. The history and romance of violin makers and collectors is woven into the plot in a way to interest boys seven to nine years. The format will keep older children from reading it although the story itself would appeal to them." D. M. MacDonald

+ — Library J 65:769 S 15 '40 150w

Wis Lib Bul 36:171 D '40

LOEB, LEONARD BENEDICT. Fundamental processes of electrical discharge in gases. 717p il $7 Wiley [42s Chapman]

537.53 Electric discharges thru gases 40-868

"Dr. Loeb brings together in convenient arrangement, with critical evaluations, a large mass of material covering the advances in theory and technique developed during the last ten or fifteen years, all of which he connects with the classical theories of Thomson and Townsend. The bibliographies at the chapter endings are extensive and the indexes are unusually detailed. There are nearly 300 diagrams. Dr. Loeb is Professor of Physics in the University of California." (N Y New Tech Bks) Author and subject indexes.

"There will be few readers who will not find new material in this work and to most it will prove to be full of information, much of which may have passed unnoticed by them in its original form in scientific journals."

+ Nature 146:729 D 7 '40 900w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:5 Ja '41

LOEWENSTEIN, KARL. Hitler's Germany; the Nazi background to war. 176p $1.25 Macmillan

943.085 Germany—Politics and government. Germany—Nazi movement (W) 39-32518

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

Reviewed by J. H. Herz
Am Pol Sci R 34:361 Ap '40 330w

"In this little book Professor Loewenstein, of Amherst, has written what is probably the best description in English of the Nazi state which has so far appeared."
+ Books p19 Mr 31 '40 150w

Foreign Affairs 18:572 Ap '40 40w

Reviewed by I. F. Stone
Nation 150:340 Mr 9 '40 300w

"So many books about Nazi Germany have appeared that it is impossible to decide which of them is best for readers in search of reliable information. Yet nobody can go far wrong who chooses for this purpose 'Hitler's Germany.' . . For a comprehensive and lucid exposition of the Nazi system, within the short compass of a bit more than 200 pages, this work leaves little to be desired."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 D 27 '40 800w

LOFTS, MRS NORAH. Hester Roon. 457p $2.50 Knopf [8s 6d Davies] 40-30576

Picaresque novel laid in eighteenth-century England and the West Indies. The heroine is the illegitimate daughter of a servant girl in an English wayside inn. Tho hidden away in the attic, Hester's childhood is not entirely bleak, she gets a good education and her mother's sacrifices enable her to develop physically as well. But with her mother's death, she is forced into a servant's position, escapes from that to worse conditions in London, and finally is transported to the West Indies. A slave revolt there is instrumental in finally deciding her fate.

"A crowded, eventful narrative which manages skillfully to alternate the lusty bawdiness of the period with a delicate tenderness for those who suffered under it. The author does not harangue the reader on the injustices of this world but states simply that Ellie received twenty shillings for her year's work and permits us to be the judge of whether our blood should boil at the thought." Muriel Chatain
Books p10 S 22 '40 700w

"Colorful, fast-moving, action-packed and honest Miss Lofts' writing lacks all the authentic trivia of the average over-stuffed historical novel. The story is the thing, and we like it, while the parenthetical remarks show good sense and even wisdom. . . The situations are tough and challenging, but you can feel compassion behind their making. Such superficiality of historical background as can be charged to Miss Lofts is amply compensated for, by the vigor and rare entertainment of her story." Olga Owens
+ — Boston Transcript p2 S 21 '40 330w

"The author of Colin Lowrie and I Met a Gypsy has a style that charms, a skill in delineation of character, and a sympathetic mastery of her special field of lowly and low life in eighteenth-century Britain and the Colonies." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 65:762 S 15 '40 120w

New Repub 103:566 O 21 '40 50w

"Though the plot is pointless and the characters unformed, separate incidents of the confused picaresque are told with a dreamlike clarity that makes them oddly memorable. Miss Lofts' first promise has remained unfulfilled, but there is a quality to her writing that still offers hope of a sudden and startling development." John Mair
— + New Statesman & Nation 19:776 Je 22 '40 170w

"The leading characters are all people whom you feel you would recognize if you chanced upon them in an eighteenth-century street, but it is the constantly changing series of adventures that make 'Hester Roon' an engrossing and highly entertaining story played out against its colorful background. Looking back on it, there is surprisingly little humor; but those were hard times for the serving class, with little or no fun except of a brutal sort." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p7 S 15 '40 700w

"Lots of action and many of the details proper to a cruel and bawdy era."
New Yorker 16:81 S 21 '40 60w

"The heroine is something of a prodigy in looks and intelligence, but although her adventures are many and various, and although Miss Lofts writes attractively and sometimes, in description, is unusually felicitous, she does not succeed in giving distinction to this long book. She does, however, contrive a happy ending." Kate O'Brien
— + Spec 165:22 Jl 5 '40 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p325 Jl 6 '40 320w

LOGAN, RAYFORD WHITTINGHAM, ed. The attitude of the southern white press toward Negro suffrage, 1932-1940; with a foreword by Charles H. Wesley. 115p pa 75c Foundation pubs, inc, box 1382, Washington, D.C.

324.15 Negroes—Politics and suffrage 40-30270

"The editor, a professor of history in Howard University, undertook to survey thirty-six newspapers in twelve Southern states and to cull from their editorial, news, and letters-to-the-editor columns verbatim quotations representative of the Southern white man's attitude toward Negro suffrage. The pamphlet reprints about one-fourth of the items discovered, so selected as to give an accurate cross-section of opinion." Am Pol Sci R

Am Hist R 46:484 Ja '41 30w

Reviewed by H. W. Barber
Am Pol Sci R 34:1239 D '40 140w

LOGASA, HANNAH. Biography in collections; suitable for junior and senior high schools. 3d ed rev and enl 152p $1.50 Wilson, H.W.

016.92 Biography—Bibliography (W) 40-27333

"This revision is based on the original work, plus the 1937 revised and enlarged edition. It includes forty-one new collections with over a thousand items of which two hundred and seventy are entirely new biographies. A new section giving suggested outlines illustrating the integration of collected biography in a program of studies has been supplied." Foreword to third edition

---

Booklist 36:329 Ap 15 '40
Wis Lib Bul 36:109 Je '40

LOHR, LENOX RILEY. Television broadcasting; production, economics, technique; with a foreword by David Sarnoff. 274p il map $3 McGraw

621.388 Television 40-14320

The purpose of this book is "first, to review the 'capital structure' of the television art, as it is revealed in the experience of NBC and in the researches of its parent company RCA. . . The second purpose is to emphasize the need for coordination in television as a public service. . . For convenience, the book is divided into two sections. The first deals with television in relation to the public, that is, the programing of a television service. The second part deals more with the internal relationships in a television broadcasting system, including the economics of the plant and production departments, the legal background, and a review of the technical features of the system that have important bearings on the present capabilities of the art." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:64 O 15 '40
New Repub 103:701 N 18 '40 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:54 O '40

LOHRKE, EUGENE WILLIAM, and LOHRKE, MRS ARLINE. The long watch in England. 243p $2 Holt

914.2 England—Social life and customs. National characteristics, English (W) 40-9344

Pictures England and the English people between Munich and the opening of the present war. The Löhrkes are Americans who lived and wrote in a Sussex farmhouse from 1936 to 1939. Their study is based on their observations of the common people of England during that period.

"This book is much more than merely 'timely,' and it is not to be missed."
+ Atlantic Jl '40 80w

"For all its gentleness, its poetic phrases, its nostalgia, this is a dark and troubled book. The authors make no pretense to pose as sociologists. Their criticism is frankly personal and subjective, but it is thoughtful and sincere and curiously persuasive. Yet with all their sympathy and penetration they seem to have missed certain essentials in this stark evaluation of the Englishman's character." Geoffrey Bruun
+ — Books p4 My 26 '40 700w

"The Lohrkes' is not an angry book; it is a deeply thoughtful, even an affectionately respectful book. They learned from English villagers a lesson in self-respect; but they also outgrew, in England, their old yearning American faith in the mythic and time-defying qualities of British supremacy." Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 My 23 '40 550w

Reviewed by J. C. Skinner
Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '40 650w
Christian Science Monitor p12 N 23 '40 400w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '40

"The book should be read by those who follow current events and are interested in the problems that confront England." F. L. D. Goodrich
+ Library J 65:452 My 15 '40 180w
Nation 150:786 Je 29 '40 70w

Reviewed by Nigel Dennis
New Repub 102:799 Je 10 '40 1150w

"A beautiful and disturbing book. . . It is beautiful in its dreamy style, in its flowing cadences that have all the gentle rhythms of the English days and seasons. It is disturbing in its truths that come close to the heart of many of England's present troubles. . . Their intentions were good, but their book is cluttered with half-truths and untruths, and with generalizations that are not supported by long observation or unshakable fact." Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
+ — N Y Times p4 My 19 '40 1950w

"Beautifully done but depressing picture."
New Yorker 16:93 My 25 '40 40w
Sat R of Lit 22:22 Ag 3 '40 390w

"'The Long Watch in England' is written with a workmanlike command of phrase and rhythm. Its value as a report of unpleasant conditions is impaired by the authors' point of view."
Springf'd Republican p8 My 29 '40 650w
Time 35:94 My 27 '40 230w
Wis Lib Bul 36:111 Je '40

LOMAX, BLISS, pseud. See Drago, H. S.

LONG, AMELIA REYNOLDS. The corpse at the Quill club. 253p $2 Phoenix 40-33787

Detective story.

"This department has a hunch that Amelia Reynolds Long could improve her mystery output quite a bit if she'd put her mind to it. As it is, she has a likable way with her and a knack for turning out medium shockers, readable enough but sort of thrown together, careless like." Will Cuppy
Books p16 D 15 '40 150w

"The story is fairly good, even though the problem it poses is not puzzling enough to baffle the experienced reader of detective fiction." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p32 D 1 '40 120w

"Average."
Sat R of Lit 23:20 D 28 '40 40w

LONG, AMELIA REYNOLDS. Murder times three. 255p $2 Phoenix 40-2386

Detective story.

"Though the motives of the chief suspects seem a little strained at times, the story has sound thriller values. Fast, sensational and always readable. We liked it better than Miss Long's more scholarly 'The Shakespeare Murders,' wherein she proved that she can sling big words with the best of them, if she cares to do so." Will Cuppy
+ Books p9 Ja 21 '40 140w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 50w

"The story presents a pretty problem, but it is not particularly well told." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p19 Ja 14 '40 150w

"Plot basically sound but melodramatic fixins, including young Southerner with gosh-awful accent, make story pretty tough sledding. Exasperating."
— + Sat R of Lit 21:18 F 10 '40 40w

LONG, JOHN CUTHBERT. Mr Pitt and America's birthright. 576p il map $3.50 Stokes

B or 92 Pitt, William, 1st earl of Chatham. Great Britain—Politics and government (W) 40-27334

In this biography of the elder Pitt, the author stresses two major theses: that Pitt's fight for "liberty and independency" against the totalitarian tendencies of George III became, in different form, the American colonists' fight in 1776; and that Pitt was the real builder of the British Empire of the nineteenth century. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. T. Laprade
Am Hist R 46:466 Ja '41 240w

"One could hardly ask for a better account of William Pitt, Earl of Chatham, eminent public servant, man of militant integrity, upholder of American rights. The author chose a worthy subject, and his treatment is in all respects worthy of his subject. His research is thorough, his history is sound, and his style is easy, rapid, graceful."
+ Atlantic My '40 190w
Booklist 36:323 Ap 15 '40

Reviewed by W. L. Willkie
Books p1 My 12 '40 1600w

"Mr. Long is writing something more than history and biography. He is deliberately staging Mr. Pitt, the Great Commoner of the eighteenth century, in twentieth century dress, with a twentieth century vocabulary, against a twentieth century backdrop. It adds legitimate drama to the story of one of England's great statesmen; but the reader who likes his history pure does well to be on his guard." Lewis Gannett
+ — Boston Transcript p13 Ap 13 '40 1250w

LONG, J. C.—Continued
Reviewed by William Wood
Canadian Hist R 21:420 D '40 480w

"'Mr. Pitt and America's Birthright' is a thrilling book. It is a popular rather than a deep biography, but Pitt lives again in its pages and the author's vivid, easy and fast moving prose ought to ensure it widespread reading." Joseph Calderon
+ — Commonweal 32:84 My 17 '40 600w

Discussion by the author
Commonweal 32:290 Jl 26 '40 420w

"Mr. Long needed no excuse for adding this elaborate, scholarly, and yet delightfully diverting volume to the biographies by Lord Macaulay, Lord Rosebery, and others. . . No one has penetrated more deeply into Pitt's life and work than Mr. Long, whose research has unearthed many hitherto unknown facts, but his 'biography' is much more than his hero's life story. It is the history of a traduced and maligned epoch, a true description of social life in the eighteenth century, a serious discussion of the efforts to develop an 'almost degenerated England' into a vast 'empire of freemen.' . . Just now, when some unscrupulous business men and shortsighted politicians are doing their utmost to drive a wedge between the two representatives of this Anglo-Saxon unity, when the misconception of capitalist interests threatens to overshadow human interests, this timely recognition of the English origins of American liberty deserves not only due appreciation but the interest of all intelligent readers on both sides of the Atlantic." Rustem Vambery
+ Nation 150:517 Ap 20 '40 800w

Reviewed by Robert Walcott, Jr.
New Eng Q 13:354 Je '40 1250w
New Repub 102:681 My 20 '40 70w

"Mr. Long has been fortunate in his subject and Mr. Pitt in his latest biographer. I have used all the previous leading biographies of him and consider this the best for the general reader, and useful to the scholar." J. T. Adams
+ N Y Times p3 Ap 21 '40 1150w

"'Mr. Pitt and America's Birthright' in addition to its solider virtues, has one of the cleverest selling titles I have seen in several seasons. . . I think Mr. Long strains his parallels. Bourbonism was not totalitarianism and Pitt's ideal was not true democracy but a kind of benevolent and intelligent oligarchy. Also, the ordinary reader, such as myself, will occasionally find himself drowning in a sea of political detail, Cabinet shifts, family relationships, and period whatnot. Otherwise, a superior job, too consciously slangy and full of modern comparisons, but careful, reasonable, and successful in its aim, which is to show that Pitt was not only a great friend of the American colonies but one of the very greatest of all English statesmen." Clifton Fadiman
+ — New Yorker 16:90 Ap 20 '40 380w

"William Pitt, the elder, earl of Chatham, was in many ways hardly a romantic figure, as may be clearly seen from J. C. Long's new biography. . . Yet he emerges from this study quite as engaging a character as one could look for in the hero of any serious novel." D. D.
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '40 1150w
Wis Lib Bul 36:126 Jl '40

LONG, JOHN DAVIS. Papers, 1897-1904; ed. by Gardner Weld Allen. 464p $4 Mass. hist. soc.

B or 92 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S. —Navy 39-20666

"John Davis Long, after serving as governor of Massachusetts and as a member of the House of Representatives, was Secretary of the Navy during the exciting years between March 4, 1897, and May 1, 1902. His papers in the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society contain some fifteen thousand letters written while he was in the Cabinet. From this number the 377 letters now printed were selected. Only 24 were written by Long himself, and these include practically all of his authorship in the collection. By far the largest group are from various naval officers who apparently carried on an extensive private or semi-official correspondence with Long." Am Hist R

Reviewed by W. S. Holt
Am Hist R 45:672 Ap '40 420w

"The editing in general is excellent and the papers throw a great deal of light on an important episode in American history, as well as doing something to redress the balance of the 'Alone in Cuba' school of Rooseveltian hagiography. They are also of great interest for the student of politics who can find in them sagacious reflections on the duties of electors and politicians at a critical moment." D. W. B.
+ Eng Hist R 55:510 Jl '40 700w

LONG, LAURA. Without valour; il. by Edward Caswell. 244p $2 Longmans 40-13975

Story of the Civil war as it looked to an Indiana town boy too young to fight, but not too young to care for the family mill, while his father was away.

Booklist 37:75 O 15 '40

"I could not stop reading and a younger person will find it hard to do so. Better still, what remains after reading is a sense of having been through, not a battle only, but a war, that most dangerous kind of all, a civil war." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 D 15 '40 280w
Christian Century 57:1146 S 18 '40 30w

"This new treatment for children of the Civil War theme will interest seventh and eighth grade boys and girls who like historical fiction. While the plot is secondary to the historical background, and the story lags a bit in the beginning, it gains momentum as it develops. Will be useful in connection with the study of the Civil War." Marian Herr
+ — Library J 65:714 S 1 '40 130w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 65:855 O 15 '40 20w
Social Studies 31:336 N '40 20w

"The story is well told and describes vividly what wreckage war makes of friendships."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 200w

LONG, MAX. The lava flow murders. 308p $2 Lippincott 40-2395

Detective story.

"Unusual thriller." Will Cuppy
+ Books p16 Mr 10 '40 100w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p3 F 24 '40 50w

"The setting is excellently done, and Komako again proves himself to be a real detective." K. I.
+ N Y Times p23 Mr 17 '40 190w

"Native superstitions, white antipathies, awe-inspiring effects of lava stream, and capable detecting combine to make unusually vivid yarn. Effective."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 F 24 '40 40w

LONG, PERRIN HAMILTON, and BLISS, ELEANOR ALBERT. Clinical and experimental use of sulfanilamide, sulfapyridine and allied compounds. 319p $3.50 (15s 6d) Macmillan

615.222 Sulfanilamide. Sulfapyridine
39-16653

"It was more than thirty years ago that chemists of the great German I.-G. Farbenindustrie got on the track of a new coal-tar derivative for use in textile dyeing... This obscure preparation began to exhibit such remarkable medical possibilities that early in 1933 the German medical profession was eagerly discussing the bactericidal effects of 'Prontosil' in the treatment of septic and toxic erythemas. Two years later Gerhard Domagk . . . wrote the famous paper which was to introduce sulfanilamide to a suffering world and thereby bring closer to realization Paul Ehrlich's dream of a new science—Chemotherapy. America's role in the development of this amazing drug, although delayed, has been a distinguished one. Much of the story can be read in the present highly technical volume." New Repub

"As must be expected in a monograph written so early on a new and rapidly developing subject, much is unsettled, and conclusions cannot be too definite. Likewise, even in the short space of time elapsing between the writing and the publication of the book, many important contributions have been made, particularly in regard to sulfapyridine, but at this time the book appears to add a definite contribution to the general intelligent use of these important compounds. An extensive bibliography is included and the book is well indexed with both authors and subjects." H. L. Barnett
+ Am J Pub Health 29:1264 N '39 490w

Reviewed by Harold Ward
New Repub 102:188 F 5 '40 270w

LONGACRE, CHARLES SMULL. Roger Williams; his life, work, and ideals; il. by Robert M. Eldridge. 191p $1 Review & H.

B or 92 Williams, Roger 40-2910

"This is not a critical study of the life of Roger Williams but a brief biography with a deserved tribute to his insight and courage and an exposition of his ideas concerning religious liberty and the separation of church and state. The author rightly believes that a revival of those ideas is greatly needed in America today, and that clear thinking about them and the dangers that threaten them will be promoted by renewed attention to Roger Williams' principles and experiences." Christian Century

Christian Century 57:354 Mr 13 '40 80w

"Mr. Longacre has added another item to the list of panegyrics upon Roger Williams. His book is much more a sermon on religious liberty than it is a historical consideration of the man and his thought. Consequently historians will find it both inadequate and inaccurate, though it has the virtue of reproducing extensive quotations from the controversy with Cotton. But this book was not written for historians. It was written to reassert the principles of freedom for which Williams stood and which the author rightly assumes to be in danger today." E. S. Morgan
New Eng Q 13:339 Je '40 1400w

LONGSTREET, STEPHEN. Decade, 1929-1939. 398p $2.50 Random house

(W) 40-27162

Story of the last ten years of John Christian Rowlandson's life—from his eighty-eighth birthday till his death—years that witnessed the destruction of his wealth and the deaths of loved ones, but left his spirit undaunted to the end.

Atlantic Ap '40 90w
Booklist 36:264 Mr 1 '40

" 'Decade 1929-1939' is an exuberant tale, with some swashbuckling and a good many more bull's eye hits. In terms of credibility, you can take or leave the Old One; the large majority, I imagine (and I am among them), will want to take him." Mary Ross
+ Books p3 F 25 '40 800w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '40

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 2 '40 220w

"Readable, but too glib to make a real dent."
New Repub 102:322 Mr 4 '40 70w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 19:472 Ap 6 '40 70w

"The crash of 1929 sounds the opening chord, the threatening thunders of the present war in Europe its final. And yet Longstreet tells a story that is warm with humanity and good humor. The reason for this lies in a masterfully joyous creation of a central character, 'the Old One.' " Rose Feld
+ N Y Times p7 F 25 '40 750w

"Mr. Longstreet owns a tricky, tumescent prose, as high-pitched as a whistle and as energetic as a windmill. This he employs in the service of a lacquered sensationalism that's supposed to convey the flavor of a crazy decade. Actually his 'lusty tale' (publisher's coinage) runs you round and round and gets you nowhere. It should, however, get its author to Hollywood." Clifton Fadiman
— New Yorker 16:75 F 24 '40 330w

"It takes audacity to give an ambitious title to a first novel. The word 'decade' covers a great deal of ground, and any weakness in managing the complex subject would have been fatal. Mr. Longstreet proves as confident of his powers as he is bold in conception; and we have here an intensely interesting, densely populated, and dashing chronicle." Orrick Johns
+ Sat R of Lit 21:11 F 24 '40 550w

" 'Decade, 1929-1939' shows an ability to reveal the spirit of a period—or its varied spirits—through correlation of fact and vivid fiction. Its vitality of characterization is noteworthy; the tragedy and laughter, the darkness and brightness of 10 years just past, are displayed in a form which lends added interest."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 25 '40 450w

"In spots Decade has real vitality. More often it is just 'lusty.' "
— + Time 35:75 Mr 4 '40 90w

"That Mr. Longstreet is able to impose this giant of a man on our credibility is a tribute to his force, for the book is an over-complicated picture of a decade rather than a story."
Times [London] Lit Sup p221 My 4 '40 130w

LONGSTRETH, THOMAS MORRIS. Trial by wilderness; il. by Lyle Justis. 301p $2 Appleton-Century

(W) 40-4715

A young Canadian and his police dog friend are the central characters of this story for young readers. Hugh joins the Royal Canadian mounted police, and during his "trial by wilderness," which consisted in convoying an official carrying a considerable amount of money, discovers gold.

"It is a wholesome outdoor story of character under strain, and toughening instead of cracking under it." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 Je 2 '40 270w

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p3 My 11 '40 20w

"A wholesome adventure tale with the great Northwest."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 24 '40 200w

LONN, ELLA. Foreigners in the confederacy. 566p il $5 Univ. of N.C. press

973.743 Confederate States of America. U.S.—History—Civil war—Foreign participation 40-3721

Studies, copiously documented, on the large numbers of foreigners who served the Confederate government, either in its army or civilian population, from about 1860 until the end of its existence. Bibliography. Index.

"Some of the material presented is quite familiar to students of Confederate history, but much is new, and all is well buttressed with statistics and citations. In the opinion of the reviewer the volume would have been improved by the excision of considerable detail and the cutting down of anecdotal material, some of which seems to be of dubious authenticity, but these criticisms are of little consequence in comparison with the merits of sound scholarship and lively interest which characterize the book." A. H. Meneely

LONN, ELLA—Continued

+ — Am Hist R 46:173 O '40 650w

"This book, so unpretentiously titled, is not only one of the most scholarly and original contributions to Civil War history in our literature but one of the most fascinating. It covers wide ground, illuminates many areas heretofore dark, suggests necessary reinterpretations of Confederate history, and presents as rich and varied a gallery of heroes, rogues, and eccentrics as can be found within the covers of a single volume. It represents a clear advance in narrative vigor and insight over Professor Lonn's earlier monographs on 'Desertion in the Civil War' and 'Salt in the Confederacy' and marks her as one of the most learned and distinguished of Civil War historians." H. S. Commager

+ Books p6 Jl 7 '40 1400w

"Though readable for the layman, its thoroughness will make it useful as a work of historical reference. Her standing in the field of original research is attested by the fact that both the other authors cite her 'Desertions During the Civil War' as the practically single authority on this subject." Tully Nettleton

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 13 '40 50w

"Heavy reading."

New Repub 102:190 F 5 '40 20w

"Aside from its arresting quality as historical research her book, with its vivid personal stories and excerpts from contemporary records, is also full of a lively interest."

+ N Y Times p12 F 11 '40 480w

LOPEZ, INEZ. Caviar for breakfast. 297p $2 Appleton-Century

40-3358

Patricia Chapman, charming but not quite so young as when she had left her Southern home to work in New York, finally decides that affection, respect and congenial companionship are sufficient bases for successful marriage. But before the happy ending of her story Patricia learns that love is essential as well.

"A first novel, not overburdened with plot, but written in an engaging style. Miss Lopez knows her bachelor-girl psychology." Lisle Bell

+ Books p11 Ja 28 '40 210w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 2 '40 120w

"The book [is] gay, varied and entertaining in a pleasantly superficial way." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 28 '40 200w

LORCA, FEDERICO GARCIA. See García Lorca, F.

LORD, EUGENE HODGDON. Experimenting at home with the wonders of science; il. by the author. 243p $2 (8s 6d) Appleton-Century

500 Scientific recreations 40-6774

"It is the purpose of this book to show how experimental science at home may be brought within reach of the average boy without undue limitations in the scope of its study. The experiments selected are written with full directions and explanations which enable the boy to become closely acquainted with many scientific phenomena through the use of devices made entirely of household materials. The additional equipment suggested and the small amounts of chemicals required are not costly." Pref.

Booklist 36:369 My 15 '40

"This is as easy and inexpensive a way for a boy to get himself involved in a scientific education as I have yet seen. . . There is a diagramlike picture wherever needed. The author teaches physics and general science at the Boston Latin School, and knows how to make himself clear." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ag 18 '40 210w

"The general tinker and experimenter will be both amused and instructed, for Mr. Lord well knows how to excite the interest of active-minded youngsters from ten years old onwards." M. B. Hopkins

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '40 100w

LORD, JEREMY, pseud. Sixty-nine diamonds. 278p $2 Doubleday

40-4888

Detective story.

"Jitterbugs may think the tale a trifle leisurely in coming to the point, but that's the kind it is—a story rather than a quickie with mere puzzle interest." Will Cuppy

Books p17 Mr 24 '40 190w

"The continual contrasting of a quiet English investigator, Colonel Winston Creevy, D. S. O., and a Californian policeman, Lieutenant Percival Whiting, would make 'Sixty-Nine Diamonds' . . . outstanding even if it did not have an excellent plot. As it is the book is tops. I'm sure you will enjoy the trans-continental, transatlantic telephone methods of detection." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p9 Mr 23 '40 70w

"Colonel Creevy is an attractive character. All the character-drawing in this book is lively and interesting. What the novel lacks to make it a first-rate thriller is strength and clarity of construction. That fault is balanced to some degree in our enjoyment of the book by the introduction of one of the most irresistible alcoholics in whodunit lore." Kay Irvin

+ — N Y Times p26 Mr 10 '40 210w

"Good and meaty, with humorous touches."

+ New Yorker 16:108 Mr 16 '40 50w

"Logical detecting with two mad and merry movie writers providing much antic humor. Ending comes as complete surprise. Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 15 '40 40w

Time 35:76 Ap 1 '40 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Ag 17 '40 330w

LORD, RUSSELL ROBBINS. Agrarian revival; a study of agricultural extension. 236p $1.50 Am. assn. for adult educ.

630.7 Agricultural extension work. Education of adults 40-27020

"Traces the origin, growth, and status of such movements as the Grange, the co-operative extension service, the farm bureau organizations, and the recent rural rehabilitation and soil conservation agencies, with special emphasis on the educational influence they exert on rural people." (J Home Econ) Index.

Reviewed by Merton Oyler

Am J Soc 46:636 Ja '41 130w

Booklist 36:199 Ja 15 '40

J Home Econ 32:330 My '40 60w

"The book, as a whole, is both interesting and enjoyable in its own right. While its library implications, though not dealt with per se, may be said to exist, they are of but incidental concern to Mr. Lord. However, one cannot but regret that he failed to give more consideration to a matter which was avowedly of primary interest to the sponsors of the book—i.e., the social significance of the agricultural extension program as a medium for adult education in the United States." E. B. Stanford

+ — Library Q 10:621 O '40 250w

Reviewed by David Snedden

School & Society 51:681 My 25 '40 120w

LORIMER, GRAEME, and LORIMER, MRS SARAH (MOSS). First love, farewell. 305p $2 Little 40-33066

Further episodes in the career of Maudie, heroine of Men Are Like Street Cars, (Book Review Digest, 1932). Maudie is now nearly nineteen, and has made her debut, but maturity has not deprived her entirely of the right to joyous and lively adventure.

Booklist 37:155 D 15 '40

"Some day when this series is completed there will be a solemn critical discussion of Maudie's character as gleaned from these stories. How such admirable qualities as honesty, loyalty and courage creep out from behind the flippancy. How she represents her generation in its dislike for sentimentality—and so forth. Until it is completed, however, let it suffice to say about any one of the books, that here is another collection of 'Maudie' stories, just as gay and just as entertaining as any of the rest of them." Anne Brooks

+ Books p14 N 3 '40 400w

"A hilariously entertaining, clever, wisecracking and wholly unimportant novel."

Christian Century 57:1419 N 13 '40 50w

"Maudie is at her best and funniest in 'Farewell, First Love.' " Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p14 O 27 '40 320w

LORING, MRS EMILIE (BAKER). There is always love. 292p $2 Little 40-9076

Mystery and romance and a girl from New England who gets a job and plenty of suitors in New York.

Booklist 36:430 Jl 15 '40

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p14 Je 16 '40 150w

Reviewed by Olga Owens

Boston Transcript p2 Je 15 '40 600w

"The road to the climax is well paved and the story gayly entertaining." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p12 Je 16 '40 260w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 7 '40 350w

LOTHROP, MARGARET MULFORD. The Wayside: home of authors [il. by D. Putnam Brinley]. 202p $1 Am. bk.

810.9 Concord, Massachusetts. The Wayside. Alcott family. Hawthorne family. Lothrop family 40-8229

The Wayside, once the home of Nathaniel Hawthorne, in Concord, is a colonial house probably dating back to 1700. This history of the house and its inhabitants is written by the present owner, daughter of the author of the Five Little Peppers series. Index.

Boston Transcript p2 Je 15 '40 70w

"Margaret Lothrop has done good service with her peopling of this 'home of authors' for readers of today."

+ N Y Times p16 My 12 '40 340w

Wis Lib Bul 36:110 Je '40

LOTZ, PHILIP HENRY, ed. Vocations and professions. (Creative personalities, v 1) 145p $1.25 Assn. press

920 U.S.—Biography 40-27225

Brief biographical sketches of thirteen famous men, most of them Americans. Contents: Luther Burbank, by H. H. Meyer; The Mayo brothers, by Lucile Desjardins; Julius Rosenwald, by P. L. Seman; Jacob Riis, by C. J. Lotz; Eugene V. Debs, by H. M. Meyer; Johann Sebastian Bach, by S. P. Franklin; John Dewey, by E. A. Leslie; David Livingstone, by N. E. Richardson; Charles A. Lindbergh, by J. V. Thompson; Thomas Alva Edison, by M. C. Harrington; Robert Andrews Millikan, by E. R. Bartlett; E. Stanley Jones, by J. A. Saxton; Harry Emerson Fosdick, by P. R. Hayward.

Booklist 36:282 Mr 15 '40

"A splendid book to use with a group of young people."

+ Christian Century 57:219 F 14 '40 80w

LOTZ, PHILIP HENRY, ed. Women leaders. (Creative personalities, v 2) 149p $1.25 Assn. press

920.7 Woman—Biography 40-27524

Brief biographical sketches of some outstanding modern women. Includes questions for discussion and reference. Contents: Jane Addams; Evangeline Booth; Edith Cavell; Marie Curie; Amelia Earhart; Helen Keller; Muriel Lester; Jenny Lind; Florence Nightingale; Alice Freeman Palmer; Maude Royden; Harriet Beecher Stowe; Susannah Wesley; Frances E. Willard; Mary E. Woolley.

Booklist 36:411 Jl 1 '40

"Topics for discussion and references for further reading with each chapter make the volume the more usable for classes and clubs."

+ Christian Century 57:675 My 22 '40 50w

LOVE, JULIAN PRICE. How to read the Bible. 204p $2 Macmillan

220 Bible. Whole—Reading (W) 40-9239

"The plan of [the book] is, in general, threefold. The first six chapters illustrate a number of ways of reading the Bible. . . Chapters seven and eight are elaborations of what seem to be the best reading units for each book of the Bible. . . The last four chapters deal with available helps toward reading and understanding the Bible." By way of Preface

Booklist 36:423 Jl 15 '40

"Why didn't someone write this book before? It has been needed for a long time, and there are plenty of people who could have written it. No vast amount of scholarship was required. The author undoubtedly has a great deal more than he used in this work. . . Were I a pastor, I should like to have enough copies of this book in the church library so that it could be freely used by the laity." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 57:824 Je 26 '40 800w

"The author's biblical learning shines through in spite of his evident intention not to alarm his readers by any show of modern scholarship. A valuable book for all who want to enter into the experiences of those who gave us the Old and New Testaments." G. F. Taylor

+ Churchman 154:18 Je 15 '40 170w

LOVEJOY, CLARENCE EARLE. So you're going to college. 383p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

378 Colleges and universities—U.S. (W) 40-27577

Information and advice for students, and their parents or guardians, on the selection of a college, cost of a college education, working one's way thru college, and obtaining loans or scholarships. Contains the Lovejoy college-rating guide, which lists 289 high ranking American colleges and universities, and gives important facts about each in brief form. Six hundred and six other institutions are also listed, each with a very short note. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:424 Jl 15 '40

"A more practical handbook would be hard to find. It deals with finances straight from the start and straight from the shoulder, which is what most of us want." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Jl 28 '40 280w

"As an editor who receives hundreds of letters from parents of young people and from the young people themselves making inquiries about colleges, courses, costs, scholarships, I should

LOVEJOY, C. E.—Continued
say that Mr. Lovejoy's book was written out of direct experience with those for whom he wrote it, and that it meets a definite need. Almost anything you might want to know is taken up. . . What I like about the book is its breezy directness. It is like a frank talk from some college dean or secondary school headmaster." Millicent Taylor
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 23 '40 700w
New Repub 103:254 Ag 19 '40 50w

"On all three counts of cost, self-help and selection, the book should offer the prospective college student the information he needs."
+ N Y Times p10 Je 30 '40 340w

"Especially useful is the discussion about scholarships and student loans. It is interesting reading, straightforward and factual but never dull; indeed it is well salted with humor and human understanding. Within its self-imposed limitations it is encyclopedic, but leaves one still facing the great problem of college life; the fact that only by experience can one know whether he has chosen the right college for him." J. P. Gavit
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 Jl 27 '40 380w
School & Society 52:144 Ag 31 '40 30w
Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 24 '40 400w

LOVELACE, MAUD (HART) (MRS D. W. LOVELACE). Betsy-Tacy: il. by Lois Lenski. 113p $1.75 Crowell 40-30965

Betsy and Tacy (short for Anastacia) were two little five-year-olds, such inseparable friends that they were regarded almost as one person. This is the story of their friendship in a little Minnesota town years ago. Grades three to four.

Booklist 37:41 O 1 '40
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 D 15 '40 180w

"For little girls from five to eight, and a perfect story for them."
+ Christian Century 57:1056 Ag 28 '40 10w

"A story of real literary merit as well as one with good story interest for nine and ten-year-olds to read to themselves or aloud to their younger sisters." Claire Nolte
+ Library J 65:769 S 15 '40 160w
Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:851 O 15 '40 20w

LOW, ARCHIBALD MONTGOMERY. Mine and countermine; with a foreword by T. B. Thompson. 224p il $2.75 Sheridan [12s 6d Hutchinson]
623.2 Mines, Military. Mines, Submarine

An account of the use of mines in warfare. The author begins with the uses of fire ships and explosives in ancient times but the bulk of the work deals with the period since the American Civil war and particularly with the British experiences in the present war. Index.

Booklist 37:149 D 15 '40

"Those who are following the desperate battle of Britain should find his book of genuine worth. The last two chapters are intended strictly for the bolstering of British patriotic courage, though most American readers will sympathize with their import." E. B. Schriftgiesser
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 11 '41 290w

"Not the least significant thing about this book is its flat-footed optimism about Britain's ability to cope with the mine menace. The author is no armchair strategist, waging war on paper. From an engineering standpoint he is one of the best informed persons on this subject. Therefore it is significant when Dr. Low asserts that while magnetic mines may claim a few more victims they will not prove a widespread destroyer of shipping or in any way materially influence the general result of the war." H. T.
Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 8 '41 490w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '40 1550w

"Professor Low has written a comprehensive treatise, in the popular style. . . His researches are not, on the whole, very profound."
Times [London] Lit Sup p383 Ag 10 '40 450w

LOWE, ERIC. Framed in hardwood. 301p $2.50 Reynal
40-4192

Character study of an Australian go-getter. His progress to wealth and power is ruthless, and his conscience does not bother him, even when he stoops to murder to gain his ends. But the one thing he wants most—a woman's love—he cannot get.

"The story has no moral and the story has no end. There's none of the heaviness, neither is there the solid significance of the Dreiser novels. But this is an unusual and most readable chronicle of the hero as millionaire." F T. Marsh
+ Books p5 F 11 '40 1000w
Reviewed by M. E. Smith
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 9 '40 150w
Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 9 '40 100w
New Repub 102:254 F 19 '40 50w

"Mr. Lowe's book is well supplied with circumstantial detail from Australian life. The author knows and loves the environment in which he sets his stories. But all the detail in the world cannot redeem this story from a pervasive unreality. . . It is plain that Mr. Lowe has the knowledge to do a fine and powerful novel of the squattocracy, and if neither of his two tries has quite come off, readers interested in the subject should carefully attend to his books for they contain the elements which must be worked." C. H. Grattan
— + N Y Times p7 F 11 '40 600w

"The environment—Australia—is fresh, which means that the flora and fauna are unfamiliar and interesting. Otherwise, although Mr. Lowe is a clever craftsman, there aren't many surprises."
New Yorker 15:79 F 10 '40 40w

"It is the evident superiority of the author's essential gift which makes this novel, written so uncritically and perhaps in too great haste, seem a great disappointment." J. G.
— + Sat R of Lit 21:21 F 17 '40 340w
Reviewed by Kate O'Brien
Spec 165:228 Ag 30 '40 130w

"Mr Lowe's brilliant gifts are apparent in his handling of incident and detail, but the tale does not fully realize its potentialities in portraying colonial development and the evolution of an Australian magnate."
— + Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '40 600w
Times [London] Lit Sup p385 Ag 10 '40 100w

LOWERY, MARGARET RUTH. Windows of the morning. 249p il pa $3 Yale univ. press [pa 14s Oxford]
821 Blake, William 40-10044

"A critical study of William Blake's Poetical Sketches, 1783." (Subtitle) "This study sets forth a complete description of the book, corrections of errors in information about its production, new circumstantial evidence as to its printing and as to the personal relationships with which it allied Blake. That the Poetical Sketches was imitative work has long been taken for granted. This book is an examination of the full extent of Blake's indebtedness to others, a critical analysis of how his creative imagination acted upon what he derived from his early reading, and an appraisal of the Poetical Sketches in the light of these circumstances." (Pref)

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 20 '40 60w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier
New Statesman & Nation 20:191 Ag 24 '40 600w

LOWNDES, MARIE ADELAIDE (BELLOC) (MRS F. S. LOWNDES). The Christine diamond. 271p $2 Longmans

40-8747

Mystery story.

"Don't miss this if your favorite subject is love—what else is there, really? The puzzle is all right, too." Will Cuppy
+ Books p12 My 19 '40 160w

"It is a tribute to Mrs. Belloc Lowndes's literary skill that she keeps the reader interested all the length of this well-trodden road and that once or twice she even manages to introduce an element of surprise." E. R. Punshon
— + Manchester Guardian p7 O 15 '40 150w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p15 Je 2 '40 180w

"Mainly for simple-minded readers. Innocuous."
Sat R of Lit 22:26 My 25 '40 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p397 Ag 17 '40 250w

LOWREY, JANETTE SEBRING. The silver dollar; lithographs by Barbara Latham. [48p] $1.50 Harper

40-33282

A small cowboy had a silver dollar with which he wanted to buy a red bandana handkerchief, a Stetson hat, a pair of boots, and several other things. Then he lost the dollar. The story and pictures show what the older cowboys did about it.

Booklist 37:140 D 1 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 N 17 '40 110w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:846 O 15 '40 40w

"The text has a direct, story-telling quality that is admirable, but the lithograph illustrations by Barbara Latham, though striking in themselves, seem off-key. They are stylized and decorative and so make a confusing accompaniment to a story whose dominant tone is simplicity. However, taken as a whole, the book is decidedly above the average of the cowboy stories we have for younger children, and therefore is recommended." M. F. Potter
+ — Library J 65:983 N 15 '40 120w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:844 D 16 '40 40w

LOWRIE, WALTER. SS. Peter and Paul in Rome; an archæological rhapsody. 164p il $2 (8s 6d) Oxford

225.92 Peter, Saint. Paul, Saint. Rome (city)—Antiquities

"Dr. Walter Lowrie, for many years pastor of the American Church in Rome and a student of archaeology, has written what may be termed a casual book out of his own experiences in the Eternal City. . . He discusses the unsolved problem of the relation between the two, Peter and Paul—the impetuous Apostle and the great Missionary. . . The author probably sets forth all that can be said with certainty regarding their presence in Rome." Christian Science Monitor

"A handy volume, easy to read, and highly informative." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 21 '40 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p420 Ag 31 '40 550w

LUBBOCK, ALFRED BASIL. The romance of the clipper ships; pictured by J. Spurling; ed. by Alexander Campbell. 2v v 1 85p $3.50 Macmillan [12s 6d Blue Peter publications, ltd, 123 Queen Victoria st, London, E.C. 4]

387.5 Clipper ships 40-10721

An abridged, cheaper edition of three volumes on British sailing ships entitled Sail. Many of the best pictures, and the stories about them, are reproduced here. The ships referred to are English clippers, many of them selected from the wool clippers and emigrant carriers which made the fast passage between England and Australia, in the days of sailing vessels. Indexes.

"They were handsome ships, as the Spurling illustrations prove, capping their pyramids of double topsails and topgallants with skysails, often on all three masts. Now that they are gone a book such as this is an invaluable reminder of proud and lovely scenes."
+ Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 190w

Christian Science Monitor p10 F 17 '40 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:12 Ja '40

LUCAS, FRANK LAURENCE. Ten Victorian poets. 2d ed 199p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge]

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism

New edition of a book first published ten years ago with the title: Eight Victorian Poets (Book Review Digest, 1931). The original work included essays on Tennyson, Robert Browning, Arnold, Clough, Dante Gabriel Rossetti, Swinburne, Morris and Hardy. To these have been added essays on Coventry Patmore and Christina Rossetti. Selected bibliography.

Reviewed by John Holmes
Boston Transcript p13 Je 17 '40 110w

"He writes magnificently, with prose that carries one away, and with wit that spurs one delicately to rise to his meaning. And when he touches off character with a sudden flash of epigram, the result is most illuminating. The two essays he has added to this book are on Coventry Patmore, and Christina Rossetti. The latter, I think, shows him at his best." Eric Forbes-Boyd
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 15 '40 550w

Reviewed by J. G. E. Hopkins
Commonweal 32:273 Jl 19 '40 190w

"Neat and witty essays by an author so deft, so politely ironic, that his style and thought seem to surpass those of the poets he describes."
+ New Repub 103:126 Jl 22 '40 50w

"Originally, these were radio talks for the B. B. C.; and it might be asked what more could be accomplished, on such an occasion, than this amiable rephrasing of platitudes. I should answer: lots more. One might, for example, attend less to biographical gossip and more to the texts of the poems. It is true that Professor Lucas quotes verses extensively; but he almost never does so with more than a quasi-anecdotal purpose." Dudley Fitts
— + Sat R of Lit 22:10 Ag 10 '40 280w

"All except two of Mr. Lucas's studies were given as wireless talks and published ten years ago. He then prefaced them with a brief Defence of Poetry that has lost none of its point. . . Mr. Lucas's Victorians are observed through no haze of memorial sentiment; some of them indeed get a smart whipping, but those who pass the test as poets do so

LOWNDES (lounz)

LUCAS, F. L.—Continued
under a white light. Mr. Lucas is emphatic enough in his conclusion: 'Though our generation can criticize the Victorian poets, let us frankly admit that it cannot equal them.'" Sylva Norman
+ Spec 164:726 My 24 '40 650w
Times [London] Lit Sup p367 Jl 27 '40 70w

LUCAS, JOHN PAUL, and GROOME, BAILEY TROY. The king of Scuffletoun; a Croatan romance. 238p $2.50 Garrett

Croatan Indians—Fiction 40-31633

The romantic story of a part Indian outlaw, Henry Berry Lowrie, supposed to be a descendant of one of the settlers of Sir Walter Raleigh's Roanoke island colony.

"An off-the-trail novel. Worth reading." Robert Van Gelder
+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 N 16 '40 30w

"The story is romantic and tragic, perhaps as true as many another 'historical' romance."
Springf'd Republican p10 O 30 '40 300w

LUCCOCK, HALFORD EDWARD. American mirror. 300p $2.50 Macmillan

810.9 American literature—History and criticism. Social problems in literature 40-34703

Chapters on the "social, ethical and religious aspects of American literature, 1930-1940" (Subtitle), by the professor of homiletics at Yale. Contents: The valley of the shadow; Some literary trends of the nineteen-thirties; The candid camera at work; Exploring the inner world; The impact of the depression; The voice of labor; Of mortgages and migrants; The drama and social issues; Social poetry; Religion—implicit and explicit; War and peace. Index.

Booklist 37:214 Ja 15 '41

"To write a book of this kind one must have learning mellowed by experience, wide tolerance, discriminating literary taste, critical acumen, sympathetic understanding of human emotions and aspirations, and skill in the art of the written word. Professor Luccock appears to be the man for the job." E. C. Johnson
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 4 '41 480w

"Mr. Luccock seems to have read everything, except the proof of his own book, and he writes with that superfluity of racy metaphor and pun and quotation which makes the professor popular with the freshmen but which often gets in the road of saying anything. Nevertheless the book is a lively presentation of the pattern in contemporary American letters." Earle Birney
Canadian Forum 20:325 Ja '41 290w

"This is sound literary criticism and penetrating interpretation of the social and spiritual significance of recent literature."
+ Christian Century 57:1519 D 4 '40 380w

"Readers who have got a bit behind on their current reading—as who has not?—and who feel the need of some guidance other than that supplied by reviewers of the new books as they appear or by the advice of busy librarians and booksellers, will find in Dr. Luccock's interpretative survey the very thing they want." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 58:88 Ja 15 '41 600w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 154:18 D 15 '40 250w

"American Mirror is a good piece of work, revealing a broad knowledge and a keen insight." W. R. McNutt
+ Crozer Q 18:70 Ja '41 390w

LUCE, EDWARD SMITH. Keogh, Comanche and Custer. ltd autog ed 127p il $3 Swift, J.S.

973.82 Indians of North America—Wars. Keogh, Myles Walter. Custer, George Armstrong. Horses—Legends and stories. Little Big Horn, Battle of the, 1876 40-1944

"This book, though primarily of interest to the Seventh United States Cavalry and to the army generally, is a really valuable contribution to the history of one of our most distinguished regiments. It contains a well-documented and complete account of the career of Captain Miles Walter Keogh, an Irishman who served in the papal army as a second lieutenant, beginning in October, 1860; distinguished himself in the American Civil War; and died heroically at the Battle of the Little Big Horn as an officer of the Seventh Cavalry on June 25, 1876. . . Following the account of this gallant officer's career, our author tells the story of his famous horse Comanche, the only survivor of the Custer fight found on the field of battle. . . In addition the book contains an appendix comprising a variety of documents and letters having to do with Captain Keogh, Comanche, and the regiment to which they both belonged." Am Hist R

"On controversial matters, such as the character of Custer and the motives of the Indians, Captain Luce, as is natural, shows strong sympathy for the army and the general. He presents strong arguments and a number of documents offered in exoneration of General Custer. The book is well illustrated by rare photographs and is one of the best things of its kind I have seen." Stanley Vestal
+ Am Hist R 45:974 Jl '40 280w

Reviewed by W. C. Rivers
Books p25 Ap 14 '40 1200w

LUCKIESH, MATTHEW. Torch of civilization; the story of man's conquest of darkness. 269p il $3 Putnam

628.9 Lighting—History. Electric lighting—History (W) 40-27813

History of artificial light and the importance of its place in civilization, written by the director of the lighting and research laboratory of the General Electric Company.

Booklist 37:149 D 15 '40

"Full of sound information that should today be common knowledge. It is an excellent book for youngsters—as well as their elders."
+ Books p9 Ja 5 '41 70w

"It is the latter part of Dr. Luckiesh's book which is most stimulating. For it is here that we find how the wondrous achievements in the creation of artificial lighting has extended the civilized day to the full limit of twenty-four hours. Dr. Luckiesh has interspersed his specific facts with bits of dramatic history, his own observations and philosophy and his optimistic outlook for the future. . . There are sixteen full-page illustrations which add graphically to Dr. Luckiesh's narrative. Unfortunately, there is no index." H. G. Garbedian
+ N Y Times p12 Ja 5 '41 650w

"Dr. Matthew Luckiesh is probably the best informed of all men on this subject. He is also an easy and prolific writer. In twenty-five years he has written no less than twenty-one books on light, color, vision, and their applications, all of them clear, readable, and full of information. The present book is the broadest of them all." G. W.
+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ja 18 '41 330w

"From his background of accurate, technical and detailed research, Dr. Luckiesh gives authoritative information. . . [He] is to be commended for the presentation of such material in so readable a fashion. This is no superficial study, but a blending of important data with a deep sense of the broad implications of the beneficence of science in the hands of men of good-will."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 N '40 460w

LUDWIG, EMIL. Three portraits: Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin. 127p $1.50 Alliance bk.

923.2 Hitler, Adolf. Mussolini, Benito. Stalin, Iosif (W) 40-7959

Brief biographical sketches of the three European dictators vitally concerned with the present state of Europe: Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin.

"The retouching has made all three look less like statesmen than ever, and more like the missing bandits placarded on postoffice bulletin boards. But the pictures are clear, intelligent, in focus. Unlike most biographers of these dictators since the war began, Mr. Ludwig does not have to put daggers in their teeth to make them look ferocious. . . His portrait of Hitler is less sharp in outline than the other two." Joseph Barnes

+ Books p18 Mr 24 '40 700w

"Mr. Ludwig writes well and always deserves to be read. Yet it is not easy to avoid the feeling that he has been spreading himself rather thin of late, and these three character sketches—they are hardly portraits—are definitely superficial. . . These three sketches can be recommended without misgivings only to those who are not very familiar with other portraits of these same dictators." G. M. A. G.

— + Canadian Forum 20:60 My '40 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '40

"Short and trivial and rather dull renderings of the dictators in the Ludwig style."

— Commonweal 31:496 Mr 29 '40 80w

Foreign Affairs 18:747 Jl '40 20w

"Brief, readable."

New Repub 102:417 Mr 25 '40 40w

New Yorker 16:107 Mr 16 '40 40w

"Emil Ludwig has a facile pen. His talent for popularizing biographies has aroused the admiration of some and the envy of other, writers. This time he once more gives proof of this gift. . . The portrait of Hitler seems the least satisfactory. In this instance Mr. Ludwig appears unable to retain a certain detachment necessary to good biographical writing. His chapter on the Fuehrer partakes more of a passionate indictment than a biography, and contributes little to a knowledge of Hitler's character." J. C. de W.

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:19 Mr 16 '40 280w

LUMPKIN, KATHARINE DUPRE. The South in progress. 256p $2.50 Int. pubs.

330.975 South—Economic conditions. South—Social conditions 40-30955

A study of present economic and social conditions in the South. Contents: Land of cotton; Fruits of the sharecropping system; Differentials in industry; Livelihood; Civil liberty; Labour; Problems of trade unionism; The New Deal comes South; Divisions and issues; Political ferment; Time of progress; Reference notes; Index.

Reviewed by M. D. Irish

Am Pol Sci R 34:1238 D '40 290w

" 'The South in Progress,' a useful addition to the literature of the region, is well named. Its facts are not new, however, and it offers no original suggestion for a way out of regional problems. It does tell with cold accuracy the fearfulness of these problems, presenting in orderly form a condensation of a mass of statistical information. With a thoroughly Leftist bias, the author nevertheless writes with a deep sympathy and appreciation of the wide ramifications both in history and in human incapacity of the issues involved." Carroll Kilpatrick

+ Sat R of Lit 22:16 S 7 '40 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '40 50w

LUNDBERG, GEORGE ANDREW. Foundations of sociology. 556p maps $3.50 Macmillan

301 Sociology 40-2323

"Proposes a completely 'positivistic' position in the social sciences. The author considers the improvement of the technology of social research to be a primary condition of the advancement of the social sciences." (Social Studies) Author and subject indexes.

"Regardless of my criticism, the book is a valiant effort to attack one of the most difficult problems of any science without dodging it. As such it teaches us by either its success or its failure. In either case it contributes to our knowledge; therefore it is to be welcomed heartily." P. A. Sorokin

Am J Soc 45:795 Mr '40 1700w

"In spite of the critical tone of this review it should be stressed that the book is vigorous, stimulating, and worth while. Innumerable challenging and illuminating comments are to be found in the text and in the voluminous notes at the end of each chapter. The result of the book may not be a post-Lundbergian sociology, but many sociologists will be forced to examine the assumptions underlying their scientific thinking." Clifford Kirkpatrick

+ — Am Soc R 5:438 Je '40 1150w

"The excellent bibliographic notes indicate that Lundberg has read widely in scientific literature and is acquainted with statistical technique. However, much of the discussion about methods of physical science seems unnecessary in developing a framework for social investigation. . . The book requires preparation in methods of exact science, and some acquaintance with recent philosophy. Otherwise, young students might be proselyted to a new and untried religion à l'envers." Howard Woolston

+ — Ann Am Acad 209:244 My '40 460w

"This volume goes far toward meeting the need for mathematical quantification in the field of sociology." E. G. Olsen

+ Social Educ 4:221 Mr '40 200w

Reviewed by N. D. Palmer

Social Studies 31:232 My '40 240w

"The book is thoroughly up-to-date in the literature cited, and the 'intellectual technic' employed: it is a work of scientific theory. However, it has definite and superior usefulness in its trenchant display of the real foundations of social thought and action." W. L. Bailey

+ Survey 76:343 N '40 360w

LUNDIN, LEONARD. Cockpit of the revolution; the war for independence in New Jersey. (Princeton hist. of N.J.) 463p il maps $3.75 Princeton univ. press

973.3449 U.S.—History—Revolution. New Jersey—History 40-9574

"Professor Lundin gives a picture of conditions in the colony prior to the outbreak of war, separates the people into the hostile camps as Tories or Whigs, rewrites . . . the story of the vitally important campaigns which culminated at Princeton and Monmouth. . . In addition he presents for the first time a connected narrative of many troop movements and engagements, relatively unimportant in themselves, but affecting vitally the more decisive campaigns and the final outcome of the struggle. The chief political developments in the years from the Stamp Act to the Declaration of Independence have either been omitted or touched upon lightly." (Introd) Indexes.

Reviewed by S. I. Pomerantz

Am Hist R 46:418 Ja '41 650w

"Mr. Lundin's narrative is constructed from first-hand materials and presented in a style lively and engaging." H. S. Commager

+ Books p16 Je 16 '40 1250w

Nation 150:661 My 25 '40 60w

LUNDIN, LEONARD—Continued

"Because this volume is designed as a survey one cannot complain if detailed information is occasionally lacking. In a number of instances substitution of the author's straight narrative for direct quotation of source material might have made even more effective what is, nevertheless, a first-rate, comprehensive picture of the conflicts, problems and critical military operations in New Jersey during the War for Independence. Mr. Lundin's fresh, scholarly and sound interpretations are happily devoid of guesswork. In another volume it is to be hoped that more attention will be given to the actual daily life of the people in town and country. More maps, more illustrations and a more adequate index might also be suggested for future volumes in this welcome series." N. G. Goodman

+ — N Y Times p17 My 19 '40 1000w

"The second volume of this history of New Jersey is as excellent as the first. It has all of the special value of local history; seen in this microcosmic way, the picture of the Revolution, if its general outlines are unaltered, acquires a new depth."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p499 S 28 '40 150w

LUNN, ARNOLD HENRY MOORE. Whither Europe? 270p $3 Sheed [12s 6d Hutchinson]

940.52 Europe—Politics. Eastern question (Balkan) 40-33245

A series of articles written in December, 1939, and January and February, 1940, during a trip made by the author through Switzerland, Italy, Jugoslavia, Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria. Index.

"The author is always outspoken, profoundly Catholic, and consistently hostile to the Communists. . . Sometimes so generous to the Germans that he incurs criticism from his friends, at other times, he is less than fair."

+ — Cath World 152:254 N '40 160w

"Although the work was completed on March 8, 1940, many of its pages seem as 'ancient' as yesterday's newspaper. . . It is true that Lunn is a capable journalist whose rambling account of Europe occasionally penetrates Europe's problems. But his approach is not novel and suffers from comparison with other practitioners of this trade." J. S. Roucek

— + Commonweal 33:108 N 15 '40 170w

Reviewed by Mary McCarthy

New Repub 103:633 N 4 '40 370w

Times [London] Lit Sup p214 My 4 '40 350w

LUSK, HILTON FRANK. General aeronautics. rev ed 524p il $3.75 Ronald

629.13 Aeronautics 40-12543

"Intended as an aid to those preparing for official tests for pilots', aircraft and aircraft engine mechanics' certificates, and also usable as a textbook. Not a beginner's book, but a summary of the technical knowledge required. First published in 1932, now rewritten and brought up to date." Booklist

Booklist 37:72 O 15 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:31 Jl '40

LUTES, MRS DELLA (THOMPSON). Gabriel's search. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 351p $2.50 Little

(W) 40-14080

A tale of frontier life in Michigan in the 1830s. Against a picture of the ways of the hardy pioneers, the long winters and busy spring times, neighborly visits and house-raisings, the story follows the career of young Gabriel Reed, a recent arrival from York state, gradually gaining a place for himself in the community, building a house, and winning the hand of pretty Debby Cooper.

Booklist 37:68 O 15 '40

" 'Gabriel's Search' has much the tone of an older person remembering a pleasant part of life, sometimes uneventful, but described in detail, with great satisfaction." Rosemary Benét

+ Books p3 S 1 '40 800w

"Gabriel Reed's early life with a hypocritical, pious uncle had destroyed his faith in God and man and it was his search to find a real foundation upon which to build his life that forms the story. Ordinarily this would be a psychological study of mental and moral growth and the protagonist would dominate the book. But Mrs. Lutes has built up a background that makes Gabriel pale indeed and completely submerges him with her interesting details of daily life. As an antiquarian she overshadows herself as a novelist." Frank Ambrose

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 24 '40 380w

Christian Century 57:1180 S 25 '40 60w

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 28 '40 600w

"The book is a detailed chronicle with many characters, and lacks the humor of Della Lutes's short essays. Will have limited appeal." H. R. Burdett

Library J 65:652 Ag '40 50w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

N Y Times p14 S 1 '40 600w

"This story of 1833 touches on issues as urgent now as then. The touch is light and there is no attempt to resolve the issues, but Gabriel emerges as a living individual. . . An exhaustive knowledge of early Michigan custom has been worked into the tale with loving care. A word of praise should be added for the plausible portraits of friendly Indians and pioneer children." H. McC.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:22 S 21 '40 270w

Wis Lib Bul 36:138 O '40

LUTZ, ALMA. Created equal; a biography of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, 1815-1902. 345p il $3 Day

B or 92 Stanton, Mrs Elizabeth (Cady). Woman—Rights of women (W) 40-27402

During her lifetime Elizabeth Cady Stanton was known as "the best loved woman in the United States." This study gives a full account of her long life from 1815 to 1902, and also traces step-by-step the struggle for woman's rights, in which she fought so valiantly. Portraits of many well-known pioneers of the movement include Susan B. Anthony, Lucretia Mott, Lucy Stone, and Horace Greeley. Chronology. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:344 My 1 '40

"The many-sidedness of Elizabeth Stanton's nature is fully brought out in Miss Lutz's warm and lively narrative. . . Miss Lutz tells the story of the American Woman's Movement as lived by Elizabeth Stanton with freshness and balance. She is perhaps somewhat biased in favor of her heroine, who is always right in all the famous controversies that beset the cause in its heroic and colorful progress. As I agree with her about 95 per cent I can't quarrel with her for that, but others may." C. G. Stillman

+ Books p6 Mr 31 '40 1250w

"This book is sweet, sane and sound, like its subject, but it lacks Elizabeth Cady Stanton's distinction. The book doesn't absorb one; the lady certainly would have. Facts have been collected with careful scholarship; they have been presented with authenticity in chronological order. There is no fusion." E. N. Arling

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ap 20 '40 470w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 23 '40 350w

Reviewed by Rebecca Pitts

New Repub 103:149 Jl 29 '40 280w

"Elizabeth Cady Stanton died eighteen years before women were accepted to full citizenship throughout her country. Her biography is all the more welcome, the more absorbing and often amusing reading, because it is difficult for us now to realize how long and bitter the fight was. . . We have had histories of the suffrage movement, from her own pen and those of others. We have had her letters, and the biography of Susan B. Anthony. This capacious, enthusiastic life-story of Elizabeth Cady Stanton is none the less a book we have been waiting for." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 24 '40 1450w

"A vast amount of research went into the preparation of this book; persons now living who knew Mrs Stanton were interviewed and much hitherto unavailable material—manuscripts, letters and photographs—were utilized. 'Created Equal' is a literary achievement of which the author may well be proud." L. C. Rich

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 7 '40 1050w

LUTZ, HARLEY LEIST. The business man's stake in government finance. 119p pa $1 Stanford univ. Graduate school of business, Stanford University, Calif.

336.73 Finance—U.S. U.S.—Economic policy 40-5788

The book consists of a series of five lectures delivered by Professor Lutz before the third annual business conference at Stanford University, July 17-21, 1939. Contents: The business man's stake in government finance; The investor's stake in government finance; Fiscal policy and the economic cycle; The taxation of public securities; Romance versus realism in taxation.

"These lectures constitute a valuable contribution to the critical literature in federal finance, and they should prove stimulating to all students in that phase of the science." Roscoe Arant

+ Am Econ R 30:646 S '40 750w

"This monograph is an able presentation of one point of view in public finance." H. M. Groves

J Pol Econ 48:915 D '40 1000w

LUTZ, HARLEY LEIST. The taxation of railroads in New Jersey. 208p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

385.135 Railroads—New Jersey. Railroads—Taxation 40-10676

"Professor Lutz presents a critical analysis of the practical application of the ad valorem principle in railroad taxation. While the author does not repudiate the theory underlying this method of taxing railroads, he does show conclusively that the statutory and administrative development of railroad ad valorem taxation in New Jersey has produced not only injustice but a virtual breakdown of the system of railroad taxation in that state." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

Reviewed by R. W. Harbeson

Am Econ R 30:428 Je '40 380w

"Professor Lutz's lucid style and his cogent analysis of the New Jersey railroad tax situation have produced a study that should enjoy high rank and significance in the literature on railroad taxation." M. L. Faust

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:595 Je '40 330w

LUTZ, HARLEY LEIST; FOOTE, EDMUND W., and STANTON, BENJAMIN FITTS. Getting a living; the foundations of economic society. 687p il map $1.80 Row

330 Economics 40-4988

"This book is essentially a text dealing with the principles of economics. . . The authors develop in three units the economic principles underlying the consumption, production, and exchange of wealth, followed by three units dealing with value and price, the role of government, and economic policies. . . The book is written in a straightforward descriptive style with several examples of the principles applied in every day life." Social Studies

"Some writers are able to state important truths in new ways that are both attractive and instructive. The book under consideration is such a statement by a trio of authors who ably represent the viewpoints of economist, teacher, and administrator." G. B. Engberg

+ Social Educ 4:522 N '40 450w

"This book would be particularly adapted to above average seniors in high school, or to junior college students. It is worth investigating." V. E. Pitkin

+ Social Studies 31:190 Ap '40 260w

LYNCH, JOHN JOSEPH. Our trembling earth. 202p il map $3 Dodd

551.22 Earthquakes (W) 40-34914

An account by the head of the seismograph station at Fordham University, of what has been learned about the nature of earthquakes and how that knowledge has been acquired. Bibliography.

Booklist 37:169 Ja 1 '41

Cath World 152:382 D '40 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:46 O '40

"An increasing public interest for scientific books and recollections of the recent Rumanian earthquake will attract many readers to this story of earthquakes." J. P.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 Ja 4 '41 280w

Scientific Bk Club R 11:4 D '40 390w

LYNCH, PATRICIA. The grey goose of Kilnevin; il. by John Keating. 285p $2 Dutton [6s Dent]

40-12858

An imaginative tale of a fat grey goose and a little girl, whose adventures on the road to Bridgie Swallow's provide the action.

"I do not know the age for which the book was written, but I know the kind of child who will love it. This child likes stories that go on and on, night after night, until the marvelous and the everyday melt together into dreamless sleep." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 S 15 '40 400w

Cath World 152:511 Ja '41 150w

"Even better than the Turfcutter's Donkey stories. For older fairy-tale ages, nine to eleven. Illustrations are attractively done." Florence O'Gara

+ Library J 65:715 S 1 '40 110w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:849 O 15 '40 30w

Reviewed by Amabel Williams-Ellis.

Manchester Guardian sup viii D 1 '39 80w

"Like Eleanor Farjeon, this Irish story-teller is a master-hand at beginning where everyday life leaves off, transmuting the half-forgotten clues of common experience into fantasy with the eerie logic and continuity of a dream's adventure." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 25 '40 400w

"A little sentimental but genuinely imaginative." Amabel Williams-Ellis

Spec 163:712 N 17 '39 30w

LYON, DANA (MRS WILLIAM PENN LYON, 3d). No shelter for the heart. 312p $2.50 Mill

40-32084

When Douglas Conway's stock and bond business crashed, he moved his family out to a corn-growing ranch in California. The future was dark but not hopeless until a series of unfortunate occurrences brought Douglas' mother on the scene. In the months that followed Douglas' wife, Kate, saw her husband leave her for his mother, she fought to make the land pay, she was finally driven to a courtroom to fight for her children but in the end she won.

LYON, DANA—Continued

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p23 O 6 '40 120w

"The story contains some improbable elements and one interesting but rather unlikely character. The wife, Kate, really the heroine, is depicted with skill and sympathy. The novel is not as well done as [others], but it is an honest attempt to grapple with one of the problems of modern life." L. E. Cannon
+ — Christian Century 57:1379 N 6 '40 120w

LYON, LEVERETT SAMUEL. Government and economic life, v 1. See Government and economic life

LYONS, EUGENE. Stalin, czar of all the Russias. 292p il $2.50 Lippincott

B or 92 Stalin, Iosif. Russia—History—Revolution, 1917 (W) 40-27335

A biography of Stalin and an attempt to appraise his character and resolve the mystery of his rise to power. The author, an American journalist who spent six years in Russia, calls Stalin "the most fawned upon, the most hated, the most feared human being alive;" summing up "in his own person . . . the dominant aspect of the history of our times; the bankruptcy of idealism and the triumph of amoralism."

"This book is perhaps the best yet available in any language; surely the best in English." A. O. Sarkissian
+ Ann Am Acad 210:155 Jl '40 550w
Booklist 36:324 Ap 15 '40

"This is a tough little book, a tract for the times written in their spirit. So far Mr. Stalin has escaped his would-be biographers as he has his would-be assassins, and, one suspects, by a more comfortable margin. But he has laid himself open to political pamphleteering, and Eugene Lyons has used the opening not with a rapier but with a bludgeon." Joseph Barnes
Books p8 Mr 17 '40 650w

Reviewed by E. J. Simmons
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '40 1300w
Cath World 151:374 Je '40 500w
Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 8 '40 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '40

"It is quite possible that no one will ever be able to write a sound and reliable biography of Stalin, because of the absence of documents. In the meantime, this sustained diatribe of disillusionment serves as a poor account of the life of the enigmatic butcher and murderer, who is, after all, basically nothing more than an amoral exterminator." Paul Kiniery
— Commonweal 31:515 Ap 5 '40 550w

"Lyons' book is good, even though he is full of indignation. Soviet Russia has changed face since 1927 and Eugene Lyons is just the man to ring the changes. His is a vivid picture of the man who created the new anti-soviet Soviets." Norman Cousins
+ Current Hist 51:5 Ap '40 500w
Foreign Affairs 18:757 Jl '40 60w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum
Forum 103:259 My '40 410w

"To read this book is an unforgettable experience." Mrs S. E. Sherman
+ Library J 65:209 Mr 1 '40 170w
Manchester Guardian p7 Je 10 '40 150w
Nation 150:451 Ap 6 '40 650w

"Eugene Lyons' Stalin may be useful to those who have not the time or the patience to read Souvarine's masterly biography, which it follows closely in describing Stalin's life up till the death of Lenin. The latter half of the book is more interesting, as it contains an account of Mr. Lyons' own interview with Stalin and his personal experiences in Moscow. But here again he adds little to the information he gave in his Assignment in Utopia."
New Statesman & Nation 19:756 Je 15 '40 120w

"On the whole, Lyons has performed his exacting task extremely well. . . He has succeeded in presenting a comprehensive and well-rounded story of Stalin's amazing career to the end of 1939, and has provided the reader with much useful information on the revolution and even with glimpses of Russia's past history. The volume is carefully planned and brilliantly written. Indeed, as a literary performance it is greatly superior to Lyons's earlier books." M. T. Florinsky
+ — N Y Times p16 Mr 24 '40 1450w
New Yorker 16:87 Mr 23 '40 40w

Reviewed by Freda Utley
Sat R of Lit 21:11 Ap 6 '40 1300w

Reviewed by E. H. Carr
Spec 164:722 My 24 '40 550w

"There is some over-simplification here; too little weight is given to the inherent monstrosities of modern dictatorship, which cannot retreat and must at all costs be proved right. But the story of Stalin's early years, of his ambitions, of his intrigues and of his remorseless pursuit of rivals and enemies is well told and the moral of the present delirium of obligatory Stalin-worship is pointed soberly enough. If an English apologist for Stalin's Russia is still open to argument, here is reading for him."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p226 My 11 '40 600w

"Mr. Lyons has given us the most readable and up-to-date biography of Stalin. In the earlier chapters, it is admittedly based on Boris Souvarine's 'Stalin.' In part, it can be described as a highly successful popularization of Souvarine's bulky and somewhat heavy but important volume. For the latter chapters of his story, from 1928 on, Mr. Lyons relies on his own rich personal experiences in Moscow, including an interview with Stalin himself. These chapters suffer somewhat from the large dose of political invective which the author has infused in them. One can fully sympathize with his feelings, and still be of the opinion that his book would have been even a better one had he written it with greater restraint." Michael Karpovich
+ — Yale R n s 29:818 summer '40 650w

LYONS, GEORGE J.; MARTIN, HARMON C., and LYNCH, JOHN T. The strategy of job finding. 408p il $4; to schools $3 Prentice-Hall

371.425 Occupations. Applications for positions (W) 39-28994

"The material presented in this book is offered as a guide to the job seeker in the selection of a vocation, the development of a successful interview technique, and the obtaining of a career job. The principles apply whether the job seeker is a novice groping for his first job or an experienced applicant seeking a better position." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:144 D 15 '39
Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '40

M

MACARTNEY, CLARENCE EDWARD NOBLE. Little Mac; the life of General George B. McClellan. 336p il maps $3 Dorrance

B or 92 McClellan, George Brinton. U.S.—History—Civil war 40-5651

"McClellan's principal claims to fame are based on his organization of an effective army and his forcing Lee's retreat from Maryland following the battle of Antietam. Dr. Macartney emphasizes these claims. He criticizes McClellan's political superiors for their attitude toward him and for their interference with his plans and movements. . . Though this book is called a 'Life' of McClellan, the author pays little attention to his career before and following his war service." N Y Times

Christian Century 57:453 Ap 3 '40 180w
Churchman 154:15 My 1 '40 340w

"Dr. Macartney tells only one side of the story. . . No attempt has been made to evaluate McClellan's contribution to the Union cause or to place him in history." T. R. Hay
N Y Times p4 Je 2 '40 430w
Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 30 '40 750w

MACAULAY, ROSE. And no man's wit. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 351p $2.50 Little [8s 6d Collins]
40-32620

The scene of the novel is Spain, between June and September, 1939. An English doctor goes to Spain in search of her oldest son, Guy, who has disappeared, after fighting in the International Brigade. With her goes another son, definitely a Leftist; her daughter Betsey, who is bored with politics; a strange silent girl, Ellen, the fiancée of the lost youth; and a Cockney chauffeur. In Spain they are joined by a former friend of Guy's—an Aragonese marquis. The company motors thru Spain talking over Spanish politics. The turning point of the story is the drowning of the mysterious Ellen.

"How illuminating Miss Macaulay's version of the New Spain will be to her readers I hesitate to say. What she has to report is as spotty as and at the same time quite of the nature of any intelligent traveler's observations. She has strung together her notes in an amusing but quite unimportant narrative and caused them to gleam here and there with her unfailing scintillant wit." F. H. Bullock
Books p4 O 27 '40 1000w

"The talk is often good talk, and there is much to be learned from it of Spain: but it is apt to repeat itself, and I fear there were times when I added my sighs to Betsey's. Nor do I think that the characters are very convincing: they seem to me to be wooden, and it is small recompense that the wood comes from the planks of political platforms. Still, most of them make an approach to actuality, and I must confess that I was astonished when Ellen departed from it altogether into the realm of fantasy. . . I must say, however, that I read this part of the book with growing excitement." Eric Forbes-Boyd
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 31 '40 470w

"Most of the dialogue is clever and satirical. Certain exaggerated characterizations begin to bore or annoy. Will probably appeal to her old friends but will hardly make new ones." Edith Crowell
— + Library J 65:874 O 15 '40 90w

"Decidedly this novel has its lighter moments, and it has too, historical background. . . There is some weakness of construction, but Spain in 1939 was interesting and an observer of Miss Macaulay's perceptiveness and of her gifts of expression could not be dull about it. Nor is she." Harold Brighouse
+ — Manchester Guardian p2 Je 21 '40 290w

"Those who have no affection for Spain, or who lost no friends in that preliminary war, will probably enjoy the odd sparkling pessimism of the book and the fantasy so oddly caught in this net of argument." Anthony West
New Statesman & Nation 20:46 Jl 13 '40 420w

"This novel, which contains some of Rose Macaulay's most brilliant writing, most incisive and compassionate irony, contains too a sadness that is almost despair. Yet even in war's wider devastation we can read her book now for its wit and wisdom, with no despair in our own hearts. From that last darkness the earth in these past weeks has been rescued—since England set the sun of man's immortal courage aflame once more in the sky." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p6 O 27 '40 1050w

"Miss Macaulay is quite a good dialectician, with a neat wit and a sensible habit of considering various sides of a question. . . Not a bad way to spend 351 pages, either."
+ New Yorker 16:86 O 26 '40 100w

"Fantasy can be serious; but can it be apologetic? Perhaps it can. Perhaps, too, it is trite and ungenerous for a reviewer to say that a novel is witty but that he wishes the author hadn't written it. No matter. 'And No Man's Wit' is a witty novel, but I wish Miss Macaulay hadn't written it." George Dangerfield
Sat R of Lit 23:6 D 14 '40 650w

"There is a frequent switching from gentle realism to a somewhat shrill artificiality, and this unevenness troubles the form of the book; as does the introduction of the mermaid character, Ellen, who surely should have had a whole novel to herself. . . The story, however, will interest people who know Spain, have been saddened by the end of her terrible war, and like to debate her problems, and with them the problems of Europe in general, as they stood in August 1939." Kate O'Brien
+ — Spec 164:844 Je 21 '40 460w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '40 650w

"Miss Macaulay, of course, has a light and cool touch, and in a novel concerned with politics, and Spanish politics at that, her delicate and faintly mocking playfulness is almost a blessing. Yet perhaps she is inclined to be light to excess. It is not so much a want of imaginative substance, a thinness of invention that in this case makes for slackening interest. . . The disappointing thing in a legitimately discursive novel of Spain is the intellectual airiness with which Miss Macaulay, from time to time, tries to dispose of what, when all is said, are life-and-death matters of belief."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p301 Je 22 '40 850w

"The mockery and the inquiry never run thin, the book never jumps out of the frame to become either too serious or too trivial. For all the lightness of tone, it never seems callous. It is like seeing the figure of Wit himself walking behind the black plumes and mourners and shooting off his fireworks as he goes—a procession which is somehow not incongruous when under Miss Macaulay's direction." Robert Littell
+ Yale R n s 30:viii winter '41 220w

MCBRIDE, MARY MARGARET. How dear to my heart; il. by Elmer Hader. 196p $2 Macmillan
B or 92 (W) 40-35576

"The scenes of Mary Margaret McBride's childhood were those of a Mid-Western farm and village. . . They were a stalwart lot, those farm folk: hardworking, almost never sick. They had a good time. And they had food which even now makes Miss McBride's mouth water, and which she is ready to pass on to her readers in the form of recipes. . . She went away to school at eleven, and childhood was over." Books

Booklist 37:174 Ja 1 '41

"Of the future writer and radio 'columnist' there is no intrusion here. Miss McBride has sent her mind back with an admirable completeness to those early years which are still dear to her heart, and only occasionally does she refer to later experiences or even remotely suggest comparisons between then and now. Although she has drawn a loving and vital portrait of the capable mother she adored and has also introduced other characters with the touch of reality, the value and attractiveness of her book lies in its recreation of a scene and way of living, simply as she recalls it." H. M. Shaw

MCBRIDE, M. M.—Continued
+ Books p25 N 17 '40 400w
Christian Century 57:1419 N 13 '40 10w

"A trace of sentimentality only flavors the sturdy humor and sincerity of the book." W. K. R.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 D 28 '40 600w

"It is a personal book with some general suggestion of Midwestern farm life some decades ago, and it has a pleasant human quality."
+ N Y Times p3 D 22 '40 350w

"The book is what you like—an illustration in psychological development, or an object lesson in sophistication, or just a happy and true story of the author's early life."
Springf'd Republican p6 N 25 '40 300w

MCCANCE, ROBERT ALEXANDER, and WIDDOWSON, ELSIE M. Chemical composition of foods. 150p $2.50 Chemical pub. co.

641.1 Food—Analysis

"In this book, the author, who is associated with the department of medicine of the University of Cambridge, and secretary of a committee upon human nutrition, has collected many tables showing the composition of foods per 100 grams, the composition of foods per ounce, and the available (non-phytic acid) phosphorus and (ionisible) iron in foods. Includes a bibliography and a handy index." N Y New Tech Bks

J Home Econ 32:696 D '40 130w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:35 Jl '40

MCCARTY, HAROLD HULL. The geographic basis of American economic life. 702p il maps $3.75 Harper

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions 40-5883

Commercial geography for college classes. The United States is divided into ten regions, and each section is described as to its physical and industrial aspects. Photographs, charts, maps. Glossary. Index.

Am Econ R 30:381 Je '40 60w
Booklist 36:343 My 1 '40
Wis Lib Bul 36:63 Ap '40

MCCLELLAND, NANCY VINCENT. Duncan Phyfe and the English regency, 1795-1830; foreword by Edward Knoblock. 364p il $15; ltd autog ed $25 Scott, W.R.

749 Phyfe, Duncan. Furniture 40-27005

"A study of the English Regency—its personalities, its manner of life and decorative style—serves as a fitting introduction to this scholarly account of the life and work of Duncan Phyfe, probably the best known of American furniture makers and one of this country's foremost advocates of the Regency mode. . . The book is enriched with many fine photographs—famous Regency homes and furniture, houses built during the classical revival in America, and many examples of Duncan Phyfe's masterpieces. There is a chapter about his competitors and another which lists and gives brief histories of many of his customers." Books

Booklist 36:196 Ja 15 '40

"An intelligent and painstaking piece of research."
+ Books p29 Mr 3 '40 250w
Pratt p15 winter '40
Special Libraries 31:342 S '40

MCCLINTOCK, MARSHALL. Here is a book. 52,52p il $2 Vanguard

655 Book industries and trade—Juvenile literature (W) 40-27006

This book for children is in two parts. The first part describes the writing, printing, illustrating, binding, publishing and selling of Scoop; the second part is the story itself, which tells how a group of children printed the Foxtown Flash.

Booklist 36:201 Ja 15 '40

"This undertaking should be widely used in schools, and will be found interesting as well to boys or girls getting out a small neighborhood paper. For 'Scoop' is the story of the Foxtown Flash, which begins on a typewriter and winds up with editorial and business offices and printing plant complete." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 F 4 '40 210w

Reviewed by Alice Martin
Library J 65:261 Mr 15 '40 100w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p10 Je 16 '40 370w

MCCLOSKEY, ROBERT. Lentil [il. by the author]. [61p] $2 Viking
(W) 40-8617

Picture-story book about a small boy who could not sing, but who could work wonders on a simple harmonica, especially on the day when the great Colonel Carter returned to his home town.

Booklist 36:400 Je 15 '40

"This book may not be that 'second Ferdinand' so often promised, but in the opinion of this reporter it qualifies on more than one count for this position. Its strongest claim is this: the second Ferdinand, whatever it may be, won't be in the least like the first one." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Ap 28 '40 430w
Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 160w

"Here is a piece of authentic Americana. To anyone who knows the small middle western town, the pictures in this book will be a special delight: the very air is unmistakable. . . In size and plan, the book resembles Buttons, by Tom Robinson and Peggy Bacon; these are the first two of a series of picture books illustrated in black and white, designed to represent American life. Lentil is something of a classic in this line! Its interest isn't limited to children of picture book age." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 65:502 Je 1 '40 160w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:846 O 15 '40 60w

"Boys and girls from 9 on are entertained by Lentil's problems and his final triumph as a musician, but it is the older boys and girls and adults who are particularly appreciative of the humor and human nature of the drawings, and who enjoy also the bold line, originality and ease of this young artist's work." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 My 19 '40 300w

"Big, vigorous, amusing pictures in black-and-white, with an Ohio small-town background. They are so good it is a pity that the text is somewhat creaky in its attempt at homespun humor."
+ — New Yorker 16:96 My 18 '40 30w

MCCLOY, HELEN. The man in the moonlight. 312p $2 Morrow 40-7803

Detective story.

Booklist 36:413 Jl 1 '40

"Helen McCloy follows up her admirable 'Dance of Death' [Book Review Digest, 1938] with an opus which should place her definitely in the mystery hall of fame." Will Cuppy
+ Books p10 Je 9 '40 270w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p5 Je 8 '40 50w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon
Manchester Guardian p7 D 13 '40 100w

"I always like a campus murder, but I found it hard to like this one. Still there is some pleasure to be got from watching a lie-detector in action. The motive for the crime proves to be such an outrage to reason that even the preceding psychological mumbo jumbo has not prepared one for it. As for the man in the moonlight, he was just the criminal whom everyone was being too psychological to recognise." Ralph Partridge
— + New Statesman & Nation 20:590 D 7 '40 90w

"The clue which finally betrays the murderer is an exceptionally ingenious one. 'The Man in the Moonlight' is even better than Helen McCloy's first mystery, 'Dance of Death.'" Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p16 Je 16 '40 200w

"Impersonal account of crime and detection for readers who like something mental."
+ New Yorker 16:80 Je 8 '40 30w

"Super-spooky atmosphere satisfactorily seasoned with weird experiments; vivid characters, tortuous plot and much good talk. Top-drawer."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 8 '40 40w

Reviewed by Nicholas Blake
Spec 166:44 Ja 10 '41 130w

Time 36:72 Jl 1 '40 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p569 N 9 '40 170w

MCCOLGAN, DANIEL T. Joseph Tuckerman, pioneer in American social work. 450p pa $2.50 Catholic univ. of Am.

B or 92 Tuckerman, Joseph 40-14012

"Joseph Tuckerman was a Unitarian clergyman of Boston, Mass., who died just a hundred years ago, at the age of sixty-two... For a dozen of his mature years, he was the leading 'minister-at-large' of the Unitarians of Boston, working in prisons, hospitals, almshouses, and homes of poverty and neglect." Survey

Reviewed by P. J. Barnicle
Boston Transcript p1 S 7 '40 200w

"The style of the book is factual yet vivid, detailed yet cursive, and the tone is that of such perfect understanding, even of spiritual communion . . . that the prefatory 'imprimatur' reflects even more credit upon its censors than upon its author. Father McColgan has given us a minor milestone on the road to ecumenicity—unity, that is, in Christ who is not only the God and Savior of the Utrecht formula but the ubiquitous Holy Spirit of practical human helpfulness." Charles Lyttle
+ Christian Century 58:24 Ja 1 '41 490w

"This careful study of a Roman Catholic priest takes one quickly into the heart and mind of a rare man with a real message." J. R. Brackett
+ Survey 76:342 N '40 310w

MCCORD, JOSEPH. Dreams to mend. 256p $2 Macrae Smith co.

40-8550

In spite of their different stations in life Audrey Swan and Jeffrey Castle might have ended a long childhood friendship by falling in love with each other, but Jeff was caught in the toils of a beautiful divorcee and married her. And the man who took over Jeff's job in his father's law office proved to be the man for Audrey, too.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p18 My 12 '40 100w

"A smoothly-written light love-story for a lazy afternoon or an air-conditioned evening."
Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 170w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p23 My 12 '40 130w

Wis Lib Bul 36:127 Jl '40

MACCORMAC, JOHN. Canada: America's problem. 287p map $2.75 Viking

971 Canada. Canada—Relations (general) with U.S. U.S.—Relations (general) with Canada (W) 40-27551

A survey of Canada's political and economic position in the world and in the British Empire, regarded primarily both in relation to the present war and in relation to the United States' attitude toward the war. The author was born in Canada of Irish parents, is married to an English wife. For many years he has been a New York Times correspondent, and has been stationed in London, Vienna, Canada, and (at present) Washington, D.C. Index.

Atlantic S '40 280w

Booklist 36:411 Jl 1 '40

Bookmark p7 N '40

"Published six months ago this would have been an excellent book about Canada—a well written, sensitive and literate discourse. . . And I suspect that few in the United States would ever have read it. Published at just this crucial moment in world affairs, it is still an excellent book about Canada; but it is also a book about one of the most urgent aspects of the overwhelming issues with which the American people are now confronted. And I wish that every American would read it—particularly every American concerned with our foreign policy, our defense program, and our national rôle in the possibly black world that may lie ahead." Walter Millis
+ Books p1 Je 9 '40 1300w

"MacCormac writes with the same clarity and facility as he has displayed in newspaper work, marshalling facts and opinions in a logical and orderly manner." P. J. Searles
+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 15 '40 900w

"The best book of the year dealing directly or indirectly with Canada's relations to Britain comes from the former correspondent in Ottawa of the New York Times, John MacCormac. Canada: America's Problem is stimulating and brilliantly written, discarding the old clichés on Canada's position and presenting a challenging and imaginative picture of a Canada increasingly important in the Commonwealth. . . It is significant that this book has become a best-seller in the United States. It should be in the same class in Canada. Its conclusions are so provocative that only a lengthy review could deal with them; its statement of the problems confronting Canada is, however, one of the best to reach print in some time." J. R. Baldwin
+ Canadian Hist R 21:319 S '40 280w

"Some observations are made which many Canadians will not relish, and that not necessarily because they are untrue. . . The arrangement of the book leaves much to be desired. It is a little like a detective story in which the murderer is revealed in the first chapter. In consequence, there is much needless repetition. In the latter part especially, the material does not always hang together, and much of it provides a necessary premise for the conclusions of the first section. . . Whatever one may think of Mr. MacCormac's views of Canada, her policies and her potentialities, he has provided much useful information about Canada—the country that most Americans take for granted. He has provided it in a form in which it will be widely read." R. O. MacFarlane
+ — Canadian Hist R 21:415 D '40 950w

"This is an important work by a writer qualified by knowledge and experience to set forth his opinions with authority. . . Written in the simple direct style of the experienced newspaperman his book compels the reader's attention and leaves him profoundly impressed with the fact that Canada is indeed America's problem. . . Mr. MacCormac has written a book that every thinking American should read." C. McD. P.

MACCORMAC, JOHN—Continued

+ Cath World 151:500 Jl '40 550w

"The book is so up-to-the-day, so alert to present-day implications, so crowded with facts of history and politics and sentence pictures, so stirring in its similes, so big in its outlook that no American citizen interested in the present trend of world events can afford to pass this estimate of Canada by, especially at the present juncture of affairs." Finley Keech

+ Christian Century 57:855 Jl 3 '40 390w

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 2 '40 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '40

Current Hist & Forum 51:6 Jl '40 700w

Foreign Affairs 19:262 O '40 40w

"Mr. MacCormac rightly points out that Americans as a whole know surprisingly little about this northern neighbor who so seriously compromises their neutrality. . . To such persons' needs the present volume is admirably suited. Although it examines the fundamental problems that the war has created in Canadian-American relations, it is not primarily either a war book or a study of international relations. Rather it is a brilliantly written Canadian handbook covering all aspects of Canadian life. . . The chapters on the Dominion's economic resources and prospects are especially startling to an American, but they appear to be accurate and dependable." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 150:760 Je 22 '40 600w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan
New Repub 103:60 Jl 8 '40 700w

"The book has two defects. As an analysis of Canada it breaks little new ground and this is particularly true of the concluding part on economics. Second, the arrangement of the material leaves much to be desired. . . On the other hand, the style is trenchant and frequently brilliant." E. P. Dean

+ — N Y Times p1 Je 9 '40 1150w

New Yorker 16:116 Je 15 '40 60w

Reviewed by Carl Wittke
Pol Sci Q 55:466 S '40 550w

"This book fills a long-neglected gap in our political literature, for American journalists have concentrated too exclusively on Europe and the Far East. . . With an occasional telling epigram and bit of humor, Mr. MacCormac writes wisely and well of our variegated neighbor to the north. He touches upon almost every aspect of Canada's domestic affairs, party politics, and foreign relations, and offers the American reader a remarkably accurate and objective picture of the senior Dominion in the British Commonwealth. . . The only discernible flaws in an otherwise excellent volume occur in emphasis and balance." J. F. Green

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:7 Je 15 '40 480w

"The picture given of Canadian society, politics, and economics is excellent. The best chapter is that on economics in which the author rises to poetic heights in his description of 'Our Lady of the Snows.' The major oversights of the book are an underemphasis on the role of the west coast and the Pacific and an underestimation of the astuteness and ability of Prime Minister King. To those who know little about our northern neighbor (this includes most Americans), this book is a splendid introduction. It will aid in creating a better spirit of friendship between the people on both sides of our northern unfortified border." C. G. Winter

+ — Social Educ 5:69 Ja '41 440w

"This [is a] penetrating and readable book. . . No one interested in politics should fail to read this book. Those who are unfamiliar with Canada will find it a good introduction. Others will find in it much discriminating comment." T. P. Peardon

+ Survey G 29:474 S '40 320w

Time 35:90 Je 17 '40 440w

Reviewed by B. K. Sandwell
Yale R n s 30:191 autumn '40 850w

MCCORMACK, HARRY, ed. The applications of chemical engineering. 431p il $3.75 Van Nostrand

660 Chemical engineering 40-33603

"Representing the cooperative efforts of twelve well-known professors of chemical engineering, the book's chapters cover measurement of temperature, flow of fluids, flow of heat, evaporation and evaporators, distillation, drying of solids, humidification and dehumidification, gas absorption, filtration, classification and concentration of solids, and size reduction. The experiments given in each chapter are preceded by discussions of theoretical and practical aspects. Sample data and calculations, directions for report writing, and bibliographies are also included. Each of the 72 experiments may be concluded in a single four-hour laboratory period." (Chem & Met Eng) Index.

"Professor McCormack and his associates have made a real contribution to chemical engineering education and they should be congratulated." D. B. Keyes

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:1042 N 25 '40 500w

"Immediate acceptance and widespread use by the teaching profession are probably in store for this text of unit operations."

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:807 N '40 170w

MCCORMICK, JAMES PATTON. As a flame springs. 356p $2.75 Scribner

B or 92 Browning, Robert. Browning, Mrs Elizabeth (Barrett) 40-33028

A retelling of the romance of Robert and Elizabeth Browning, based upon their letters to each other, the diaries of their friends, and the critical magazines of the day. Selective bibliography. Index.

"'As a Flame Springs,' is a version of the romance, which is told with more scholarship than penetration and then abandoned for an analysis of the two poets and their poetry, which never goes quite far enough. Mr. McCormick has added little that is original or explanatory to the collection of Browning romances, but in adding one more book to the collection he reminds us that the story of the Brownings retains its fascination." Milton Lehman

+ — Books p16 S 22 '40 600w

"Mr. McCormick makes no new contribution to Browning scholarship, but desultory students of English literature will find his book palatable."

Christian Century 57:1217 O 2 '40 40w

"The book is written with gusto but without gush. It is based upon sound scholarship and good taste." S. C. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 9 '40 650w

"A conscientious and common-sense discussion of the Brownings, Elizabeth Barrett and Robert, their romance and their works, this book says some good things and disperses on valid, documentary evidence a good deal of the calcium light from around that famous pair. It suffers from awkwardness of style and construction and from a few, unhappy attempts to be humorous and 'popular.'"

Commonweal 32:494 O 4 '40 60w

"Adds nothing factual to existing biographies, but will be appreciated by most libraries as a supplement to the more comprehensive biographies now on the shelves. It is written in easy, conversational style, is well and carefully annotated, and not too long. Valuable for the information it sheds on the friends and contemporaries of the Brownings." I. M. Turner

+ Library J 65:652 Ag '40 80w

"The materials are here for a scholarly biographical study, but Mr. McCormick is not content to write such a book. No, he must use a poetical title, designate his work as a 'romance,' and search for engaging chapter-heads. He must trick out his materials with literary flounces which blur his scholarship without creating the artistic effect he apparently hoped for. At times he writes in a heavily-scented, semi-poetic style, and at times he lapses into an idiom no more poetic than a Bunsen burner. . . When he works from fact to fact, he is generally competent, but when he essays to make that flight over facts which alone can give imaginative validity to a work, the results are distinctly unsuccessful." Alexander Cowie

— + Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ja 18 '41 380w

MCCOWN, CHESTER CHARLTON. The search for the real Jesus; a century of historical study. 338p $2.50 Scribner

232 Jesus Christ 40-12214

"This is much more than an attempt to bring the earlier histories of the 'life-of-Jesus-study' up to date. It surveys modern study of the Fourth Gospel, of the Synoptics and their sources, of form criticism and social-historical method, and of the Palestinian milieu; and while it is true that no one book can hope to cover all these areas comprehensively, this volume does a workmanlike job throughout." Christian Century

"Any one who has a serious interest in the subject will do well to master the contents of this instructive volume before attempting further research in this elusive field." S. J. Case

+ Books p40 D 1 '40 550w

"In spite of references to hundreds of volumes, in spite of the journey through a hundred years, in spite of too many typographical errors, this is a readable book. The breadth of its conception and the sanity and insight of the author's judgment make it a valuable work for all who are interested in the study of the historical Jesus." E. C. Colwell

+ Christian Century 57:1177 S 25 '40 650w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 154:22 S 15 '40 250w

"This is a book about books. . . Its selections are representative rather than exhaustive. For a more detailed account of German works one will still need to consult Schweitzer, Weinel-Widgery, or the latest edition of Pfannmüller. But it deals more adequately than these authors did with English and American books. Professor McCown has wisely chosen not to compose an encyclopedic catalogue but to note representative tendencies and to furnish a comprehensive view of the entire field of study. The task involved an immense amount of research and the severe exercise of critical judgment in the elimination and selection of material. Readers unfamiliar with the sources will find this book a welcome introduction to the subject." S. J. Case

+ J Religion 21:57 Ja '41 800w

"It is an important volume, and by the combined felicity of style and method, it redeems a subject that might otherwise have been unbearably dull. Nothing is more likely to bore than research done upon researchers. But beginning with the tragedy of Strauss and his epoch-making Leben Jesu, which appeared in 1835-36, Dr. McCown narrates the story of critical biblical research, chiefly in Germany, with skill, although not without very definite rationalistic bias of his own."

+ — N Y Times p24 Ja 12 '41 700w

MCCREERY, JAMES LINDSAY. Exploring the earth and its life, in a natural history museum; with 121 il. in line by the author. rev and enl ed 312p $2.50 Stokes

590.7 Natural history. American museum of natural history, New York. Natural history museums (W) 40-31502

"This new edition contains five additional illustrations; in Chapter X the sections Mammals in North America and Mammals in Asia have been expanded, and Mammals of Africa has been added. Chapter XIII on Stars grow and change has been added, also an index." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1933.

Booklist 37:159 D 15 '40

Reviewed by A. E. Brown

+ Library J 65:661 Ag '40 220w

MCCULLERS, MRS CARSON (SMITH). The heart is a lonely hunter. 356p $2.50 Houghton

40-10298

A first novel by a young Georgia woman. The story has for its scene a southern town and covers in time about a year in the recent past. Its chief character is one John Singer, a deaf mute, who, when the story opens loses his only friend, another mute, committed to an insane hospital. Forced to listen and not to "talk," Singer becomes the recipient of the confidences of several other residents of the town—the proprietor of a quick-lunch counter, a little girl, an intellectual Negro doctor, a half-crazy, drunken radical.

"'The Heart is a Lonely Hunter' is not the kind of novel you expect a young woman to write; it is a story of pitiful people told without any touch of sentimentality, giving each one the dignity that is his in his own eyes. Without any lushness, with a hard maturity, Carson McCullers presents poor people in a town in the deep South, the sort of people Dostoyevski might have written about—but quite differently. One wonders how any young person could know so much about the lonely hearts of men, women and children too." Lorine Pruette

+ — Books p4 Je 9 '40 1300w

"This is a strange and uneven book, at times almost miraculous in its concise intensity, at times baffling in its meandering immaturity." Lewis Gannett

+ — Boston Transcript p13 Je 5 '40 600w

"We have been waiting a long time for a new writer and of this one we must expect a great deal. From the critical point of view there are, it seems to me, just two flaws in the book; one, as the theme is the tragedy inherent in the lives of the people . . . it was a mistake to allow also the tragedy of accident, the tragedy not inherent in the very stuff of the lives, to take place. . . The other flaw seems to me the inclusion of Part III. . . As it is the book goes on living in an astonishing way in the mind. Something has been added to our life. It is hard to think that we shall have to wait a year or two before we can expect another book from this extraordinary young woman." May Sarton

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 8 '40 1000w

Cath World 152:252 N '40 260w

"While Miss McCullers harps perhaps a little too persistently on the one plaintive string of her theme, she leaves several of her people hauntingly engraved in the reader's memory; and she displays a most praiseworthy frankness and lack of affectation. The acuteness of character-perception revealed is quite remarkable in an author who, according to the jacket, is a girl of twenty-two." L. B. Salomon

+ — Nation 151:36 Jl 13 '40 300w

"To me the most impressive aspect of 'The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter' is the astonishing humanity that enables a white writer, for the first time in Southern fiction, to handle Negro characters with as much ease and justice as those of her own race. This cannot be accounted for stylistically or politically; it seems to stem from an attitude toward life which enables Miss McCullers to rise above the pressures of her environment and embrace white and black humanity in one sweep of apprehension and tenderness. In the conventional sense, this is not so much a novel as a projected mood, a state of mind poetically objectified in words, an attitude externalized in naturalistic detail." Richard Wright

New Repub 103:195 Ag 5 '40 800w

MCCULLERS, CARSON—Continued

"Carson McCullers is a full-fledged novelist whatever her age. She writes with a sweep and certainty that are overwhelming. 'The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter' is a first novel. One anticipates the second with something like fear. So high is the standard she has set. It doesn't seem possible that she can reach it again." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p6 Je 16 '40 950w

"A unique accent in first novels is the one thing reviewers have been praying for now for some years, and hearing but rarely. The last time I remember hearing it was a couple of years ago in the pages of Dorothy Baker's beautiful 'Young Man with a Horn' [Book Review Digest, 1938]. I can't go overboard for 'The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter' as I did for Miss Baker's novel, but it's the work of an equally original talent. Miss McCullers is less brilliant than Miss Baker. She writes without humor and reveals no special gift for storytelling. She might be a flop at handling ordinary human beings. Nevertheless, I'll place a small bet on her future." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 16:77 Je 8 '40 800w

"One cannot help remarking that this is an extraordinary novel to have been written by a young woman of twenty-two; but the more important fact is that it is an extraordinary novel in its own right, considerations of authorship apart." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 22:6 Je 8 '40 750w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '40 650w

Time 35:90 Je 10 '40 230w

"It's a queer, sad book that sticks in one's mind, full of odd but very living people whom the author seems to have known and been watching for a long time. . . When Carson McCullers, who is only twenty-two, has taken her warm heart and her clear head out to look at a lot more anthills, and learned to pick some hills where the ants move faster and with more design and on a bigger scale, and if she reads Huckleberry Finn and Chekhov's stories . . . and if people will let her alone and not give her advice and tell her she's a genius, she may very well turn out to be one." Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:viii autumn '40 440w

MCCUSKEY, DOROTHY. Bronson Alcott, teacher. 217p il $2.50; text ed $1.90 Macmillan

B or 92 Alcott, Amos Bronson 40-35143

Study of Alcott's career as teacher, and of his contributions to the theory of education. It is the author's theory that many elements of Alcott's program of education, which his contemporaries repudiated, have been taken over, modified, and used in modern progressive schools. The work is based upon original sources, including Alcott's journals. Bibliography. Index.

"This excellent monograph won the Third Research Award offered by Kappa Delta Pi, honorary educational society, for the best study of a significant phase of the history of American education. . . Few works produced under technical auspices can be of greater interest to the public at large than this thoughtful consideration of man as educator." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p20 N 24 '40 700w

"Miss McCuskey's book is of definite interest for educators and has won for its author the Research Award of Kappa Delta Pi, and honor society in education. Because the style is pleasant and because of Bronson Alcott himself, the book also contains a great deal for readers outside the profession."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 25 '41 550w

"In her anxiety to show Alcott's pioneering efforts in integrating education, making schoolrooms pleasant, and teaching children to think rather than memorize, the author has completely missed the man himself—surely one of the most amazing figures in American letters. Even granting the author her self-imposed limitation, a knowledge of the experiments in education now being performed by the Gestalt psychologists would have increased her understanding of much of Alcott's work. The book is an expanded doctoral thesis, and reads like one."

— + Nation 152:28 Ja 4 '41 110w

"Dull, vaguely written, and fundamentally uncritical, Miss McCuskey's book on Bronson Alcott adds almost nothing to Odell Shepard's 'Pedlar's Progress' and very little to our knowledge of the history of education in the United States. Miss McCuskey makes a half-hearted attempt to link Alcott to the 'Progressive Movement' in education, of which she appears to be an adherent, but one reads that 'such a claim would be justified only if Socrates, Plato, Jesus, Pestalozzi, and all great teachers were called the fore-runners of progressivism.' Careful historians will continue to content themselves with less cosmic assertions." H. M. Jones

— Sat R of Lit 23:36 D 7 '40 380w

School & Society 52:504 N 16 '40 50w

"This is more than another biography of a man whose story has been told before, and that recently and well in Shepard's 'Pedlar's Progress.' Its uniqueness is due to the discriminating manner in which the author has used the great mass of materials available to trace the development of the personal qualities and the philosophy that made Bronson Alcott a great teacher. The works of other scholars have been used intelligently. Nothing has been done again. Rather, in the thousands of pages of manuscript-journals and in the interpretations which others have made of this man's tragic life, the author has discovered the one burning, vital force that dominated Bronson Alcott's existence, and told the story of it briefly and to the point." H. H. Shoen

+ School & Society 52:701 D 28 '40 1650w

Social Studies 32:48 Ja '41 40w

MCDIARMID, ERRETT WEIR. The library survey; problems and methods. 243p $3.50 A.L.A.

020.72 Library surveys (W) 40-27525

Study of the making of library surveys which "attempts to combine within the covers of one volume a wide variety of survey methods and procedures, in the hope that it will result in a saving of time and effort for future surveys. The volume is not addressed entirely to surveyors or to prospective surveyors, but also to all who are interested in knowing a little more about the extent to which the library is achieving its goals." (Pref) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:393 Je 15 '40

"One cannot but be impressed with the thoroughness of the background for the writing of this book. Frequent references in the body of the book to library and general literature on surveys and the extensive bibliography on the subject bear witness to this." C. H. Compton

+ Library J 65:800 O 1 '40 550w

"The movement for the scientific evaluation of libraries and their services has come of age. No better proof of the maturation of this movement could be given than this excellent book, for in it the author has comprehensively marshaled the techniques of evaluation and has presented them in a logically organized whole." J. D. Russell

+ Library Q 10:592 O '40 1300w

"This book will truly be useful to a special group; that is, to those men and women who honestly care whether the local library is adequate to the community's needs. Librarians, library trustees, friends of libraries, and lay investigators of libraries, friendly or otherwise, will find it good, particularly since it will save them an immense amount of searching and correspondence." Margery Quigley

+ Survey 76:374 D '40 240w

MACDONALD, AUSTIN FAULKS. American state government and administration. rev ed 639p $3.75 Crowell

353.9 State governments. U.S.—Politics and government (W) 40-4182

New edition of a book first published in 1934 (Book Review Digest, 1934). "The chapters on business, labor, welfare, and revenues have been almost completely rewritten. A new chapter has been added on interstate relations. Appropriate sections have been devoted to new state activities, such as liquor control, industrial hygiene, and planning. And the volume has been divided logically into two parts: government and administration. It is hoped that numerous changes in form as well as content will prove convenient for both teachers and students." (Pref) Index.

Am Hist R 45:978 Jl '40 30w

"The volume combines, in admirable fashion, the factual or 'objective' with the critical or realistic treatment. Professor Macdonald's preoccupation with the states has not distorted his concept of the federal relationship, and in doing justice to the problems of administration, he has not denied or obscured the importance of structure and organization." R. V. Shumate

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:598 Je '40 240w

Booklist 36:288 Mr 15 '40

Reviewed by J. P. Horlacher

Social Studies 31:189 Ap '40 370w

MCDONALD, DAVID JOHN, and LYNCH, EDWARD ANTHONY. Coal and unionism; a history of the American coal miners' unions. 226p $2.50 Lynald bks, Georgia & Sligo avs, Silver Spring, Md.

331.88 United mine workers of America 40-27163

"A history of the United mine workers' union from its beginning 50 years ago to the present, with an introductory sketch of the activities of early American coal miners' unions which preceded the national organization. The authors are executives of this union. Their book is largely informational with some personal judgments of events and personalities." Booklist

Booklist 36:258 Mr 1 '40

"For the United Mine Workers of America 'Coal and Unionism' is a glorious record of achievement. As with most glorious records there is a seamy side. This is an objective account of the former, but we shall probably have to wait till Brophy writes a book before we get the low-down on the seams." J. C. Cort

+ — Commonweal 31:369 F 16 '40 370w

"The authors have successfully carried out their self-limited objective, to touch on the union's high lights of the last fifty years and on the major milestones which mark its path in that time. Theirs is the most complete recital of the union's wage negotiations that has yet appeared. It is particularly valuable to any one interested in the union because of its treatment of the important last decade." Louis Stark

+ N Y Times p12 My 26 '40 430w

MCDONALD, MRS LUCILE SAUNDERS. Jewels and gems; decorations by Vera Bock. 288p pl $2 Crowell

553.8 Jewels. Gems 40-33565

In a series of informally written chapters, each devoted to an individual gem or jewel, the author has collected material, from authentic history and legend, concerning the discovery, use and value of jewels. The volume is illustrated with fanciful drawings by Vera Bock and by a series of plates in color showing stones and gems from the Marcus collection. Index.

Booklist 37:178 Ja 1 '41

Christian Century 57:1251 O 9 '40 60w

"The style is simple, non-technical, and unimaginative. Attractive black and gold cover, wide margins, and clear type invite the general reader, although the text will probably have less appeal for children than for adults or the unusual child. Illustrations, by Vera Bock, are stylized drawings in black and green, and seem too sophisticated to please children." Maude Adams

Library J 65:929 N 1 '40 150w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:48 O '40

"This is a volume that school and public libraries will want to add to their shelves, for there is no other book that so satisfactorily covers the topic for young people. The author writes in readable fashion, and her choice of material and the human quality she introduces into the tale of the world's gems will attract boys and girls whether they are particularly interested in the subject or not. For those to whom the lore of precious stones is a hobby, the book will be a long delight." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p26 N 10 '40 280w

Social Studies 31:380 D '40 10w

Wis Lib Bul 36:153 N '40

MACDONALD, WILLIAM COLT. Renegade roundup. 302p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Collins] 40-6300

Western story.

Booklist 36:346 My 1 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p17 Mr 24 '40 60w

"A rattling good Western, as swift, lively, vivid and tense with action as any William Colt MacDonald has given us." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p28 Mr 10 '40 200w

MACDOUGALL, CURTIS DANIEL. Hoaxes; il. with photographs. 336p $3.50 Macmillan

133.7 Impostors and imposture 40-31964

"Not merely a stupendous collection of hoaxes—all kinds, from the celebrated ones of history to suggestions for ones you might try out on your friends—but a pretty shrewd analysis of why and how they succeed. Weird pictures, too, almost as weird as some of the incredibilities Mr. MacDougall digs up." New Yorker

Booklist 37:111 N 15 '40

"If any one asks the librarian of a public library for the facts about a hoax, or a newspaper stunt, or a literary forgery, or just a plain swindle perpetrated in the United States and several other countries, from Benjamin Franklin's 'Edict of the King of Prussia' to Henry L. Mencken's bathtub story, that custodian of the makings of history will hand him this book and keep on doing so for years to come. . . There are twenty-six pages, double columns, in small type, of the index, which shows you the amount of information there is in the book, and the ease with which you can get at it."

+ Books p14 S 22 '40 240w

"The promise of the title is far exceeded by the contents of the book. . . This is much more than an amusing compilation of fakes and follies. It is a serious study of the psychology of belief."

+ Christian Century 57:1345 O 30 '40 220w

Reviewed by Francis Brown

N Y Times p18 N 24 '40 1050w

New Yorker 16:80 O 5 '40 60w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 22 '40 130w

MCEACHRON, KARL BOYER, and PATRICK, KENNETH G. Playing with lightning. 231p il $2.50 Random house

537.4 Lightning. Atmospheric electricity (W) 40-27526

Dr McEachron is director of General Electric's High voltage engineering laboratory at Pittsfield, Massachusetts. This book is mainly a report, couched in non-technical language, of what he and his associates have learned concerning the nature of lightning, how to guard against it, and how to simulate it—e.g., the man-made lightning at the World's Fair. Index.

Booklist 36:395 Je 15 '40

Books p9 Je 2 '40 220w

Reviewed by J. G. Trump
Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '40 290w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '40

"A fascinating volume illustrated by some extraordinary action photographs."
+ New Repub 103:254 Ag 19 '40 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:23 Ap '40

"This book is by no means the last word on lightning. To a large extent it is a progress report on studies still under way. But when a more satisfactory work on the subject is done in the future it will have been made possible by the researches of men like Dr. McEachron." H. M. Davis
+ N Y Times p9 My 26 '40 500w

Sat R of Lit 22:20 Jl 27 '40 400w

"The answers to many technical and non-technical questions are to be found in this valuable volume, written expressly for the layman."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 Je '40 440w

MACFADDEN, CLIFFORD HERBERT. An atlas of world review; foreword by Robert Burnett Hall. $1.95 Crowell

912 Atlases. Geography, Commercial—Maps. World politics. Geography, Historical—Maps (W) 40-36114

Reference book which includes such up to the minute material as the location of bases recently leased by the United States from Great Britain. It contains 160 maps with text on 67 subjects. Maps of the United States indicate territorial expansion, population distribution, agriculture, industries, raw material, etc. Maps of the world show population density, nature of governments, international danger spots, sources of coal, iron, petroleum, rubber, etc. Index.

Booklist 37:240 F 1 '41

"The maps in this atlas are neither large nor beautiful, but they are numerous, accurate and clear, and they are down to the last possible minute consistent with book publications. . . A geographical handbook that will be useful to all students of current affairs."
+ Christian Century 57:1483 N 27 '40 60w

"The chief virtues of An Atlas of World Review are its timeliness and its handy form. . . Special librarians using the book for informational purposes will perhaps wish for more indication of dates and sources of figures, but otherwise this would seem to be an ideal atlas to have at your elbow when reading the newspaper." J. M.
+ Special Libraries 31:443 D '40 180w

Springf'd Republican p8 D 3 '40 230w

MCFEE, WILLIAM. Watch below; il. by Gordon Grant. 375p $3 Random house

(W) 40-27403

Partly fiction, partly autobiography, this book is primarily concerned with the life led by men on the old tramp steamers which in the first years of the twentieth century carried English coal into many ports picking up return cargos where they found them.

Booklist 36:346 My 1 '40

"The attempt to give the story of the tramps in semi-fiction form may give the atmosphere at the turn of the century in a manner that will perhaps please the general reader. The reviewer doubts, however, the efficacy of this method. It badly obscures the clarity of the picture and one has to work so hard to put the scattered items into a composite idea of the tramps as a whole that one loses much of the effect of the color and atmosphere. It seems particularly regrettable because the style is excellent and the material valuable." R. G. Albion
+ — Books p4 Ap 14 '40 1250w

Reviewed by E. B. Schriftgiesser
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 13 '40 490w

"Going back to 'Casuals,' I am beginning to think that William McFee is one of the truly shrewd and seasoned minds I know in books. For I know already that 'Watch Below' is not only a readable account of the transition period in steam: it is the wisest and straightest and most thorough analysis of the life of ships and the men in them that was ever written. There is more romance in the level truth, those rare times you find it all complete, than you will discover in the wildest and most breathless romance as long as you live." Otis Ferguson
+ New Repub 102:512 Ap 15 '40 1050w

"Behind its placid façade this book discusses the things with which men must buy their freedom and their rights, but in an idle hour the pleasant façade is delightful enough." Anthony West
+ New Statesman & Nation 19:726 Je 8 '40 420w

"'Watch Below' should prove a lasting book. Too many of us who have been rocking-chair enthusiasts over sea literature have fallen into the habit of feeling that all ended with the passing of the clipper ships. Here is a man who never voyaged in sail in his life opening to us a period and a world of adventure hitherto not probed. 'Watch Below' is entertaining in every best sense of the word from cover to cover." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p9 Ap 14 '40 1650w

New Yorker 16:99 Ap 13 '40 60w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 22:13 Ap 27 '40 440w

Spec 165:154 Ag 9 '40 250w

"To make known a way of life fast vanishing from the seas, that lived on tramp cargo boats early in the 20th century, was the purpose of William McFee in writing 'Watch Below.' He has succeeded admirably. In writing about the sea he avoids the sentimentality that colors the output of some writers, and he gives a realistic presentation of a seaman's life in those recent days."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 5 '40 850w

"The Jamesian cunning of Mr. McFee's previous novel 'Derelicts' is laid aside for a clear and shining veracity of statement in which is mirrored the tramp-steamer tradition of the two or three decades before 1914. The vividness, the insight and the tolerant humanity of Mr. McFee's picture of all that made up 'the maritime drudgery of the world' are beyond praise. He does not write of the romance of the sea, of poeticized dangers and daring before the mast; he describes a way of life."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p229 My 11 '40 800w

MCGARRY, WILLIAM JAMES. Paul and the Crucified. 272p $3 America press

227 Bible. New Testament—Epistles. Paul, Saint 40-2800

"Father McGarry, formerly dean of the Jesuit house of studies, Weston, later president of Boston College, now editor of the new Jesuit quarterly, Theological Studies, groups the teaching of St. Paul about the central theme of the Cross of Christ. An introductory essay sketches the eventful decade of Christ's ministry, the resurrection and the beginning of the church." Boston Transcript

---

"While the student will find here much to clarify his textbooks, the general reader will follow the orderly presentation with joy and understanding to the profit of his daily life in Christ." W. A. Dowd
+ America 62:189 N 25 '39 750w

"The distinctive character of this study is its clear presentation of Paul's theology in the best spirit of Prat and Estius. Non-Catholic scholars will welcome this able work. Catholic priests and seminarians will find the book immensely valuable in answering questions put to them. All readers will draw from its pages a 'stimulation of their hearts and minds in a spiritual way that will count in their daily lives.'" Rev. J. J. Collins, S. J.
+ Boston Transcript p5 F 3 '40 320w

"It is a clear-cut exposition of St. Paul's teaching. . . It will certainly help lovers of St. Paul to a greater understanding of him and his sublime teaching."
+ Cath World 151:765 S '40 150w

MCGEARY, MARTIN NELSON. The developments of congressional investigative power. 172p $2.25 Columbia univ. press [9s King]

328.34 U.S. Congress—Powers and duties 40-5782

"This book takes up the story of congressional investigations where the studies made by Ernest J. Eberling and Marshall E. Dimock left off in 1928. . . The inherent diversity of the author's materials makes generalization difficult, yet the points brought into focus show the nature of the investigatorial process clearly and succinctly. Particularly noteworthy is the emphasis placed upon the present procedures and future methods of the committees." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Pendleton Herring
Am Pol Sci R 34:791 Ag '40 300w

"Despite the title, the approach of this study is essentially static. Its primary preoccupation is with investigative technique, rather than with the complex of social and political forces which condition the use made of the technique. One comes away with a sense of neglected opportunity. The Congressional investigation as a record of social history, as moulder of public opinion, as reflector and adjuster of group tensions, party rivalries, and changing relations between Congress and the Executive, as part of the political process of democracy—these are themes which are touched on lightly, if at all. Here are fruitful lines of inquiry which still remain to be explored. It is to be hoped that the appearance of Dr. McGeary's volume will not discourage others from undertaking the quest." Merle Fainsod
Harvard Law R 53:1221 My '40 550w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith
Yale Law J 50:541 Ja '41 480w

MCGEHEE, RAMIEL, ed. See Fit for a king

MCGILL, EARLE. Radio directing; with a foreword by H. Clay Harshbarger. 370p il $3.50 McGraw

791.4 Radio broadcasting. Radio plays 40-9458

Textbook on the production and direction of radio programs. Partial contents: Sound effects; Preparation for the broadcast; Casting; Timing and pace; Microphone rehearsal; Dress rehearsal and air show; Production script of "Christ of the Andes" with analysis; Catalogue of recorded sound effects; Aids to educational broadcasting; Glossary of common radio terms. Index. The author is casting director, director and producer, Columbia broadcasting system; and instructor, New York university, radio workshop.

Booklist 36:408 Jl 1 '40

"Although radio constantly is producing a wealth of interesting listening it has been productive up to now of some mighty dull reading. But Mr. McGill has combined his complete knowledge of the subject; his great sympathy and intense enthusiasm for it, with a manner of writing that is interesting. The result is that he has lifted his book out of the textbook class in virtually all respects excepting the textbookishness of its appearance and 'feel.'" H. T. Rowe
+ Books p13 Jl 21 '40 600w
Theatre Arts 24:761 O '40 210w

MCGILL, NETTIE PAULINE, and MATTHEWS, ELLEN NATHALIE. The youth of New York city. 420p $3.50 Macmillan

362.7 Youth. New York (city)—Social conditions. New York (city)—Economic conditions 40-31134

"There are a million youths between 16 and 24 in New York city. By interviews with 10,000 of them—a one-per-cent sample representing all areas, races and social and economic levels—and by the compilation of all relevant statistics, a composite picture has been prepared showing the educational advantages they enjoy, the kinds of work they do and the ways in which they spend their leisure." (Christian Century) Index.

Christian Century 57:1084 S 4 '40 150w

"It is taken as axiomatic that statistical studies cannot be given a general appeal, or be so constructed as to command popular interest. It would not surprise me, however, if the latest contribution to the field of research, 'The Youth of New York City,' sold very well indeed. At least it deserves to! . . My advice to all and sundry is to stop talking about either the youth problem or the problems of youth until you have read it." E. R. Moore
+ Commonweal 32:514 O 11 '40 600w

Reviewed by Pierre Loving
Living Age 359:290 N '40 330w

"Admirable contribution to sound knowledge and clear thinking. It is a valuable handbook for the social worker in its detailed presentation of some of the basic problems in that profession. It should be even more valuable for those of us outside the social service profession who venture to write or speak or broadcast about youth. It should be most valuable of all to the layman, as a check upon the rest of us." Simeon Strunsky
+ N Y Times p5 S 15 '40 1100w

Reviewed by W. B. Featherstone
Social Educ 4:596 D '40 900w

MCGINLEY, PHYLLIS (MRS C. L. HAYDEN). A pocketful of wry. 152p $2 Duell

811 40-27701

Volume of light verse on metropolitan matters of interest, with some of a more serious nature. Many of the poems have appeared in the New Yorker.

Booklist 37:66 O 15 '40

"If there is that rare reader who doesn't already know [Phyllis McGinley's] sparkling work, it's his bounden cultural duty to read 'A Pocketful of Wry' without delay." Ruth Lechlitner
+ Books p28 D 8 '40 370w

"Phyllis McGinley is one of the two or three best writers of light verse of this decade, and the one before. She is definitely New York; her genius is more likely to spark after reading a Macy's ad or a news item in the N. Y. Times than anything else. . . This book, much too much packed with sugar and ginger to serve here so as to satisfy all the shoppers for something tasty, is sure to be the autumn's best-selling book in its class." John Holmes

MCGINLEY, PHYLLIS—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p11 O 21 '40 270w

"For those who have come in late and have, so far, 'escaped,' as Miss McGinley would doubtless put it, these pieces in the metropolitan weekly, this is just about the 'most' laugh for your money to be found in the current book stands." John Ritchey

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '40 200w

New Yorker 16:104 O 12 '40 30w

MCGLASHAN, CHARLES FAYETTE. History of the Donner party; a tragedy of the Sierra; with foreword, notes, and a bibliography by George H. Hinkle and Bliss McGlashan Hinkle. 316p il maps $3 Stanford univ. press

917.8 Donner party. Overland journeys to the Pacific 40-10251

"An account [first printed in 1879; second edition, 1881] based on original correspondence and interviews with the survivors of this ordeal of a winter snowbound in the high Sierras. An introduction, notes to clarify certain points in the text, and maps to show the route the Donner party followed add to the value of the book." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

Books p14 Je 23 '40 800w

Current Hist 51:46 Mr '40 90w

"Still the best history of the famous California-bound wagon-train and its privations."

New Repub 103:38 Jl 1 '40 40w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p13 Je 30 '40 1000w

MCGREAL, WILLIAM. The frog, the penny and the big black tree; il. by Cyrus Hall. 64p $1 (2s 6d) Warne

40-10162

Nonsense story for little children, all about a forgetful frog who returned from a shopping tour to find his house gone and his wife and children perched in a tree, and what he did about it.

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 29 '40 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 16:165 My '40 100w

"Attractively illustrated, the story will be liked by young children who visualize little animals and insects as having responsibilities and preferences similar to their own—going to the store, taking good care of the pennies entrusted to them, and liking currant buns. On the other hand, very realistic little nature lovers will probably not care for it." A. L. Shea

+ — Library J 65:502 Je 1 '40 100w

MACGREGOR, WILLIAM MALCOLM. Persons and ideals; addresses to my students and others. 128p $1.50 Scribner [3s Clark, T]

824

Collection of addresses by Dr Macgregor of Edinburgh, lately principal of Trinity college, Glasgow. About half the talks are biographical; others are about such themes as: The chief aim of a theological college; The preacher—prophet or sophist? The scope of our ministry; "Take heed to thyself"; The religion of a good moderate; The power of the cross in our life.

"The discourses have all the fine Scotch solidity one would expect."

+ Christian Century 57:283 F 28 '40 80w

Reviewed by G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 17:223 Jl '40 320w

MCGUIRE, PAUL. Enter three witches [Eng title: Spanish steps]. 280p $2 Morrow [8s 3d Heinemann]

(W) 40-27252

Mystery story.

Booklist 36:284 Mr 15 '40

"Here is a high-pressure romance, exciting intrigue and deft puzzlement by the author of 'A Funeral in Eden.'" Will Cuppy

+ Books p14 F 25 '40 190w

"It combines the Spanish Civil War with murder on an Italian estate, and does an excellent job of it." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 17 '40 50w

"Mr. McGuire makes such admirable use of his gift for writing bright dialogue that the book is as amusing as it is exciting. Indeed, he generally writes so well that it is in the nature of a major shock to find one of his characters leaning against a lintel. A remarkable feat." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 15 '40 180w

"The author of 'A Funeral in Eden' has produced another masterpiece of bafflement." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p15 F 25 '40 240w

"Very fine storytelling."

+ New Yorker 16:80 F 24 '40 60w

"Atmosphere and writing pretty nearly perfect. Sleuthing incidental, but romance, thrills, and mystery blend to queen's taste. Bravissimo!"

+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 F 24 '40 40w

"Mr. Paul McGuire has written several good detective stories and 'The Spanish Steps' is unquestionably his best. It has just the proper leavening of romance and the exotic background which are necessary to absorb a reader's interest in blood-and-thunder during these hard times."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 17 '40 320w

MACHARG, WILLIAM BRIGGS. The affairs of O'Malley. 308p $2.50 Dial press

40-6340

"Here are thirty-three stories about a smart cop named O'Malley. They are all very short; the average length is less than ten pages. In almost every case O'Malley begins by saying that the mystery cannot be solved, and then he proceeds to solve it, usually by some clever trick. All the stories deal with murder." N Y Times

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 F 17 '40 30w

"This is not a book to be read at one sitting—the stories are constructed too nearly after one pattern for that. It is rather a book to be dipped into now and then when one feels in the mood for a brief dalliance with crime. Used in that way, it should provide satisfactory diversion from the real problems of the day." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p15 F 25 '40 90w

"Crisp, straight-to-the-point short stories briskly written and ably plotted."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 Mr 2 '40 30w

Time 35:76 Mr 4 '40 20w

MACHETANZ, FREDERICK. On Arctic ice; with il. by the author. 105p $1.50 Scribner

40-30569

"Tells of an Eskimo boy's experiences on an eventful hunting expedition." Library J

Booklist 37:122 N 15 '40

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:848 O 15 '40 10w

"A good story, well told, with authentic information as to life and customs of these northern people. The author has also made the striking illustrations that add much value to the book. Ages nine to twelve." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 65:879 O 15 '40 150w

"The factual detail of life among the Alaskan Eskimos is excellent, the pictures are decorative, and Andy and his lead dog Panuck make highly acceptable heroes for a story of Arctic adventure."

+ New Yorker 16:128 D 7 '40 50w

MCILHENNY, EDWARD AVERY. The autobiography of an egret. 57p il $2 Hastings house

598.34 Herons 40-4409

"E. A. McIlhenny is known to all American conservationists for his noble work in saving the snowy egret from extinction and, through the protection he has accorded it on Avery Island, Louisiana, restoring it to its proper place in our avifauna. By his years of devotion and experience he is uniquely qualified to speak for the bird. . . The life-history of the species is recounted in the form of an Alice-Toklas 'autobiography,' Mr. Egret being the narrator." Sat R of Lit

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '40 150w

"The information is all there and cannot be questioned. But the method of presentation is another matter, since it necessarily involves grafting a human psyche onto the bird to replace its own, thereby making it a little man in feathers rather than the authentic Egretta thula. The consequences of seriously trying to explain the egret's proper life-history in terms of its improper human psychology are, as with all such attempts, just plain unfortunate. The real value of the book is in its abundance of illustrations from photographs of the Avery Island colony." L. J. H., jr.

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:20 F 24 '40 220w

MCILWAIN, CHARLES HOWARD. Constitutionalism, ancient and modern. 162p $2.50 Cornell univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

342 Constitutional history 40-11288

'This slender volume constitutes an important contribution to the crucial issue of political organization which, in the author's happily formulated antithesis, is 'the struggle between will and law.' (Will is arbitrary power without constitutional limitations, while law is awareness and recognition of fundamental principles and institutions as rights.) The struggle is mirrored throughout the book in terms of the medieval distinction between gubernaculum and jurisdictio, the former being the power to rule attributed as of right to the ruler, while the latter circumscribes the limitations of discretionary power by law. Seen under a more technical angle, the two spheres of state action are 'the difference between administrative enactment and a definition of rights.' " Am Pol Sci R

"To the reviewer, Professor McIlwain's book seems one of the most important contributions of recent years to intellectual history. Through its emphasis on the endurance of constitutional tradition, even in eclipse, it brings a real message to the power-ridden world of today." Karl Loewenstein

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1000 O '40 1550w

Sat R of Lit 22:19 Jl 27 '40 500w

Reviewed by G. H. Sabine

Yale Law J 50:354 D '40 1650w

MCINNIS, EDGAR W. The war; first year; with a foreword by Raymond Gram Swing. 312p maps $1.50 Oxford

940.53 European war, 1939- (40-35128)

A compactly written account of the first year of the second World war. Contents: Background and origin; September to December 1939; January to March 1940; April to 15 June 1940; 15 June to August 1940. Includes numerous text maps, a documentary appendix, chronology, and index. The work was "originally published in five separate parts (as the Oxford periodical history of the war), under the sponsorship of the Canadian institute of international affairs." (Publisher's note)

Booklist 37:151 D 15 '40

"This is an excellent account written with care, with an admirable compactness but in vigorous and very readable prose. The book is valuable for reference or review; it is no less so as a straightforward and absorbing story of the complex and colossal events which have shaken Western civilization to its foundations." Walter Millis

+ Books p18 N 24 '40 480w

"Professor McInnis, in the work before us, has done a very good job of compilation and coördination; and, within the limits of an almost exclusively political analysis, of interpretation as well. . . It would be hard to find sufficient praise for the combined merits of the book; and they are enhanced by a style at once clear, unpretentious, and rapid." R. E. K. Pemberton

+ Canadian Forum 20:287 D '40 490w

"This chronology and commentary on the first year of the present war is an excellent presentation of a great deal of factual matter in a palatable style."

+ Living Age 359:393 D '40 300w

"The writing of contemporary history is a difficult task. The prejudices and biases which color the reporting in our newspapers make true objectivity a myth and stand in the way of a penetrating interpretation of events. In the face of these difficulties Professor McInnis has done an extremely good job." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 151:640 D 21 '40 280w

"This is a sober-sided, straightforward, chronological recital of the chief events of the year. . . But because it is straightforward, if uninspired, history it only emphasizes that today's wars are wars of peoples and they are fought in the bombshelter and the factory as much as in the pillbox and the pilot's cockpit. This history suffers from the limitations of all topical books; it has been written too soon. . . Moreover, while the book is adequate in so far as diplomatic and political history is concerned, it is not satisfactory from a military point of view. Nevertheless, despite the faults which must cling to any contemporary history written without recourse to source materials, the volume . . . should serve as a useful reference work of the first year of a conflict to which no end is in view." H. W. Baldwin

+ — N Y Times p36 D 8 '40 280w

Social Studies 32:47 Ja '41 30w

" 'The War: First Year' is a solidly planned book, conceived in the manner of history, with interpretations meant to be permanent. But there is a disadvantage in undertaking a classical interpretation of history when the materials for final judgment are lacking. Mr McInnis has a broad scheme and uses it intelligently; but more compact narrative, treated in the style of a chronicle, is preferable for reference purposes at this stage of history-writing about the European war." E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 O 26 '40 360w

MCINTIRE, MRS MARGUERITE (PEARMAN). Heaven's dooryard. 308p $2.50 Farrar

40-30577

In 1840 Quaker Jonathon Chadbourne left his native Concord and moved to Maine. There, as this story relates, he bought a farm, slowly but surely established himself in the community and courted and won Margaret Hutchinson for his wife. Jonathon's grandson, Matthew, was the hero of Mrs McIntire's earlier book, Free and Clear (Book Review Digest, 1939).

Booklist 37:155 D 15 '40

MCINTIRE, MARGUERITE—Continued

"The story of the building of a farm and the establishment of a family is one which is, in essence, New England—and almost every old New England family has a similar one, to be brought out and shown with pride and humility to friends and relatives, like a patchwork quilt or a silver spoon. And Mrs. McIntire's version of the old story is pleasant and satisfying no matter how often it may have been told before—just like other people's family heirlooms." R. H. Bonner

+ Books p16 O 6 '40 430w

Reviewed by Olga Owens

Boston Transcript p2 S 28 '40 160w

"Compared with 'Free and Clear,' 'Heaven's Dooryard' lacks spontaneity. In her first novel, Mrs. McIntire was wholly on her own ground, dealing with a period and a way of living that she knew at first hand or from eye-witnesses. In the new one she has to reconstruct the manners of 100 years ago, and though she often does it admirably, especially in group scenes like the house-raising and the missionary meeting, nevertheless some of the scenes in which she has to make the chief characters get along with the plot seem to come a little harder. This makes small difference, however, with the effect of her refreshing draft, so simple, clear, and genuine, and so likely to be welcomed by those who live in Maine, those who spring directly or indirectly from Maine, and those who know the state only as a vacation ground." W. K. R.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 N 30 '40 600w

"'Heaven's Dooryard' is an agreeable tale, honest, unaffected and as American as New England baked beans." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 S 29 '40 430w

"A kind and neighborly book."

+ New Yorker 16:77 S 28 '40 50w

Wis Lib Bul 36:168 D '40

MACINTOSH, DOUGLAS CLYDE. Problem of religious knowledge. 390p $3.50 Harper

201 Knowledge, Theory of. Religion—Philosophy 40-32361

"Professor Macintosh has made a lifetime study of the epistemological problem. His monumental work on 'The Problem of Knowledge,' published twenty-five years ago, was an encyclopedic survey of the epistemological thought of the ages. This new volume represents the extension of this study into the field of religious knowledge. . . The problem which Professor Macintosh faces is how one may become as certain of God as one is of the structure of values about which one seems to be very sure. In answering that problem he surveys the whole field of religious thought and makes the most careful analysis of mystical, metaphysical and empirical theories of religious knowledge." (Books) Indexes.

"May be regarded as one of the ripest fruits of American liberal Protestant scholarship." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Books p30 N 17 '40 500w

"This definitive work is necessarily technical, and it is a permanent contribution to American scholarship. Unfortunately, the references are in parentheses in the text, which makes consecutive reading difficult." R. C. Miller

+ — Churchman 155:20 Ja 15 '41 110w

J Philos 37:642 N 7 '40 950w

MACINTYRE, CARLYLE FERREN. Cafés and cathedrals; poems. 88p $2 (5s) Oxford

811 40-27552

"This collection reflects both classic and modern scenes of the old world, transmitting in fresh, clear verse the color and beauty of such places as Paris, Nuremberg, Pisa, Montmartre, Marseilles, Cologne, and Paris. Monuments, churches, markets, paintings, and people are among the poet's subjects." Booklist

Booklist 36:410 Jl 1 '40

"Since a poet writes as he must, it is probably both silly and presumptuous to prescribe for him. But Mr MacIntyre's abilities are so genuine that one cannot help wanting to tell him to do more with them. His preciosity would become literary savoir-faire, his phrase-making would become word-magic, if he would only get himself something to write about." S. I. Hayakawa

— + Poetry 56:161 Je '40 750w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer

Sat R of Lit 22:16 Jl 6 '40 310w

Reviewed by Goronwy Rees

Spec 164:724 My 24 '40 120w

"While his powers of interpretation are weaker than his gift for graphic reporting he is a poet worth travelling with."

Times [London] Lit Sup p35 Ja 20 '40 180w

MACIVER, ROBERT MORRISON. Leviathan and the people. 182p $2 La. state univ. press

321.8 Democracy. Dictators 40-135

"In the modern world, according to Professor MacIver of Columbia, the Leviathan of Hobbes has achieved a split personality, emerging as both Dictatorship and Democracy. In three lectures delivered at Louisiana State University he sketched the natural history of both; and he now puts them forth as essays, adding an almost equal bulk of 'commentary' on various passages." N Y Times

Reviewed by C. A. Ellwood

Am J Soc 45:940 My '40 700w

"While I find myself in general agreement with MacIver, I can understand how a fascist or nazimunist might regard this essay as a mass of meaningless maunderings. To them, nonsense; to me, a brilliant and inspired essay—with 70 pages of notes that add substantially to the text." Read Bain

+ Am Soc R 5:143 F '40 700w

"I have seen no other recent book on this matter that contains so much wisdom packed in so small a space and so well expressed as this one. Read it, whether you are a bemused layman or a professor learned in social philosophy." J. A. Leighton

+ Ann Am Acad 209:209 My '40 950w

"History is philosophy teaching by example, it is said, and in this sense I recommend this book heartily. Students, columnists and congressmen would do well to read it." B. E. Nelson

+ Christian Century 57:318 Mr 6 '40 550w

"Here is a scholarly explanation, clear, well-reasoned, and readable, which is the product of a master, long and favorably known for his wisdom in the field of social and political problems." H. W. Voltmer

+ Columbia Law R 40:1121 Je '40 1050w

Current Hist 51:7 Mr '40 180w

"On the whole this little volume by Professor MacIver is important for students of political science. It is sophisticated, intelligent, and challenging." C. E. Merriam

+ Ethics 50:339 Ap '40 320w

Foreign Affairs 19:251 O '40 20w

Reviewed by P. M. Sweezy

Harvard Law R 53:1064 Ap '40 950w

Reviewed by H. M. Magid

J Philos 37:249 Ap 25 '40 490w

Reviewed by John Corbin

N Y Times p6 Ja 21 '40 900w

Reviewed by Alvin Johnson

Survey G 29:194 Mr '40 490w

"Mr. MacIver possesses both the natural gift of clear thinking and the acquired assets of wide learning, enhanced by a brilliant and concise style. If, notwithstanding the author's obvious gifts and competence to deal with the subject-matter of his study in 'Leviathan and the People' some of its aspects are disappointing, it is mainly due to the complex character of the problems concerned."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p394 Ag 17 '40 850w

MACK, JULIAN ELLIS, and MARTIN, MILES JAY. The photographic process. 586p il $5 McGraw

770 Photography 39-25991

"Although this attractive quarto volume has sufficient scope and scientific rigor to pass muster as a college text, it is simple enough for the intelligent general reader who wishes to acquire a sounder understanding of the photographic process than is conveyed in more popular works. It is concerned chiefly with principles and techniques, and omits such practices as retouching and portrait lighting. There are chapters on natural-color photography, scientific and technological photography, photo-mechanical reproduction, and pictorial photography. A classified bibliography is included. The illustrations are noteworthy, especially the full-page pictorial studies. The authors are professors in the University of Wisconsin." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The book is very detailed, though with some loss of emphasis on fundamentals. It is not a book to sit down and read, but it will be of the greatest value to anyone who teaches the subject and as a reference book for libraries. The manual of practical exercises at the end increases its value. It is profusely illustrated and well indexed." A. S. C. Lawrence

+ Nature 146:350 S 14 '40 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:60 O '39

"The history of photography is not left out of this decidedly scientific book, neither is the art of photography ignored. It may indeed be said that the production of good pictures is the essential purpose of the whole. . . For the laboratory physicist, for the teacher, for the amateur and even for the professional photographer—if not for him especially—this is an excellent book." W. W. Sleator

+ R of Scientific Instruments 11:149 Ap '40 700w

MCKAY, CLAUDE. Harlem: Negro metropolis. 262p il $3 Dutton

917.471 Harlem, New York (city). Negroes —New York (city) 40-32205

A sober, rounded account of the Negro section of New York City, Harlem. One chapter is given over to a quick resume of Harlem's history during the last four decades, but the rest of the book is devoted to a topical arrangement in which the author deals with such subjects as Harlem business, Harlem amusements, Harlem politics, and with such personalities as Father Divine, Marcus Aurelius Garvey, Sufi Abdul Hamid, and others.

Booklist 37:135 D 1 '40

"Claude McKay, an intellectual despite himself, is perversely anti-intellectual. He despises smug 'race leaders.' He has a deliberate taste for the primitive. He is at his best in describing the strange types which have floated to the surface. . . But Claude McKay seems also to have conceived a book which would be an all-around study of Harlem, and to have tired whenever he tackled it. His brief chapters on Harlem business, Harlem politicians and Harlem art are perfunctory." Lewis Gannett

+ — Boston Transcript p11 O 17 '40 600w

Commonweal 33:108 N 15 '40 100w

"Mr. McKay knows the inside of many situations and the frankness with which he shares his knowledge is almost embarrassing. He is, moreover, a man of strong opinions, and his analysis of the conditions described may be colored by his convictions. It should be noted, also, that he has made no attempt to present a complete picture of Harlem. However, the book is undoubtedly important, and it makes thrilling reading, for Claude McKay is a skillful and convincing writer." Ernestine Rose

+ — Library J 65:922 N 1 '40 140w

Reviewed by Ted Poston

New Repub 103:732 N 25 '40 800w

"The subjects that McKay has chosen to discuss are ones that need serious treatment and analysis, but McKay did not approach his subject with the thoroughness that it deserves." Roi Ottley

N Y Times p5 N 24 '40 900w

"Probably the best all-round study of the present-day Negro metropolis we've had so far, by the novelist who wrote 'Home to Harlem.' The author goes slow on amusements, which have been overdone, but his gentle penetration reveals the real, poverty-ridden Harlem of economics and political saviors, the numbers racket, business, politics, labor, and the like. Part of the material has appeared in the American Mercury. Excellent photographs."

+ New Yorker 16:87 O 26 '40 80w

Wis Lib Bul 36:166 D '40

MCKAY, HERBERT. Odd numbers; or, Arithmetic revisited. 215p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge]

511 Arithmetic

A popular book on the fundamentals of arithmetic and other mathematics with many and varied illustrations of their uses.

"Arithmetic in itself is doubtless a dull subject. But in his little book Mr. McKay contrives to make it interesting and even amusing by the wide variety of problems to which it is applied." H. M. Silvanus

+ New Statesman & Nation 19:706 Je 1 '40 450w

N Y Times p17 S 8 '40 480w

"The book is fascinating for any one with a penchant for figures, as it good-naturedly asks a little mental exercise from its readers; but only an adept in the far-reaching science of numbers can enjoy more than a chapter or two at a sitting."

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 18 '40 340w

Times [London] Lit Sup p367 Jl 27 '40 50w

MACKAYE, JAMES. The logic of language. 303p $3.50 Dartmouth

401.1 Logic. Language and languages. Meaning (psychology) 40-3091

"This is a posthumous work, constituting the first of a contemplated three-volume treatise entitled 'Reason' whose three parts were to deal with Intelligibility, Probability, and Utility, respectively. At the time of his death in 1935, Professor MacKaye had completed the first part, and left a rough draft of the second and notes for the third. The present volume, containing this completed portion, includes a Foreword by Professor William P. Montague, a Preface by Dr. Albert W. Levi, one of Professor MacKaye's literary executors, and an Appendix listing Professor MacKaye's publications as compiled by Mrs. MacKaye." J Philos

"A stimulating, challenging and sometimes witty book, it provokes many more questions than it even attempts to consider." Paul Weiss

+ Ethics 50:369 Ap '40 280w

"The present volume offers ample evidence for the many-sidedness of Professor MacKaye's interests, and testifies to his passionate zeal for clarity and intellectual integrity." E. N.

+ J Philos 37:219 Ap 11 '40 430w

MACKAYE, JAMES—Continued

"An exceptionally clear analysis of the nature of meaning, the technique of definition, and their relation to the nature of existence."

+ Nation 150:371 Mr 16 '40 40w

MACKAYE, PERCY. My lady dear, arise! 263p il $2.50 Macmillan

811

Poems written and compiled by Percy MacKaye to preserve the memory of his wife, who died in France in 1939. Included are some excerpts from Mrs Mackaye's diary, and some of her descriptions of their trips in the Kentucky mountains.

"An astonishing and somewhat painful book of lingering-long-drawn-out memory. . . As a memorial it is too public an exhibition of private affection and private life, tender, trivial, insistent, absurd, noble, and stricken. As poetry it would be good if about half the book (the fussy datings of poems, the journal entries, the clutter of extra matter) had been omitted. Percy MacKaye has power as a poet, in his grief and in his ecstasy. One is reminded of William Ellery Leonard's sonnet sequence, 'Two Lives.' In MacKaye's book there is far more happiness, far more serenity and richness. But it cloys." John Holmes

+ — Boston Transcript p9 N 25 '40 160w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 24 '40 150w

MCKEAN, DAYTON DAVID. The boss; the Hague machine in action. 285p $3 Houghton

B or 92 Hague, Frank. New Jersey—Politics and government 40-32284

Study of the political machine of Hudson county, New Jersey, and especially the man who heads it, Frank Hague, mayor of Jersey City. The author has taught for ten years at Princeton and has been a member of the New Jersey legislature. Index.

Reviewed by H. F. Gosnell

Ann Am Acad 213:238 Ja '41 240w

Booklist 37:136 D 1 '40

"Mr. McKean was well qualified to write the history of the Hague machine, and he has done it without too much passion. . . His book shows that he has had opportunities for first-hand information about the Mayor and his machine, and that he has had access to the investigations of their conduct, which he has used intelligently. All you will want to know about Hague is contained in his thoughtful and interesting book." M. R. Werner

+ Books p3 O 13 '40 1850w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 O 11 '40 700w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 154:19 N 15 '40 180w

"Here again is the story of Jersey City and Boss Hague. It is told in a calm and objective fashion without the usual flourishes which most writers are tempted to use when telling of any political boss. Mr. McKean plays the theme without variations. . . Mr. McKean tells the Catholic side of the story with restraint. He might even have said much more. The few pages which he devotes to this side of the picture, however, speak volumes. His book on the whole constitutes a readable account of the operation of a political machine and should be read by every voting citizen. It is no mere academic treatise. It is the accurate account of the working of a system." J. G. Kerwin

+ Commonweal 33:59 N 1 '40 600w

Living Age 359:391 D '40 320w

"If I have any quarrel with this racily written story of the humorless illiterate whose shadow falls across one of our most important industrial commonwealths, it is Mr. McKean's soft handling of Jersey City's so-called 'respectable business element.' . . By and large, though, it was a good job to get the whole of Frank Hague between book covers. Nor would I give the impression that all of it is disheartening reading. Toward the very end there is a note of hope. Mr. McKean quotes Hague as saying, 'In the Horseshoe I was born and in the Horseshoe I will die.' While the author regards it as more probable that Hague will die at Biscayne Bay, Florida, or his estate at Deal, 'unless he spends more time in Jersey City than he has done in recent years,' he does express belief in Hague's mortality." McAlister Coleman

Nation 151:340 O 12 '40 650w

Social Studies 31:380 D '40 10w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 13 '40 1150w

"Dayton McKean's study of [Hague] and his machine is must reading for anyone who wants to know about the tenderloin of politics." P. H. Odegard

+ Survey G 29:623 D '40 330w

MCKEEHAN, HOBART DEITRICH. What men need most. 90p $1 Fortuny's

252 Sermons 40-9538

"Mr. McKeehan is the scholarly minister of the Abbey Church in Huntington, Pa. In answering his title question, Mr. McKeehan calls forth answers from modern psychology. Freud says he needs love. Adler says he needs a sense of significance. Jung says he needs a sense of security. The author then sets out to prove that only in the religion of Jesus does man really find these three jewels, love, significance and security." Boston Transcript

Reviewed by C. H. Kopf

Boston Transcript p4 Je 22 '40 150w

"A comrade and confidant of clerical leaders on both sides of the Atlantic, Dr. McKeehan has an amazing acquaintance with contemporary religious writing. And withal he has taken time to think through the great themes of our faith. As a result of this rich experience and wide reading, he has brought forth a new volume of sermons which is the distilled essence of his thought. It is hard to imagine how more wisdom could be contained in so slender a volume." R. W. Sockman

+ Christian Century 57:855 Jl 3 '40 280w

MCKELWAY, ST CLAIR. Gossip; the life and times of Walter Winchell. 150p $1.75 Viking

B or 92 Winchell, Walter 40-32480

An analysis of the character and writings of the gossip columnist Walter Winchell. Parts of the book have previously appeared in the New Yorker.

Booklist 37:136 D 1 '40

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 151:247 S 21 '40 20w

"Mr. McKelway, an able journalist with a sense of proportion, has done a thoughtful study, and an honorable one. . . To be sure, there are certain minor inaccuracies, but they in no way weaken the essential validity of the McKelway portrait. . . This is a revealing and terrifying little book, but it is amusing too." Stanley Walker

+ New Repub 104:26 Ja 6 '41 1000w

New Yorker 16:83 S 21 '40 40w

"The evidence of word and deed is the backbone of this book. You learn a lot about gossip, and odd, dynamic character, and profit from the book as a study of what has come into journalism via the backstairs." Leon Whipple

Survey G 29:620 D '40 850w

"So sharp was McKelway's scalpel that Winchell, who had expected a pat on the head, did not realize until the operation was well begun that his throat was being slit. This week the operation appeared in book form for as many of Winchell's some 10,000,000 column readers as might relish dignified, cruel irony of the best New Yorker grade."

Time 36:77 S 23 '40 650w

MCKENNA, NORMAN ANGUS. Theoretical electrochemistry. 469p il $5.50 Van Nostrand [15s Macmillan]

541.37 Electrochemistry [39-30517]

"In the last few years the theory of solutions has come to imply the theory of electrically conducting solutions. In the first part of this book an attempt has been made to emphasize the theory of interionic attraction and to show how the properties of ionic solutions fall into well defined groups. A second section of the book is devoted to the thermodynamics of reversible cells and the theories of the galvanic cell." (Chem & Met Eng) Indexes of authors and subjects.

"This book is recommended as a convenient supplementary reference book for practicing electrochemists, particularly since the author has included several sections, such as that on the statistical theory of the galvanic cell, which have not been included in most other books on electrochemistry." R. B. Mears

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:208 Mr 10 '40 240w

Chem & Met Eng 47:51 Ja '40 70w

Reviewed by I. M. Kolthoff

J Phys Chem 44:679 My '40 500w

"There is much confusion of signs in the chapter on reversible cells, and the equations are not consistent with those derived in the section on thermodynamics. A reader of sufficient experience not liable to be misled or confused will, however, find in this book much useful and interesting material concerning the theory of electrolytic solutions." S. Glasstone

+ — Nature 146:534 O 26 '40 490w

Reviewed by E. L. Onsager

R of Scientific Instruments 11:150 Ap '40 500w

MCKENNEY, RUTH (MRS BRUCE MINTON). McKenneys carry on. 219p $2 Harcourt

817 (W) 40-27653

Fourteen more gay stories about the lives of the McKenney sisters, by the author of My Sister Eileen (Book Review Digest, 1938). They begin with their childish struggles with Dickens and end with Ruth's difficulties with a home in Connecticut, where the quiet brook turns into a raging torrent overnight, and power and lights are no respecters of necessity. Six of the sketches have appeared in The New Yorker.

Booklist 37:32 O 1 '40

"The McKenneys—Ruth, the author and Eileen, the stooge are always good for a laugh. While this new collection . . . lacks the freshness of the first volume, 'My Sister Eileen,' mainly because it is difficult for an author twice to seduce a reader with the same wiles, it still can qualify as cockeyed entertainment." Rose Feld

+ Books p6 S 29 '40 750w

"There isn't anything in this book quite so good as the McKenneys entertaining the Brazilian navy double-handed; but there's nothing boring. Ruth's prose wears a poker face; it is shatteringly honest; and there's not a problem in it. As far as we are concerned, the McKenneys can carry on, and on, and on. . . We'll follow." O. O.

Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '40 150w

Christian Century 57:1251 O 9 '40 20w

"This book has only one equal: My Sister Eileen, by the same author. If you liked that here are some more hysterical stories of the wild girls of Cleveland, Ohio." G. E. S., Jr.

+ Churchman 154:35 N 1 '40 30w

"A most entertaining book, grand for reading aloud." Lena Ruppert

+ Library J 65:709 S 1 '40 110w

"This collection hasn't the first fine éclat of the earliest appearances in print of the McKenney sisters, for obviously the cream of their screamingly funny experiences was skimmed off first. But these episodes from Cleveland to New York are mighty amusing. . . The charm of all the McKenney débacles, fiascos and ultimate catastrophes is that, win or lose, the McKenneys had a fine dramatic time of it." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p18 S 29 '40 440w

New Yorker 16:80 S 28 '40 40w

"Miss McKenney is a welcome addition to the list of contemporary American humorists."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 O 10 '40 600w

MACKENZIE, AGNES MURE. The kingdom of Scotland; a short history. 384p $3.25 Macmillan [12s 6d Chambers]

941 Scotland—History

Short history of Scotland, picturing the country thruout as a kingdom, and showing its part in European history. Bibliography. Index.

"The size of the book precludes full discussion. Simple assertion was necessary. But some of the assertions rest upon the writer's own interpretation of doubtful evidence, and others ignore the recent work of good scholars. . . One cannot have everything, and Dr. Mackenzie gives verve, readability, and in international affairs, good perspective. But as a history of Scotland her book fails because of her persistent effort to 'make a case.' " J. D. Mackie

— + Manchester Guardian p7 My 13 '40 500w

"No one who has read any of the volumes of Dr. Mure Mackenzie's full-length history of Scotland will be surprised at the general bias and flavour of this shorter version. She makes no bones about being an Episcopalian, a Royalist and a nationalist; and her book is yet one more counterblast to the Whig view of Scottish history, propagated by most of the nineteenth-century writers and still noticeable in the school books of today. There are many excellent points in Dr. Mackenzie's book. . . Yet even for readers who find themselves in sympathy with Dr. Mackenzie's main view of Scottish history there is much that is irritating in her way of presenting it. Her tone is often unnecessarily dogmatic. . . The last section of the book, from the Union of the Parliaments to 1914, is the least satisfactory, because Dr. Mackenzie has devoted a great part of it to summaries of British and European political history, fields in which she does not speak with the same authority as she does of her own country." J. A. Smith

— + Spec 164:692 My 17 '40 600w

"The early and medieval history of Scotland, in Dr. Mackenzie's hands, comes alive. Some rolls of names and echoes of great deeds recall the 'Tales of a Grandfather,' which is an excellent thing to do, but Dr. Mackenzie has an eye for other things and skilfully puts Scotland in the general European situation. . . With the most modern section of the book, Dr. Mackenzie, it is to be feared, definitely falls below her high standards. Far too much space (for so short a book) is devoted to a general political history of Great Britain, given an appearance of relevance by the introduction, of the names of famous Scots whose deeds helped to win the Empire or otherwise earned fame."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p174 Ap 6 '40 750w

MACKENZIE, COMPTON. The west wind of love. 402p $2.75 Dodd [9s 6d Chatto]

(W) 40-31112

This is the third volume of the author's monumental novel, The Four Winds of Love. In this instalment the story of John Ogilvie is carried thru the last years of the first World war, and centers, emotionally, in his love for the American woman Athene Langridge. For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest, 1937.

"For admirers of Compton Mackenzie this book is, of course, a 'must.' For anyone at all it is a good novel."

+ Atlantic N '40 120w

Booklist 37:91 N 1 '40

MACKENZIE, COMPTON—Continued

"'The West Wind of Love' is distinguished in style as well as in the range and sensitiveness of the experience Mr. Mackenzie has selected to show this chapter in the making of a man. As a story it compels your attention, and rewards it with its insight, tenderness, and humor. Despite the size of the design chosen for the whole work, and the many characters who enter and re-enter its pages, the author has kept the pattern distinct so that each succeeding episode clarifies those that have gone before, and they in turn give added meaning to the present." Mary Ross
+ Books p10 S 29 '40 950w

"The four, actually five, 'Wind' novels by Compton Mackenzie are among the important books of our period. They are an even more sensitive barometer than were the Forsythe novels of what the Englishman of these years has been experiencing, for they mirror the impact of the last forty years on a sensitive, intelligent man, such a man as the author who has conceived and written them." D. L. Mann
+ Boston Transcript p1 O 5 '40 700w

"While we wish the author had the courage to prune an overgrowth of detail, nevertheless, so interesting does he make this saga of a generation that we await his concluding novel with eager expectation."
Cath World 152:506 Ja '41 200w

Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright
Commonweal 33:84 N 8 '40 450w

Reviewed by A. G. Higgins
Library J 65:709 S 1 '40 100w

"The discussions are well contrived to reflect world affairs and opinions during the period between about 1918 and the ratification of peace, so that one object of the series of novels is neatly fulfilled. They are enlightened in tone, and they are full of illuminating asides. In his treatment of the lower orders Mr. Mackenzie, though sympathetic, is not yet free from a touch of condescension." Charles Marriott
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 16 '40 350w

Reviewed by H. T. Moore
New Repub 103:734 N 25 '40 350w

Reviewed by Margaret Wallace
N Y Times p7 S 15 '40 950w

"This novel, honest, steady and sympathetic in its expansive relation of personal life to the problems confronting the world at the close of the last war with Germany, is better and livelier than that in its asides—such character sketches as that of Nurse Widehose, for instance, and the caretakers of the flats in Charing Cross Road; and almost any taxi-driver that crops up, or any Cockney girl. In all these warm and vivid details Mr. Mackenzie works in a great tradition and cannot put a foot wrong; they introduce the beauty of art into a novel which without them could only be moderately interesting." Kate O'Brien
+ — Spec 164:604 Ap 26 '40 310w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '40 420w

"Though the love story is never dull . . . it is in his handling of minor and incidental themes that Mr. Mackenzie sparkles brightest. . . The effect of Ogilvie's more than mortal powers of divination in all but wrecking the imaginative scheme has been noted. For the rest, despite the richness and the variety of Mr. Mackenzie's argument, despite the romantic bravura with which he carries them off, it is a pity, perhaps, he does not leave what belongs to the so-called novel of ideas to novelists who lack his vigorous and fecund creative impulse."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p181 Ap 13 '40 650w

MCKINNEY, HOWARD DECKER, and ANDERSON, WILLIAM ROBERT. Music in history; the evolution of an art. 904p il $4.50 Am. bk.

780.9 Music—History and criticism 40-9514

Study of the place of music in the development of artistic history, from the conjectural beginnings of the art, to the musical tendencies of the twentieth century. Copiously illustrated. Selective bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:266 F 15 '41

"For students of the history of civilization who wish to understand the development of music as a part of the total process, the work is of unique value."
+ Christian Century 57:977 Ag 7 '40 280w

"One wonders on which radio station during the last few years the authors have been tuning in. Together with sound judgments of the past, they repeat what are to my mind some of its errors. . . Nonetheless, Mr. McKinney and Mr. Anderson must be credited with a study which ought to inform and stir all classes of readers. They have brought much conscientiousness and culture to their work, and have made a fresh study of the art and literature of the many periods of which they treat. This is evident in the frequently unhackneyed instances of expression in the literature they cite and in the original reproductions and photographs with which they have enriched their eminently readable volume." Paul Rosenfeld
+ — Yale R n s 30:412 winter '41 700w

MCKOWN, HARRY CHARLES, and LE BRON, MARION. A boy grows up; il. by E. R. Conerly. (Whittlesey house publication) 299p $2; text ed $1.56 McGraw

170 Boys. Conduct of life (W) 40-34418

Handbook of guidance for boys, showing them such things as how to get along with one's family and friends or in an organization, earning money, making a budget, understanding their physical selves, acquiring skills and hobbies, and how to look for a job. Includes a chapter on the boyhoods of famous men. Bibliographies. For junior and senior high schools.

"Masculine in tone, this book presents sane advice by case studies and precept."
+ Booklist 37:178 Ja 1 '41

"Any youth in his teens who absorbs the instruction in ethics and social behavior generously assembled in 'A Boy Grows Up' should be able to win friends and influence even parents."
+ Books p26 N 17 '40 120w
Social Studies 32:48 Ja '41 10w

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD. The irresponsibles; a declaration. 34p $1 Duell

810.904 Literature—History and criticism. European war, 1939—Public opinion. Culture. Intellectuals (W) 40-27612

An essay which appeared earlier in slightly different form in The Nation, in which the Librarian of Congress takes his own literary generation to task because of their failure to resist the forces which he feels are now destroying Western civilization.

Booklist 37:9 S '40
Bookmark p24 N '40

"One cannot fail to sympathize with Mr. MacLeish's high seriousness. But this reviewer, at least, cannot refrain from questioning his logic, his history, or his essential soundness." Irwin Edman
— + Books p6 S 8 '40 1050w

Reviewed by John Holmes
Boston Transcript p11 Ag 26 '40 280w

Reviewed by John Ritchey
Christian Science Monitor p12 O 19 '40 600w

"Here is a book not to be missed by workmen in the arts and crafts, whether or no they feel that the shoe pinches. A fine call to assumption of responsibility in an irresponsible world."
+ Living Age 358:92 S '40 80w

MACLEISH (mák-lēsh)

Reviewed by Eugene Jolas
Living Age 359:192 O '40 210w

"The case is overstated, but it rests on truth. Integration must come if the ranks are to hold at Armageddon. And this little book, let us hope, is but an opening gun." J. D. A.
+ N Y Times p2 Ag 25 '40 600w
New Yorker 16:64 Ag 17 '40 40w

MCLELLAN, MARY BUTTERS, and DE BONIS, ALBERT VICTOR, eds. Within our gates; selections on tolerance and the foreign-born of today. 304p il $1.28 Harper

325.73 U.S.—Foreign population. Toleration
40-10434

Collection of essays, short stories, and bits of autobiography, all of which attempt to explain the life of immigrants and special racial groups in the United States.

Booklist 36:424 Jl 15 '40
New Repub 102:770 Je 3 '40 40w

"This is more than a collection. It is truly a handbook of tolerance, made so by its unusual continuity. . . A most impressive feature of the book is the carefully selected bibliography which should meet the needs of any teacher in any community. Once at least the authors' helpful footnotes got them into trouble. What sacrilege to define a German 'Schaumtorte' as a 'kind of tart!'. . But we shall forgive the authors by reason of the general excellency of the job they've done." Robert Rienow
+ — Social Educ 4:519 N '40 550w

MCMEEKIN, CLARK, pseud. of MRS DOROTHY (PARK) CLARK and MRS ISABELLA (MCLENNAN) MCMEEKIN. Show me a land. 441p $2.50 Appleton-Century
(W) 40-27164

Beginning at the Aintree Fair in England in 1816 the story spans the years to 1875, and ends with the first Kentucky Derby. In that time Dana Terraine who viewed that Aintree Fair at sixteen, marries twice, leaves her Virginia home, goes to Kentucky, lives thru the Civil war, and goes to the Derby, a vigorous, aristocratic old lady in her thrice-turned dress.

Booklist 36:265 Mr 1 '40

"Throughout, the book shows a rather pleasing disregard of the rules of 'constructed' fiction, and an occasional absolute forgetfulness of a character or incident that has been shaped up to be important only to disappear from the plot. Episodic or not, however, 'Show Me a Land' creates a sense of activity and excitement, portrays at least one definite and authentic personality (Squire Jarrod), and provides an unusually entertaining narrative." Evelyn Page
+ — Books p10 F 25 '40 700w

"There are many flaws in the novel, but one is inclined to overlook them and to enjoy reading the book as much as the authors—two Kentucky ladies—must have enjoyed writing it."
+ — Boston Transcript p13 F 1 '40 120w

" 'Show Me a Land' is crowded with odd characters, with events which skirt the dangerous brink of melodrama, and with authentic details which fit them all into a background we are forced to accept as real. It brings to mind a score of comparisons, from Smollett and George Borrow to Daphne du Maurier and Margaret Mitchell. But all the comparisons prove equally worthless and we are obliged to take the tale for what it is, a bizarre original. . . Withal, it manages in the end to be curiously moving. We are left with an almost tangible sense of having lived for a few hours in a world which has vanished." Margaret Wallace
+ — N Y Times p7 F 25 '40 800w

"This is a ramping, unashamedly romantic romance, full of beautiful girls, handsome gentlemen, fine horses, moving accidents by flood and field, and quite a lot of vivid and unpretentious historical detail. . . It's a breathless tale and a dexterous one. It may be—and it is—melodrama, but it makes good reading." S. V. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 21:7 F 24 '40 550w
Wis Lib Bul 36:69 Ap '40

MCMURTRIE, DOUGLAS CRAWFORD, and FARRAN, DON. Wings for words; the story of Johann Gutenberg and his invention of printing; il. by Edward A. Wilson. 175p $2 Rand McNally

B or 92 Gutenberg, Johann. Printing—History
(W) 40-27764

"A fitting memorial on the anniversary of the invention of printing from movable type, so widely celebrated this year, is now brought to the attention of young people. That it comes from the hand of a distinguished printer of our own time bespeaks its sound historical background and gives assurance of its authenticity. But the author of The Golden Book has done much more than this in his sympathetic portrayal of Johann Gutenberg, boy and man. He has taken the inventor out from the pages of a formal history and made him a real person whose dreams and purposes we share, as the friends in the story do, until his great work is completed." Horn Bk M

Booklist 37:123 N 15 '40

"This story-life is for any one old enough to read biography at all, freely and well illustrated, it blends life and art in a way easy to remember. . . The book has not the strong story-interest of Eric Kelly's 'At the Sign of the Golden Compass,' which deals in fiction with the House of Plantin, but in its own way it will add greatly to a school library whose readers need solid information in story form." M. L. Becker
+ Books p10 N 24 '40 300w

"The author brings both imagination and appreciation to Gutenberg's ideals and struggles and it makes fascinating reading." E. V. W.
+ Cath World 152:382 D '40 130w

"For the first time we have a well-told biography worthy of Gutenberg, the man whose dream of creating 'wings for words' opened up a new era in civilization. Edward A. Wilson's splendid illustrations illumine the text and add distinction to this handsome book, suitable for any age." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 14 '40 240w

"With splendid typography and beautiful illustrations, this is a noteworthy biography for any age." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:446 N '40 110w

"Scholarly research alone could not have produced such a book as this: it takes warm human sympathy to bring alive out of the shadows of history the vital figure of a great personality. I hope this fine biography of the inventor of movable type will find an honored place on the older child's bookshelf." Lena Barksdale
+ Horn Bk M 17:59 Ja '41 130w

"Douglas McMurtrie has succeeded in creating a book which not only tells the story of the invention of printing by Gutenberg, but voices an inspiration which has a direct appeal to everybody, young and old. This book is one of the few which it has been my privilege to examine and read, and which is equally readable, equally inspiring to all." J. C. Bay
+ Library J 65:914 N 1 '40 300w

"It is simply written but contains much specific information. In the back are a list of important dates in printing and twelve pages on the mechanics of early printing with illustrations. It will probably be read more for the information than the story, but it is excellent for that purpose. Schools especially should find it useful. For eleven years through high school." Eleanor Kidder

MCMURTRIE, D. C., and FARRAN, D.—Cont.
+ Library J 65:985 N 15 '40 200w

"Based on careful research and told with rich human interest." Lena Barksdale
+ Nation 151:456 N 9 '40 10w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:846 D 16 '40 40w

"A fine, well-rounded biography for boys and girls of 10 and up, and its information is supplemented with an interesting essay, 'The Mechanics of Early Printing.'" E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p44 N 10 '40 170w

New Yorker 16:130 D 7 '40 40w

"First rate." Katherine Ulrich
+ Sat R of Lit 23:8 N 16 '40 50w

Reviewed by C. P. Rollins
Sat R of Lit 23:11 Ja 4 '41 100w

MCMURTRY, ROBERT GERALD. Kentucky Lincolns on Mill creek. ltd ed 78p il maps $3 Lincoln memorial univ. Dept. of Lincolniana, Harrogate, Tenn.

B or 92 Lincoln family. Lincoln, Abraham
39-29734

"The author describes 'The Lincoln-Mill Creek Country', a small region isolated even today from the outside world, where Lincoln's family settled in 1803; the purchase for cash by Thomas Lincoln of a 238-acre farm in this region; the historic 'Lincoln-Mill Creek Trail' through northern Hardin County followed by the Lincolns in 1816 when they migrated from Kentucky to Indiana; the farm purchased by Nancy's husband, William Brumfield, where it is believed Thomas Lincoln and his family moved when he sold his farm on Mill Creek in 1814; and the 'Lincoln-Mill Creek Cemetery', an almost inaccessible three-acre tract where several Lincolns were buried. Nine illustrations give vividness and definiteness to the narrative." Am Hist R

"By his study the author has successfully forged a missing link in our knowledge of Lincoln's family and its environs, and the work has been so carefully done that it will not need to be done again. He hoped to make a contribution to Lincoln Literature, and he has succeeded. His objective treatment with scholarly documentation tends to build up one's respect for Lincoln's father. The citations to authorities and helpful explanatory notes are placed at the bottom of the pages, where these ought to be in a work of this kind. The format of the book is characterized by suitability and attractiveness." W. H. Ellison
+ Am Hist R 45:989 Jl '40 280w

Christian Science Monitor p22 Ja 2 '40 490w

MCNABB, VINCENT JOSEPH. Mary of Nazareth. 132p $1.35 Kenedy [5s Burns]

232.931 Mary, Virgin

"A volume that tells on every page of a priest's great love of our Lady. . . It consists of a lifetime's notes on devotion to the Mother of God, set forth in a series of meditations, anecdotes, quotations, reflections on various feasts, and original commentaries." Cath World

+ Cath World 152:124 O '40 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p91 F 17 '40 180w

MACNEIL, NEIL. Without fear or favor. 414p $3 Harcourt

070 Journalism. Newspapers (W) 40-27336

Tells in non-technical language how the modern metropolitan newspaper is produced. It reveals how the news is gathered in all parts of the world, transmitted to the news rooms, edited, and sent to press—all in a matter of four or five hours. (Adapted from publisher's note) The author has been assistant managing editor of The New York Times for the past ten years. Index.

Booklist 36:317 Ap 15 '40

"Mr. MacNeil obviously is a man of good will, modest and studious. He believes not only in the philosophy of the type of journalism in which he has been trained, but also in the goodness of newspaper work as a way of life. Such an attitude, of course, in these bad-tempered and caviling times, will strike many as being both unfashionable and reprehensible. Nevertheless, it is precisely this attitude which has brought the ablest men into newspaper work and which, in turn, has given the United States its outstanding papers." Stanley Walker
+ Books p10 Ap 7 '40 1000w

"The dignity, balance and good breeding of the New York Times suffuse the pages of this survey of contemporary journalism by the Times' assistant managing editor. Here is temperate and urbane answer to the Seldes-Ickes school of newspaper critics, restrained pride in the achievements of the American press and candid admission of most of its deficiencies and errors. But more than that it is a responsible exposition of the practice of journalism, useful not only for the newspaper worker but also for the newspaper reader." Alden Hoag
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 11 '40 290w

"Neil MacNeil has a big story to tell and he relates it in a concise, captivating style." J. F. T.
+ Cath World 151:757 S '40 650w

Christian Century 57:581 My 1 '40 210w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 17 '40 900w

Reviewed by James van Zant
Churchman 154:19 Ag '40 100w

"This is the most readable, most comprehensive book on modern newspaper practice that this reviewer has encountered. And he has, as a newspaperman and as an instructor in news writing, encountered a great many. . . The author writes clearly, tersely and in non-polysyllabics." Clem Lane
+ Commonweal 31:517 Ap 5 '40 350w

"Mr. MacNeil covers his subject thoroughly, writing as a newspaper man proud of his calling, free to concede that it has human failings. He makes no attempt to explain away the latter. His book is excellently organized." A. T. Robb
+ N Y Times p4 Ap 7 '40 1150w

"Mr MacNeil's fellow newspapermen will be especially drawn to this book. Their professional interest will be satisfied, for, while avoiding technical language, the author has gone thoroughly into the problems incident to publishing a metropolitan newspaper. . . The book's simple, polished text is accomplished with professional skill, with every particular thoroughly developed, and no space wasted on rococo language or useless detail."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 7 '40 1000w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 29:408 Jl '40 750w

Wis Lib Bul 36:109 Je '40

MCPHERSON, WILLIAM HESTON. Labor relations in the automobile industry. 173p $1.50 Brookings 331.881292 Automobile industry and trade. Trade unions

40-7645

"Professor McPherson deals with labor relations in all three branches of the motor industry (vehicles, bodies, parts), concentrating on the recent era of powerful labor unionism, of which the sit-downs of 1937 were early symptoms. His treatment is impartial and competent, giving numerous up-to-date statistics, an illustrative current union agreement, and his impressions of many trends which cannot be objectively measured." Am Econ R

Reviewed by Z. C. Dickinson
Am Econ R 30:627 S '40 750w
Booklist 36:406 Jl 1 '40
Reviewed by R. R. R. Brooks
Survey 76:341 N '40 360w

MCROYD, ALLAN. Death in costume. 282p $2 Greystone 40-35165

Detective story.

"Brady's routine is all right with the jasmine perfume, the anonymous letter and the scrap of paper reading 'ENT APP.' The final hullabaloo and denouement may strike you as somewhat excessive." Will Cuppy
+ — Books p10 D 29 '40 130w

"At one time or another almost every person who appears in the story is under suspicion, thus providing enough bafflement to keep the reader from beating Inspector Brady to the solution. The bafflement is quite legitimate, however, and Brady's solution is as clever as it is unexpected." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 N 3 '40 160w

"Smouldering mass of old hatreds which finally burst into murderous flame effectively and melodramatically quenched. Passable."
Sat R of Lit 22:38 O 12 '40 40w

"The story does not contain any amateur sleuthing, but exhibits police methods said to be based on actual procedure."
Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '40 180w

MCROYD, ALLAN. The double shadow murders. 250p $2 Greystone 40-3853

Detective story.

"In spite of the cold-blooded killing, there are a lot of highly amusing moments in 'The Double Shadow Murders.'" Marian Wiggin
+ — Boston Transcript p5 N 11 '39 60w

"The story is not quite good enough to be rated as mediocre." Isaac Anderson
— N Y Times p19 Ja 14 '40 130w

"Entertaining."
+ Sat R of Lit 20:20 O 21 '39 40w

MCSPADDEN, JOSEPH WALKER. The book of holidays. 3d ed 461p il $2 Crowell 394 Holidays (W) 40-27814

"To the revised edition of 1927, have been added three chapters: Holidays in other lands, The days of the week, How the months were named." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1917.

Booklist 37:159 D 15 '40
Christian Century 57:1483 N 27 '40 30w

"This book is an excellent reference source for use with children over ten years of age." R. W. Stewart
+ Library J 65:1092 D 15 '40 130w
Social Studies 32:47 Ja '41 20w

MACVEIGH, SUE, pseud. Streamlined murder. 221p $2 Houghton 40-9311

Detective story.

Booklist 37:14 S '40

"Generally readable with tall romantic conclusions." Will Cuppy
+ — Books p12 Je 16 '40 160w

"Another swell railroad-detective yarn." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 8 '40 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 Je 16 '40 290w

"Good reading, and fast as a whippet."
+ New Yorker 16:80 Je 8 '40 50w

"Good enough."
Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 8 '40 40w
Time 36:72 Jl 1 '40 30w

MADARIAGA, SALVADOR DE. Christopher Columbus; being the life of the very magnificent Lord Don Cristóbal Colón. 524p il maps $4 Macmillan [21s Hodder]
B or 92 Columbus, Christopher (W) 40-2917

The distinguished Spanish diplomat and man of letters who writes this biography provides at the outset a key to the mystery which after four hundred years and many volumes of research still surrounds the life of the great navigator. Madariaga's study of the evidence confirms his belief that, altho Columbus himself was born in Genoa, his ancestors were Spanish Jews who migrated to Italy and who retained in their new home their Spanish speech. Bibliography. Notes. Indexes.

"The book is written in a racy style, with commendable fire and spirit, and gives an interesting analysis of Columbus's character. But it is essentially a clever piece of special pleading, not a Life of Columbus." S. E. Morison
+ Am Hist R 45:653 Ap '40 800w

"This book is scholarly to the utmost, thoroughly documented, the fruit of exhaustive research. Written by a Spaniard, it exhibits the native sense and feel towards the materials it weighs; and written by a scholar, it is the acme of disinterestedness. With all this, it is done in the style of a first-class storyteller, and in the impeccable taste of a gentleman."
+ Atlantic Mr '40 800w
Booklist 36:263 Mr 1 '40
Bookmark p11 My '40

"Let us be grateful that this unique saga is told us by a diplomat, a philosopher, a scholar, who at the same time dares to be a poet. . . The true Colón is not confined forever within these pages. But the high romance of his life has been nobly told; we have been given glimpses of his strangely mottled, elusively pathetic personality; and our guide, for many pleasant hours, has been one of the most cultured of living men." Albert Guerard
+ Books p1 Ja 28 '40 850w

"'Christopher Columbus' is a deep pleasure to read. The thought is supple, ironic, sharp. The atmosphere of the work is dry and golden, while an indigo sea flecked with white provides the background for Madariaga's exquisite imagery. What a great pity that all historians cannot share this gift for pure writing, and at the same time achieve Madariaga's deceptively casual command of material." E. B. Garside
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 2 '40 460w
Cath World 150:755 Mr '40 750w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 57:352 Mr 13 '40 1050w

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd
Christian Science Monitor p10 F 10 '40 550w

"Mr. Salvador de Madariaga's new life of Columbus is written in a richly imaginative and romantic vein. It will delight the general reader, but in spite of its apparatus of bibliography and notes it need not detain the historian." E. G. R. T.
+ — Eng Hist R 55:333 Ap '40 600w

"The book is full of disturbing and, sometimes, of beautiful prose. It is also a very subtle and ingenious book, whether or not it justifies the author in copying Carlyle's bad habit of jeering at the scholars upon whose work he so largely depends. . . In his ardour he too often forgets, notably in the later chapters, to make the context clear, so that one calls for maps and details. It may be that on many points Don Salvador de Madariaga's reconstruction will be accepted, but he is

MADARIAGA (mä-dhä-rê-ä'gä)

MADARIAGA, S. DE—Continued
capable of bad slips and queer argumentation, which reveal the possibility of grave misunderstanding." F. M. Powicke

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 D 12 '39 600w

"The scholarship, though minute, is neither heavy nor dry. . . The man Colón is very much alive, and the story is told with literary ability. The maps, including the end papers, are really enlightening." James Orrick

+ Nation 150:548 Ap 27 '40 200w

"This is a magnificently written biography. Salvador de Madariaga has delved deep into the sources, emerging with a provocative and yet convincing account of the great discoverer. The Columbus question has been argued for the last four hundred years. It is, of course, for professed experts on it to determine ultimately the validity of Madariaga's conclusions, but most readers will be thoroughly convinced by his arguments." Sydney Zebel

+ New Repub 102:546 Ap 22 '40 470w

Reviewed by T. W. Earp

New Statesman & Nation 18:834 D 9 '39 900w

"It is the product of an author perfectly prepared for his task and happy in the choice of his subject. Author and subject here make an unimprovable combination. . . The reviewer believes that this book, so exquisitely clear in style, so rich in wit and in penetration, and withal so solidly founded upon well-selected documentation, is destined to take a permanently conspicuous place in the vast literature of its special subject. Certainly, the reading of it must be a lively pleasure as well as a means to enlarged knowledge." P. A. Means

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 28 '40 1300w

"A big book, scholarly yet colorful."

+ New Yorker 15:63 Ja 27 '40 30w

"Madariaga has handled only a few of the actual documents, but he seems to have mastered every significant scrap of the printed literature, and out of it, and out of his experience of affairs and insight into character he has produced a portrait of Columbus which, one is tempted to say, is more solidly satisfactory than any since Washington Irving. . . Madariaga never forgets that he is telling the story of a great adventurer and a unique adventure. In his hand it is as fresh and as exciting as if it had never been told before, and its hero is a rounded human being, compellingly vivid and alive. If you have room beside Washington Irving's classic on your shelves for only one modern biography of Columbus, this should be the book." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 21:10 Ja 27 '40 800w

"Señor de Madariaga in a piece of historical detective work as brilliantly and closely argued as a summing-up by Hercule Poirot, and no less exciting." C. V. Wedgwood

+ Spec 163:792 D 1 '39 480w

"Aside from one or two other scholarly shrugs of the shoulder, as when he says Columbus must have made a mistake in writing down his own age because it doesn't agree with a historian's view, de Madariaga's biography rings true in almost every department. If it cannot be sincerely said that he has established Columbus as a Jew forevermore, he has made a powerful argument for the theory as well as producing a fine picture of the discovery of America and an unusually convincing study of a great man in terms of his own times."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 4 '40 1200w

"The work is literature-history of a high order, and each reader will consider it more of the one than of the other according to his own peculiar training and set of mind. Señor de Madariaga would be the last to claim finality for his study, and the future will accord it its proper place. Meanwhile, a work of combined analysis and inner perception for both historian and layman has made its appearance, and will be read by both with interest, thought, and profit." R. S. Chamberlain

+ Survey G 29:305 My '40 600w

Time 35:74 Ja 29 '40 400w

"It is necessary to issue precautions against the too hasty acceptance of Señor de Madariaga's principal thesis, because, once the reader surrenders himself to it, it proves so immensely seductive. As exhibited through the last three-quarters of eloquent and sympathetic writing, a Jewish Columbus rings true all the time. The hypothesis seems to illuminate every corner of this extraordinary character."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p675 N 18 '39 900w

Wis Lib Bul 36:98 My '40

MAGARET, HELENE. Father De Smet, pioneer priest of the Rockies. 371p map $3 Farrar

B or 92 Smet, Pierre Jean de. Indians of North America—Missions 40-29581

Father De Smet was a Belgian Jesuit missionary to the Indians of the American northwest. He established St Mary's Mission among the Flathead Indians in Montana, discovered gold in the Black Hills, and later served as a chaplain in the United States army. This biography of him covers the years from 1839, when he made a trip up the Missouri on a mission of peace to the Sioux, to his death in 1873. Chronological table.

"Though the dialogs and the changes of temper and thought are perhaps not always the exact ones the characters knew, the author seldom slips off the historical trail. Under the pen of his sympathetic biographer, who apparently is not a Catholic, De Smet emerges from the desiccating atmosphere of scholarship into the public eye, more lifelike than he has seemed since he published his Voyages Aux Montagnes-Rocheuses and toured Europe and the United States for funds and helpers." J. A. Mackin

+ America 64:415 Ja 18 '41 370w

Booklist 37:174 Ja 1 '41

"Helene Magaret, poet but certainly not historian has found in the career of Father De Smet material for an epic. Basing her narrative upon a none-too-reliable journal, she has allowed her imagination full play. . . Truth and fiction are so intermingled that the total picture is thoroughly unreliable either as a biography of Father De Smet or as a history of the Catholic missionary effort. But the story as a story gains in interest by the imaginery conversations, the over-colored incidents and the distorted estimates of her hero. In spite of too much sectarian ardor and bad overwriting at times, the book makes good reading." Avery Craven

+ — Books p9 D 29 '40 700w

"This dramatic narrative reads like a novel. . . Helene Magaret has not written a complete life of Father De Smet. That has been done before. Her pages weave together for us in vivid narrative those incidents of his long career which made him famous." J. C. Ford

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 4 '41 240w

"The book is not only a beautiful tribute to a man of vision, courage, and steadfast faith; it is also a fascinating and readable account of pioneer days west of the Missouri." A. L. Graham

+ Library J 65:1087 D 15 '40 200w

"The general literary virtues of Miss Magaret's book, if they are not deeper than wells or wider than church doors, are enough and will serve. Accounts of events and scenes are rich in concrete detail, judiciously planted, and communicated without pretense or undue histrionics. Occasionally a stylistic absurdity is encountered . . . but on the whole the writing is solid and good. The character of Father De Smet is conceived, no doubt, in a spirit of not too critical piety and within a limited range of analysis and understanding, but the conception, so far as it goes, is sincere and free from Y. M. C. A. catchwords and moralizings." E. S. Forgotson

+ — Nation 152:51 Ja 11 '41 500w

"This is wide-ranging Americana, recounted with a strong feeling for the poetic values of the material."
New Yorker 16:64 D 28 '40 50w

MAGNER, JAMES ALOYSIUS. For God and democracy. 158p $1.50 Macmillan

261.7 Sociology, Christian. Church and state. Roman Catholics in the U.S. 40-33349

A discussion of the role Roman Catholics should play in the public and social life of the United States. The book is in two parts: Catholic attitudes in a democracy, and Catholic action in a democracy.

"Father Magner's style is pleasing. He does not flame, neither does he smolder. He glows with a steady, serene light that illumines his subject with reason and common sense. To him democracy is a way of life, besides being a political system, just as Catholicism is a way of life, besides being a dogmatic structure. Catholics owe him a debt of gratitude for furnishing them with a manual of good living, one that can be used for private reading, as well as for Catholic libraries and study clubs." W. P.
+ Cath World 152:498 Ja '41 550w

"It would be hard to overpraise this volume. . . Dr. Magner's viewpoint is at once that of theologian, philosopher and sociologist, although in treating the more domestic duties he purposely uses at times a popular, even colloquial approach. His book is the fruit of deep scholarship and wide practical knowledge, of a highly idealistic concept of Catholic life and a realistic facing of its actual shortcomings." Katherine Brégy
+ Commonweal 32:494 O 4 '40 600w

MAIER, JOSEF. On Hegel's critique of Kant. 108p $1.50 Columbia univ. press [7s 6d Oxford]

193 Hegel, Georg Wilhelm Friedrich. Kant, Immanuel 39-31564

This brief, but compact, study offers an interpretation and critical evaluation of Hegel's criticisms of some of the decisive concepts of the Kantian philosophy. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Werkmeister
Ethics 50:484 Jl '40 260w

"Dr. Maier has done well to focus his scholarship upon a problem of such general interest. The relation of Hegel to Kant, already illuminated by an extensive but scattered literature, receives a new clarification in his book." V. J. McG.
+ J Philos 37:190 Mr 28 '40 310w

"This interesting and instructive study contrasts Hegel's 'dialectical idealism' with Kant's 'critical dualism,' with regard to the concrete historical setting of each as well as its abstract logic, and with especial reference to the changes which Hegel's thought underwent." Charles Hartshorne
+ J Religion 20:106 Ja '40 340w

MAINWARING, DANIEL (GEOFFREY HOMES, pseud). Finders, keepers. 279p $2 Morrow 40-9312

Detective story.

"Pleasing will-and-murder tale, with a claimant of problematical origin, a skeleton, the corpse of a millionaire, a romance of the past, a dash of modern love, California scenery and a big surprise among the ingredients. . . Mr. Homes provides some rousing melodrama near the end of this sprightly number." Will Cuppy
+ Books p21 Mr 31 '40 180w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p19 Mr 31 '40 170w

"Sinuously plotted, bright with dialogue and snapping with action down to final big scene in hospital bed room. There's romance, too. Swell."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:32 Ap 6 '40 50w

MAJOR, HARLAN. Salt water fishing tackle; with special chapters by August Primo Livenais, jr, and George W. Garey. 284p il $5 (25s) Funk

799.1 Fishing—Implements and appliances 39-33276

"The first chapter is an excellent resumé of man's first fishing equipment which takes us from the most primitive sharpened wooden spear to the first discovery of the split bamboo rod. . . Another chapter takes us through the development and use of modern tackle. . . Chapter V is titled 'The Human Side of Fish,' which is not wholly an anthropomorphic essay, but deals chiefly with such common attributes as hunger, play, excitement, fear and anger." Books

"Amid the never-ending spate of books on angling, this volume at once finds a place for itself, unoccupied and waiting. . . Major's book has hardly an I or me or mine in it. He treats the sport of kings and presidents from the most general angle and thereby conveys a feeling of impersonal confidence in all he writes." William Beebe
+ Books p18 O 1 '39 800w
Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '40

MAJOR, RALPH HERMON. Faiths that healed. 290p il $3 Appleton-Century

615.851 Medicine, Magic, mystic, and spagiric. Faith cure. Witchcraft 40-5965

Chapters on some of the many incidents in history in which the close relationship between disease and its cure and a religious faith has been manifested. One chapter deals with the miracles of Lourdes, another with the dancing mania of the middle ages, and another, related to this, the children's crusades. There is a chapter on the origins of Christian Science and one on the witchcraft period in Salem, Massachusetts. Index.

"This book should prove a wholesome antidote for those who are inclined to magnify the wisdom of the human race. . . The book is well illustrated and gotten up. On page 105, the name of the clergyman who fasted should be Israel Harding Noe. It is written for the laity but can be read with advantage by professional men of all callings." M. P. Ravenel
+ Am J Pub Health 30:696 Je '40 550w

"Dr. Major has a critical but not a skeptical mind. He does not wave away all alleged marvels as impossible. The evidence, he thinks, is that many of the cures and other phenomena which cannot be explained in terms of physical or medical science are genuine. The curing power is the patients' faith."
Christian Century 57:353 Mr 13 '40 190w

Reviewed by A. L. Byron-Curtiss
Churchman 154:18 Je 15 '40 120w

"The volume is calculated to satisfy morbid curiosity rather than to edify the faithful or to satisfy the scientific mind." E. L. Keyes
Commonweal 31:499 Mr 29 '40 290w

"The book is frankly a miscellany. Dr. Major has not only not set out to prove a central point; he has not even held his material to any central theme more specific than faith itself."
N Y Times p18 Mr 17 '40 600w

MALAM, CHARLES. Wagon weather; poems. 68p $1.50 Kaleidograph

811 39-31906

The third book of verse of this Vermont poet is composed mainly of poems of nature and

MALAM, CHARLES—Continued
Vermont life, with an undercurrent of war, nevertheless.

"Charles Malam's Vermont lyrics are so good that it is hard to say why they just fall short of first-class rating. Perhaps the work of other New England poets, especially Robert Frost's, speaks so firmly that it is not easy for a less positive voice to make itself heard. Or it may be that Mr. Malam, whose perception is sharp enough and whose technique is accomplished enough, has not quite the singular flavor, the unmistakable individual touch necessary in this particular field."
+ — Books p16 F 11 '40 160w

"New England can stand more writers like Charles Malam, who appreciate the local scene and yet look with understanding upon the problems that confound society." A. M. J.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 7 '40 160w

MALLETTE, GERTRUDE ETHEL. Single stones; il. by Norman Reeves. 296p $2 Doubleday 40-30967

Story for older girls about the daughter of a famous doctor, who is herself a fourth year medical student. Marcia is assistant to her father in his experiments on a dreaded disease. "A good career story, natural in its dialog, and one which should be a step up from the Sue Barton books." (Booklist)

Booklist 37:75 O 15 '40

"The love of the doctor for his profession is well portrayed, but just what the particular research in this book is to accomplish and just what Marcia does in the laboratory is not clear. The plot seems confused but the people are real. A good vocational story but less effective than others." J. F. Carter
+ — Library J 65:881 O 15 '40 110w

"The story lacks the individual characterization which warmed the author's 'No Vacancies,' perhaps because of the very nature of its subject. Marcia's personality is reflected chiefly from test tubes and specimen slides, but, even so, her fight against time, distraction and weariness, in the cause of medicine is told with a mounting tensity and a clarity of detail which claim and hold the attention as closely as the complicated plot of a mystery story." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p10 S 29 '40 320w
Wis Lib Bul 36:154 N '40

MALMBERG, BERTIL. Ake and his world; tr. from the Swedish by Marguerite Wenner-Gren; il. by Barbara Cooney [introd. by Stephen Vincent Benét]. 176p $2 Farrar 40-6540

Study of a small Swedish boy during his fifth and sixth years, describing life as it seemed to him. Ake was a very real little boy, a combination of angel and devil, who got into scrapes and got out of them; who was cruel unwittingly, and sympathetic with others when he himself was hurt. For adult readers.

Booklist 36:365 My 15 '40
Bookmark 2:13 Ja '41

"This is not a child's book; it is one of the world's best books about a child. . . It is worth the while of any one to look into the world of this child, and he cannot save himself the effort by giving the book to a child to read. For the one reason this is not a child's book is that it is a study of childhood. Children do not study themselves. Shades of the prison house of introspection may close upon the growing boy; the little child ranges free. As this one, unknowing, goes about the strange new business of living in a world where grown-ups live, Bertil Malmberg has studied him with a tenderness in which no shadow of sentimentality can be found." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 Mr 17 '40 550w

" 'A small but unforgettable masterpiece'—from a notable Swedish poet. Try to ignore the pictures as you read it. The book itself is a revelation of childhood. The illustrations are disappointing if regarded as interpretive. The Three Owls say the book should have had no illustrations but a typography carefully considered. To savor it fully one must read it aloud." A. C. Moore
+ — Horn Bk M 16:101 Mr '40 90w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:845 O 15 '40 30w

"It is a book of a child, of childhood, of the world a child sees and knows. And in his sensitiveness and penetration and perceptive memory the author has not only caught childhood itself within the covers of his book but has been able to picture the complex scene of adult reality through its transmutation in a child's eyes. The child's logic is not ours, nor his emphases, nor his limitations; but his world is utterly genuine. . . The many drawings are charming, also; lively, beguiling and quaint. This is a book to read many times, I think Ake and his world are here to stay." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p4 Mr 17 '40 1050w

"Bland and a mite sugary."
New Yorker 16:86 Mr 23 '40 70w

"Ake's whole world is magical; and the world will be magical to every reader, for a while at least after he reads this book." Basil Davenport
+ Sat R of Lit 21:17 Ap 13 '40 700w

MALONE, DUMAS. Edwin A. Alderman; a biography. 392p pl $3.50 Doubleday
B or 92 Alderman, Edwin Anderson 40-32495

The subject of this biography was a Jeffersonian democrat, a Southern educator, and is described as "the most conspicuous spokesman of the South in his day and the noblest interpreter of the section to itself and the outside world." He served as president of the University of North Carolina from 1896 to 1900; president of Tulane from 1900 to 1904, and of the University of Virginia for the remaining twenty-seven years of his life. Index.

"Excellently written and finely balanced biography." Virginius Dabney
+ Books p7 N 10 '40 1300w

Reviewed by L. B. Bloch
Living Age 359:383 D '40 750w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers
N Y Times p4 O 27 '40 1150w

MALONE, PAUL BERNARD. Barbed wire entanglements. 397p $2.50 Stackpole sons 40-14426

A tale of the American participation in the first World war. The hero of the author's series of West Point stories, Douglas Atwell, reappears in this story as an officer in a regiment of fighting Yankees on the French front.

Boston Transcript p8 Ag 31 '40 20w

"The author has chosen to use the last chapter as an argument against our entry into foreign wars and our need for avoidance of 'barbed-wire entanglements.' Except for the last chapter, the book tells a story of average character about the World war, and the last chapter, while no doubt expressing the author's honest convictions, adds nothing to the story."
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '40 220w

MALOTT, DEANE WALDO, and MARTIN, BOYCE FICKLEN. The agricultural industries. 483p $4 McGraw 338.1 Agriculture—Economic aspects. Farm produce. U.S.—Industries and resources 40-1402

"This volume on the agricultural industries is designed to present the business aspects of purchasing, processing, financing, and marketing the chief agricultural raw materials entering into American industry and commerce, and to analyze the business problems peculiar to these industries because of their economic, political, and social significance in the life of the nation. . . It is the aim of the writers to present in brief compass the historical development, statistical position, technical processes, handling methods, and relations to government necessary to an analysis and understanding of the problems faced by the executives in these industries." (Pref) Selected bibliography. Index.

"The reader who is already fairly well acquainted with the production and marketing channels of the main agricultural products will probably feel, with the reviewer, that the authors would have made a far greater contribution if they had confined themselves to a more careful analysis of the narrower field of processing alone, where much certainly yet needs to be done. As it is, a very important part of the book is of necessity merely repetition of materials already adequately covered in some of the better agricultural marketing textbooks, at the expense of a more careful analysis of the processing 'bottleneck' in the movement from farm to consumer where concentration of control is most marked. . . The dairy industry is inadequately treated, especially for products other than fluid milk. So broad is the ground covered that very little insight is given into the operating problems of the leading dairy products distributors. . . Finally, the authors find 'overcapacity' in a number of the leading processing industries, but present little or no analysis showing to what extent the price of production policies of the firms in these industries brought this about." W. H. Nicholls

— Am Econ R 30:147 Mr '40 750w

Nature 146:504 O 19 '40 500w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:3 Ja '40

MALOY, LOIS. The star wish [il. by the author]. 109p $1.50 Scribner

40-30570

Ned and Nancy spent a summer on a New Hampshire farm and every night they made a secret wish upon a star. Their father suspected the wish was for a Shetland pony, and so the wish came true.

Booklist 37:123 N 15 '40

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:848 O 15 '40 30w

"A wholesome family story which imparts a real feel of the country and reveals the kindliness and neighborliness of its people. Will be enjoyed by both boys and girls eight to ten." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 65:880 O 15 '40 50w

MALOY, LOIS, and DALGLIESH, ALICE. Wooden shoes in America. [72p] il $1.75 Scribner

(W) 40-27278

Story-picture book for young readers showing the various phases of life in the Dutch colony of New Amsterdam. The chief characters are two little children recently come from Holland and eager to learn about this strange new life.

Booklist 36:309 Ap 1 '40

"This is the third of a series of pictorial introductions, for small children, to the beginnings and early development of American history. I have found them all useful, but this I find the prettiest. It fits into the series but is entirely on its own. A little child who has it now, will be more likely later to read Dietrich Knickerbocker with sympathy." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 14 '40 270w

"The many attractive colored pictures show careful study of the historical background. They will give children a lively idea of the Dutch founders of New York." A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 16:164 My '40 110w

"Generously illustrated with a picture on every page, some of which are in blue and white and eleven in four colors, this large book will be useful in lower grades where material on the Colonial period is always in demand." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 65:303 Ap 1 '40 100w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:846 O 15 '40 20w

"Many children have a curiosity about the details of life of earlier days, and they will have here in simple descriptive sentences an answer to their interest, and in the decorative pictures which are as informative as the text, but the book as a whole lacks the general appeal which a sustained narrative holds for younger children." E. L. Buell

N Y Times p9 Je 9 '40 280w

New Yorker 16:96 My 18 '40 20w

MALTZ, ALBERT. The underground stream. 349p $2.50 Little

40-9313

Novel written around the labor troubles in Detroit in 1936, describing the struggle for union recognition before the C.I.O. had taken a hand in organizing the auto industry. The chief characters are the Fascist personnel manager of an automobile plant, and a Communist organizer who chooses to die rather than betray his party.

"Fanatic and single-eyed though the book may be, it says something worth thinking about."

— + Atlantic Ag '40 170w

Booklist 36:429 Jl 15 '40

"Maltz has caught the rhetoric and incoherence of the Fascist perfectly. . . It is not easy to evaluate 'The Underground Stream' as fully as one would wish. Its power and harsh excitement do not obscure a certain banality in Maltz's thinking, or many perceptions in his book that are sensitive in intention but awkward in effect. . . There are many qualities lacking in 'The Underground Stream,' qualities that have been popular with proletarian Homers, but qualities one would dearly love to see in the American novel. Yet, what Maltz has to say is important, and he says it strikingly. There are other virtues in the novel, other ambitions, greater excellences; these may be enough at the moment, these are warm and arresting now." Alfred Kazin

+ — Books p5 Je 30 '40 1200w

"'The Underground Stream' is head and shoulders above the 'proletarian novels' of recent years both in originality of conception and in dramatic power. It is terse, earthy, exciting. It makes, to be sure, initial assumptions that most of us are unwilling to accept; it identifies the 'integrity' and 'self-respect' toward which Princey works with acceptance of Communist party 'discipline,' without ever discussing the goals toward which that discipline is directed. But the larger theme—'man does not live by politics alone,' but yearns for identification with something larger than himself—is the stuff of which great novels are made." Lewis Gannett

+ — Boston Transcript p13 Je 26 '40 750w

Reviewed by E. B. Garside

Boston Transcript p1 Je 29 '40 750w

Reviewed by K. M. Chworowsky

+ Christian Century 57:1080 S 4 '40 470w

Reviewed by Rebecca Pitts

New Repub 103:92 Jl 15 '40 490w

"As the story takes a powerful hold on the reader, one realizes that here is a book that has nothing in common with other labor novels. Here is no morbidity, no impressionism, no grim hopelessness. Mr. Maltz has dared to discard the familiar slogans and dogma, and even the basic materialism, and has built his story around his sure sense of human values, around a knowledge of the things for which men strive and which make their lives worth living." Harold Strauss

MALTZ, ALBERT—Continued
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 7 '40 1150w

"The sections dealing with country-club society are indescribably naive, but Mr. Maltz's workers are real. If you discount the heroics, the book has considerable power."
+ — New Yorker 16:70 Je 29 '40 80w

"Mr. Maltz has never denied his party bias, but it explains in part why 'The Underground Stream' fails so completely. His earlier short stories were less concerned with ways out of depression than with depression itself; his present, first novel, is frankly communist—and stands or falls by his treatment of that theme." Louis Filler
Sat R of Lit 22:18 Jl 13 '40 600w

MAMMEN, EDWARD WILLIAM, The Buttons go walking; il. by Jessie Robinson. unp $1.25 Harper 40-27702

Nonsense picture-story book about the Button family. They insisted on taking their Sunday walks all six of them together, thereby causing traffic jams, until Mr Pim, the junkman, cleared up the difficulty. For ages four to six.

Booklist 37:76 O 15 '40

"The Buttons will be an addition to any rural community—and to a little child's bookshelf. For gayety of text and pictures will appeal at once to him and perhaps, when he is older, he may realize that there was more sense in the story than met his eye at the time." M. L. Becker
+ Books p10 N 24 '40 140w

"The complexities of the Buttons' Sunday walk are described in engaging repetitive style which should appeal to children from five to seven. Humorous black and white drawings by Jessie Robinson are generously interspersed through the text. The book is oversize and well bound in cloth. Recommended for picture book collections in larger libraries." M. M. Clark
+ Library J 65:927 N 1 '40 90w

"This unpretentious, friendly little story has a touch of humor that is genuinely childlike, and boys and girls find great amusement in studying the many drawings—sometimes three to a page—which illustrate cleverly and humorously the struggles of the Button family to attain complete unity of action." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p7 D 29 '40 230w

MANGUM, CHARLES STAPLES. The legal status of the Negro. 436p $5 Univ. of N.C. press [22s 6d Oxford]
325.26 Negroes—Law 40-10933

Survey of the laws, statutes and cases, concerning the Negroes in the United States, and their relations with other races in the various states, since the Civil war. The book is the first systematic presentation of the legal status of the Negro in the United States since Stephenson's Race Distinctions in American Law (Book Review Digest, 1910). Bibliography. Index. No table of cases and statutes.

Reviewed by H. C. Nixon
Am Pol Sci R 34:1213 D '40 460w

"It is quite likely that despite the objectivity of the author, students of race relations may not find themselves in complete agreement with him on a number of points. . . However, these are minor matters in view of the primary purpose of this book. Both student and layman are indebted to the author for this scholarly contribution which fills an important gap in our knowledge of race relations in this country." E. F. Frazier
+ — Ann Am Acad 212:269 N '40 600w

"[Mr Mangum's] work will be of value to social scientists, who now have a convenient and definitive reference work which encompasses all phases of the Negro's legal status; to attorneys interested in the civil rights of Negroes, who have often found it necessary to do repetitive and overlapping research jobs because of the absence of just such a convenient treatise; and to innumerable general practitioners, particularly in the South, where the peculiar legal consequences of pigmentation cause special problems to pop up in such prosaic matters as those involving torts, contracts, domestic relations, wills and the like. . . There is a tendency in the book, which in the opinion of this reviewer is unfortunate, to regard most points of law as being settled, and therefore to omit discussion of historical and theoretical background and of dissenting opinions in earlier cases." J. H. Spingarn
+ — Columbia Law R 40:1115 Je '40 1850w

"Though technical, as it must be to be authoritative in this field, Dr. Magnum's book is well written, and for the layman and social worker provides an accurate diagnosis of the Negro's secondary status, which is both the crux of his social and economic predicament in this country and the gauge of what is wrong with our democracy. From either of these points of view, then, the campaign for social reform and the scientific study of the Negro, the book may be regarded as a welcome and reliable aid." Alain Locke
+ Survey 76:343 N '40 270w

MANION, CLARENCE EDWARD. Lessons in liberty; a study of God in government. 297p $1.50 Univ. of Notre Dame
342.73 U.S.—Politics and government. Liberty. Political science 39-33505

A textbook in American government in which the author attempts to interpret not the "how" and "what" of government, the forms and methods, but the principle of government, the "why." Written by a Roman Catholic, professor of constitutional law at the University of Notre Dame, the book argues that the American Constitution, in so far as it protects certain inalienable rights of the individual, is carrying out God's purpose. Index.

"Professor Manion ventures to use the rather startling subtitle, 'A Study of God in Government'; breaks up his grave discussion into a series of brief and clearly stated articles and employs throughout a lively, imaginative, almost conversational style. It will be difficult to find another book on the same subject sounder in its teaching, or easier to read."
+ Cath World 151:634 Ag '40 150w

Reviewed by T. F. Woodlock
Commonweal 31:102 N 17 '39 400w
Foreign Affairs 18:754 Jl '40 30w

MANN, ERIKA. The lights go down; tr. by Maurice Samuel; il. by John O'Hara Cosgrave, II. 282p $2.50 Farrar
(W) 40-27404

Ten stories picturing life in Nazi Germany. A typical Bavarian town serves as the scene, and with this as background the author presents the stories of a lawyer, a doctor, a writer, a peasant, an innkeeper, a clergyman, a small tradesman, and others. She shows them struggling blindly and ineffectually against the hold of the Nazi power.

Booklist 36:398 Je 15 '40

Reviewed by Jean Garrigue
Books p11 Ap 21 '40 1100w

"The fourth of Miss Mann's books on the Germany she left behind . . . is, I think, one of the few really successful blends of fact and story. Miss Mann's chief interest is in the facts. Indeed, that is what she wanted to call her book. I am glad she didn't, for few would be attracted to such a title, and nobody who cares about what happens today ought to miss what she has to say." Ann Springer

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 18 '40 480w

Reviewed by Earle Birney

Canadian Forum 20:92 Je '40 600w

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 25 '40 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '40

"For some reason or other, this book does not ring true. . . It appears to this reviewer that the author was altogether unequal to the great task of portraying the death of freedom in Germany. Such a tragedy demands a much better treatment than the one given in this volume." Paul Kiniery

— Commonweal 32:172 Je 14 '40 310w

"No one can read the book without a feeling of terror at the many devious and insidious ways in which the poison of Nazism spreads. However, its tremendous emotional onslaught may, in spite of documentation, diminish the credulousness of some readers." A. C. Hansen

Library J 65:352 Ap 15 '40 140w

"Admiring the humanity of Miss Mann's convictions one yet wonders if her oversimplified approach to the problem of Nazism is not ultimately dangerous to the very cause she serves." William Gilmore

Nation 150:574 My 4 '40 460w

New Repub 102:681 My 20 '40 50w

"The Lights Go Down is naturally partial; perhaps too little weight is given to the other side, to the romance, if only a romantic pleasure in destruction, which must have succeeded in captivating the young. But its partiality is not doctrinaire; it is based, even a little too solidly, on the virtues of things as they were; and for this reason it is the best sort of introduction for the non-political older generation. That is not meant as faint praise. Each story, in fact, is vividly written and neatly contrived; the characters are drawn with a warm humanity and an understanding of the bases of ordinary life. Maurice Samuel's translation is commendably lively." T. C. Worsley

+ — New Statesman & Nation 20:316 S 28 '40 500w

"'The Lights Go Down' is by indirection a hopeful book. If the city of Miss Mann's choice is typical, it is the German people themselves who will come to the help of Germany. Lest readers may think that her examples of Nazi pronouncements are exaggerated, Miss Mann in an appendix gives their sources. The book is written in quiet vein, without undue accent or emphasis. These are facts; draw your own conclusions is virtually what Miss Mann says." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p7 My 5 '40 1000w

"A remarkable book."

+ New Yorker 16:91 Ap 27 '40 20w

"[Erika Mann's] aim is to reveal the truth behind the iron front of the Hitler regime. Her writing is frankly propagandistic, and her book, as she explains, is a book of facts. . . Her true stories are based on documentary material, on statistics, letters, reports from reliable witnesses, and personal experience. We do not mind the propagandistic tone of the book. Good, hot indignation and sarcasm, as expressed in Storm Jameson's recent novel, can be as valuable and constructive as calm objectivity. The disappointing part about Miss Mann's book is the slight, often careless manner in which she has dressed up her facts." Marianne Hauser

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:14 Ap 27 '40 440w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 165:228 Ag 30 '40 250w

Time 35:93 My 27 '40 250w

"The crudeness of form apart, the book—which is clearly well informed in many respects—impresses by its sincerity and good will. But it gives an impression, not uncommon where the writings of the anti-Nazi exile are concerned, of much deeper and more widespread discontent in Germany with Hitlerism and its works than evidence of a more objective character suggests."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p358 Jl 27 '40 420w

Wis Lib Bul 36:127 Jl '40

MANN, ERIKA, and MANN, KLAUS. The other Germany [tr. by Heinz-Norden]. 318p $2.75 Modern age

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. National characteristics, German (W) 40-27165

Erika and Klaus Mann ask sympathy for the "civilized Germany" that is suppressed and silent, while at the same time arraigning and condemning the Third Reich. They insist that "Hitler does not represent the German people, yet the Hitler catastrophe could not have been possible except for certain qualities and deficiencies of the German people." A chapter on the political philosophy of the Germans and their psychology is followed by a criticism of the Weimar Republic and an account of the rise to power of the Nazi regime, which "has turned a civilized land back into a jungle."

Booklist 36:262 Mr 1 '40

Reviewed by Ursula Wasserman

Books p7 F 18 '40 600w

Reviewed by Toni Christen

Nation 150:257 F 17 '40 1050w

"Altogether there are many illuminating sections in the book, though the Manns have done their best to discourage the reader from finding them. For many months Erika and Klaus have been lecturing, spending much of their time in Pullmans and on platforms. They have evidently forgotten that a book is not a lecture hall. They use various devices to tell their story—a counsel for the defense, a mythical person who makes long entries in a diary—which had been better left out. The organization of their material is not faultless. It isn't too much to say that Erika and Klaus still have a great deal to learn from their father." Shepard Stone

N Y Times p9 F 11 '40 900w

"Includes a brilliant exploratory operation on the German psyche. Almost painfully fair-minded."

+ New Yorker 15:71 F 3 '40 30w

"The eloquence of this book on 'the other Germany' often turns into glibness and superficial problem-blindness. . . These two gifted young writers would be well advised if they could spare some time from explaining things to Americans for a thorough study of the origins of Western liberties. Perhaps it would detract something from their trusting faith in the existence today of the 'other Germany.'" Toni Stolper

— Sat R of Lit 21:10 F 10 '40 1050w

Time 35:90 F 26 '40 200w

MANN, THOMAS. The beloved returns; Lotte in Weimar; tr. from the German by H. T. Lowe-Porter [Eng title: Lotte in Weimar]. 453p $2.50 Knopf [9s 6d Secker & Warburg]

Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von—Fiction. Kestner, Frau Charlotte (Buff)—Fiction (W) 40-27614

In 1816, more than forty years after Goethe had made her famous as the heroine of the Sorrows of Werther, Charlotte Kestner visited Weimar and asked to see the great man. On this incident Thomas Mann has based his portrait of a genius—Goethe—and a picture of the people who acknowledged him as hero.

"This book is a masterly tour de force in both conception and writing, and though perhaps the subject matter will be a stumbling-block to the general reader, it deals essentially with universal human nature and eternal human values."

+ Atlantic O '40 600w

Booklist 37:13 S '40

MANN, THOMAS—Continued

"Nobody but Thomas Mann could have dealt with the subject; it is a masterly performance, tender, humorous and wise." Isabel Paterson

+ Books p1 Ag 25 '40 1850w

"It is not the story that makes Mann's novel memorable; it is the incidental irony; the insight into the perverse nature of genius, its distortion of human relationships, its fitful productivity and superiority to routine virtues; the careful picture of a German provincial city just after the fall of Napoleon; the rippling comment on love, poetry and kissing; the casual remarks on German character, and on Goethe's conception of faithfulness in love. Thomas Mann's subtle understanding of human nature is too well established to suggest new comment. In or out of exile, he is Germany's greatest living writer, and perhaps the world's. But, reading this story in Mrs. Lowe-Porter's translation, and recalling that she has translated most of his books, I am again amazed that his reputation has succeeded in penetrating the fog of so stuffy and awkwardly Victorian a translator." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p11 Ag 28 '40 700w

Reviewed by G. K. Smart

Boston Transcript p1 S 7 '40 550w

"A portrayal of Goethe that should prove invaluable to every student of literature." M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 7 '40 600w

Reviewed by E. K. Shipler

Churchman 154:5 N 1 '40 100w

"A difficult book to read—perhaps unnecessarily so: doesn't Mann cite charm as the handmaiden of genius?—'The Beloved Returns' grows upon one in retrospect. Like the Joseph cycle, it is meticulously documented; generously sprinkled with profound or witty apercus; by no means merely adulatory when it deals with the moody, vain, selfish but nonetheless unique old man. Goethe, Lotte, August, Dr. Reimer, Lottchen—all are memorably human, for all their loquacity. Here we have the climax of a brilliant and enquiring mind's forty-year preoccupation with a profound and haunting subject." David Burnham

+ — Commonweal 32:411 S 6 '40 850w

Reviewed by S. E. Sherman

Library J 65:652 Ag '40 130w

"Grant leisure, and this novel, with its wealth of Weimar detail and its philosophical disquisitions, is not too long, but this detail is obscuring, and the Goethe of that final interview comes tardily to life after too closely resembling the wooden effigy of a great man who admired Napoleon. Lotte, however, is alive, and there is, if thinly, humour in the Weimar revealed to her by the waiter, the secretary, and the lady who cuts silhouettes of German society." Harold Brighouse

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 N 15 '40 300w

"Mann has written his novel out of the devoted passion of a lifetime, but he has written it more with ideas than with words—more with historical documentation than with the dramatic and poetic reality that would crystallize its central meaning and make its characters the immediate solvents of the mysterious complex of aesthetic vision. Yet 'The Beloved Returns,' short as it is in imaginative grace and critical lucidity, takes its place in the unity of Mann's whole work and thought. It brings to final terms his study of the artist's role in society, and in its patent autobiographical references it brings Goethe to take his place anew in a time of confusion and violence comparable to his own and even more desperately in need of his inspired sanity and passionate defense of human destiny." M. D. Zabel

+ Nation 151:175 Ag 31 '40 1200w

Reviewed by Harry Slochower

New Repub 103:532 O 14 '40 950w

"The novel is a magnificent imaginative reconstruction of one of the great key positions, so to say, in the map of modern culture. . . Mrs. Lowe-Porter has always maintained such a high level as a translator that the smallest lapses have a trick of standing out over-boldly. For instance: Good, good, you are in the right of it, one needs to watch out. This combines an archaism and an Americanism; they do not marry happily. Also, at the opening of the soliloquy, Goethe makes a rather broad remark which has been primmed almost into incomprehensibility." Brian Howard

+ — New Statesman & Nation 20:544 N 30 '40 1200w

"Into our somber world has come a new book by Thomas Mann of such illuminating joyousness as is seldom encountered, a joyousness replete with wisdom, a smiling earnestness that is all lightness in form but weighty in deep and mysterious implications. . . How will this novel appeal to Americans? It is possible that some of the allusions to Goethe's works may be overlooked, but there emerges from the pages of this volume such a hopeful view of man as master of his own fate that the reader cannot fail to be lifted above himself." A. E. Meyer

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 25 '40 4300w

"There are a number of things one can say of the book, the most important of which is also the simplest: this seems like a convincing portrayal of a great man. . . 'The Beloved Returns' is not intended to rank with Mann's major works and will probably prove neither as popular nor as enduring as 'The Magic Mountain' and 'Joseph and His Brothers.' Though too carefully done to be considered a jeu d'esprit, at times it makes you feel that here is a master diverting himself, giving free play to the more whimsical side of his talent. But, one must add, the diversion is that of a master. Behind all the book's humor and elegance and slyness lies the weight of one of the gravest and most responsible of living writers." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:52 Ag 31 '40 950w

Pratt p24 autumn '40

"Nowhere has Mann's elegant style moved more sinuously and gracefully. (Our reference is to the German original, published in Sweden.) It curls itself about intricacies of thought, expresses itself in the finest shadings, and while maintaining a basic tone takes on color in conformity with the situation and the characters it is representing. The neo-classic period, Goethe and all, breathes again in it: it sets Mann more firmly than ever in the rank of the Great German prosemen." Paul Rosenfeld

+ Sat R of Lit 22:5 Ag 24 '40 2700w

Discussion by Caroline Newton

Sat R of Lit 22:9 S 14 '40 230w

Reviewed by Herbert Read

Spec 165:504 N 15 '40 1050w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '40 1700w

"On the scale of such colossal fables as Joseph and The Magic Mountain this new novel must be classified as 'minor'; and, relative to their all-but-unfathomable subtleties, it might seem almost transparent. But it is by no means minor, by no means so straight-edged as it looks. To the readers whom it will bring to the edge of their chairs it will be no simpler than a serpent's eye: an elegant, cold, quietly appalling, enigmatic investigation of genius in its inmost nature and effects."

Time 36:60 Ag 26 '40 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p577 N 16 '40 750w

Wis Lib Bul 36:138 O '40

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:vi autumn '40 440w

MANN, THOMAS. This war [tr. from the German by Eric Sutton]. 68p $1 Knopf [1s 6d Secker & Warburg]

940.53 European war, 1939—Germany. National characteristics, German

(W) 40-27527

"A psychological rather than a political essay, this stirring pamphlet seeks to understand what drives the German nation as a whole to accept Hitler and his war, and to make clear the tragic doom the author feels will be theirs, win or lose." New Yorker

---

Booklist 36:396 Je 15 '40

Reviewed by R. H. Phelps
Boston Transcript p1 Je 1 '40 350w

Christian Science Monitor p22 Je 7 '40 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '40

New Yorker 16:94 My 25 '40 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 28 '40 220w

"A masterful piece of classical rhetoric, tinged, like much of [Mann's] work, with Goethean pompousness."
+ — Time 35:93 My 27 '40 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p202 Ap 27 '40 160w

MANN, WILFRED BASIL. The cyclotron; with a foreword by E. O. Lawrence. 92p il $1.50 Chemical pub. co. [3s Methuen]

541.2 Cyclotron 40-12824

"Dr. Mann, who is a lecturer in physics at the University of London, spent two years at the University of California with Professor Ernest Lawrence, Nobel prize-winner of 1939 and the designer of the 37-inch and the 60-inch cyclotron installed in that institution. This volume treating theoretically and practically of the subject justly emphasizes the work of Professor Lawrence, who writes an informative foreword concerning the future of such apparatus. There are 51 literature references." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Reviewed by S. C. Lind
J Phys Chem 44:828 Je '40 50w

Nature 145:1007 Je 29 '40 260w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:21 Ap '40

MANNHEIM, KARL. Man and society in an age of reconstruction; studies in modern social structure; with a bibliographical guide to the study of modern society. 469p $3.50 Harcourt [16s 6d Routledge]

301.15 Civilization. Sociology. Social psychology [40-13509]

"When Karl Mannheim was professor of sociology in the University of Frankfurt he believed in common with other German sociologists that the liberal and democratic countries were in a decadent state. Since 1934, however, he has lived in England and is now a member of the faculty of the University of London. Thus he has had an opportunity to consider the working of modern society in a country where liberal democracy functioned almost undisturbed. The result is a realistic description and theoretical analysis of what is happening in the contemporary transformation of society, ably presented from the point of view of a man for whom freedom and personal responsibility are the highest of all values." (Scientific Bk Club R) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by C. W. Mills
Am Soc R 5:965 D '40 2250w

Reviewed by C. D. Burns
Manchester Guardian p7 My 27 '40 400w

"This is a book of profound commonplaces, a characterization not intended as derogatory. Its chief value lies not in its conclusions, which are part of the liberal socialist outlook, but in the way in which it worries the problems. The bibliography of almost a hundred pages is useful." Sidney Hook
+ Nation 151:398 O 26 '40 380w

"Nowhere else can one find such a complete, up-to-date and well-reasoned analysis of the inevitability of planning, good and bad, and of its techniques." Julian Huxley
+ Nature 146:3 Jl 6 '40 1150w

"Professor Mannheim is a deep, an acute, and an original thinker in the realm of human society and the science of sociology. But his apparatus of thought and exposition is cumbrous, long-winded, pedantic, and scientific in the worst sense. You are forced to dig out the important and original truths which he has to tell us from under a verbal superstructure which, if it were not for the transparent honesty of the writer, one would imagine had been invented for the express purpose of obscuring them from us." Leonard Woolf
— + New Statesman & Nation 19:807 Je 29 '40 800w

"Dr. Mannheim's book is a stiff antidote to bewilderment in the present world crisis. It is not easy to take. Its concise analysis and compact erudition do not make easy reading. But it is also not easy to orient one's self to withstand the constant buffeting of this age of lightning change. . . Perhaps, if instead of England he had chosen the social laboratory that was Sweden as his place of exile, Dr. Mannheim's contribution to planning might be more than an elaborate expression of faith. For in the great social reforms of the past decade the Swedes have practiced what he preaches. By expanding and systematizing the Swedish technique of social progress, he might succeed in projecting the strategy of the coming age of reconstruction." J. D. Norton
N Y Times p16 N 17 '40 1000w

"The present book represents a combination of experiences in the two countries [Germany and England] by a man who is expert in all branches of social theory, who has an open mind, and who is capable of seeing conditions in two very different countries as parts of one and the same social world." John Dewey
+ Sat R of Lit 22:10 Ag 31 '40 750w

"Mannheim's penetrating study of Man and Society is made available in this country at a most opportune moment. His lucid presentation in well-chosen phrases of the social and psychological facts that underlie the present social order will go far toward dispelling the existing confusion in the minds of many and is in very truth a great contribution toward the strengthening of our first line of defense, a line that must be drawn in the realm of ideas and the area of policy rather than along any geographic boundary." A. H. Compton & others
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:1 Ag '40 750w

"Dr. Karl Mannheim is a sociologist, indeed, one of the most distinguished of living sociologists; and this massive work has the inexorable formality and complete apparatus . . . that one expects of continental scholarship. It is also difficult reading. . . The difficulty is due to a conscientious thoroughness, which prevents the author from passing any point until he has considered it from every aspect, and keeps the impatient reader marching at his own slow pace; it is also due to a judicial and remarkably impartial temper of mind, which refuses to present the difficult as if it were simple, or to allow prejudice or emotion to usurp the province of thinking. . . This is, in fact, a book which everyone seriously interested in the future of our society ought to read; and being the work of a mind not only powerful and learned, but intelligent and widely cultivated, and possessed of urbanity and wisdom, it is profitable reading quite independently of our prejudices either for or against the science of which the author is an exponent." T. S. Eliot
+ — Spec 164:782 Je 7 '40 1100w

"This important book, though not superficially topical (it has no mention of the war), is fundamentally relevant and appears opportunely, since the trend it studies is being hastened and made more obvious by the present hostilities. . . So firm, so clear-sighted a study, which evades no complexity, may demand stamina to read but it rewards with a steadying of nerves."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p270 Je 1 '40 1000w

MANNICHE, PETER. Denmark, a social laboratory; pref. by H. J. Fleure. 216p il $1.50 (5s) Oxford

309.1489 Denmark—Social conditions. Agriculture—Denmark [40-3913]

"Practical information on the operation of Danish agriculture, education, social legislation, coöperative institutions, etc." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by S. A. Anderson
Am Econ R 30:597 S '40 370w

Reviewed by B. A. Arneson
Am Pol Sci R 34:605 Je '40 290w

Reviewed by G. W. Hill
Am Soc R 5:978 D '40 240w

"The book includes 150 photographs illustrating life and conditions in Denmark and these alone should ensure it a place in the bag of every Canadian visitor to Scandanavia." Reg. Spink
+ Canadian Forum 19:227 O '39 460w

"Though the book, in general appearance, with its plethora of uninspiring photographs, sometimes suggests a prospectus, it has genuine information to give, which citizens of even the most prosperous nations cannot afford to ignore." H. J. S.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p22 F 21 '40 550w

Foreign Affairs 18:571 Ap '40 10w

Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 11 '39 260w

MANNING-SANDERS, RUTH (MRS GEORGE MANNING-SANDERS). Luke's circus. 464p $2.50 Little [8s 6d Collins]
(W) 40-27045

From earliest boyhood Luke knew that he wanted to own a circus and he resolutely set about fitting himself for a circus career. He had achieved his ambition when the war of 1914 came, calling a halt in his cherished plan —but only a temporary one, for after the war he made a new start with a midget circus. Glossary.

Booklist 36:214 F 1 '40

"The book is lavish in that kind of detail concerning the ways and means of existence in one special profession which lends an air of real solidity to fiction. There are also animals and adventures galore. . . A simple story, put together with cunning and serenity, it miraculously avoids the cloying insistence on exoticism which often makes circus stories vaguely ridiculous and incredible. 'Luke's Circus' is a nice tale of the good, old-fashioned variety which one puts down with a feeling of wistful regret." Iris Barry
+ Books p4 Ja 21 '40 1000w

"The novel has unflagging plot interest, much accurate information about circus life and a whole strange vocabulary, an oversimplified but nonetheless adequate view of human character, and a philosophy, which is that life is a circus and God, on the whole, a pleasant fellow who wears a shako."
+ — Boston Transcript p13 F 1 '40 140w

Canadian Forum 20:63 My '40 110w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 2 '40 250w

"It is an exceptionally well-written novel, with dozens of glowingly fine characterizations. But it is ineradicably sentimental." Robert Van Gelder
+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 21 '40 500w

New Yorker 15:71 Ja 20 '40 50w

"The story keeps one in almost constant good humor, although one suspects that Luke, like most people with a single interest, is a tiresome bore. Even such catastrophes as devastating storms, the fatal elephant stampede, and the horrible destruction of the novel's lovable character by an enraged lion, graze our nervous system rather than our deeper sensibilities. The somewhat trite love story almost intrudes, for love is quite incidental in the life of the hero, whose great love is the circus."
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:20 F 17 '40 400w

"The first half of the book is extremely well done. The atmosphere of the ring and of life on the roads has a sharp tang of authenticity, while the human members of this particular greatest show on earth, though they include a possibly abnormal proportion of chevaliers, rough diamonds and Galahads, are observed with quick feminine insight and sympathy. . . The magic of the circus, however, misses the later half of the book, which is on a distinctly lower level of invention."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p753 D 30 '39 750w

Wis Lib Bul 36:49 Mr '40

MANSFIELD, KATHERINE. Scrapbook; ed. by J. Middleton Murry. 280p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Constable]

828 (W) 40-27166

Final collection of Katherine Mansfield's unpublished work consisting of finished and unfinished stories, quotations, stray thoughts, intimate confessions, unposted letters, and other fragments, arranged in chronological order.

Atlantic Ap '40 90w

Booklist 36:263 Mr 1 '40

"Katherine Mansfield's beautiful clarity and piercing observation and sharpness of line are abundantly evidenced here. Those who have cherished her other books will want to own this one, too." Lorine Pruette
+ Books p7 F 11 '40 750w

Reviewed by Margaret Clark
Boston Transcript p2 F 10 '40 320w

"For two reasons this is something much better than the usual last sweeping-up of glittering fragments that leave us more with a sense of loss than of gain, and that reflect only a few random and fitful gleams from the genius and personality of the author. To begin with, as Mr. Murry goes on to claim, 'unfinished' is not really a term to be given to any of the literary pieces. . . Then, too, this collection of oddments does seem to fall into a pattern, and to present something like a bird's-eye view of the mental perspective of the writer." Eric Forbes-Boyd
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 23 '39 320w

"The scrapbook of an author in many ways is as interesting as the finished product, for it gives many indications of the primary interests, the methods of work, the casual and abiding loyalties of the writer. Katherine Mansfield's scrapbook is also valuable in giving us an understanding of her character, for there are many unguarded entries that her husband and editor has allowed to be divulged for the public that, it is reasonably certain, were not intended to be published. As grist for the mill of future students of literature they will undoubtedly serve as the bases of many theses and biographies." W. J. Grace
+ Commonweal 31:390 F 23 '40 400w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum
Forum 103:198 Ap '40 270w

"The word pictures are vivid, written by a master of modern English style. The book will be of interest primarily to those who are already acquainted with her work and to literary craftsmen." F. L. D. Goodrich
+ Library J 65:73 Ja 15 '40 90w

"Though this is indeed a book of scraps—unposted letters, unfinished stories, quotations from books, marginalia, jottings—it is a book much worth having. It is something richly and curiously personal, and it reveals someone who was specially concerned with being a woman and specially dedicated to being a writer. Nor is the book's scrappiness much of a drawback, since Katherine Mansfield was a creature of flashes and swift perceptions, and this volume is largely one of both." Louis Kronenberger
+ Nation 150:217 F 10 '40 900w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Repub 102:415 Mr 25 '40 700w

"The 'Scrapbook' is definitely a book for Katherine Mansfield enthusiasts, but for them it is beyond price. The 'general reader' remembers in fragments . . . but he lacks the imagination necessary to read fragments." Edward Wagenknecht

+ N Y Times p2 F 11 '40 1000w

New Yorker 15:80 F 10 '40 30w

"Some of the Mansfield charm is preserved here, but there is also a certain amount of sediment. Most of the verse is neither sufficiently poetic nor sufficiently clever to justify its being salvaged for posterity, and a good many of the prose tags simply take up space. Some readers may feel cheated because so much of the Scrapbook is made up of quotations from other authors, but there is little ground for complaint, for the quotations are in the main intensely interesting, most of them taken from the Russian writers." H. T. Moore

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:11 F 10 '40 700w

Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 8 '40 500w

Time 35:80 F 12 '40 80w

"This scrapbook of Katherine Mansfield's is an important book. It shows her in all her moods. The strong bent of her mind, her intense interest in the actual world around her and in its contradiction in the inward spirit, her sense, to the outward impression, of the conflict of both, and to the still, quiet talent within, of a possible reconciliation, give cohesion and a continuous dramatic excitement to these seemingly casual jottings."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p626 O 28 '39 800w

MANSON, THOMAS WALTER, ed. Companion to the Bible. 527p maps $5 Scribner [12s 6d Clark, T]

220 Bible. Whole

"Two types of material are included in this scholarly and useful volume: the religious content of the Bible, including the truths and teachings of both Judaism and Christianity; and the historical context in which these teachings appeared. The whole is divided into three parts: the book, including the nature and authority of Scripture, the biblical languages, and 'introduction' to the several books of the Old and New Testaments and the Apocrypha; the land and the people, including the geography and cultures of Palestine and Asia Minor, archaeological findings, and the history of Israel; and the religion of the Bible, treated in ten chapters on Judaism and Christianity." Christian Century

---

"The work is a well organized symposium representing some of the best of British scholarship."

+ Christian Century 57:386 Mr 20 '40 180w

Reviewed by G. F. Taylor
Churchman 154:22 S 15 '40 200w

"There must be very few books on the Bible that have been more worthy of publication than this one. Consisting of nineteen brilliantly written essays, contributed by fifteen Biblical scholars, the majority of whom belong to the front rank, it deals in a clear and authoritative manner with most of the important problems which have been raised by the study of the Bible during recent years. As such it will do much to help both the scholar and the layman to a fuller and a deeper understanding of the Biblical revelation as seen in its historical setting."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p216 My 4 '40 1000w

MANTELL, CHARLES LETNAM. Industrial electrochemistry. 2d ed 656p il $5.50 McGraw

660 Electrochemistry, Industrial 40-10995

"An advanced textbook and a reference book, rearranged and covering electrochemical development since 1931." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1932. Indexes.

Booklist 37:72 O 15 '40

"Dr. Mantell is to be complimented on the thoroughness with which he has covered the new processes and the new edition gives its readers a good conception of the improvements and development of the electrochemical industry during the last decade. The first edition has been a standard textbook and work of reference since its publication; rewritten, enlarged and up-to-date, the second edition will continue to be so." S. Skrowronski

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:508 Jl '40 400w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:47 O '40

MANTLE, BURNS, ed. The best plays of 1939-40; and the Year book of the drama in America. (V 21) 524p il $3 Dodd

808.82 Dramas—Collections. American drama—Collections. Theater—Yearbooks (20-21432)

Contains introductory chapters on the theatrical season in New York city, Chicago, San Francisco, and Southern California. Excerpts from the following plays are given: There Shall Be No Night, by R. E. Sherwood; Key Largo, by Maxwell Anderson; The World We Make, by Sidney Kingsley; Life with Father, by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse; The Man Who Came to Dinner, by G. S. Kaufman and Moss Hart; The Male Animal, by James Thurber and Elliott Nugent; The Time of Your Life, by William Saroyan; Skylark, by Samson Raphaelson; Margin for Error, by Clare Boothe; Morning's at Seven, by Paul Osborn. Data for all plays produced in New York city from June 18, 1939 to June 18, 1940. Indexes.

Booklist 37:134 D 1 '40

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p31 D 8 '40 90w

Reviewed by Frederick Morton
Theatre Arts 25:76 Ja '41 460w

MARAIS, EUGENE NIELEN. My friends the baboons. 124p $1.75 McBride [5s Methuen]

599.82 Baboons [40-27528]

Study of South African baboons, especially one troop at Doornhoeck which the author observed over a period of time. He discusses their communal life, the courage of the tribal leaders, their care of the young members of the troop, their actions when a member becomes a victim of their greatest enemy—the leopard—their courtship, and reactions to death in their midst. Index.

Booklist 36:408 Jl 1 '40

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '40 90w

"A sympathetic and fascinating study of a community of animals secure for a while from man, though still exposed to the terror of the leopard that walks by night." H. G. Maurice

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 24 '39 330w

"The author develops his theme skilfully; in particular there is a most illuminating chapter on tribal law and government; but the general similarity between man and the apes is clearly shown throughout the whole book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p735 D 16 '39 60w

MARCHAND, MARGARET. Pilgrims on the earth. 350p $2.50 Crowell

40-7422

"A novel about the men who came to the steel mills of Pennsylvania at the close of the last century. . . Against this background, Miss Marchand tells the tale of Leath Erin, bastard daughter of Doon Slane . . . and Brian Quinn. . . Leath is 9 years old when her grandmother, hating the Quinns, set spark to the tinder of the feud when she hears that Doon and Brian are planning to marry. There is a battle on the streets of South Vulcan and three persons pay

MARCHAND, MARGARET—Continued
with their lives. . . Leath Erin, pointed out as the cause of the event, grows up in her grandmother's shack, continually shadowed by her past. The ending when she is 17 is a happy one, although the intervening years are not." N Y Times

---

Reviewed by Frances Richmond
Books p12 My 12 '40 550w

"Miss Marchand is at her best in portraying the self-contained life of the Irish in an American community. In speech, manners, customs they are no different from their kin overseas. She is less effective in the larger background of the steel industry. The Irish come to life under her pen but not the economic picture of which they form a part." Rose Feld
+ — N Y Times p22 Ap 28 '40 500w

"The murder of Leath's father, Brian Quinn, the bitterness between the Catholics and Protestants . . . even these things do not move one more than might the telling of a very ancient legend—too remote for pain. Why this is, it is difficult to say, since the elements of a strong and moving story are present. Each character is carefully done, differentiated and credible enough, human enough—yet somehow one is reminded vaguely of the prince, the princess, and the old witch of the fairy tale." J. W. Johnson
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:16 Ap 27 '40 430w

MARDER, ARTHUR JACOB. The anatomy of British sea power. (Bur. of int. research of Harvard univ. and Radcliffe college. Publications) 595p maps $5 Knopf

359 Great Britain—Navy—History. Great Britain—History, Naval. Great Britain—History—Victoria, 1837-1901 40-35002

A study of British naval policy during the period from 1880 to 1905 a period which witnessed the transition from wooden ships and ironclads to armored vessels of steel construction. Index.

"Rarely, in these flamboyant times, does a reviewer meet a volume titled with such precise accuracy as this one. Here the patient hand of research, with infinite labor and exhaustive care, has provided an 'anatomy' of British naval policy from 1880 to 1905. The work is as exact, as carefully detailed and documented, as a good anatomical treatise and, one fears, almost as lifeless." Walter Millis
+ — Books p10 Ja 12 '41 700w

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 23 '40 600w

Nation 151:664 D 28 '40 80w

"A scholarly job, but not formidable."
New Yorker 16:90 N 30 '40 50w

MARIANO, JOHN HORACE. The Wagner act. 229p $2.50 Hastings house

331.154 Labor laws and legislation—U.S. Trade unions—U.S. U.S. National labor relations board 40-8986

"Only approximately one-third of the contents of this little book deals with the Wagner act. Three other essays, dealing with labor injunctions, labor's attitude toward the judiciary and labor as a political party, cover two-thirds of the volume; and the discussion of these matters has only the loosest relationship to the subject of the Wagner act." Am Econ R

"The book is uneven in content and labors under the handicap of a clumsy and turgid presentation. There is much moralizing throughout the volume. . . The volume is intended as a popular exposition, but its tone and content are pedantic rather than exploratory. Except perhaps for the discussion of labor injunctions, there is little analysis or theoretical exposition for the informed. Subjects are touched upon only to be released with a pinch and a good word." Gustav Peck
Am Econ R 30:635 S '40 370w

"Dr. Mariano's contribution to our current sum-total of information must be accepted as fundamental, aye, essential. It is popularly written and clear as springwater. The objective student will be grateful for the flood of light thrown on the several problems discussed and for the absence of heat." J. P. Boland
+ Commonweal 32:154 Je 7 '40 500w

Reviewed by Arthur Feiler
Survey G 29:520 O '40 40w

MARITAIN, JACQUES. Preface to metaphysics; seven lectures on being. 152p $1.75 (6s) Sheed

111 Ontology. Metaphysics 40-6096

"This work by M. Maritain is announced as being in the direct line of the 'Introduction to Logic' which appeared some two years ago and of the much earlier 'Introduction to Philosophy.' The author's ultimate scheme envisages a work on 'each of the great branches of Scholastic Philosophy,' and the 'lessons' which constitute the present monograph are represented as 'the elements of what may some day be the volume on Metaphysics.' Their brevity supports the inference that they are intended as the nucleus of a work on a larger scale." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"It is regrettable that Professor Maritain's eagerly awaited 'introduction' to metaphysics should have failed to get beyond being a 'preface,' for the seven lectures here reprinted are stimulating and original. . . The book is, as usual, brilliantly written. One cannot say that the translation is perfect. Cloudy passages here and there may be attributed to the extreme difficulty of finding precise equivalents in English for French terms, and some of the trouble no doubt arises in Maritain's own mind. But even the layman can read and feel himself either decently challenged into dissent or beguiled into agreement." G. N. Shuster
+ Books p18 Mr 24 '40 750w

"This book is earnestly recommended to all who are studying or ever have studied metaphysics. Even though it is only a preface, it deserves to be read with all the thoroughness that Mortimer Adler requires for reading the best books." J. F. C.
+ Cath World 151:371 Je '40 550w

Reviewed by Robert Hamilton
Hibbert J 39:112 O '40 500w

Reviewed by W. A. Christian
J Religion 20:395 O '40 500w

"It need hardly be emphasized that the form and content of these lectures as a whole are supremely worthy of one of the great philosophers of our epoch."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ja 6 '40 600w

MARITAIN, JACQUES. Scholasticism and politics [translation ed. by Mortimer J. Adler]. 248p $2 Macmillan [10s 6d Bles]

194 Scholasticism. Political science. Sociology, Christian

"This book makes available to the general reader the nine lectures which M. Maritain delivered at the University of Chicago in the fall of 1938. The topics range from a critique of logical empiricist and Marxist theories of science to a consideration of the problems of Catholic action and the historical function of Christianity. The central conception of the lectures is that of the human person. As involving matter the human being is an individual, as animated by a spiritual soul he is a person. What is decisive is the direction in which he is drawn, whether toward material dispersion or spiritual unity with God." J Philos

---

"While these lectures are necessarily subtle and philosophic, the form in which they are cast exacted clarity and compression. One cannot say that Professor Adler has always succeeded in finding the right English equivalents for terse and packed French phrases. Some of his sentences 'limp a little in the note,' as Anthony Munday remarked of his poems. But a greater measure of justice has been done Maritain's original statement than has been customary in the past." G. N. Shuster

+ — Books p22 N 17 '40 650w

Reviewed by Joseph Calderon
Commonweal 33:211 D 13 '40 800w

J Philos 37:638 N 7 '40 850w

"It is not easy reading, and no one without a taste for technical discussions of philosophy will bear with it." A. W. J.
Manchester Guardian p7 N 8 '40 270w

New Yorker 16:102 N 16 '40 30w

Survey G 30:39 Ja '41 550w

Time 36:59 O 28 '40 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p528 O 19 '40 700w

MARITAIN, JACQUES. Science and wisdom [tr. into English by Bernard Wall]. 241p $3 Scribner [10s 6d Bles]

194 Philosophy. Ethics

"[M. Maritain's] aim is to attain to a genuinely Christian philosophy, and this book is in the main a plea for the possibility of such a philosophy. Working, as he does, within the framework of ideas supplied by Aristotle and St. Thomas, he considers that this philosophy should be a science, or rather a set of sciences. To complete the set there must be added the supreme science of theology, in which is enshrined God's revelation of Himself to men." Manchester Guardian

"Throughout all of these essays we have a fine example of the scrupulous care that Neo-Scholasticism exercises to keep each branch of knowledge in its proper place." J. F. C.
+ Cath World 152:244 N '40 650w

Reviewed by W. A. Christian
J Religion 20:395 O '40 500w

"M. Maritain is already well known in this country as one of the leading Neo-scholastic philosophers. If this book does not greatly increase his reputation it will certainly not detract from it. With his fine intelligence and wide sympathies he is peculiarly well fitted to develop a view which does justice to purely natural knowledge and human activities on the one side and on the other to the divine wisdom embodied in Christian life and tradition." A. D. R.
+ Manchester Guardian p5 Mr 12 '40 250w

Nation 151:225 S 14 '40 70w

"M. Maritain is the leading contemporary exponent of the Catholic philosophy of St. Thomas Aquinas, which sought to reconcile and to synthesise the wisdom of the classical philosophers with the insight of the Christian saints in a 'Harmony of the Wisdoms.' It is difficult for one who does not accept M. Maritain's theological premises, is unacquainted with the highly technical, theological controversies in which he engages and unversed in his nice distinctions, to do full justice to his position; nor is the task rendered easier by M. Maritain's abstract style of writing, at times rhetorical to the point of floweriness." C. E. M. Joad
New Statesman & Nation 20:216 Ag 31 '40 750w

"This book of M. Maritain has not the general interest of his 'True Humanism.' Indeed, it may fairly be regarded as a specialized appendix to that important book."
Times [London] Lit Sup p408 Ag 24 '40 600w

MARKHAM, PETER. America next. 370p $2.75 Bobbs

940.5 Europe—Politics. U.S.—Politics and government. European war, 1939-
(W) 40-35628

The author, an American who as soldier and business man has spent many years in Europe, here sets forth the reasons which led him some time before 1939 to predict a war and which convince him now that America should be warned that her time is coming.

Booklist 37:268 F 15 '41

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun
Books p5 D 15 '40 500w

"The case for the extreme urgency of America's national peril is vividly stated by Mr. Markham. The author has visited almost all the important countries of Europe during recent decades and he sets down his impressions of Germany, France, the Soviet Union, Poland, and the Danubian countries. His history and his economics are sometimes rather sketchy; but he is an excellent story-teller, and some of his anecdotes are instructive as well as entertaining." W. H. C.
Christian Science Monitor p22 D 10 '40 550w

"Whether one agrees with Mr. Markham or not, his warning that this country badly needs planes and tanks instead of appropriations and blueprints must be taken seriously. 'The challenge is now' and not when the two-ocean navy is ready." Rustem Vambery
+ Nation 152:24 Ja 4 '41 900w

MARKS, PERCY. No steeper wall. 404p $2.50 Stokes
(W) 40-30578

In his senior year at Harvard Larry Baker was expelled for a misstep. His father, who was a wealthy snob married to a cultured woman, was so furious at Larry's disgrace that he sent him to California. Here in a lonely upland village, living with people who knew nothing about him, hobnobbing with Indians, gambling at times, Larry finally found himself.

"Minor characters in 'No Steeper Wall'—especially those who play a part in the hero's Western education—are vividly drawn and lifelike. The San Francisco of before the fire is well depicted. But Larry Baker is not one of this novelist's outstanding creations. His adventures seem to be the pattern of a book rather than the reflection of a character." George Conrad
— + Books p8 S 15 '40 450w

Commonweal 32:475 S 27 '40 40w

"Apparently this author is more concerned with revealing sectional differences of social outlook and reminding us of the absurdities inherent in local prejudices than in producing an outstanding novel of character. His hero merely serves as a vehicle for an idea which Bobbie Burns so perfectly expressed in the quatrain: 'There's so much bad in the best of us.' " Drake De Kay
N Y Times p14 S 8 '40 700w

Sat R of Lit 22:21 S 14 '40 270w

MARLOW, JAMES. De Gaulle and the coming invasion of Germany [Eng title: De Gaulle's France, and the key to the coming invasion of Germany]. 95p pa $1 Dutton [2s 6d Simpkin]

B or 92 Gaulle, Charles André Joseph Marie de. European war, 1939—France. Military art and science 40-33737

"This short book traces the career of General de Gaulle, and emphasizes the importance of his views on technical and mechanized forces. The account of the General's career gives us more particulars than have hitherto been easily available of his life and achievements, his efforts to prevent the capitulation of France, and the series of manifestos which he has broadcast since he has been the Leader of the Free French Forces." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by V. A. O'Rourke
Ann Am Acad 213:196 Ja '41 360w

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 27 '40 550w

New Repub 103:566 O 21 '40 60w

MARLOW, JAMES—Continued

"This little book, first published in England, is primarily a paean of praise for General Charles de Gaulle, leader of the 'Free Frenchmen,' and was obviously intended as a build-up for him. Just a year ago the same sort of things were being written about Gamelin; it is understandable, therefore, why the average reader will take this book with considerable salt. Nevertheless, it serves another purpose, for it attempts to wean the English mind away from the defensive complex to that distant time when invasion of Germany may be possible." H. W. Baldwin

N Y Times p36 D 8 '40 250w

"Mostly a panegyric to General de Gaulle."

New Yorker 16:111 O 19 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '40 190w

Times [London] Lit Sup p479 S 21 '40 260w

Reviewed by Leo Gershoy

Yale R n s 30:402 winter '41 300w

MARQUIS, DON. The lives and times of archy and mehitabel; il. by George Herriman. 3v in 1 196,182,269p $2.50 Doubleday

817 (W) 40-12502

Omnibus volume containing the adventures of archy the literary cockroach and mehitabel the romantic cat who was "toujours gai." Contents: Archy and Mehitabel; Archy's Life of Mehitabel; Archy Does His Part.

Booklist 37:16 S '40

Books p14 Je 23 '40 180w

Sat R of Lit 22:20 Jl 13 '40 150w

MARR, HARRIET WEBSTER. Atkinson academy; the early years. 95p il $2; pa $1.25 The author, 31 Maple st, Springfield, Mass.

373 Atkinson academy 40-12099

"This book, written by a former teacher, sketches briefly the history of the founding of this New Hampshire school in 1787 and its struggles through the next hundred years. It includes short biographies of the founders and early teachers. It should interest, particularly, alumni of the school and amateurs of local New England history. Two short chapters, one entitled 'Rules and Regulations of 1815' and the other 'Student Life at the Academy,' should appeal to all interested in the early history of American education." New Eng Q

New Eng Q 13:757 D '40 80w

"The story of Atkinson academy's early years the book shows to be well worth telling, not only for the academy's alumni and its alumni fund, but for the general interest of its illuminating sidelights on New England customs and personalities of the day."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '40 550w

MARRAN, RAY J. Games outdoors. 212p il $2 Crowell

796 Games (W) 40-11026

Directions for making inexpensive apparatus for home games. Contents: Tools and lumber; The outdoor gymnasium; Track and field events; Games for sidewalk and driveway; Games with a baseball; Various ball games; Toss and throw; Tag games; Marbles, hoops, and shinny sticks; Outdoors in winter. Index.

Booklist 36:427 Jl 15 '40

"Mr. Marran has boys chiefly in mind, but there is no reason why their sisters shouldn't join in the play—or why fathers shouldn't help make the apparatus."

Christian Century 57:770 Je 12 '40 60w

Reviewed by Sonja Wennerblad

Library J 65:596 Jl '40 70w

MARQUIS (mär'kwĭs)

MARRAN, RAY J. Making models of famous ships; il. by the author. 152p $2 Appleton-Century

623.822 Ship models 40-32454

"It is the purpose of this book to present a simple, easy method of making realistic models of famous and historical ships. By following the directions, the plans, and the photographs, any boy or girl, man or woman, can make his or her own ship models." (Foreword) Some famous vessels from Egyptian sailboats to clipper ships are used. Includes photographs, plans, and step-by-step directions. Partly based on material previously published in the Christian Science Monitor, and the American Home.

Booklist 37:86 N 1 '40

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson

Library J 65:929 N 1 '40 30w

MARRAN, RAY J. Table games; how to make and how to play them. 122p il $1.50 Barnes, A.S.

793.75 Games (W) 39-31656

Diagrams and instructions for making 60 table games at home, and instructions on how to play them in the usual way, and with variations.

Booklist 36:266 Mr 1 '40

"The primary appeal will doubtless be to children and young people. Making the equipment for a game may be as much fun as playing it."

+ Christian Century 56:1307 O 25 '39 30w

J Home Econ 32:115 F '40 30w

MARRIOTT, SIR JOHN ARTHUR RANSOME. Commonwealth or anarchy? 227p $2 Columbia univ. press [5s Oxford]

341 Peace. International law and relations

"A survey of projects of peace, from the sixteenth to the twentieth century." (Subtitle) The book, originally published in England in 1937, is based in part on lectures delivered at Gresham college in May, 1936, and on an article printed in The Quarterly Review of July, 1936. Contents: Prologue; The modern era; The great design of Henry IV; The age of Louis XIV; Quakers and peace; The age of reason; The Holy alliance; The Manchester school; Blood and iron, nationalism and imperialism; Armaments and arbitration, the Hague conferences; Armageddon and after, the genesis of the League of nations; The covenant of the League; The post-War world; Epilogue. Index.

Reviewed by F. O. Wilcox

Am Pol Sci R 34:394 Ap '40 130w

Reviewed by J. R. Baldwin

Canadian Hist R 21:315 S '40 90w

"Originally published three years ago in Great Britain and then out of print until the appearance of this new American edition, this brilliant essay on the peace projects of four centuries has both the merits and the defects that are implicit in this slight degree of untimeliness. At the present moment one might not have the patience to write such a careful and deliberate record of the hopes and plans of ages long past; but in the light of events of the past year it would be difficult to express some judgments concerning the way to peace which seemed plausible to the author three years ago. They may seem plausible to the author still, but to most Americans they have a hollow and ominous sound." W. E. Garrison

+ — Christian Century 57:181 F 7 '40 900w

"Americans need clear thinking to direct their policies, and this book is a valuable aid in the development of such a power." Mother Mary Lawrence

+ Commonweal 31:416 Mr 1 '40 550w

"Many who agree with him in believing that we shall ultimately have to have something like a commonwealth of nations will question not only the argument from the analogy of the British Empire, but the underlying assumption in these engaging pages that the problem of peace and war can be separated from basic factors—cultural, psychological and economic—of which Sir John seems to be largely unaware." Merle Curti
+ — Social Educ 4:292 Ap '40 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p14 Ja 13 '40 650w

MARSH, DANIEL LASH. The American canon. 126p $1 Abingdon
973 U.S.—Civilization 40-994

An expansion of the author's baccalaureate sermon to the Boston University class of 1939 including the seven great documents which he believes will set the standard of American patriotism. (cf Pref) Contents: The American canon; The genesis of American democracy: the Mayflower compact; Our exodus: the Declaration of independence; Our book of law: the Constitution of the United States; Our major prophecy: Washington's Farewell address; A psalm of America: the Star-spangled banner; Our gospel of Americanism: Lincoln's Second inaugural address; An epistle to the Americans: Woodrow Wilson's "Road away from revolution."

Christian Century 56:1306 O 25 '39 140w

"A timely word, well-uttered is this educator's 'American Canon.' " L. L. R.
+ Churchman 154:35 F 1 '40 100w

Reviewed by Morris Wolf
Social Studies 31:185 Ap '40 80w

MARSH, NGAIO. Death at the bar. 336p $2 Little [8s 3d Collins]
(W) 40-2011
Detective story.

Booklist 36:239 F 15 '40
Bookmark p14 Mr '40

"For writing grace, plot interest, and all-around novelistic merit, don't miss it." Will Cuppy
+ Books p13 Ja 7 '40 170w

"It is a pleasure to open one of Ngaio Marsh's books because you know that, whatever happens, it will be a good story. 'Death at the Bar' is no exception." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 6 '40 80w

Reviewed by Gilbert Norwood
Canadian Forum 20:94 Je '40 160w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 19:184 F 10 '40 150w

"Miss Marsh can be relied upon to tell a good story. Her character drawing is excellent, and she knows the trick of introducing subordinate plots which confuse the issue just enough to keep the reader guessing to the last. Best of all, she knows how to employ humor without overplaying it. This is one of her best books. To say more would be to disparage her earlier stories, which we have no intention of doing." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p17 Ja 7 '40 180w
New Yorker 15:63 Ja 6 '40 60w

"Prime case of 'now you see it—now you don't,' with rich local color and much lively talk. Required reading."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 Ja 6 '40 40w

"The detective story publishing season reopens brilliantly with a new novel by Miss Marsh. This talented author has sloughed off most of her more irritating sentimentalities and presents us with a really clever problem in detection, the very thing to absorb our attention on snowbound, blacked-out evenings."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 6 '40 300w

MARSH, NGAIO (nä-ī-ō)

MARSH, NGAIO. Death of a peer. 374p il $2 Little
(W) 40-32621
Detective story.

Booklist 37:156 D 15 '40
Bookmark 2:15 Ja '41

"Casting all caution aside, this department hereby and herewith pronounces 'Death of a Peer' the pick of the 1940 mysteries, a necessity for every fan of parts, a godsend to harried reviewers and a decided credit to New Zealand." Will Cuppy
+ Books p26 O 27 '40 280w

"A story that strengthens Ngaio Marsh's claim to a place among the cleverest and most entertaining of our mystery-mongers." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p16 O 27 '40 240w

"A few too many pages proving the Yard's ability to keep track of where everyone was when, but the writing is expert."
+ — New Yorker 16:88 N 2 '40 50w

"Peerless."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 N 2 '40 40w

"The story is written in an atmosphere of such mystery that it would be unfair to the reader even to divulge which one of the Lampreys fell victim—that is part of the special fascination which the story will have. Once the corpse is properly laid out, however, there is always Inspector Alleyn to handle the case in the skillful manner that Miss Marsh's devotees have come to expect of him."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 24 '40 240w
Time 36:84 N 4 '40 100w

MARSH, NGAIO. Vintage murder. 304p $2 Sheridan [cheaper ed 2s 6d Bles]
Detective story.

Booklist 37:14 S '40
Bookmark 2:15 Ja '41

"Whoever had the bright idea of publishing this Ngaio Marsh item in America deserves the blessings of fandom. Apparently written before 'Death in a White Tie,' 'Overture to Death' and 'Death at the Bar' made Miss Marsh one of the big international names in mystery, it is quite as good as those excellent stories; maybe better in spots." Will Cuppy
+ Books p12 Je 16 '40 320w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '40 80w

"Ngaio Marsh, who is right at home in New Zealand, tells the story with her accustomed skill." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p16 Je 16 '40 180w

"Interesting locale and a sound plot, written by a lady who comes from New Zealand."
+ New Yorker 16:116 Je 15 '40 40w

"Early Ngaio exhumed from uncopyrighted marshes. Not quite so polished as author's current work, but above average. Interesting."
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 15 '40 30w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '40 170w

MARSHALL, ARTHUR CALDER-. See Calder-Marshall, A.

MARSHALL, HELEN LAUGHLIN. A New Mexican boy; il. by Olive Rush. 85p $2 Holiday
Children in New Mexico 40-12421

Describes the life of the Spanish people living in the mountains of New Mexico, in a story for young readers. It tells of the four seasons of the year, and of the feasts and activities of each.

Booklist 37:19 S '40

"There is something going on all the time; all of it is true. But what pleased me most was its presentation of the character of these people, and of the simple nobility of life in this mountain village. There is such beauty in it that the pictures—by a famous muralist—and Helen Gentry's gracious design for the book are spent upon a worthy text." M. L. Becker

MARSHALL, H. L.—Continued

+ Books p7 Jl 7 '40 330w

"Both the story and pictures are charming." E. V. W.

+ Cath World 152:376 D '40 240w

"This is a book for children, and they will love it, its lucid and flowing text as well as its exquisite illustrations, but adults will find it no less delightful."

+ Christian Century 57:1179 S 25 '40 130w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 S 30 '40 180w

"The story is a gentle, appealing one for the younger children." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:270 Jl '40 140w

"There is simplicity, beauty, and charm, authentic detail and slight adventure, but the lack of plot and suspense, a somewhat ethereal remoteness, and the price itself—large for such a small book—will keep it from being very practical for small libraries. However, discriminating teachers of nine- and ten-year-olds will be able to use it to advantage." Miriam Snow

+ — Library J 65:661 Ag '40 110w

"Written with sympathy and charm. Designed by Helen Gentry, it is a beautiful looking book. After the portrayal of all things Spanish or Mexican in too vivid colors, the colors in these illustrations are a pleasant understatement, yet they do not lack authenticity." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 65:851 O 15 '40 40w

"Helen Marshall's style has simplicity and dignity. . . Helen Gentry has designed the book with beauty and distinction. The cover design is copied from an ancient carved chest and the illustrations in soft and lovely colors have the gentle charm of the text. A book for children to own and treasure." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p11 S 1 '40 240w

MARSHALL, MARGUERITE MOOERS (MRS S. W. DEAN). Her soul to keep. 320p $2 Macrae Smith co.

40-3359

The romance of a dependable nurse and an undependable doctor, which ends in the author's favorite Belltown, New Hampshire, with a change of partners.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p11 Ja 14 '40 100w

Boston Transcript p3 F 24 '40 100w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p20 Ja 21 '40 240w

Wis Lib Bul 36:31 F '40

MARSHALL, SAMUEL LYMAN ATWOOD. Blitzkrieg; its history, strategy, economics, and the challenge to America. 188p maps $2 Morrow

940.53 European war, 1939- 40-29984

"Technical analysis of Germany's victories in the war, by the military critic of the Detroit News. He argues that our land forces must be equipped mainly to repel tanks, armored cars, and riflemen, since these are 'the supreme weapons of today.' From the author's newspaper articles. Maps." (New Yorker) Index.

"Soldiers and civilians alike may read and reread Mr. Marshall's words with profit; one might hope that they would receive the attention in particular of all who have to do with the planning and direction of our national defense." G. F. Eliot

Books p4 Ja 26 '41 800w

"Since the book is small, one would have expected the author to be succinct. Instead he wastes much space on patriotic fustian and editorial platitudes. Perhaps Mr. Marshall's mental forces are themselves in a dangerous state of inefficiency. One suspects that he lacks the knowledge which would have enabled him to stick to a detailed discussion of military tactics."

— Nation 151:512 N 23 '40 80w

"Mr. Marshall sees warfare in terms of the land soldier. . . He is also addicted too much to generalities. . . But there are profound truths in this little book; it is a joy to read, and Mr. Marshall's contention that the United States must have an air-land 'Blitz' force to operate if need be in South America is absolutely sound." H. W. Baldwin

+ — N Y Times p36 D 8 '40 400w

"Readable and apparently competent."

+ New Yorker 16:102 N 16 '40 50w

MARTIN, BEN. Mr Smith and Mr Schmidt; a story in pictures. [85]p $1.25 Vanguard

741 Caricatures and cartoons. Democracy. Dictators 41-820

Series of cartoons with captions, contrasting the lives of Mr Smith, a citizen of the United States, and his counterpart, Mr Schmidt, in Nazi Germany.

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 11 '41 20w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 152:22 Ja 4 '41 120w

New Yorker 16:87 D 21 '40 40w

MARTIN, GEORGE VICTOR. For our vines have tender grapes. 239p $2.50 Funk, W.

40-31529

"This plain tale of farm life in a Norwegian community in Wisconsin has an idyllic quality. . . The Jacobson family—Pa and Ma and 9-year-old Selma—thrive mentally and physically on their thirty-two-acre Wisconsin farm. The book unfolds their regular routine, as well as their outstanding ups and downs, in this record of one round of the four seasons. Most of the story is told from the viewpoint of little Selma, who has a sensitive, affectionate and inquiring young mind, without being in any sense a prodigy. The time is probably somewhere near 1920." N Y Times

